Jack Worsham, chairman of the Rules committee, reported yesterday four absentees during the Feb. 17 session. They are Herb Mitchell (UP), Johnny Clements (UP), Walt Carnes (CP), and Bob Mebane (UP).

James to Hear His Work Sung By Glee Club

Philip James, eminent American composer, will hear the University Men's Glee club perform one of his compositions for chorus at the annual Glee club concert at 8:30 this evening in Hill hall.

The work, "General William Booth Enters into Heaven," is based on Vachel Lindsay's famous poem about the founder of the Salvation army, and has been composed for men's chorus, trumpet, trombone, bass drum, tambourine, tam-tam, two pianos, organ, and tenor soloists. The Glee club's performance of this work will be directed by Paul Young, associate professor of music at the University.

James will arrive in Chapel Hill today from New York where he is professor of music and department chairman at New York university.

Considered one of the more important contemporary composers, James has a distinguished record in teaching, writing, and conducting. He has been the regular conductor of the New Jersey symphony orchestra and the Brooklyn orchestral society, and has conducted the NBC and CBS symphony orchestras.

Phi Condemns Tuition Move By Large Vote

Members Blast Governor Scott

The Philantnropic assembly condemned the proposed tuition raise for the Greater University by a vote of 13 to 2 Tuesday night in Phi hall.

Charles Britt led off a series of speakers with a denunciation of Governor Scott's proposal calling Scott a reactionary and terming the tuition raise as a step in a "Go Backward" program. He answered the charge that tax payers should not have to pay for education for others by saying that the tax payers benefit indirectly from better education for North Carolinians.

John Giles described the added costs of living for students and voiced the opinion that the $25 listed in the catalogue for books would not even cover paper clips and paper.

Dave Sharpe called the injection of professors' salaries into the tuition question a "red herring."

Federal aid to education was Graham Jones' answer to increased educational costs. He admitted that the cost of education has risen greatly, but he contended that the "cost of ignorance" is far greater.

An amendment by Emily Baker that would have provided for increases in tuition based upon grades with "A" students exempt was voted down.

YRC Will Hold Meeting Tonight

The Young Republican club will hold its second meeting of the quarter tonight at 7:30 in Roland Parker no. 2 of Graham Memorial.

The main order of business will be to adopt a program, according to Bill Hipple, president of the club. Each member is to bring a written program-in-outline to be presented to the group. The best features of the various programs will be adapted to a consolidated plan.

Plans for bringing Senator Margaret Chase Smith to the campus some time in the Spring were approved by the club at last Thursday's meeting. Further details will be disclosed at tonight's meeting.

Parker Addresses Commerce Frat

Miss Betsy Parker of the University's placement service spoke to the Delta Sigma Pi professional commerce fraternity Tuesday night on the possibility of job placement with the placement service in South building.

Red Cross Workers To Meet In Gerrard

All solicitors for the campus Red Cross drive will meet today at 4 o'clock in Gerrard hall, co-chairmen Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon announced yesterday.

Burns to Run With Whitsett In Spring Vote

First Nominees Named for Post

Charlie Burns and Lem Whitsett will run as co-editors of Tarnation on the University party ticket in the spring elections, party officials announced yesterday.

The UP candidates, both rising juniors and both from Charlotte, are the first nominees released for the humor mag editorship by any party so far this year.

The nominees have had considerable experience in the publications field. Burns has served on the staff of Tarnation for two years and is at present handling material in the "Village Spectator" section of the magazine.

Whitsett has had experience in all phases of publication work with his family's photo-engraving business in Charlotte, and served as editor of a weekly magazine while overseas with the army during the last war.

Both Whitsett and Burn are active in the Charlotte-Carolina club. Whitsett serving as president of the organization this year. Burns is head of the club's dance committee.

Burns is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, while Whitsett is vice-president of the Chi Phi pledge class.

In accepting the nomination, the candidates said, "We believe that Tarnation has failed in its primary purpose, that of a humor magazine. If elected we shall publish a Tarnation that will be both funny and will be read. We intend to print the kind of humor magazine that the students will appreciate."

Mumford Speaks On Hill Rostrum

"We are living in the world of the Superman of the comic strips," said Lewis Mumford last night in an address before a group of students, faculty, and townspeople at Hill hall.

In his fourth lecture of six on the future of Western civilization, Mumford deviated from his original topic, "Social Organization and Personal Development," to speak on our failure to evaluate, to direct processes of life by a "standard of ethical judgment."

Declaring that our knowledge is adequate but our ethical judgment horribly lacking, Mumford blamed the decay of Western civilization on a lack of ethical content, and said that our future depends on a restatement and recovery of values.

He called those who experiment with bacteriological and other means of scientific warfare "moral imbeciles" and said that while experiments with more horrible methods of warfare are being continued, no comparable experiments are being made with political agencies for peace, that the need of these instruments of destruction could be done away with.

'A General Overhauling'

Ringing Bells Confuse Eager-Beaver Students

By Don Maynard

The "Miracle of the Bells," as one lovely coed aptly termed it, made a command performance yesterday morn when the bells of South building rang out some eight times.

What could have very possibly turned out to be a miracle when the bells first sounded at 9:20 developed into only a minor mystery when instructors glanced at their timepieces and reassured their attentive students, "It's only a false alarm, don't fret about missing any of your lecture."

A few classes were fortunate when Old South sounded at 9:48 and instructors with wry grins and admittances, "All these bells have me buffaloed," allowed their charges an extra two minutes to grab a cuppa joe in the Y.

According to C. T. Womble, campus head electrician, the master electrical system which controls the bells was undergoing a minor repair job. "Just overhauling the apparatus," he said. No one seemed to know exactly what was at fault. "If we knew," Tromble went on, "we'd have it fixed."

It seems that since the electrical system was first installed in 1922, it has been a headache. Previous to that time, the bell had been rung, when folks decided it should be rung, by a convenient rope and suitable man-power.

But in 1922, a masterclock was installed. This clock is now located in the basement of South building, controling the South building bells and all the clocks in the class buildings.

Run electrically, the clock is checked and adjusted every Monday morning, along with all the other clocks in the system scattered about the campus.

Bleary-eyed students who were roused from their warm sacks at the 9:30 sounding of The Bells, scrambled into their clothes and dashed to 10 o'clock classes only to find the 9 o'clockers still contentedly sleeping in the rear of their class rooms. "We wuz gyped," could be heard in the jammed Y building about that time.

It all boils down to the fact that an electrical engineer reputed to be a graduate of Duke was doodling with the works yesterday morning. And propagandists want us to cultivate a love for all the Dear Old Denominational schools?

'Days Are Gone'

Coed Grandmother Enrolled At University of Mississippi

OXFORD, Miss., Feb. 23—(UP)—Mrs. Ethel G. Young, a grandmother and the mother of two sons and six daughters, looks more like a professor than a coed student at the University of Mississippi.

Mrs. Young's enrollment wasn't discovered until today. When a reporter intercepted her between classes she said:

"The days are gone when college was only for youth."

The coed grandmother, formerly of Gulfport, Miss., has reared a family of eight children ranging in age from 19 to 35 years.

Mrs. Young declined to give her age. She is working for two degrees at Ole Miss, one that will lead to a job as occupational therapist in a veterans hospital.

Mrs. Young was a physio-therapist in the Women's Auxiliary Army corps.

"I just want to get back to helping our boys," Mrs. Young said.

She is studying toward bachelor's and master's degrees in education. She has completed four theses in home economics and is doing extra graduate work in German.

Outside of her studies she assists in teaching a course on homemaking to veterans' wives.

"I enjoy this work," she said, "because, you see, I've had loads of experience."

Mrs. Young, who served almost one year overseas at an evacuation hospital, was asked what she thought of college students.

"Most of them are serious-minded," Mrs. Young said, "but a few of them haven't been raised right and are a reflection on their mothers and fathers."

Winter Practice

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 23—(UP)—The flying tackle is now illegal but nobody blew a whistle on Brian Bell, star Washington and Lee halfback for using it last night.

Bill returned to his Beta Theta Pi fraternity house from a late dance to find a burglar prowling the house. The intruder broke and ran but Bell brought him down at the head of the stairs with a flying tackle. Thomas Banks, 41, of Philadelphia was jailed for housebreaking. He also had a broken nose and bruises from Bell's tackle.

World Government Week to Be Topic Of World Federalists' Meeting Today

The student chapter of the United World Federalists will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 to discuss plans for carrying out World Government week which was proclaimed earlier this week by Mayor R. W. Madry.

World government month is being observed throughout the United States from Feb. 20 through March 20 with one week set aside for observance of World Government week. The week will be observed on campus from Feb. 27 through March 5, according to the proclamation issued by Mayor Madry.

Churches, local civic groups and other organizations are planning activities in connection with the observance on campus and in the town, Madry said. On Feb. 27 there will be sermons on world peace and world government in many of the churches.

A library display on world government has been arranged which will include books, pamphlets, editorials, and a series of drawings planned and drawn by John Lineweaver and Hale Chamberlain, presenting the case for world government.

Role Of College Women

First Coed Government Forum Opens in Hill Hall Tomorrow

The first Intercollegiate Coed Government forum will be launched hre tomorrow with Dr. James Madison Wood as keynote speaker.

Dr. Wood will speak on the roll of women in college today at the opening session of the forum, which is sponsored by the Coed senate. This meeting, to be held in Hill hall at 2:30, is compulsory to all coeds, Edie Knight, chairman of the forum, announced.

Dr. Wood is president of the Woman's foundation in New York city, a national organization for the advancement of all women. An internationally noted pioneer in the field of education for women, Dr. Wood was the first president of the American Association of Junior colleges.

Dr. Wood is president emeritus of Stephens college for women in Columbia, Mo., where he served for a 35-year period. During that time he developed the college from an obscure school with an enrollment of 52 to a well known educational institution with 2,250 students from every state and from 20 foreign countries.

The Women's foundation, founded under Dr. Wood's direction, has as its purpose the advancement of the education of women on all economic levels and re-emphasizes the American home.

Consultive service is offered on housing, home finance, child care, and similar problems in an effort to raise the standards of home life.

UMT Appeal

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 23—(UP)—Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey called again for universal military training here last night because this nation needs "an Army with experience but young enough to meet any emergency."

He pointed out that less than 3,000,000 persons who fought in World War II will be under 30 five years from now.

Hershey spoke to the 142nd annual banquet of the Washington light infantry, now a part of the National Guard here.

Overstepping Its Authority

To be introduced into the student legislature tonight is a bill which reads: No organization receiving funds from the student legislature with the exception of the Publications board shall lend or borrow money without the consent of the student legislature.

So stated, this bill oversteps the authority of the legislature. Organizations receiving funds from other sources in addition to their legislative appropriation have every right to use those funds as they see fit, and the legislature does not have the right to attempt to specify or to limit the use of such funds.

Even if the wording of the bill is changed to include only funds appropriated by the legislature, that body will be entering dubious territory in passing the measure. It will be seeking to do what many fear government aid to education would do—accompany appropriations to organizations with governmental control over the functions and activities of those organizations.

The legislature should be wary of any step in that direction.

Axing Absentees

The chairman of the Rules committee in the legislature introduced a bill Thursday that is worthy of comment. It was a bill to put committee meetings of legislators on the same attendance basis as meetings of the legislature itself. In other words, more than one unexcused absence from meetings may result in that legislator being removed from the student legislature.

This is a strong bill, but a fair one. Committee chairmen have long been plagued by poor attendance at their meetings. Some times there are not enough committeemen present to discuss important measures to be brought before the legislature. This needlessly delays the introduction of the bill. For this reason the action of the Rules committee is to be highly commended as a step towards stronger student government.

What It Is?

Life is dull, school's a bore;
We learn less instead of more.

If things go on at such a rate,
We'll all get dumb and graduate.

When we do we're sure to find
Happiness and peace of mind.

Wealth will flow into our hands,
Worries scram to other lands

With such a life for them who're prudent
Ain't it hell to be a student?

Cheat Peter To Pay Paul

By Don Shropshire

Dear Governor:

It is so unusual to have a Chief Executive actually doing something for a change, that it is with some hesitation that I raise a voice of protest. But I feel that the matter is of such importance, that I call it now to your attention.

As president of the board of trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina, you will probably be presiding this coming Monday as the board meets for the consideration of a number of important matters. The one with which I am most concerned is the proposed raise in tuition for the three units of the state university. The prospects for additional funds for salary increases in faculty compensation brings a note of happiness and relief. Goodness knows, they need it.

But, your Excellency, I am wondering if the proposed changes might not actually be a "rob-Peter-to-pay-Paul" proposition. Among those students whose friendship I cherish are several serious and deserving men who are having a terrible time making ends meet now. One of them went home last week-end to sell a watch in his possession to help "hold" him for the rest of this term. Not so long ago, another consulted the medical personnel at the infirmary to find out the types of foods which would best give him the necessary number of calories, so he could make his meager funds go as far as possible. Still another was faced with the tremendous task of helping to support his mother and sister, while also trying to remain in school in good standing.

My hat goes off to these fellows any day. It might be argued that those same men, in the face of additional hardships, might find some way to meet the situation; but must we make it harder for them?

Some may be content just to master their books, but to me, this matter of education goes much further. "Book" sense without citizenship development is simply inadequate. Many of our community and world misunderstandings could be avoided if people could just learn how to live with their fellow-men. Thus, the extra-curricular training here is quite valuable and a vital part of our training. In line with this, it seems that we would not only be denying the opportunity for education to those who could not come because of higher rates, but to those also who would be forced to use what spare time is available for some type of confining activity in an effort to raise additional funds. Surely the price is not worth the proposed difference.

I realize, Sir, that there are a number of other things crying for attention—all, no doubt, will require substantial financial backing; but isn't there some other way? With a resulting increase in opportunity for youth in the field of education, and the betterment of the quality of instruction on the part of the faculty, the state of North Carolina could soon boast of a new and higher standard of living which would be reflected in capable leadership and outstanding public services.

Like Sacco, Vanzetti

Editor:

In Wednesday's Tar-Heel, we read that D. E. Speer is "nauseated" by the trial of Cardinal Mindzsenty. It is true that a state of near hysteria has been whipped up over that trial. Yet few people seem to be aware of the facts of the case. It was a public trial, with American and British reporters (who denied rumors that they were being censored) present. The Cardinal's plea was guilty. When innocent people are being framed, they don't act like the Cardinal. They use the presence of the world press to denounce the frame-up: like Sacco and Vanzetti did: like Dimitroff at the Reichstag trial. Furthermore the Cardinal's attitude throughout the trial was sufficiently alert that American psychiatrists generally dismiss stories of "drugging" as pure nonsense.

Why should we be surprised to find Mindzsenty plotting against the Hungarian republic? Did he not co-operate with Admiral Horthy, and the Nazis? Did he not urge the faithful to turn Communists and Social Democrats over to the Nazi police? Did he not welcome the extermination of Galician Jews?

If Mr. Speer is looking for a "nauseating trial, he need not go to Hungary. There is one going on in New York, where 11 Communists are tried, not for plotting or spying, but for their thoughts. Or he might turn his attention to a New Jersey jail, where 6 Negroes await execution, convicted on the basis of flimsy and contradictory evidence.

Finally it is interesting to note the sudden concern of our "free" press when a people's democracy uses its legitimate powers to try a Cardinal guilty of crimes. This presents a striking contrast to the complete oblivion to which is relegated such an "insignificant" matter as the British "socialists" shooting without trial all the male inhabitants of a Malayan village suspected of giving refuge to guerrillas. After all, the British are dishing out the blessings of imperialism to their colonies.

Atlantic Pact Will Kill UN

By Charlie Kauffman

Almost from the day the charter of the United Nations was signed in San Francisco in June, 1945, it has been destined to fail in carrying out the purposes for which it was established: to preserve the peace by employing the mechanisms offered in this charter, to preserve the territorial integrity and political independence of all member states, and to promote international cooperation in such fields as covered by ILO and WHO.

At least this destiny has been repeatedly announced as certain to such an extent that most of us who believe that the United Nations could work have become drastically irked from time to time. We sat up on our haunches and condemned anyone who attacked the U. N. as isolationists, and our government has fervently restated time and again the intentions of the United States government to work through the U. N. in achieving those utopian conditions commonly referred to as "world peace and security." Yet time and again we have seen the United States conduct the major programs of its foreign policy, not through the United Nations, but through a unilateral program of our own.

Right and wrong are not to be considered here so much as are the facts that the U. S. was in a position to bypass the U. N. with impunity. In the case of ERP, all of us will agree that our plan could best be conducted unilaterally, and the wisdom of this decision has been proven. In the case of the aid program for Greece and Turkey, that seems to have been one of our more adventurous sports, which for the sake of our own peace of mind, can best be left out of this discussion. At any rate, the power of the United Nations, such as it is, was not compromised by either of these programs.

Now, however in the negotiations for the North Atlantic Pact, a fact is being brought forth from which there is no escape. If the pact is ratified and carried out with any sincerity, the powers of the United Nations have been not only compromised in the matters of peace and war, but have been brought to a complete standstill. It is unthinkable, it seems to me, that any observer, no matter how idealistic, can fail to realize that now the U. N. might as well cease to function. Under this pact, any nice little ideas we may have had about international fellowship should be completely destroyed. It is a fact that in the future, when the provisions of the projected pact are in operation, the decisions of peace and war will rest not with the Security council, or in Joe Stalin's private boudoir, but within the council of foreign ministers of the Pact signatories.

It is well and good to say that this is a deplorable situation, the death of the Security council, and this writer does believe that the emergence of regional agreements will, in effect, wreck what potency the council heretofore could claim. It would be decidedly premature to assume that this, the second great experiment in international organization in modern times, is dead. It should, however, suffice for us to simply look at all these proceedings and realize that the world is not ready for mature, sincere cooperation. The system of the balance of power has not been dead since 1945. By the North Atlantic pact it is obvious that this is the basis on which our foreign policy is going to be conducted and sincerity on this point will be easier to swallow, bitter though it is, than Harry Truman's repeated statements as to our faith in the U. N. It should not take a test case to prove that the North Atlantic powers as a unit is emerging as the power in the world. But at least this will be required before the diplomats of the world will be willing to sit down at a big table and make a third effort.

Adelaide Addle's Advice

Most Young Ladies Are Very Impressionable

By Adelaide Addle

Dear Miss Addle,

Two years ago I began corresponding with a young lady. Our "meeting" was arranged by a group called "Men of the Pen." I am not a very brilliant person, nor a witty one, and wanting to make a good impression on this woman I had a friend of mine write the letters for me. This friend is a very talented fellow and the letters made a great impression on my correspondent.

Last week I got out, and went to see the young lady. I know that she is beginning to realize that I do not quite match my letters. My conversation is rather limited and I can't live up to the letters. What can I possibly do about this situation?

Cyrano

Dear Cyrano,

I would suggest that you study your part in some good anthology of famous love scenes. Memorize a half a dozen passages before each meeting and try to work them into the conversation. Also learn bits of poetry and quote a few lines every now and then.

Young ladies are very impressionable, and if you learn your part well you will not have any great trouble. Mind you, I do not generally condone such practices, but in your case there does not seem to be much else you can do. Best of luck in your attempt.

Dear Aunt Addie,

I am a southern girl whose home is in Atlanta. My boy friend lives in New York. While we are at school everything is fine, but during vacations it is terrible being separated from him. We are very serious, but I sometimes doubt the practicality of our proposed marriage. Do you think the union has a chance?

I would not mind so much, but my friends keep kidding me about my yankee boy friend. What would you advise?

Belle

Dear Belle,

If you love your young man, marry him by all means. Ignore the jibes of your friends; they would not act in such a manner were they true friends. After your marriage you will probably live in New York anyway and you will not be subject to these unkind remarks. In the light of past experience I would say that the union is sure to be a winner.

Dear Aunt Addie,

Should I accept his pin? He's so wonderful and I love him so much.

Fluffy

Dear Fluffy,

If he has offered you his pin, take it by all means. For your own sake, make sure it is the only one he has out at the moment. Moreover, be certain that the attraction is the boy himself, and not the glitter of his pin.

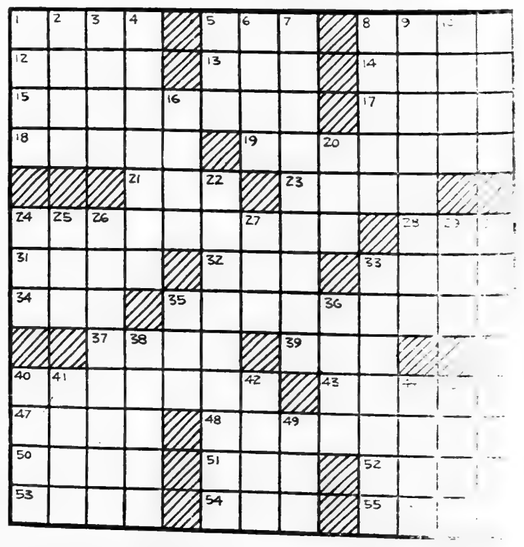
Sleuthing on His Honeymoon

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Here is an item of FBI intelligence in a somewhat different vein: It demonstrates that a G-man is never really off duty.



A special agent, attached to the Honolulu field office, was granted leave of absence to visit his ailing father in the States. He had just about gotten himself settled on the boat when one of the bellboys had his wallet stolen.

This was a crime on the high seas—so the G-man had to go to work. His sleuthing convinced him a certain member of the crew was the culprit but he didn't have quite enough evidence to make the pinch when the boat docked in San Francisco.

The agent had received a radiogram that his father had taken a turn for the worse, but duty decreed he stay on the ship until the case was solved. But, shortly before the boat was due to re-sail, he saw another G-man coming up the gangplank, with a luscious bundle of femininity clinging to his arm.

It turned out that this agent was on leave too. He was enroute to Hawaii on his honeymoon.

The newlywed, despite anguished protests from his young missus—who moaned that she wished she had married someone in almost any other line of endeavor, including horse doctoring—kept on the job. By the time the ship arrived back in Honolulu he had his man, complete with confession.

The Marshall Plan

A FAINT, BUT AUDIBLE cry of professionalism in athletics at the University reared its money-green head recently elsewhere on the pages of this sometimes fair newspaper. The voice, to no one's surprise, was that of Jonathan Marshall, protector of the oppressed and the unimpressive, who condemns what would correctly be termed the subsidy of college athletics.

Mr. Marshall, it would seem, objects to such a practice on the grounds that 1) it causes the academic side of the college to suffer. And 2) that the only possible solution to the question is a general national de-emphasis under which the good teams would still draw crowds and make money.

Mr. M. would appear primarily jealous of the interest that athletics can command at the University. His first point seems fragile when it takes little knowledge to realize that the nation's great athletic powers, California, Notre Dame, Army and Michigan, are also some of its greatest academic strongholds. Big Time sports and Big Time scholarship, it would seem, go hand and hand. And in answer to point two, if Mr. M. thinks there's a comparison between Betty Grable and Marjorie Main, let him de-emphasis while he's at it.

Of, By, and For the People

ONE WONDERS if Mr. M. has stopped to realize the effect that Big Time football at this University has had on the students and people of this state, and also those who have come to the University under an athletic subsidy. Take the effect upon the student body. What is the Carolina spirit, but a theme and a drive generated primarily by the successes and failures of this University's athletic teams.

And what has done more to interest the people of North Carolina in their University than the influx of Big Time Athletics at Chapel Hill? The people of the state have come to feel that great teams representing the University not only represent the 7,000 students at Chapel Hill, but the entire 3,500,000 who call themselves Tar Heels.

The effect on the youth of the state is typified by the actions of a group of second graders at the Oxford orphanage last fall. The boys—26 in number—decided to choose by vote the most outstanding man in the country and follow his activities throughout the year.

Two Votes for Harry

PRESIDENT HARRY TRUMAN received two of the ballots being closely followed by the Superintendent of the Orphanage who got a single vote. The other 23 went to Charlie Justice, a fellow North Carolinian. After the season, Charlie went to visit his idols and in fulfillment of a promise, had an autographed picture sent to the boys. The following letter of gratitude was received:

Dear Sir:

Thank you for the picture of our Charlie Choo Choo. Miss Peacock framed it in our classroom. We are very proud of our "All-American."

Sincerely,
Paul Fauche.

Notice, Mr. M., that Paul said—our "All-American"—and he's yours too whether you think that he's a horrible professional or not. Note that Big Time football, which you condemn, is bringing the interests of these seven-year-old boys to the University. Maybe they will never grow up to be the Charlie Justices of the future according to their present dreams, but they are becoming "College-Conscious" and the college they are becoming conscious of is their own state University.

They are your students of years to come who will begin to prepare themselves for college a little earlier and a little better than some of us did. They will help to raise your academic levels, not to lower them.

Money from Home

TAKE A LOOK at the boys themselves who come to college on a subsidy. The story of Andy Bershak has been told here before but remember that he came to Carolina a poor boy who didn't speak the best of English. He left Carolina with the highest honors in both the academic and athletic fields of endeavour—Phi Beta Kappa student and All-American football player. He got his chance on an athletic subsidy.

That money that put Andy through school came not from your pocket, or your father's pocket or from any state funds. It came from the purse of some alumnus who liked football and liked to see some less unfortunate boy who could play football, have a college education.

One of the great honors of a college is the winning of an academic scholarship. I should kick about the professional students brought in—and many from out of state—on scholarships that I must compete against for grades. Jonathan, we must bring back amateur academics to the college!

No Use Denying

'TIS A SHAME that while academic subsidy is such an honor, the boy who performs with mind and body is branded as a professional and would be denied a college education his athletic ability might gain him.

Charlie Justice, Mr. M, does more for this University in a single Saturday afternoon than you or I might do in a lifetime. And there'll be others like him to come, maybe even little Paul Fauche, the orphan, who today finds some security and enjoyment in the childhood worship of a football star.

I would hate to see the day at Carolina when Paul or any other such financially unfortunate boy would be denied an education on the pseudo-grounds of professionalism raised against an athletic subsidy.

The defense rest, Mr. Marshall. One hopes you will too.

Beta Edges Chi Phi, 31-29, For Frat Crown

Kenney Powell Paces Beta Team With 15 Points

By Lew Chapman

Mainly through the stellar work of one Ken Powell underneath the hoop, Beta Theta Pi fraternity became the 1949 fraternity intramural basketball champions when they squeezed by Chi Phi, 31-29 in a game played last night on the Woollen gym main court.

By winning this final contest of the playoff series, Beta replaced Sigma Chi as the winners of the frat intramural laurels and gained the right to represent the campus fraternities in the campus final that will be played at the Sports Carnival on March 2. The Beta's opponents in this match will be the Unknowns, the victors in the dorm division of the cage leagues.

It was discernible from the outset that both quintets were out for this one. Supporters from both frats were in attendance and easily made their presence felt by spirited cheering, especially in the closing minutes of the tussle when the Chi Phi five made a valiant effort to pull the game from the fire.

Up to the point when there were but three minutes left in the contest, the Chi Phis had been suffering acutely from the complete control of the boards that the Betas possessed, thanks to Mr. Powell. But Chi Phi then accomplished what it had tried to do since the opening tip-off, to break the game wide open and use their efficient fast break.

Dale Morrison gave first evidence of this when he dunked a long one-hander with two minutes left to cut the Beta lead to four points. Amid a terrific din, they froze the ball successfully for over a minute until Chi Phi's Bob Rockholz stole the ball and drove in for a layup to close the gap to two points with but 45 seconds left. But the Betas were equal to the occasion and froze the ball for the remainder of the game despite the frantic efforts of the Chi Phi agents who were attempting to get at least one chance at those big two remaining points.

Plans Near Completion For Indoor Track Event Here

Woollen gymnasium will be the scene of seven hours of action-packed track competition Saturday in the Southern conference indoor track meet.

Over 450 athletes from colleges and high schools all over the South will be on hand for the 14th annual running and the post-war revival of the meet which was last run in 1942. In the intervening years the meet was continued, but separate conference and non-conference divisions were not run and the meet was called the Southern Invitational indoor games.

Competition actually starts at 9:30 Saturday morning with the freshman and high school high jump in the Tin Can, but the collegiate action doesn't get under way until 1:30 in the afternoon.

Every 15 or 20 Minutes

Except for a two and a half hour supper lay-off, events will be run off at the rate of about one every fifteen or twenty minutes until the final event at 10 o'clock. Conference and non-conference events will be run off at approximately the same time while the scholastic and freshman events will also be run together.

According to Carolina athletic director Coach Bob Fetzer, originator of the meet, the field of entries this year will top all previous fields in each of the four divisions.

In the all-important conference division Carolina is expected to have trouble from Maryland in defending the title she won in 1942. Both teams are expected to be in top shape and should provide many thrills before the meet is put under wraps shortly after 10 on Saturday.

Georgia Tech and Tennessee, two of the top teams in the Southeastern conference, stack up as the best bets in the non-conference division. Both teams have strong, well-balanced squads.

Maryland Frosh Picked

Maryland appears to most observers to have the top team of freshman entries. The doubtful entry of several Carolina frosh prevent the Tar Heels from being placed in the bracket with Maryland.

In the high school division George Washington high of Alexandria, Virginia, winner of the scholastic division at the last two Southern invitational meets, is picked to continue her winning ways. Washington-Lee high of Arlington, Virginia and Georgia Military academy pace the challengers.

Meanwhile Carolina coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton have been putting the Tar Heels through their paces in preparation for the big meet.

Tar Heel Cagers Take Day Off; Meet Duke In Finale On Friday

Coach Tom Scott gave his Tar Heel cagers a day of welcome rest yesterday following a two-game tour that brought conference wins over South Carolina's Gamecocks and Davidson's high-ranking Wildcats.

The Carolinians' victories on their recent excursion assured them of a place in the Southern conference basketball tourney slated for March 3-5 in Duke's Indoor gym, and a win over Duke on Friday night would do much in boosting the Tar Heel chances of being seeded in the hardwood circus.

The Tar Heels dumped the Duke cagers, 64-34, in their recent visit to Woollen gym, and the Blue Devils can be expected to make a strong bid for revenge when they play host to the Carolina hoopsters Saturday night.

Coy Carson Still Tops In Southern Scoring

Coy Carson, with 383 points to his credit, continues to pace the Southern loop scoring. Carson tallied 20 points against South Carolina on Monday night, and added 15 against Davidson on Tuesday.

N. C. State's Sammy Ranzino and Chet Giermak of William and Mary have been creeping up on Carson in recent weeks, but the mum as daily workouts continue in the Tin Can. The job of moving the board track now up in the Tin Can into Woollen gym is expected to be completed today.

Clowns in Unusual Contest

Carolina's fabulous basketball clowns will lay their so-called two-year victory string on the line in an unusual kind of way on March 3, when they tangle with the McGuire General hospital Chairoteers in Woollen gymnasium.

This time the Clowns will not be able to romp up and down the hardwood at breakneck speed in football fashion, because the Chairoteers, a group of crippled war veterans, ask the opposition to perform as if they had similar handicaps.

That is, the Clowns will face the Chairoteers in wheel chairs and according to the rules, there will be no running and jumping in this ball game. Rather it will be a roll-roll-roll your boat proposition with the man doing the most and fastest rolling standing the best chance of becoming the star.

Local citizenry have already expressed anticipated frolic galore when such huskies as Art Weiner, Bobby Weant, Charlie Justice and others tangle with the apt Chairoteers.

The game is being sponsored by the Chapel Hill Junior Chamber of Commerce and all proceeds are to be used in the interest of the local high school athletic setup. Tickets are on sale at almost all downtown businesses as well as by every member of the club.

The athletic facilities of Woollen gymnasium are being donated to the club for the game.

Y Will Publish Anthology Soon On Bible Theme

In addition to their student directories, handbooks, and Y manuals, University students will soon have another booklet to add to their collection of college publications.

The worship committee of the YWCA is assembling an anthology of devotionals, prayers, selected Bible readings, and thoughts for the day suitable to college students. Members of the committee hope to have the anthology completed by the end of the spring quarter, committee chairmen Sue Stokes and Teeny Royal announced yesterday.

Having begun work on the anthology at the beginning of the winter quarter, the committee plans to have the devotional booklet distributed to students entering the University in the fall.

Students Heckle Klansmen During Columbia Meeting

Stink Bombs Are Thrown At Sam Green

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 24—(UP)—University of South Carolina students peppered a Ku Klux Klan meeting at suburban West Columbia with stench bombs last night while Grand Dragon Samuel Green was making a speech on white supremacy.

Burly Klansmen, assisted by police, dispersed the students but they kept up their heckling from the edge of a vacant lot that the Klan had rented for their meeting.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb 24—(UP)—Grand Dragon Samuel Green of the Ku Klux Klan said today he overlooked the group of hecklers who tossed two stench bombs in the circle of Klansmen to whom he was speaking last night.

The hecklers, many of whom were indentifed as University of South Carolina students, shouted remarks as Green's speech began, until KKK members and police told them to quiet down or leave.

"I was young once," Green said, "I did some foolish things then myself."

At least two stench bombs landed in the ring of Klansmen around the stand on which Green spoke. Black acrid smoke rose around the sheeted figures and generally smelled up the proceedings.

Green continued to speak, reiterating his pledge to "shed our last drop of blood" to preserve white supremacy. His aides jumped off the stand to deal with the students.

A big Klansman wearing the regalia of a grand cyclops took charge. About 15 uniformed members of the West Columbia police force then told the students to move on.

One policeman explained that the Klan had rented the lot and was entitled to its use. The students reluctantly withdrew but continued to jeer and yell from the fringe of the meeting, attended by about 500 Klansmen.

A small Klansman ran up to the group of about 30 students and challenged any one of them to a fight but his fellows dragged him back and that was the nearest approach to actual violence.

Green, who was introduced and applauded in the South Carolina legislature earlier in the day, shouted that if "you let President Truman ram this civil rights bill down your throats it will be legal for a Negro to come up on your porch and ask for your daughter's hand in marriage."

"She can always say no!" chorused Green's hecklers in the student body.

Coed Affairs Forum Opens On Campus

More than 35 delegates from nine colleges and universities will arrive here today for the opening session this afternoon of a two-day Woman's Intercollegiate Government forum, sponsored by the University Coed senate.

Student Gets Inside Story On Sororities

Is Now on 'Outs' In Coed Castles

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 24—(UP)—Mary Lou Ullrich was one of the most dazzling, most sought after coeds on the University of California campus during rush week.

Her charm, beauty and—ahem—figure made her the prey for virtually every sorority house on the campus. During a week of receptions in the best sorority houses, Mary Lou consumed 14 cups of tea, a dozen tiny sandwiches and received return invitations from seven sororities.

But tonight Mary Lou was no longer welcome in the coed castles that surround the Berkeley campus. If she so much as set foot on a sorority house front porch you could get good odds that she'd have her hair pulled out by the handfulls.

For it was discovered today that Mary Lou, so dainty, so cute, was actually flying false colors. Instead of French heels and the new look, Mary should have worn pants and smoked a pipe.

It turned out that Mary Lou actually was Walter Robert Ullrich, 21-year-old chemistry major now handing his Kappa Alpha fraternity brothers the inside dope about what goes on in a sorority house.

Ullrich reported his reconnaisance was very successful—so much so that he collected the telephone numbers of 27 coeds and one house mother.

There was only one narrow escape, he said. That was on the occasion when his false front slipped.

"Some of these trappings come loose easily. I looked lopsided but everybody was too polite to say anything," he reported.

Enraged Drunk Wreaks Havoc In Trailer Court

A myterious, enraged drunk who turned the University trailer court utility house into a scene of chaos at 6 o'clock yesterday morning disappeared as mysteriuosly into the early morning mists as he had appeared and left trailer dwellers wondering what had struck them.

Woody Reece, trailer resident, was awakened by the sound of shattering glass and upon investigation found that the man had driven his fist through six different window panes in the men's room. Not satisfied with this, the mysterious man also turned over garbage cans, tore up a wicker basket, distributed a generous supply of toilet paper over the premises and left a bloody trail behind him when he moved into the laundry room where he completed his fun by smashing an ironing board.

Policeman Bill Blake, who was called to the scene by Reece, searched the trailer court area but could find no further trail of the man with a grudge against the world.

One resident reported that he had seen an unidentified stranger "wearing GI clothes, very drunk, but minding his own business" in the men's room some two hours earlier. He said that no damage was visible at this time.

A check of the infirmary and local doctors revealed that the drunk had not gone to any of them for treatment of his battle-earned wounds.

University Party Secondary Post Given to Duncan

Bill Duncan of Narberth, Pa., was elected vice-chairman of the University party at a party meeting Wednesday afternoon. Duncan succeeds Carlyle Morris of Raleigh. Other party officers, elected recently, are Joe Leary, chairman, Faith Adams, secretary, and Jane Mills, treasurer.

Duncan is the present editor of the Yackety Yack and is an active member of the Phi assembly. He has served as president pro-tem and as treasurer of the Phi. The vice-chairmanship post is the first position he has held in the party.

Junior Debaters Win Over Elon

The University junior varsity debate team in its first debate of the season Wednesday defeated the Elon college teams on two counts, the University quartet winning both affirmative and negative decisions.

The J.V. affirmatives, composed of Hurshell Keener and Charles Dixon, defeated the Elon negatives, and the University negatives, Emily Baker and June Hurst, outspoke the Elon affirmative team.

The varsity squad is journeying to Atlanta this weekend to participate in the Agnes Scott Southeastern forensic tournament. The squad of Herbert Mitchell, Dave Pittman, Paul Roth and Herbert Yates will meet eight other southeastern schools.

Debate council chairman Earl Fitzgerald yesterday voiced the team's aim to win the tournament. "We certainly have the boys to win it with," he said.

The J.V.'s will travel to Hickory March 3 to March 5 to participate in the South Atlantic tournament at Lenoir-Rhyne college.

Solicitors Meet For Instructions

Some 90 solicitors for the 1949 campus Red Cross campaign met yesterday in Gerrard hall to receive instructions and to hear an address by Col. F. Carlyle Shepard on the meaning of the American Red Cross.

Col. Shepard, chairman of the local ARC chapter, told the group that a special effort should be put forth this year to make the campaign a success. He called upon the solicitors to give wholehearted and conscientious support to "this worthwhile program" which runs March 1 through March 4.

In addition to Col. Shepard's talk, a movie was shown giving complete information about the work of the ARC.

Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon are heading the drive this year as co-chairmen. They have initiated a "contact a contributor only once" program.

Engstrom Speaks On Thomas Wolfe

Dr. Mary C. Engstrom of the University English department spoke to two overflow audiences Wednesday afternoon on "Thomas Wolfe at Carolina."

Dr. Engstrom reviewed interesting facts of Wolfe's life in Chapel Hill and read selections from "Look Homeward, Angel" in reference to his stay here. She has made an extensive study of Wolfe's works and life.

Although Wolfe spent four years here from 1916 to 1920, Dr. Engstrom said, there has been no recognition here of "Carolina's most famous alumnus" except a portrait in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

Dr. Engstrom suggested to her audience that a creative writing scholarship, a drama scholarship or a Wolfe professorship of English might be created in his name. "Any memorial to Thomas Wolfe," she said, "would have to be done in this manner for Wolfe is a living thing and cannot be seen through a stone building or a memorial plaque."

Progressives To Hear Austin

Louis Austin, editor of the Carolina Times of Durham, will be the principal speaker at the Young Progressives meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Austin will discuss the Shreve-Regan bill which has recently been introduced in the state legislature, making it a felony to belong to the Communist party.

A representative of the Communist party of North Carolina will be on hand to give his views on the bill.

Help to Be Given On Filing Taxes

C. F. Jones and M. B. Germain, of the North Carolina Department of revenue, will be in the Chapel Hill town hall Monday to assist taxpayers in filing forms.

Men's Council Cracks Down With New Suspension Ruling

Finance Reports Delivered; Charges Itemized By Dees

By Bill Buchan

A student government budget for the next fiscal year, totaling $103,170 and a rehashing of the current coed investigation issue highlighted the business of the Student legislature last night.

Page Dees, central figure in the Coed senate fight, went before the assembly and itemized part of her charges of careless coed spending which she made in the Daily Tar Heel yesterday morning.

Bob Kirby, secretary-treasurer of the student body and chairman of the Budget committee, submitted his budget to the legislature after stating that the committee had not considered any increase in student fees in compiling the budget. Dick Gordon, chairman of the Student Audit board, made the board's annual financial report to the solons and reported the financial status of student government as "good."

Miss Dees was granted the privilege of the assembly floor after Edie Knight, chairman of the investigating committee, requested that the committee be extended more time in making the report. Miss Knight stated that the committee had had difficulty in operating but that if given more time, a full report would be forthcoming.

Miss Dees, who resigned chairmanship of the committee in protest of the lack of cooperation in the group, told the legislature that the Town Girls' association spends $37 each year for fall and spring picnics and $5 for a seat on the steering committee of the University party; that the Kappa Epsilon pharmacy sorority spent $200 of coed funds last year to stage a national convention on campus (the local chapter has only four or five active members); the Carolina Independent Coed association, with 25 members, spends $239 on social entertainment, $100 for Yack space and $30.50 for gifts to new members and out-going officers; and that the Pan-Hellenic council is allotted $100 for Yack space and $77 for printing expences.

Assembly members applauded Miss Dees' comments on the coed spending program.

Patsy McNutt, a member of the legislature, the senate and the committee, presented the bill requesting extended time.

Her bill died for a lack of a second at that time, but when she presented it again later, after agreeing that the committee would appoint two additional members who are members of neither the senate nor the Interdorm council, the bill was passed.

Tenney Says Petition Out About Tuition

Glee Club Gets Money for Trip

Student legislator Ed Tenney told the assembly last night a petition was being circulated on this campus and at State college and Woman's college stating that the signers would use their vote and influence to defeat any candidate for office who supported the proposed tuition increase for the Greater University.

The petition, which Tenney had passed among the members of the legislature, read:

"We, the undersigned students of the Greater University of North Carolina, do hereby declare that we shall use our vote and influence to defeat any candidate in future elections, local state and national, who advocates a raise in tuition at any part of the University of North Carolina."

Also at last night's legislature meeting, the combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs received a $1,500 appropriation, effective May 15, to aid them in sponsoring a concert in New York on the Notre Dame football weekend next fall.

Tom Kerr, who explained the bill to the solons, said that 140 persons would be taken on the trip—70 men and 70 coeds. He said the concert would be held in either Carnegie or Town hall.

The legislature then passed a bill which will prevent all organizations, with the exception of the Publications board, which receive funds from the Student legislature, from lending or borrowing any money without the assembly's consent.

Another appropriation bill which passed last night gave $1160.60 to the Student Entertainment committee to pay a debt owed to Graham Memorial. This debt was pointed out when an attempt was made to exempt Graham Memorial, along with the Publications board, from the requirements of the bill on lending and borrowing money.

Dick Bowen proposed a committee to study means of listing instructors with courses in registration.

BULLETIN

GREENSBORO, Feb. 24—(UP)—Woman's college students today joined others in the North Carolina Greater University system in protesting a proposed tuition boost to $150 yearly.

The college's Student legislature adopted a resolution asking the General Assembly to hold the tuition rate at its present $85 level.

Earlier, student government units at both North Carolina State college in Raleigh and the University in Chapel Hill took similar action. The executive committee of the University's Board of Trustees approved the boost at a meeting last week.

Harris Cites Honor Code Enforcement

Report Warns Of Punishment

The Men's Honor council yesterday heralded a crackdown on honor violations with the announcement that "any student found guilty of violating the Honor code should be suspended from the University for at least one quarter."

A report released by Chairman Paul Harris of the council continued: "Anyone who cheats, lies, steals or fails to report violations that he sees must be dealt with severely.

Our self-imposed Honor system is the basis of the freedom that we enjoy here, and without its proper functioning we cannot long retain these privileges."

Harris said reporting another student for cheating is "perhaps one of the most difficult things for us to do while we are here at the University." He said however, when the logical reasons behind the reporting are studied, it becomes evident that it is a vital part of the Honor system.

The council report pointed out that a cheater is not only violating the Honor pledge he signed when he entered the University, but is also cheating himself, his fellow-students, his instructor "and perhaps even his future business associates."

In the years the University has been in existence, Harris said for the council, many plans have been tried for controlling cheating, lying and stealing. "By far the best," the council chairman said, "is our present Honor system.

"Due to this Honor system there is a feeling of mutual trust and respect among us students and between us and the faculty and the administration. We must all work not only to abide by the Honor code ourselves, but to see that our fellow-students do their part, too."

Faculty Talk By MacMillan To Be Tonight

Winter Lecture Is in Gerrard

Dougald MacMillan, professor of English, will deliver the faculty lecture in the humanities for the current winter quarter in Gerrard hall this evening at 8:30.

This is one of a series of lectures begun several years ago as a means of presenting various members of the Humanities division faculty to the entire community, students, townspeople, University staff, and visitors. The series has proved successful and has included lectures representing all the foreign language departments, drama, art, music, archaeology, and English and American literature.

Professor MacMillan has chosen for his topic, "Speculum Consuetudinis: The English Comedy of Manners." According to one of Professor MacMillan's colleagues, "no one who misses the lecture or who knows the comedy of manners of the Restoration period will worry about the Latin title."

A graduate of the University immediately after World War I, Professor MacMillan received his masters and doctor's degrees here and has been a member of the faculty during his entire teaching career.

He interrupted his teaching for two years while he was a Guggenheim fellow and then visiting scholar at the Huntington Library in California in the mid-1920's.

He has recently been appointed a member of the advisory council of the Folger Shakespeare library in Washington, and he is at work as general editor in charge of dramatic works for the Wilkins Andrews Clark edition of the "Works of John Dryden" being sponsored by the University of California, owner of the Clark library with its rich Dryden holdings.

Five Contests Set For High Schools

The dates for five high school academic contests to be held this spring were announced here today by Secretary E. R. Rankin, who will conduct the contests for the Extension division and several departments of the University.

They are: physics contest, April 15; mathematics, April 22; Latin, May 13; Spanish, May 19, and French, May 20.

Participation will be open to students in all accredited North Carolina public high schools.

Edwards Will Be Rendezvous Guest

Barbara Edwards, singing star of the "Beggar's Opera," will be the guest vocalist on tonight's Rendezvous radio show to be broadcast over station WDUK at 9:15. This will be Barbara's first appearance in the Rendezvous room this year.

A native of Troy, she is a graduate of Converse college and a former student in dramatic arts at the University. She played a leading role in the local production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" last year.

Appearing with Barbara on the program will be Becky Holton, tap dancing star of last week's competitive sorority floor show. Becky danced in the Alpha Gamma Delta portion of the show. Tommy Thomas and Dick Johnson, song and dance team, will also return for a repeat performance.

The Harmony Five quartet, composed of Bob Harley, Jack Clinard, Lanie Davis, Dick Smith, and Milton Bliss, will sing several of Frank Matthews' original arrangements. The comedian for the show will be Herman Ethelbert Emshiviller, alias Ralph Mulford, who will interrupt the program with comic telephone calls.

Dr. Adkins Joins Symposium in D. C.

Dr. Dorothy C. Adkins, of the department of psychology, is participating in a symposium Feb. 25 and 26 in Washington.

The program, on "Criterion Methodology in Personnel Research," is under the sponsorship of the adjutant general's office.

Drawl Is Asset For Lillian Prince

By Sam Hirsch

A heavy Southern drawl is generally a handicap to an actress, but to Lillian Prince, born and bred in Birmingham, Ala., it has been a fortunate asset. Right now it is coming in mighty handy.

She is cast as Birdie, the Southern aristocrat, in the Carolina Playmakers' production of "The Little Foxes," to be presented next Wednesday through Sunday, in the Playmakers theater.

"I was married 16 years before I got interested in the theater," Mrs. Prince said. "We were living in Westport, Conn., and one day, the director called and asked me to come to tryouts. I went, just as a lark, and read for him. Well, he liked my reading. Only he wanted to know if I could kill that Southern accent!"

LILLIAN PRINCE

She "trahd," and got the part. After this taste of the theater she got the bug, and decided to study diction, and some acting, too. She studied with Harry Irvine in New York. And by strange coincidence, he played the historian in "The Lost Colony" last summer when Mrs. Prince was playing her second season as Queen Elizabeth in the pageant.

The next time her accent received special attention was when she tried out for the professional touring company of "Dark of the Moon", by former Playmaker Howard Richardson. She read with her heaviest drawl, since this was a play about Southerners. The director liked her very much. He said, "I liked your reading, honey. But please go easy on that Southern accent!"

She got the part and played with the company for five months.

Mrs. Prince lives in Chapel Hill with her husband, William Meade Prince, the well known magazine illustrator and artist.

Finish the Investigation

In resigning from the student legislature, Page Dees has leveled some serious charges at the administration of coed government. The former chairman of the legislature's committee on coed affairs charges the coed senate with "gross inefficiency" and says that her resignation is due to "the disinterest and lack of cooperation that is prevalent among coed government leaders." Miss Dees cites instances of the practices which she terms inefficient and points out procedures within the structure of woman's government that she disapproves.

Although Miss Dees' statement as reported yesterday gives only one side of the argument, it is apparent that at least some of her complaints are well-founded. However, Miss Dees' method of calling attention to the ills of coed affairs is open to criticism. She took the easy way out by saying "everything is in such a mess that I won't even try to do anything about it." And so she quit.

It would have been more in the interest of student government had Miss Dees made as full a report as she could upon her investigation into coed affairs, explained to the legislature the conditions which prevented her report from being complete, and helped in attempts to improve the situation.

Now that the situation has been opened, the legislature did well last night in voting to have the investigation completed and fully reported. In fact it might not be a bad idea for the legislature to have a complete "Hoover report" made upon all phases of student government.

Complete Political Coverage

In order that students receive complete coverage of the spring election battle, the Daily Tar Heel has appointed a special political staff whose duty it will be to cover and report on all activities of the major candidates running for office.

Candidates running for executive positions in student government will be interviewed on all issues that enter the campaign and their specific stands will be presented in news stories on the front page of this paper. Each of the three political parties will be asked to write one column each week for the editorial page and to present their platforms and standards to the student body in that way.

By giving the students a complete, accurate picture of the political scene and presenting definite stands from the major candidates, the Daily Tar Heel feels that they will be able to analyze for themselves which candidate and which political party they feel can best fulfill the functions of student government.

What's Up, Doc?

It is remarkable that the student legislature accomplishes as much as it does with no more mistakes than it makes. Each visit to that body's sessions gives new insight into the slipshod way in which our laws are passed. As was exemplified last night and pointed out by Legislator Bill Prince, much of the time the lawmakers do not even know what they are voting on. As woefully ignorant as they are on most subjects which come before them they would find it beneficial—to the student body at least—to pay a little more attention to the discussion of bills.

They're Talking Sense

The Interdormitory council is talking sense in its proposal for a constitutional amendment which would insure year-to-year continuity within the membership of the council. Continuity of student life in all phases is weak at best and that weakness is one of the chief reasons that students and student organizations continue to make the same mistakes year after year.

As proposed, the amendment would call for election of three holdover members to the council each spring. Since orientation of new members by older ones and the keeping of accurate and readable records are almost the only methods of injecting continuity into student organizations, the interdormitory council should be encouraged in its efforts to have the amendment passed.

Lobbyists' Lobbyists

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Lobbyists are getting so wealthy they're hiring lobbyists.

The ju jitsu handshake and lapel-grabbing industry has assumed such proportions that a lobbyist who doesn't have a couple of lieutenant lobbyists is practically nobody.

He's considered so small he'd probably be snubbed by the Small Business committee.

The Congressional Quarterly, a widely unread publication, seldom leaves the presses any more without a list of newly-registered lobbyists who give another lobbyist as their employer. The latest issue lists two ex-congressmen as having achieved this sub-lobbying status.

Incidentally the 80th "worst" congress has contributed lavishly to the lobbying industry. Fifteen defeated congressmen have registered thus far as engaged in the noble and selfless mission of influencing legislation.

The lobbying profession lists so many new graduates that rumors—thus far unsubstantiated—are floating around that there is a secret, or underground, school for lobbyists somewhere in the nation's capital.

I asked Mr. Grover Whitney McKeister, the distinguished legislative consultant, about this but he avoided a direct answer. He said, however, there were certain courses an embryo lobbyist should take.

"No curriculum," he said sonorously, "would be complete without a course in ambushing. This requires infinite patience; the patience to lie in wait for hours for a certain congressman, then pop out at him with:

"'Isn't this a delightful surprise! I just happened to be passing!'

"Then there is the course in handshaking. An accomplished — er — um — legislative consultant employs both hands—one to imprison the congressman's fist; the other to hold him by the elbow. If skillfully applied, the sucker—I meant contact—cannot get free without wrestling.

"One course, which is frequently neglected, is the 'flowers for secretary' course. A few posies for the lady watchdog at the portal frequently is the best open sesame."

"I've heard about the bouquet stunt of yours," cut in Miss Reid. "But I was told about one time it backfired. You brought an old battleax some roses, all loused up with pollen, not knowing she was a hay fever victim. She began sneezing her bloody head off and you patted her on the back so hard she yelled that you had fractured a vertebra. The congressman ordered you out of his office for assaulting a helpless female."

"We will not talk about that," said Mr. McKeister. "We will proceed to the next course, known professionally as the 'have you heard this one?' course. It consists of waylaying the victim with a joke and then proceeding to your propaganda while he is still chuckling.

"This course also has its reverse side—studies in how to laugh heartily at the dullest old wheeze the congressman tells you.

"Then there are courses in check-grabbing; sneaking into the picture when some big shot is being photographed so you can frame it on your wall and tell everybody: 'you see how close I am to so-and-so.'; and the course in remarking casually: 'the President and I had lunch today', not bothering to explain that you had lunch one place and the President another."

I asked Mr. McKeister if there were any way to prep for lobbying other than being defeated at the polls.

"Oh, yes," he said. "You can be a Kentucky Colonel, or an ex-commissioner of something. But the best method is to be a member of every lodge, society, club, and association that is joinable."

Wilbur Has His Problem

By Bill Buchan

My friend Wilbur and I got back in town Sunday with all intentions of re-entering the University in March. Don't make any mistake, I plan to enter, but Wilbur has his problem. The problem, it seems, concerns the situation of a man named Scott and a raise in tuition.

Now, last spring and summer, Wilbur was anything but for Mr. Scott for governor and that is putting it mildly. I try to calm him down most of the time but on that subject he just won't listen to reason. And after you listen to Wilbur a while, it isn't hard to see why.

You see, Wilbur isn't one of the GI veterans whose tuition is paid by the government. Furthermore, his financial status is such that he has to pay the whole hog himself with no wealthy father to support him. To Wilbur, 69 dollars is a heck of a lot of money. Of course, he won't need it in March, but he probably will in September, if not then, in January. It isn't an easy problem to solve.

As the situation now stands, Wilbur has some two years to go before he can shake the Governor's hand and get his degree. If he has to quit school every now and then to make up that extra $69 in order to stay in school, I'm afraid one Governor Scott is going to be snubbed when Wilbur walks by on graduation day.

Wilbur's problem is simply that of many, many more students here. Contrary to statements, North Carolina is not a state of rich people. However, it is a state of forward-thinking folks who like to see their sons and daughters get college degrees, especially from the state university. North Carolinians, though have a habit of having three or four children who all need that college degree. They are, usually, within one or two years of each other in age, and consequently at least two or three are inevitably in college at the same time. That means that the old man, if he can pay it, will have an increase of $138 or $209 at the most if the increase Mr. Scott is backing is passed. To a middle-classed North Carolina family, chum, that is money with a big capital M and an equally big dollar sign.

Someone told Wilbur that the increase was to raise salaries of our very deserving profesors. Fine. Wilbur told me later, however, that if he had to make a choice between paved highways and the education of the young folks he'd educate. But Wilbur isn't the governor. There must be some other way to raise the salaries, Wilbur argues. Maybe through some of the huge surplus we heard so much about from the political scene last year.

Whatever the final decision, one thing is clear. Wilbur and a lot more of the poor—well, middle class folks—of our "forward looking" state are in for rough weather when it comes to paying $150 tuition here. (The scholarships we've been hearing about won't help anything either. Facts state very plainly that there are only some 200 available—a liberal estimate—and that there are more than that who need them now—many, many more. Consequently, they go to those who maintain almost a Phi Beta average. Wilbur doesn't have one of those and it's my opinion that he won't get one, within the next fifty years. Wilbur won't have one and dozens and dozens more won't have one. They'll just be out in the cold.)

Those in power can be brave and knowing and they can believe that we are a "rich state with no poor people" but the little people who won't be able to come here will know that they are wrong. Wilbur knows that they are wrong and twenty years from now, unless Wilbur makes a fortune over night, his sons and daughters will know that they are wrong too.

As a Last Resort—

Don't Kiss Him Goodnight

By Tookie Hodgson

A number of the fair sex, having read my essay on ways and means of dispersing imports who have overstayed their welcome at the various fraternity houses of the campus, have earnestly entreated me to compose a monograph on how a female might rid herself of an unwelcome male admirer.

Even though I am by nature a strong partisan of the man's side in such amorous convolutions, nevertheless, I will accede to the requests of the fair sex in this matter.

First of all, however, let me make it quite clear to all interested coeds that I am personally immune to such modi operandi as I shall list below. Of course, in view of my own prancing masculine gorgeousness, it is inconceivable that a right-thinking young lady would willingly deprive herself of my company for even a moment. But just in case—Oh well, let's get on with it. How to get rid of a man:

(1) Grasp his hand tenderly and give him a sweet smile. Then, in a dulcet tone, purr into his ear these words: "Darling, do you think you'll like being a father?" Of course, he will protest the insinuation violently, but he will do so while on a dead run to some distant place.

(2) Smoke cigars when you go out in public with him. People will soon begin to stare, and your date will become embarrassed and annoyed. He will ask you to quit smoking the aforementioned stogies. This is the time to regard him coldly and say: "A man is only a man, but a good cigar's a smoke!" No man likes to be compared unfavorably with a cigar.

(3) The next time he takes you to the Rathskeller, and asks what you will have, tell him a bottle of champagne. This method of getting rid of an obnoxious swain is predicated upon recognized laws of economics.

(4) Take him to eat at the Marathon.

(5) Ambulate to within proximity of a minion of the law. Then ask him to hold your purse while you powder your pretty little nose. As soon as he grasps said missle, cry out the following words in a loud voice: "Officer, this man has just snatched my purse!"

According to America's best legal minds, you will be free of your date for a period of 3 to 5 years.

(6) Steal his gin.

(7) If the boy is a Commerce major, acquaint him with the news that Dean Carrol is your uncle. This will strike terror into the most manly of hearts. Strong men quaver and grow pale at the barest mention of the doughty dean's soubriquet.

(8) If he is a fraternity man, tell him fraternities are snobbish and undemocratic; if he is an independent, inform him that he is vulgar.

(9) Tell him you are the Carolina agent of the WCTU.

(10) Super Special Sure-fire Wonder: Don't kiss him goodnight at the end of the third date.

Write Away

Against Medical Bill

Editor:

I have just read the article "Doctors Needlessly Apoplectic" by Dick Simpson in which he puts forth arguments in favor of the pending Senate Bill 5. This bill deals with national compulsory health insurance.

Mr. Simpson states that arguments against this bill won't hold water. I happen to have water by the bucket full which I would like to splash in his direction.

Statement no 1. "Over 300,000 people die every year in this country who could be saved with present medical knowledge." Mr. Simpson should know that we are able to play many tricks with figures. This number which he has used was put out by Mr. Oscar Ewing, the Federal Security administrator, who will administer the national health plan.

It has been found on investigation of this figure by the North Carolina Medical society that 44,000 of these people died in auto accidents. Over 100,000 more died of cummunicable diseases for which there is no 100 percent cure. I would say that Mr. Simpson's bucket is beginning to leak.

Statement no. 2. "Doctors will not become government employees. Patients will choose their own doctors. . . ." Under the plan each doctor is allowed a quota of patients for it is obvious that there will be a limit to the number he can handle. What happens when his quota is filled? The answer is obvious; the patient must sign with another doctor he doesn't want.

Statement no. 3. ". . .premiums (of voluntary health insurance) are much too expensive." Evidently Mr. Simpson has not heard of the present voluntary plan of the N. C. Medical commission. I invite everyone's attention to this insurance worked out for low income people by the doctors of our state. The premiums are extraordinarily low and the doctors are cooperating to the fullest by cutting their fees.

There are a few more factors in the case against socialized medicine which I would like to point out. At present every citizen has opportunity to receive free of charge chest X-ray service to make early diagnosis of tuberculosis. Yet we have patients by the thousands who could have been cured in early stages, but who never took advantage of this service. Typhoid immunization is at present free to all citizens. We recently had two cases right here in Chapel Hill. These people had free service, but refused to take advantage of it, and these examples are not rare. Can you possibly honestly blame our doctors for this?

The cost in taxes for national health insurance would be out of this world and 25-50% of this tax money would go towards administration alone. A total of 30,000 more non-medical government employees would be added to the pay roll in North Carolina alone. In England, original estimates in several fields of medicine have been exceeded by as much as 400-1000%.

Finally, in New Zealand where the plan has operated for ten years, 12 and one-half % of the total population is in hospitals all of the time. In this country, that would mean that 17,000,000 people would be hospitalized at a terrifying cost to the taxpayers.

As Mr. Simpson states, the doctors could possibly make more money under the system. The doctors' income is not the question.

FLAGGED FROM THE MAGS: Sport magazine, which appears regularly on the news stands and in Jeff's window, carries more Tar Heel sports pictures than some Yackety Yacks. The current issue gives a featureous once over lightly to Horace ("Bones") McKinney, presently cavorting and what have you with the Washington Caps of the BAA pro basketball league. McKinney was the center and usually the center of attraction of Carolina's great cage crew of 1946.

Red Bennett, substantial substitute of Coach Tom Scott's 1949 court aggregation also breaks into the inked pages of the current Sport edition. But the big forward is not after points in this feature, but possum instead. Whether you hunt or not, Mr. Bennett's actions bear reading.

Next month Sport continues the Carolina monopoly with a feature on the why and wherefore of one Vic Seixas, the local Big Time racqueteer and possessor of the famed talking racquet.

Beating the Bushes

WITH SCOUTS AND TOUTS Jim Hamilton, Carolina's freshman cage coach, has been quite a busy man lately, traveling all over the countryside in search of basketball talent. . . Jim has been through Kentucky and Tennessee recently and reports that a Carolina-Kentucky basketball game is a definite possibility. . . The Carolina mentor was also in Raleigh this week for the Hugh Morson-Needham Broughton high game. . . Broughton won the game, its 18th without loss this season, and Hamilton was particularly impressed by the play of Kim Buchanan, a junior and one of the state's best prospect. . . Also under consideration is Bobby Goss, Broughton's 6-7 center. . . Coach Everett Case of State is reportedly interested in the pair.

Ham Crowder, who earned a starting guard position on the freshman cage team this winter before an attack of appendicitis shelved him, is now fully recovered. . .. He should be a valuable asset to the Tar Baby baseball team this spring. . . Ham ranked as one of the best shortstops in state prep circles while playing for Wilson high last year.

Worth watching in the Indoor track meet this weekend is Carolina freshman Gordon Hamrick. . . In the last two practice meets with Duke, Hamrick has placed first in the three-fourths mile with little trouble. . . Tomorrow will be the first time he has run in a collegiate meet, but he holds great promise for the future.

Gathering the Rebounds

BASKETBALL DRIBBLINGS: The Big Four basketball teams attempt to take on the world in a late December cage tourney next year is beginning to jell. The big event will be played in State's brand new Mooselium to be readied for next season. The world is courrently composed of Georgia Tech and Rhode Island, the first half of four visitors to be asked to the event. St. Louis, Holy Cross and Oklahoma A. and M. are rumored to be the teams being sought to fill the remaining berths.

Duke's basketball Coach Jerry Gerard seemed to have frozen the Southern conference out of the East-West All-Star cage game to be played in New York next month. It seems that when N. Y. Herald Tribune writer Everett Morris whose paper sponsors the big event for charity, was in Durham recently, Gerard told him there wasn't an outstanding basketball player in this area. Gerard, a man of his word, must have been taken at same. Invitations to the big affair aren't being mailed in this direction. Sammy Ranzino should hire a new press agent.

South Carolina and Wake Forest have cancelled their basketball game which was scheduled next Monday. . . The committee to select the eight teams to play in the Southern conference tourney meets Sunday, and the two schools, realizing that the result of their game would then have no bearing on tourney prospects, probably decided the contest was useless.

Sunshine and Orange Juice

THE GREAT STATE OF FLORIDA (or is it the orange state?) has had the honor of playing host to a pair of University athletic luminaries in the past few weeks. First it was Harvie Ward who packed up brassie and chip-iron and headed for sun-blessed St. Augustine. Ward was the sensation of an aptly-named Tournament of Champions, and wowed everyone present at the fairway frolics with his top-notch style.

The Tarboro youngster was hailed as "the best golfer the South has produced since Bobby Jones," Atlanta's gift to golfdom. South has produced since Bobby Jones," Atlanta's gift to golfdom. Arnold Finnefrock, sports editor of Jacksonville's Times-Union was one of the many columists falling all over themselves in an effort to be the first to heap a little well-deserved praise on Ward. He went on to say that "Time alone will tell, but Ray McCarthy, who has followed golf for more than two decades, believes that the handsome University of North Carolina junior will gain that recognition.

Before Ward had returned from the state of eternal sunshine (page 42 in the Florida Chamber of Commerce manual), Vic Seixas was blasting his way through the Miami Invitational tennis tourney.

Seixas slipped up in the semi-finals after downing a pair of grade-A racqueteers in earlier rounds. His fatal miscue is easily explainable, however, when one stops to think that Lilly "Cat Girl" Christine, of New Orleans French Quarter fame, was also playing at Miami. Now wasn't that a catty remark! ! !

Cagers At Duke; Matmen Battle Terps

Determined Devils Will Oppose Heels In Loop Headliner

By Dick Jenrette

DURHAM, Feb. 24 — Coach Jerry Gerard's Duke Blue Devils, who must beat Carolina to qualify for the Southern conference tourney next weekend, play hosts to their old rivals from Chapel Hill tonight in a loop headliner scheduled for Duke Indoor stadium. Tip-off is at 8:30 following a game between the freshman squads of the two schools.

The Blue Devils need a win over the Tar Heels in order to boost their conference standing to a .500 keel. The Dukesters overall record for the season is commendable, with a win over powerful NYU being included; but within the conference Gerard's five has had rough going.

Duke will be the host team for the tourney, and there is a strong sentiment around the conference that the Blue Devils should be given a bid to the event, even though their won-lost mark is not particularly impressive. But if Duke is unable to win tonight, its chances of making the tourney are remote.

The Tar Heels, however, will be doing their best to keep the Devils out of the annual affair. In the first meeting of the two teams this season, Carolina emerged an easy victor, 64-34. The result of this game was startling to most sports observers, for on the previous night, Duke had beaten NYU by 29 points. That same NYU team had defeated Carolina earlier by an equally wide margin.

The starting lineup for Carolina has Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler at forward, Nemo Nearman, center, and Dan Nyimicz and Charlie Thorne at guards.

Frosh Close Season Against Duke Tonight

The Carolina freshmen basketball squad will try for the fourth time this season to knock off the high-flying Duke frosh when the Tar Babies journey to Durham tonight to engage the Blue Imps in battle in a preliminary to the varsity contest of the two schools.

Coach Jim Hamilton's lads have met and succumbed three times to the potent infant Dukes but a victory tonight would no doubt conclude a successful season for the first Carolina yearling cage squad since pre-war days. The Tar Babies need this game to finish above the .500 mark, their present record being nine up and eight down, and the Dukesters require another triumph to sew up the frosh Big Four championship.

Late Entries Boost Contestant List For Conference Indoor Track Test

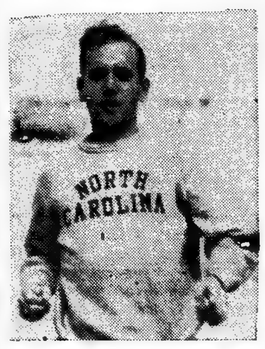
By Frank Allston, Jr.

A total of 529 of the South's top trackmen are expected to participate in the Southern conference indoor track meet in Woollen gymnasium Saturday.

Last minute entries and the addition of Clemson and Richmond in the conference division and Mercer, Randolph-Macon, and Pfieffer in the non-conference divisions have swelled the number far beyond the 450 originally expected. The 529 entrants represent the largest number of actual contestants ever to participate in a single athletic contest at Chapel Hill.

Georgetown has been added to the list of freshman teams running Saturday and several additional high schools have been entered.

Begin Arriving Today



The teams will begin arriving in Chapel Hill early this afternoon and will continue arriving until midnight. All of the teams, with the exception of the nearby State entries will come in sometime today.

The latest indications are that the powerful Maryland team will be the favorite. The Terps have shown strength in several previous meets and were very impressive in winning their invitational meet at College Park last week end.

Carolina, however, stands a very good chance of upsetting the pre-meet dope. The Tar Heels finished a close second to Maryland last week and were not represented by a full team.

Tar Heels Work Hard

Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton have been working their Tar Heel charges hard this week in preparation for the action Saturday. Injuries have been held to a minimum and only pole vaulter Bob House will be kept out of the meet due to injury.

JACK MOODY

. . . always a threat . . .

Several of the Tar Heel entries loom as potential point-getters here Saturday. In the hurdle events the Tar Heels will be particularly strong with Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow, Jack Moody and Bill Albans.

Top distance men Julian MacKenzie and Sam Magill will represent Carolina in the distance events. MacKenzie has been entered in both the half-mile and the mile, but it is not definite whether or not he will compete in both events. Magill will run the two-mile stint.

Albans, Moody and Billy Joyner represent Carolina in the high and broad jump and Rusty Russell will be the top entry in the pole vault. Bob Seligman and Turk Ogden, shot putters, will round out the Carolina entries in the field events.

Riflemen Triumph Over Oklahomans In ROTC Outing

The latest victim of the Naval ROTC rifle team was the University of Oklahoma which succumbed to the local sharpshooters by a score of 1783-1764.

So far this season the sharpshooters have posted seven wins out of twelve matches against other Naval ROTC units with colleges and universities throughout the east and middle-west.

In their first match, they defeated the University of Illinois 1743-1678. Other wins were posted against the University of Wisconsin. 896-852: Illinois Tech, 1759-1731; the University of Rochester, 915-913: University of Pennsylvania, 1784-1773; and Ohio state, 898-890.

The five losses were to the University of Idaho, 906-870; the University of Mississippi, 1838-1773; the University of Washington, 926-836; Georgia Tech, 1843-1809; and Oregon State, 1844-1783.

Quinlan's Outfit Concludes Season At College Park

The eight-man University of North Carolina wrestling squad left Chapel Hill early yesterday to journey to College Park, Md., where they will face the University of Maryland's Terrapins in their final match of the 1949 season.

When the Tar Heels face the Terps tonight they will be presenting only one undefeated wrestler — 155 - pounder Phil Kemp. Oscar Gupton, team co-captain and 165-pound wrestler, was undefeated up until earlier this week when he lost a close decision to Duke's John McMasters. Gupton now has a record of five wins and one loss.

Co-Captain Carrol Fisher, with one lone defeat, has perhaps the most remarkable record of the Tar Heel varsity crew. In his first five meets he won all matches on pins. His first loss came at the hands of Washington and Lee last week.

As a team, the Carolinians have a record of three wins, one tie, and three defeats. Losses were to N. C. State, Washington and Lee, and Duke, while victories were posted over V.M.I., Davidson, and The Citadel. The tie came at Blacksburg, Va., with V.P.I.

Although this is the last dual meet of the season, Tar Heel wrestlers may figure prominently in two more meets — the Southern Conference championships in March and a championship meet sponsored by the High Point YMCA. Fisher, Kemp, and Gupton seem to be logical contenders for individual championships in the Conference and will probably be sent to Lexington for a stab at them.

The Tar Heel squad that will meet the Terps tonight consists of Ken Hoffman, Charlie Harless, Ed Turnley, Fisher, Kemp, Gupton, John Stoioff, Ray Swigart, and Joe Augustine.

Game Postponed

Coach Bill Grice, the wonderman of Chapel Hill high, announced yesterday that the game originally scheduled for tonight between Chapel Hill and Siler City has been postponed until Monday night.

The undefeated Wildcat cagers have won 17 straight this year and will close out their season against the Siler City flads on Monday.

Chapel Hill turned the visiting cagers back in an earlier battle this season.

Coaches Hearn, Rabb Continue Practices

Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb took hopeful glances at their sixty-odd baseball aspirants yesterday afternoon on Emerson field, and closed out another day of drill with high hopes for the coming season.

All drills have been light so far, but hard work is expected to begin early next week.

Coach Hearn announced that his diamond crew will drill on Saturday of this week, and added that he expects to have a fair idea of how his team will stack up against Southern conference opposition by the middle of next week.

The Tar Heel baseballers will open their season with a four-day Florida engagement during spring holidays.

East Leads Scoring Parade

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(UP) Eastern college basketball circles are without a major powerhouse team this season, but they can certainly boast the most prolific scorers.

Seven of the first 10 scorers among the major college units are cavorting "down east," the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau pointed out today.

Leading the pack is Tony Lavelli, the Old Blue from Yale who has averaged 21.8 points, including games played Feb. 19. Lavelli's hook shots, thrown with a stiff-arm motion, have netted 479 points in 22 games.

Pushing Lavelli for the top spot was Paul Arizin of Villanova. The slow-footed but sure-handed wildcat center, who recently climbed from 27th place to fourth place by virtue of an 85-point effort against a Philadelphia naval team, had an average of 21.6 points for 20 contests.

Skin-Tight Breeches

Kings Of Mardi Gras Paying Through Nose

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 24—(UP)—The kings of Mardi Gras are paying $6,000 to $7,000 each this week for the privilege of riding through the streets of New Orleans on mule-drawn floats, hiding their faces behind false whiskers and wearing skin-tight satin breeches.

A queen has to pay $5,000 for an evening of regality, or her father does for her. Dukes can get by for about $1,000 by cutting corners and not picking up too many checks at incidental entertainments.

The $3,000 to $7,000 figure is for the ordinary variety of Carnival week kings. They can't publicly disclose their names. The only king who can is Rex, lord of misrule, who will reign Mardi Gras day—next Tuesday—and he will pay a premium rate of about $12,000.

For a breakdown on how a Mardi Gras king pays and pays, take the case of King Cynthius. The parade and ball of Cynthius Tuesday night officially opened Carnival week.

King Cynthius led a 21-float parade, sweated out a grand ball, accepted the homage of his merry "subjects," bought champagne for the house and favors for everybody, and dined his queen in regal style.

And what does he do if his subjects decide to see the newest Bourbon street stripper after the ball? He writes checks, if able after spending half the day and night gulping champagne.

This is how King Cynthius paid:

To his krewe, the organization sponsoring the parade and ball, $5,000; champagne (20 cases) $780; whiskey (5 cases) $250 bonded; food for the court, $100; giveaway favors, $100; the queen's supper (with court) $150.

That adds up to $6,380, to which must be added such incidentals as engraved invitation cards to the ball and a personal gift (anywhere from $25 to $100) to the queen as a memento.

The $5,000 kitty to the krewe provides for the king's costume, jeweled scepter and crown ($2,500), and the rest is the king's donation to the krewe's total expenditure of a $50,000 for the whole show.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 24—(UP)—Mardi Gras' Knights of Babylon parade was delayed and thrown into wild confusion last night when a fire broke out in a gasoline puddle as the floats gathered to start the march at Lasalle and Calliope streets.

Police said white-robed flambeau bearers in the parade dropped their flambeaux and scattered widely when the fire broke out.

Dr. Getsinger To Open Office Here Monday

Dr. Duncan M. Getsinger, formerly of Plymouth, will open offices Monday in the Strowd building for the general practice of dentistry, it was announced yesterday. The offices were formerly occupied by Dr. Jan F. King, who has gone on active duty in the Navy.

A graduate of the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond, Dr. Getsinger took his pre-dental work at Mars Hill and Wake Forest. He served on the clinical staff of the dental school at the Medical college in the department of exodontia and oral surgery for one year, and was associated with Dr. Walter E. Clark of Asheville.

He is married to the former Jo Ann Sarti of Richmond.

Boy Scout Jobs Open to Students At South Office

Students who are interested in scouting as a professional career are asked to see Joe Galloway in the Placement Service office South building.

Galloway reported that staff members of the personnel division and regional office staff members of the Boy Scouts of America will visit the campus in the near future.

During February, March and April, the Boy Scouts will recruit approximately 200 men to fill field scout executive positions in almost every section of the country, Galloway said.

Further information as to qualifications and salaries may be obtained from Galloway.

Dean Guy B. Phillips and Dr. W. E. Rosenstengel, of the Education school, have recently returned from directing a public school survey. They met in Hickory with Superintendent Roland Morgan of Mooresville, who joined them in their visit to all the school buildings.

Conferences with the school officials were held, and information about the school system was examined.

Local Rotarians Attend Meeting

A group of Chapel Hill Rotarians went to Charlotte Wednesday night to attend a dinner meeting honoring Angus Mitchell, of Melbourne, Australia, president of Rotary International, who is on a tour of this country now.

More than 500 representatives of Rotary clubs from all sections of the state attended the dinner.

The, Chapel Hill delegation was composed of R. W. Madry and Vic Huggins, past district governors; J. B. Johns, president of the club this year; and Y. Z. Cannon and Carl Smith, past presidents.

Slow Down, Bud

Two Fast Feet Not Enough To Straighten Out Crime

By J. L. Merritt

Two fast feet and a strong desire to "straighten out" were not enough to keep Andrew Jackson Tutts, Durham Negro, from receiving a six months tour of duty on the state roads Tuesday morning in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Tutts was picked up one morning last week by police officer R. L. Blackwood in connection with a recent automobile robbery. When he arrived at the station, Tutts broke away from Blackwood and began a speed run across Chapel Hill.

Blackwood said he chased Tutts from the police station to Poe Mangum's service station on Franklin and then back to Rosemary street again. Tutts was gaining speed all the way but reinforcements for Blackwood appeared in the form of officer D. B. Roberts, and the two officers finally slowed Tutts down enough to get him in the police station.

Tutts, who was wearing an overcoat stolen from a car when arrested, told Judge Henry Whitfield that an unknown stranger had asked him to hold the coat. He said he thought the situation over on the way to the police station and decided the best policy for him was to "straighten out." So he proceeded to "straighten out" away from the police station.

However, Judge Whitfield thought the best policy to "straighten Tutts out" was a six months road sentence, and he pronounced his decision accordingly. Tutts immediately gave notice of appeal and his bond was set at $500.

Other cases heard were:

J. D. Franks, fraud, bound over to Superior court on $1,000 bond; James Farrington, Negro, disorderly conduct and trespass, nol pros; Henry Lee Webb, Negro, improper state license, prayer for judgment continued; Joe Council, Negro, assault or female, $100 and costs; Robert Carver, Negro, reckless driving, costs.

John R. Cambron, passing worthless check, costs plus amount of check; Paul Morris Plummer, improper state license, $100 and costs; Robert Edwards, drunkenness, $5 and costs; Thurman Rackley, speeding, $5 and costs; Leary Ellis, breaking and entering, bound over to Superior court under $1,000 bond.

The longest standing champion in any sport in the United States is Willie Hopp, national billiard king.

League Meeting Hears McDermott Speak Tuesday

"It's time we are told what we're fighting for in this cold war and the issues should be made clear," Dr. Malcolm McDermott of the Duke university law school, former president of the Tennessee bar, declared in an address before the second annual conference of the junior executives and employees of the North Carolina Building and Loan league.

"It's time we stopped calling what we're doing a struggle between Communism and democracy," he said. "Russia doesn't have Communism and, in the true sense of the word, we don't have democracy—that is not government by the people. We, the people, are represented, but that doesn't mean our representatives get what we want from the government," he declared, lamenting the number of controls that government is adding.

Dr. McDermott was the principal speaker at Tuesday's session in the University's Communication center presided over by R. L. Sides, Rocky Mount, vice-president of the Building and Loan league.

ATTENDING A DINNER in honor of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to the chief executive, President Truman, speaking at the Army-Navy Country club, Washington, bitterly challenged "any S.O.B. who thinks he can get me to discharge any of my staff or cabinet by some smart aleck statement over the air." The President is shown with Gen Vaughan (left), Mrs Omar Bradley and Gen. E. A. Evans. The official White house text was later altered from "S.O.B." to read "any one."

Women's Forum To End Weekend Of Activities With Talk By Weaver

The Women's Intercollegiate Government forum will complete its weekend of activities with an informal banquet beginning at 6 o'clock tonight in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn. Fred Weaver, dean of students, will be guest speaker for the occasion.

Beginning this morning at 8:30, delegates to the forum will have breakfast at the Methodist church.

Workshops studying various phases of women government and activities will begin at 9:30 this morning in Graham Memorial.

Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, will speak at a plenary session this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Following her speech, student leaders of the workshops will review the work done in their individual sessions.

Sponsored by the Coed senate, the forum was planned and directed by a special forum committee composed of Chairman Edie Knight, Fran Angus, Emily Baker, Helen Bouldin, Butch Daniel, Bobbie Lowe, Joan Lucas, Patsy McNutt, Emily Ogburn, Sue Stokes, and Gussie Young.

Madison Wood Keynotes Meet With Address

Assures Coeds 'World Is Yours'

"The world is yours," Dr. James Madison Wood, president emeritus of Stevens college, told a mass meeting of University coeds yesterday afternoon in the keynote address of the Coed Intercollegiate Government forum which opened yesterday.

"What you will do with your heritage is the question."

To insure the heritage of each person, Dr. Wood said there would have to be a reinterpretation of present academic standards to provide adequate individual needs.

However, he said changing standards would not be easy for people today are more interested in improving their state of living than their personalities. There will have to be a whole new world constructed on a new purpose with education having the major role and religion employed as the background of the new program.

After World War I, Dr. Wood said the position of women changed drastically. The war changed the complete social picture and women emerged from the war with added responsibilities and inadequate training.

Confusion and tension arose in the next three decades. The confusion was the result of the attempt to fit new issues into old patterns, he continued, and women face the same situation today as the result of World War II.

The only answer to present-day questions is to prepare people for a richer, fuller life. And the answers for today's questions will not come from the science laboratories but from the halls of religion, Dr. Wood said.

Solons Hear Bill Providing Funds to UNC

Insurance Firms To Remit Money

RALEIGH, Feb. 25.—(UP)—A bill requiring insurance companies to turn over to the University of North Carolina any claims unpaid after a certain number of years was introduced to the General assembly today by Sens. Henry A. McKinnon of Lumberton and R. E. Little of Wadesboro.

The University escheats fund already receives all unclaimed money from other sources in the state. The fund is used for scholarships in the Greater University.

The senate passed a measure today increasing the state Banking commission to nine members and enacted into law a measure providing for the statewide running of warrants without local endorsement.

The house passed measures today to raise the salaries of Supreme Court justices, Superior Court judges, and solicitors and to require doctors to report to health departments diagnosed or suspected cases of cancer.

Knight Is Pushing Double Changes In Coed Dynasty

Edie Knight, chairman of the special committee to investigate coed government, yesterday pushed recommendations that copies of all bills passed by the Coed senate be sent to the Coed Affairs committee of the Student legislature and that a member of the Coed Affairs committee attend all meetings of the senate.

The recommendations were both passed unanimously by the special committee which was formed three weeks ago to look into irregularities in coed government on campus. One factor in the coed set-up, a special $1 women's fee, has been under attack for some time.

Page Dees, who resigned as chairman of the investigating committee in protest against the "complete inefficiency" of coed government, said yesterday the campus "deserves to have complete information on all phases of the case" involving the "questionable" items in the coed budget.

Meanwhile, Chairman Knight charged that Miss Dees, as previous chairman of the committee, had failed to call a meeting until the beginning of the third out of four weeks allotted for the investigation. She continued, "No considerations were given to class schedules of the members, therefore there was a very small attendance."

Miss Dees had charged previously that the Coed senate kept no copies of its bills, by-laws, resolutions or constitution. In answer to that, Miss Knight retorted that Miss Dees might look into the files in the Women's Honor council room.

"Granted that they may not be in the best of order," she said, "I will long contend that they do exist.

"In fact," she added, "I wrote one myself!"

In reply to other charges made by Miss Dees, Miss Knight quipped, I shall not answer the other charges of inefficiency because that would really cause us to resort to name-calling."

Final action on the special investigating committee by the legislature Thursday night extended the life of the group until the last session of the present legis-

Top Job Goes To Shropshire In Di Voting

Will Head Group For Third Time

Don Shropshire will be president of the Dialectic senate next quarter as results of a Di election held Wednesday night.

The senate, the second oldest forensic society in the country and the oldest extracurricular organization at the University, named Shropshire its speaker this week for the third time in history. As president of the Senate for two quarters in 1947, he was responsible for a renovation program to refurnish the Di hall on the third floor of New West.

Shropshire, a senior from Winston-Salem majoring in commerce, is also a past president of the Baptist Student union, a member of the Debate council, and a Daily Tar Heel columnist. Last weekend he was a University delegate to a convention of the Virginia-Carolina affiliate of the National Student association held here in Chapel Hill.

Other officers chosen by the Di to take office at the first Wednesday night meeting in the spring quarter are as follows: Sam Manning, Spartanburg, S.C., speaker pro tempore; William Harding, East Aurora, N. J., critic; Morris Knudsen, Los Angeles, Calif., clerk; Gus Graham, Oxford, treasurer; Arthus Murphey, Macon, Miss., sergeant-at-arms; and Will Foister, chaplain.

The Di senate officers for the present term are as follows: Jerry Pettigrew, Reidsville, speaker; Banks Talley, Bennettesville, S. C., speaker pro tempore; Dick Bowen, Athens, Ga., critic; Charlie Gibson, Winston-Salem, clerk; Sam Manning, Spartanburg, S. C., treasurer; Dickson McLean, Lumberton, sergeant-at-arms; and William Harding, East Aurora, N. J., chaplain.

The Di will convene for only one more session this term. The last meeting will come next Wednesday night at 9 o'clock when, according to Banks Talley, chairman of the ways and means committee, "a topic of hotly-disputed campus concern will be debated."

Male Contingent Invades Sanctum Of Women's Dorm

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Feb. 25—(UP)—Some 250 male students of Augustana college invaded the woman's dormitory early today, dumped the coeds out of bed and doused some of them in bathtubs, the school revealed.

The girls said the boys "wrecked the place" as a climax to the school's initiation week.

Some of the coeds who had not retired were forced to scramble for more clothing. Others shrieked and locked themselves in their rooms.

The men roamed through the building, dumping over beds, dousing mattresses with water and dunking a few hapless coeds in the bathtubs.

The girls in turn grabbed water buckets and doused the men. Some of the more spirited ones went at the men with flailing arms and drove them off.

"But it was really more fun than anything else," Lois Taylor, a senior from Geniseo, Ill., said. "In fact, we had an inkling they were coming."

University Units Plan Production Of Movies

Plans for the production of several 20 to 30 minute movies by University departments were announced recently by Edward Freed, writer-director of the motion picture division of the Communication center and professor of motion pictures in the dramatic arts department.

Sponsored by the Communication center and the dramatic arts class in production, the pictures will be under the direction of Freed, who has previously had experience with picture production for the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The motion picture production class will begin in the next ten days the first production, which will be the taking of background shots in 16 mm kodachrome for the American film service of Washington, D. C. The picture will include scenes of campus activity, featuring buildings and scenes easily recognized as scenes of the University.

The class also has plans for the production of a short subject dealing with the techniques of stage acting, using the Playmaker theater and University students.

The Communication center will begin in the next two or three weeks the making of a 35 mm picture for the state Wildlife Resources commission. Entitled "Where Is All the Shooting?" and written by Edward Freed, the picture will emphasize the promotion and better understanding of the commission's wildlife protection laws. Cast and location for the shooting of the film have not yet been chosen.

Negotiations are now underway between the Communication center and the New York branch of the U. S. State department for the center to make pictures on the campus for distribution overseas.

The government will pay the laboratory and film costs and distribute the films as a part of the Voice of America program. Another purpose of the films is to encourage students to get practical experience in the actual making of pictures under supervision.

Freed said, "This is a real break for the motion picture division of the Communication center and the students in the production class, because it gives us an opportunity to actually make pictures. It also gives the University of North Carolina a chance to speak directly to Europe."

In the film discussing swimming, the March swimming meet, which will have eight Olympic champions, will be fea-

Confused

Joanie Lucas, member of the Women's Honor council, got into trouble yesterday when she tried to give somebody a helping hand.

Joan was aiding officials of the Women's Intercollegiate Government forum by setting up a housing registration desk in Nash dormitory, where the delegates are staying.

Naturally, she got confused and set up her office across the street in the hallway of Miller hall, which is still in use as a men's dormitory.

She didn't realize anything was peculiar, even when she saw several men in the building, until she called to them, "Let's get this place cleaned up—the girls are coming."

"GIRLS!!??" thundered back a chorus of male voices.

Whereupon one of the more chivalrous dorm residents picked up Joanie's entire "office" and carted it over to Nash hall.

Asked later whether she enjoyed the experience, the St. Petersburg, Fla., Tri-Delt had but one thing to say:

"Are you kiddin'?"

Sisson to Read Macbeth Tuesday

The Philological club will hear "The Tragedy of Lady Macbeth" read by Professor Charles J. Sisson of the University of London Tuesday night at 7:30 in Gerrard hall, President George R. Coffman said today.

Sisson is visiting professor in the English department for the current winter quarter.

Latin-Americans To Give Concert In Hill Tomorrow

The Latin-American trio will appear in Hill hall tomorrow night at 8:30 as the fourth in a series of weekly musical programs sponsored by Graham Memorial.

The trio is composed of Julie Andre', mezzo-soprano and guitarist; Florence Samora, violinist and Spanish dancer; and Odmar Amarel Gurgel, pianist.

The program will feature a presentation of varied, colorful songs and dances from the classical music of Spain to the folklore and rhythms of Latin America.

A spot check of Playmakers theater tickets for "The Little Foxes" reveals that there are still a few left at Swain hall and Ledbetter-Pickard's for next Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday nights. Reserved seats for Friday and Saturday are completely sold out.

The ticket response has been so good that John Parker, Playmaker business manager and director of the show, is considering adding an extra night Monday providing the sales continue as they have.

Dudley to Talk On Baha'i Faith

Miss Alice Dudley will speak on the Baha'i faith at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Gerrard hall, using as her topic, "The Threshold," it was announced today.

Miss Dudley recently returned from a two-year tour in Europe where she spent nearly 16 months in Stockholm as a Baha'i worker.

GOP Club Backs Government Week

The Young Republican club endorsed Mayor R. W. Madry's proclamation of February 27 to March 5 as World Government week by unanimous vote at its Thursday night meting

"In taking this stand," Bill Hipple, president of the club, said, "we are reiterating and adding our support to the stand taken by the Republican state convention last year. At that time a resolution favoring world government, authored and introduced by Jake Wicker, a graduate student at the University, was adopted by the convention without major opposition."

Beggar's Opera Still Tops; Played in America in 1750

The Beggar's Opera, which plays in Memorial hall March 10 and 11 under the sponsorship of five campus organizations, has had a long and varied career.

Because of the perennial vitality of the show which has kept it on the stage almost yearly since its first production in 1728, the music department, the music fraternities Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Sigma Alpha Iota, Sound and Fury, and the Carolina Playmakers all joined forces and talents to play the show for the first time in Chapel Hill.

Newspaper descriptions bring out the many ways in which the musical satire has been changed, clipped, added to and infused now and again with new music and new lyrics, and countless variations of texts. Dr. Jan P. Schinhan and M. David Samples, co-directors of the campus production are interpreting the script "in period without being pedantic."

The original text of the script has been changed very little, other than deleting political and social references pertinent only to the time of its original production. Dr. Pepusch's airs have been placed into new settings and some additional music has been added by Frederic Austin.

The opera, which began its American career December 3, 1750, dropped from the boards almost completely during the nineteenth century. Then Nigel Playfair revived it in England on June 5, 1920, demonstrating the never-dying freshness of the opera. The sets were designed by C. Lovat Fraser who received praise for making his sets ring with the flavor of the eighteenth century.

Pete Strader, designer for the present campus production, has studied Hogarth's prints which he has used to bring out the brilliant background of eighteenth century color and authenticity in his scenery and costumes.

The Playfair production was so successful in London and in New

Indiana Governor 'Hopping Mad' In Verbal Scrap with Communist

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 25—(UP) — This is the story of how the governor of Indiana tangled with a Communist.

Gov. Henry F. Shricker was making an official visit to the state Employment Security office when he was handed a leaflet at the door by Ben Cohen, chairman of the Indianapolis Communist party.

The leaflet advocated $40 a week unemployment compensation, twice the maximum benefit under Indiana plan.

Shricker took it absently and walked into the office. A moment later he came charging out.

Red-faced and angry, he approached while dozens of unemployed men and women, waiting in a line to enter the office, looked on.

"So you're a Communist" he asked.

"Yes, sir," Cohen replied.

"Then why don't you go back to Russia and peddle your papers?" "Take this propaganda back where it started and pass it out to your friends."

Cohen protested that he wasn't a Russian, but an American.

"I don't think much of your

Coed Ventriloquist Finds Dummy Helps Out in School

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—(UP)—A green-eyed Boston university coed admitted today that her boy friend is a dummy and that she likes it that way.

In fact, the dummy, named Tommy, is putting her through college.

The girl, 21-year-old Bernice Liberatore, is a third generation ventriloquist. But she doesn't like the atmosphere of show business. So she has become an entertainer in hopes that it will make her spot in the theatrical world a little better.

"Show people are too wrapped up in their own affairs," she said. "They only think about themselves. That's too bad because there is so much to be appreciated in the world."

Miss Liberatore said she didn't want to miss anything that was going on and that's where Tommy comes in.

She pays her college tuition by hiring out with Tommy as an entertainer to lodges, clubs and church groups. It gives her a theatrical and liberal arts background at the same time.

"Too many people in show business don't care about literature, art and music," she said. "I definitely want to go into show business when I finish college. But I want the background first. I don't want to live only in a phony world."

Bernice, a freshman, began her training as a ventriloquist 11 years ago when her father bought her a "Charlie McCarthy" dummy. Then he and the girl's grandfather drilled her in the fine art of voice throwing.

Besides using the dummy, Miss Liberatore developed an act of her own in which she uses two stooges from the audience. She was forced into that routine when somebody forgot to throw her bag on the train to the Quonset Naval air station in Rhode Island.

Portrait of Campus Town

(From the Saturday Letters by R. E. Manchester, Dean of Men, Kent State university, Kent, Ohio.)

The movie industry portrays the pleasant town as a jitterbug colony, the radio script writers are not too sure, the village constable thinks of it as the hang out of a gang of scamps, the public press sits on the edge of the greensward waiting for a hint of scandal, the politician praises the spot, the taxpayer digs deep and says "O. K." and the citizens of the campus community weave out, bit by bit, the picture of Student Life.

It is a peasant town. With a population made up largely of young, enthusiastic, energetic, imaginative persons, keen for competition, alive to suggestion, curious for knowledge, appreciative for originality, zealous for glory it is a town unique and stimulating. Dominated by those who are uninhibited, unimpressed by sophistry, unsold on the philosophy of despair and always avid for creative and constructive projects it is a town of promise, hope and confidence.

It is a busy town. Unlike other towns it does not need a Chamber of Commerce secretary to point out its virtues and its advantages. Half a hundred departments and half a hundred organizations join in spreading the story of good works. Daily and hourly searchers and researchers strive to find new facts to add to the sum total; promoters preach bigger and better pageants, displays and presentations; actors in the drama of life extend themselves to play perfect parts and competitors in sports do all but die to win honor and distinction for their fellows. Activity in campus town never ceases.

It is an inspiration town. Some towns are static, depressing, and negative in influence. Campus town holds the torch high, accepts no compromise and aims only at perfection. Some towns are waiters, followers and taggers. Campus town is first to declare intention, first to lead and first to fight for principles men know to be right. Some towns are selfish, unfriendly and reactionary. Campus town is cooperative, gay, exuberant and liberal.

The star is bright over campus town. Keep it so.

At Least a Beginning

An encouraging step in the direction of more weekend recreation was taken Friday night when the Aquinas club, organization of Catholic students, gave an admission-free dance at the Chapel Hill Country club, open to all students on campus.

Admittedly this is but a small beginning to the large problem of providing more recreation for students in town during weekends, but it at least shows that a small group of students with the aid of Chapel Hill merchants had enough interest to make a stab at offering weekend entertainment. If enough organizations were to throw open parties, students might not have to complain that weekends on the hill offer nothing to do but drink beer or go to a show.

Is the Draft Still Necessary?

By Edlyn W. Freerks

Nearly a year ago President Truman reiterated his request for Universal Military Training and also asked Congress to enact a peacetime draft in order to bring the armed forces up to their authorized strength. While the proposal for UMT has never met with much enthusiasm in Congress, both Houses in June passed the 1948 Selective Service act by substantial majorities.

Such a step was not without precedent, however, in that the 1940 Selective Service act was passed while the United States was still nominally at peace. Whether the need for preparedness in the event of a global conflict was greater in 1940 than in 1948 is difficult to determine.

At any rate, an increased number of voluntary enlistments along with a few inductions have furnished the Army with its required manpower of 675,000. The Air Force, Navy, and Marines have not had to rely on the draft at all to fulfill their requirements, because of sufficient voluntary enlistments. Currently, the Army is more concerned about increased appropriations from Congress than about the problem of securing enough men.

It should be recognized that a peacetime draft has no place in this democratic country, except in times of dire emergency. Even if an emergency existed a year ago, it is hardly correct to say that one exists now. Furthermore, to continue the Selective Service act, even though no men are inducted, shows an unfriendly attitude towards the rest of the world. An unnecessarily large army in any country causes other countries to build up their armed forces. As time goes on, two or more large "defensive" armies face each other, and the inevitable consequence, historically, is war.

Should the present draft act be repealed, the question naturally arises, will a sufficient number of young Americans volunteer their services in order that the Armed Forces will have enough men for national defense. The writer maintains that enough will, because he believes that the vast majority of the American people of all age groups are unswervingly patriotic. They are also well-informed as to the general world situation and the need for adequate military and naval defenses. However, Americans obviously do not want our military establishment to grow without bounds, for this is certain to provoke other major nations into entering into an armaments race with us, the result of which being disaster for all concerned.

Repeal of the draft need not jeopardize national defense. Rather, it would reaffirm to the world that America earnestly wants peace, and that the men in her armed forces are serving their country by choice and not because of an un-American conscription act. There are many things which the Eighty-First Congress can do to promote world peace, and the repeal of the 1948 Selective Service act is one of them.

Playful Plenipotentiary?

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

I am not one to put the finger on an exalted ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary as a prankster but I have a feeling that our envoy to Iran knows more than somewhat about a gag that is driving the Russians there nuts.

Our A. E. & M. P. to Teheran, the Hon. John Cooper Wiley, is not making any admissions in his official reports but coincidence would seem to point pretty closely in his direction.

Mr. Wiley received his Iranian appointment on Feb. 26, 1948, having previously been our ambassador to Portugal, and, before that, to Columbia. Arriving in Teheran he found the place overrun with Soviet agents, all highly suspicious of every move made by an American.

Shortly thereafter the Teheran newspapers carried a piece about a mysterious American, one Roger T. Lincoln, who was said to have just arrived in the capital on a secret mission. The Russians practically dragged the city looking for the elusive Mr. Lincoln.

Ambassador Wiley then made a trip to the northern part of Iran. Coincidentally, the newspapers there sprouted with stories of the mysterious Roger T. Lincoln who was conducting undercover investigations for his government. The Russians threw all their agents into this sector.

Wherever Mr. Wiley went in Iran there were reports of the will-o'-the-wispish Mr. Lincoln. One newspaper identified him as a descendant of "that great American, Booker T. Lincoln."

Again — coinciding with a visit by the ambassador—there were reports that Roger T. Lincoln had been appointed American consul to a small city in the interior. Again the Russians closed in, without result.

The Soviet ambassador protested to the Iranian government that an unauthorized American was at large in the country. Our embassy replied —with complete truth — that there was no such person as Roger T. Lincoln, but, naturally, this only made the Russians more suspicious.

But here's the payoff: Ambassador Wiley returned to Washington last week to make his report to the Secretary of State. A couple of days later one of our society columnists carried a piece that Roger T. Lincoln, the special emissary of the State Department, had just arrived in the nation's capital to deliver a confidential report on the Iranian situation.

Senate Democrats gave a cocktail party the other afternoon for Walter Reynolds, new clerk of the Committee on Expenditures (until recently the Ferguson committee). Through some error, an invitation was extended to Victor Johnston, erstwhile drumbeater for Gov. Dewey.

The white-thatched Wisconsin Republican, known in G.O.P. plotting circles as the "Mad Mullah from Madison," wandered around feeling rather forlorn. But his eyes brightened on picking up one of the paper cocktail napkins.

They were decorated with elephants.

Mr. Johnston gloated evilly. At last an outraged Democratic Senator charged him with sabotage.

"You planted those things!" stormed the solon. "It's part of the Republican long-range conspiracy we've been hearing about!"

Senator Herbert O'Conor, of Maryland, was in New York the other day and went to see "All for Love," the musical with Grace and Paul Hartman and Bert Wheeler.

In one skit Mr. Hartman is a scientist who insists he only needs his glasses for reading. But when he takes them off he stumbles all over the stage, shaking hands with an undraped chorus girl whom he mistakes for the chief of police.

After the show, Senator O'Conor went backstage to pay his respects. He was standing in the brilliantly-lighted dressing room chatting with Mr. Wheeler when Mr. Hartman came in, blinking. The latter was introduced to the solon.

"How do you do, Senator!" cried Mr. Hartman—and walked straight past the legislator with outstretched hand and grasped the mitt of Mr. Wheeler.

What He Meant Was-

The Senate Office Building!

Washington Star—Our language is plagued with initials already. . . Now the President, unfortunately, has got into the habit of speaking in the same lingo. The Star protests. Why, if he wants to bring it into a public speech at all, does he not say "The Senate office building" instead of reducing the term to such a meaningless symbol as sob?

Washington Post—The President took frenetic exception (to criticism of his staff) in the language of a boon companion rather than in that of a President. It appears that it is "vicious and unjustified" to attack a friend of the President.

Scripps-Howard Newspapers —He was just doin' what comes naturally. . . It set up a tough spot for radio broadcasters. The guv'ment bumped into the guv'ment. The President and Commander-in-chief sounded off with language too hot to handle under guv'ment regulations. Accordingly the remark is still being referred to over the air as a "so-and-so". . . One of the high-up clergy is already out to make the President recant. . . This, too, will pass. And it should be borne in mind that our President didn't get himself elected with middle-brow verbiage. . . A toned-down official transcript was issued by the White House secretariat. It substituted "anyone" for S. O. B. Who's runnin' this guv'ment?

New York Times—Surely he could have rebuked what he regarded as an unfair attack upon his military aide without using in a public speech a phrase which is offensive and in poor taste.

New York Herald-Tribune —It was a startling utterance, but then the Chief Executive has been increasingly given to the phrase that jolts. . . For better or worse Mr. Truman has adopted a copyright on his own brand of pungency. . . At least, Harry Truman contributed a redolent footnote to our history.

New York Daily News—Even the stately New York Times sub-headlined the wicked three letters on its front page yesterday—something we never thought we'd live to see.

Philadelphia Inquirer—. . . . It was shockingly undignified and unworthy of the presidency.

Ohio State Journal—It is indeed regrettable that Mr. Truman felt he had to resort to such extreme, undignified, unimaginative language in making a public address. . . We hope President Truman in some way or other will indicate that he regrets the language he used in referring to Mr. Pearson. But it probably is too much to expect, for name-calling appears to have become the mode among those who are riding high, wide and handsome in the nation's capital.

Klassification Key
* Fine
 Fair
 Futile
* Foul

Illinois Jacquet
 Try Me One More Time
 Jet Propulsion

"Time" is a blues number that finds Jacquet calm but terrific on that ol' tenor. Russel Jacquet sings it and does an admirable job. (Could it be that both he and Lombardo are trying to support their family with their orchestras? Now sit down gang. I don't think that "Jac" sounds like Lombago.) "Jet" is for the beboppers. Jacquet is good as always, but he starts repeating himself.

Spike Jones
* McNamara's Band
 The Clink, Clink Polka

Neither of these two are Spike at his best (or his worst, take your choice), but what can you do but give him "fine" when he plays something. There is nobody else in his field that can even come close to him.

Harry Nostrils and His Nasty Nose Pickers
* I'll Get You Yet You Booger You
* Handkerchief or Nostril Rag

These two have not been released yet but from all reports they should have a very long run. When Harry starts picking it out on "Handkerchief," it will really send you. "Booger You" is a poor arrangement and at times gets a little nasty. It is really foul.

Cole Porter-Kiss Me Kate
 Album Rating

This is a collection of selections from Porter's latest hit. Some of these are fine comedy. Cole's humor is always lively, low, and frolicsome. (This last phrase is a direct steal from the New York Times) This show is rated as the best that has hit the Big Town in many a moon, and these sides why it should be. The orchestrations are by Robert Russell Bennett and are fine. Musical direction is under the direction of Pembroke Davenport who does a fine job. He also has charge of the vocals. This is one of the best albums for entertainment that this reviewer has heard in a long time. But then, Porter is always tops when he does a musical.

Write Away

Least Dispensable, in Fact

Editor:

Lately it seems that the word "Communist" has become the universal windowshade used by propagandists of the powers-that-be to conceal whaever it is felt people should not know.

That label has recently been applied in these columns to George Seldes' excellent little newsletter, In Fact which subtitles itself "An Antidote for Falsehood in the Daily Press" and proceeds to perform this function—so vital where the press depends upon wealthy advertisers for its support and where consequently, the people must depend for the formation of their attitudes on a biased press.

If In Fact were the most Communist front going, one still could not deny the truth of most of its releases, which, startling as they often are, for the most part are documented or otherwise proved, and sources given. (Can Mr. Wess supply equally ample proof of his "revelation" concerning In Fact? Is he prepared to wield facts as well as labels?)

Where else other than in In Fact, for instance, could one learn how AP correspondents are so pressured from their home offices that—in the quoted words of one correspondent—"We can't write the news straight from Yugoslavia. We have to wrap it up?" Yet this is information which we, as payers in this game of politics, must have.

In the January 24 issue, Seldes publicizes the speech suppressed elsewhere—of Dr. Kenneth I. Brown, president of the Association of American Colleges, condemning increasing tieups between education and big business—the results of which we ourselves feel in the suppression of academic freedom and attacks on our budget.

What In Fact has to say is always vital and new. Of the publications I subscribe to, I consider it among the least dispensable.

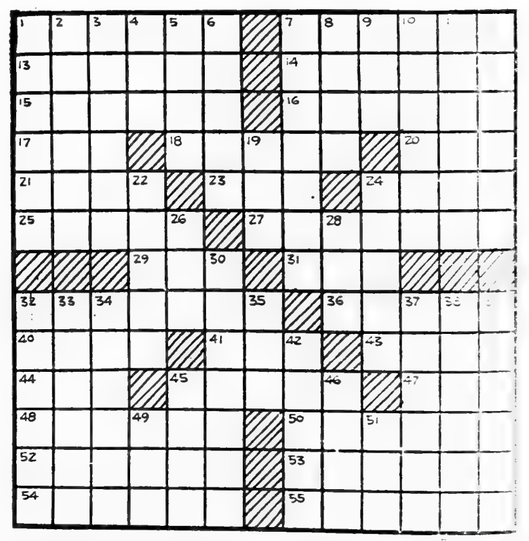
Ignorant of Facts

Editor,

After reading Page Dee's charges against Coed senate, I was very much surprised to learn that evidently Page hasn't been too informed in regards to Coed senate.

If she had been, she would have known where to find the bills, resolutions, etc., that are passed by senate. In regards to her statement, "to my knowledge the Coed senate has no copies of its constitution," I can't help wonder where Page was on the night a revised copy of the constitution was passed out to all the members of senate for their approval.



When Page said "the Carolina coeds have had the facts of the way their money is spent withheld from them too long," she left me with the impression that the coeds are ignorant of the true facts. Could it be that it is Page and not the average coed who remains uninformed? Did Page attend the compulsory mass meeting last quarter at which Jess Dedmond discussed the block fee. Coeds were unanimously in favor of retaining it mainly because of its purpose, which is to maintain subsidary organizations such as Pan-Hellenic council, Carolina Independent Coed association and Women's Glee club. Has Page Dees forgotten that such organizations are a part of the whole of coed government?

"Obviously all coeds are not members of a group such as the Women's Glee club," Page said. I do believe most all of them are interested enough to provide for its functioning however, I wonder if the tax-paying citizens from the state of Virginia begrudge the money being appropriated by the federal government to the state of North Carolina.

I regret that Page didn't carry out her election pledge of "seeing that the voters get a fair and honest deal in student government" by remaining in office and helping senate as much as possible instead of resigning.

If Page had served her fellow coeds in office for a longer period of time, I feel she would be qualified to offer constructive criticism.

Local Cagers De-Tournamentize Blue Devils, 64-40

Carson, Kappler, Nyimicz Top Scoring in 2nd Rout of Duke

By Dick Jenrette

Duke Indoor stadium, Durham, Feb. 25—The Tar Heels of North Carolina knocked Duke university's chances of making the Southern conference tournament into the grandstands here tonight when the visitors hung their second defeat of the year on the local Blue Devils by a 64-40 count before some 8,000 bi-partisan fans.

The win for the men of Coach Tom Scott left the Dukemen with a record that most observers did not think would quite pass the scrutiny of the loop officials come drawing time this Sunday. It marked the first time in 20 years that the Blue Devils would not make the eight team tournament.

For the Tar Heels it was a team win over ancient rivals that closed a season marked by numerous ups and downs. Four Tar Heels—Coy Carson, Hugo Kappler, Dan Nyimicz, and Charlie Thorne—hit the double figures with a barrage of baskets that sent the Blue Devils scurrying for the shelter of their own backboards.

Carson put the Tar Heels in the lead after a little more than a minute with a layup shot which Ben Collins matched with a rebound basket to tie the score. Carolina then moved to a 6-3 advantage and was never again headed.

The Tar Heels continued to build their lead from that point, hitting from the outside with unmatchable accuracy. With a little more than five minutes remaining in the first half, Carson popped in a long set and the visitors moved to their biggest margin of the ball game thus far—a 26-12 lead.

Duke rallied in the closing moments of the period, but the Scottmen went out for a breather with a creditable 27-18 on the scoreboard.

The second half saw both teams start in whirlwind style. Ceep Youmans hit a push after a minute had passed to pull Duke to 27-20 and soon afterward Bill Scarborough added a basket and Tommy Hughes a foul to bring the count to 29-23. Only a Nyimicz set had advanced the Tar Heel total.

Two minutes later at 4:30 the Blue Devils were still six points in arrears trailing 33-27. That was the last they saw of the Tar Heel, though, for the evening as the leaders pushed the accelarator and the ball through the hoop for six quick points and a convincing 39-27 lead at the seven minute mark.

As the cause became hopeless the Blue Devils lost much of their earlier fight and the game slid into a runaway contest for the benefit of the howling Tar Heel supporters. At the finish the Dukesters were shooting shadows of their former selves.

Duplicating their first attempt to defeat the Tar Heels earlier in the season, the Blue Devils seemer to have left their shooting eyes in the dressing room. They hit a mere 11 of 79 attempts for a mere average of 14 per cent.

The Tar Heels were much hotter while taking a fewer number of tries at the basket. They scored 25 times in 57 shots for a worth-writing-home-about almost 44 per cent.

Kappler and Carson drew four personal fouls each in the first half and it looked for a while as if the Chapel Hillians might soon be without a starting forward. Carson finished his tour of duty with eligibility to spare while Kappler did not go out until the death blow had been dealt.

Frosh Drop Finale To Dukemen, 80-57 As Harter Nets 24

By Lew Chapman

Duke indoor stadium, Durham, Feb. 25—The spark of a 24-point effort on the part of center Dick Harter failed to ignite the victory flame for the basketballing Tar Babies of Carolina here tonight as they fell lustily, 80-57, before the powerful Duke Blue Imps.

It was the fourth straight defeat of the year for the visitors from Chapel Hill at the hands of the Dukesters. The game also completed the season for the Tar Babies who attained a 9-9 record for the 1949 season.

Despite Harter's mighty effort mainly in the nature of hooks, the Blue Imps proved too much for their opponents in the second half after a fairly even first period.

Duke sailed to an early lead after the first four minutes of play, but the Tar Babies finally unlimbered their scoring guns and managed to stay within hailing distance of the home team throughout the first half. Duke went out for aid and comfort with a mere 33-27.

Even in the second half the Tar Heel yearlings looked to be a coming thing and had the crowd almost to its feet when they pulled to 56-52 after 11 minutes had past.

But here the Dukesters let the roof suddenly down on their unsuspecting foe, putting on a 10-point spurt that closed out the Tar Babies for the remainder of the evening.

Substitute Larry Ashley was high for Duke with 17 tallies, tossing in four straight sets when he first arrived upon the scene. But the individual honors of the evening went to Harter, who starred alone amid a weak supporting cast.

The box score:

Woollen Gym Site Of Annual Event; 42 Teams Entered

By Frank Allston, Jr.

From early morning until late tonight, Woollen gymnasium will be the scene of the biggest track extravaganza in Carolina history as the mammoth sports arena is host to the 14th running of the Southern conference indoor meet.

Over 500 athletes, representing schools from Baltimore to the Bayou and from the Atlantic to Old Man River, will participate in the four divisions of the meet. Thirteen of the sixteen conference schools will be represented and twelve non-conference schools are entered in the non-conference division.

Sixteen high schools will compete in the scholastic division and from 20 to 25 of the colleges will enter men in the freshman division. In all, 42 colleges and high schools will be represented.

Largest Field Ever

The field this year is the largest ever to compete in the Southern conference meet. The individual standouts will also be more numerous this year than in years past.

Maryland pre-meet favorite in the conference division, brings one of the strongest teams ever to enter the meet. The Terp mile relay team ran a 3:23 mile at the Milrose games in New York last month and looms as a top-heavy favorite in that event.

There are many Southern conference champions in the conference division and equally as many Southeastern conference title-holders in the non-conference bracket. There will probably be more stars in Woollen today than there will be in Morehead planetarium during the first two months of its operation.

Hurdles to be Close

Perhaps two of the closest events of the conference competition will be the hurdle events. Both Maryland and Carolina will enter top-notch hurdlers. The Tar Heels will send their hopes with the long legs of Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow, Jack Moody and Bill Albans while Maryland's chances will go along with Mario Salvanelli and Carl Rubach.

There will be other close and exciting events in every division. Tyson Cramer of Maryland and Carolina's Sam Magill will fight it out in the two-mile run. Carmer beat out Magill in the Maryland meet last week after trailing most of the way.

Duke's Jim O'Leary and Carolina's Bob Seligman will continue their shot put dueling, and Carolina's Bill Albans and Jack Moody and Duke's Bob Colvin will vie for high jump honors. Albans, Maryland's Bill Alexion, Virginia Tech's Sterling Wingo, and Duke's Brandon Davis are the favorites in the 60-yard dash.

Big Day Ahead

COACH DALE RANSON

Non-conference Competition

The Southern conference, the Mason-Dixon conference and independent representatives make the non-conference division one of the best the meet has ever had.

Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Florida and Louisiana State are the SEC entries in the meet today; and Randolph-Macon, Hampden-Sydney, Roanoke, and Loyola of Baltimore will represent the Mason-Dixon loop. Independents entered today are Virginia, Mercer, and Pfieffer.

Tech and Tennessee are expected to pace the non-conference entries. The non-conference events will be the same as the conference with the exception of the broad jump and 440-yard run which are not non-conference events. In most cases the non conference events will be run as near as possible to the time of the corresponding conference event.

Will be Watched

While most of the interest will be centered around the actions of the various collegiate events, many veteran track coaches will keep close tabs on the scholastic competition. Doubtless many scholastic performers will create lasting impressions in the minds of certain eager track mentors before the meet winds up late tonight.

One of the youngsters who will be watched most closely is a senior from George Washington high school in Alexandria, Virginia. That fellow is Bobby Jones, who last week won the scholastic mile in Madison Square garden and on Monday of this week copped both the half-mile and the mile in the Virginia state meet. Jones will run the scholastic 1,000-yard run and is a unanimous choice to set a new record.

Many other top high school stars will be participating and several other records are in jeopardy.

There are still a few tickets left at Woollen gym. Prices of the ducats are $1.50 for general admission and 75 cents for special student tickets.

Mountaineers and Tennessee Chosen For Cage Tourney

With the announcement that West Virginia and Tennessee accepted bids to play in the Dixie basketball tourney in Raleigh next year, the eight-team slate for the contest has been completed.

The Mountaineers and Vols join Rhode Island State and Georgia Tech as the out-of-state competition for the quintet from the Big Four-Carolina, Duke, State, and Wake Forest.

The tournament will be held December 28-29-30 and will be a triple-elimination, round robin affair, which will ensure each of the local teams seeing action against the visitors.

The tourney will be held in State's new coliseum, which will probably be filled to its 12,000 capacity for the first presentation of the tourney.

Grid Scrimmage

Carolina's winter football practice will come to a close this morning when Coach Carl Snavely puts his entire squad through a final scrimmage session.

The workout will close four weeks of drills. The footballers have been engaged in heavy workouts all week long.

Terps Top Matmen, 28-6; Kemp, Gupton Sole Victors

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Feb. 25—The North Carolina wrestling team had a 26-8 defeat pinned on it here tonight as the powerful grapplers of Maryland took six matches of an eight bout card.

Only Phil Kemp and Oscar Gupton were able to salvage wins for the Tar Heels after the Terrapins had gained a 16-0 advantage in winning the first four bouts.

Kemp won his eight in the row for the season in a similiar number of starts when he pinned Maryland's Lou Theocbus at 2:48 of the first period. Kemp was hailed as the top performer of the evening.

Gupton got the rest of the Carolina points when he produced a 11-6 decision over Bob Marsheck in a roly-poly affair that pleased the crowd of some several thousand on hand for the meet.

The rest of the bouts were fairly well monopolized by the Marylanders with the exception of the 145-pound division. That weight saw Carolina's once-beaten Carrel Fisher drop a hard-fought 9-5 decision to Jim Scott of the home team in what developed into the feature attraction of the evening.

Other Maryland victories included Dannie Frann's third period pin of Tar Heel Ken Hoffman in the 121-pound division.

At 128, Carolina's Charlie Harless fell into the pinning clutches of Ray Lyaskowski in 1:45 of the

WAKE SPE'S TRIUMPH

In a game between the Wake Forest and Carolina chapters of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, the Deacon boys romped to a 63-45 victory at Woollen gymnasium on Thursday night. Ogburn led the Wake SPE'S with 21 points. Skeets Baldwin, 16; Sam Bainbridge, 11; and Jack Greene, 10, were high men for the Carolinians.

TRACK USHERS

All members of the University club who are to serve as ushers at the track meet tonight should report to Woollen gym at 6:15. Also, they are to wear the club rosette.

Coy Carson Named All-Southern Forward

GREENSBORO, Feb. 25—(UP)—North Carolina State, defending basketball champion of the Southern conference, today placed two men on the official 1949 All-Southern team picked by the Southern conference sports writers' association.

The selections were announced by the association's executive secretary, Smith Barrier of the Greensboro Daily News.

The State Wolfpack, leading the league for the third straight year, placed its fireball forwards Sammy Ranzino and red-headed Dick Dickey on the first team.

The other spots on the mythical All-Southern conference varsity were split among William and Mary, North Carolina and Duke.

Chet Giermak, the nation's top scorer and pushing for his 600th point of the year, rated the top point-getter in the voting by 36 members of the writers' association. He drew 166 points and placed on every ballot. He got 29 nominations for first place.

Coy Carson of North Carolina, the leading scorer in conference games, placed behind Giermak with 139 points.

Corren (Ceep) Youman's of Duke became the fifth man on the All-Conference team with 94 votes, just two more than North Carolina State's Vic Bubas. The men were picked by vote-points and no positions were recorded.

General Assembly Puts Ax To Vehicle Inspection Plan

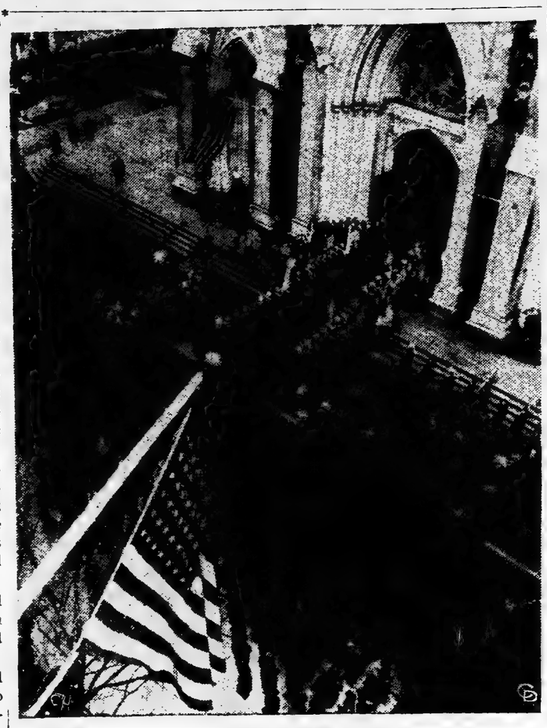
Amendment Says Program Stays 'Alive' 30 Days

RALEIGH, Feb. 25—(UP) — The North Carolina legislature today repealed the motor vehicles inspection program, but with an amendment to keep the plan alive 30 days.

The bill was sent by special messenger to the House for concurrence in the amendment. The House has already approved the main bill.

The amendment was offered by Sen. D. L. Ward of New Bern, and provides that inspection lanes will be closed on the day the bill is ratified, but the inspection program will not be wiped out until 30 days later.

Ward's amendment was an apparent attempt to mollify opponents of the bill, who argued that if the inspection program were killed now, it would lose its workers immediately and could not be rebuilt at this session.



Supporters of the repeal bill have argued that a bill for a milder inspection program would be introduced at this session.

A House committee reported without prejudice on a bill to prevent the advertising of intoxicating liquors in North Carolina publications.

The bill was amended to allow advertising of beer and wine in places where it is sold, and was placed on Tuesday's calendar.

The advertising measure, by Rep. J. K. Powell of Columbus county, forbids the advertising of alcoholic beverages in newspapers, magazines and periodicals published in North Carolina, and broadens existing restrictions on billboard and radio advertising.

On the anti-inspection bill, Warr said if a retroactive pay measure goes through, he will insist that it include employes of the inspection program—who will be out of jobs if the inspection plan is killed permanently.

THE POLICE CONTINGENT that marched in the Washington birthday parade of 5,000 Knights of Columbus members is shown entering St. Patrick's cathedral in New York for the solemn Pontificial mass offered for deceased members of the organization. The parade was jointly dedicated to the founder of our country and in protest against the "unspeakable treatment" meted out to Josef Cardinal Mindszenty by the Communist-dominated Hungarian government in Budapest.

Rancher Has Cow Problem

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 25—(UP) — Rancher Bill Mach of nearby Yukon, Okla., puzzled today over the problem of removing a 1,200-pound cow from a steel and concrete silo with a door measuring only 17 by 25½ inches.

The cow, a 6-year-old Hereford valued at $500, squeezed through the door in a mad dash to escape from a veterinarian who had been called to the Mach ranch to treat her.

As soon as the cow got inside the 40-foot high silo, her physical condition began improving rapidly, Mach said today. He said her leap through the narrow door only skinned her hide slightly.

idea of Americanism," Shricker said. "Did you ever try working for your living?"

"This is my work," Cohen said.

"Well, you can take it from me it isn't very productive work."

Later Shricker told reporters he was hopping mad.

"It got under my hide to see all those people out there in line, people who would work if they could, and then have this guy passing out stuff like this which would ruin the economy of the state."

Cohen said he told the governor the Communists' plan was tax the big corporations who made millions during the war to help people who were now out of work.

But Cohen said he didn't think the angry governor heard him, because "he was walking away."

Extra Paint?

Lipstick Smear May Be Key To Character

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—(UP)—A guy can tell a lot about his girl from the size of the lipstick smear she leaves on his cheek, Lipologist Niccolo Quattrociocci said today.

If it's a big smudge on his chin or his collar, he can be pretty sure she was trying to be what she ain't by daubing her lips with some extra paint, he said.

But the chubbier the lips, the more generous the girl, he advised, even if she puts lipstick where there isn't really any lip, so stay away from the lass with the little red danger line across her face about the width of a skinny blade of grass.

Quattro—er—Nicky, a Sicilian, is the owner of El Borracho (The Drunkard) restaurant. A Spanisn pace that serves French food, and he's got the place lined from floor to ceiling with women's lips, which he says speak only the international language of love. Every woman who wines and dines in the place has to leave her kiss on the ceiling and walls, and he's got imprints that range from Martha Raye's big mouth to a little plum-shaped bog planted on the plaster by Joan Bennett.

"You can tell Miss Bennett is stingy with her kisses, the way she purses her mouth," Nicky said.

For six years now, Nicky has been honoring the ancient practice of osculation, and he calls himself the highest paid buss boy in the restaurant industry. He traced the prints of the famous lips he has met, and using a long, waivering pointer, he pointed out how the style in feminine mouths has changed.

"All the girls are crazy for big mouths now," he said. "They really are sexier that way. It won't be long before mouths the size of Martha Raye's will be an everyday thing.

"Mae Murray, the old silent film star, started quite a trend a long time ago with the original bee sting mouth, but that's passe now. Today it's the luscious mouth that gets all the kisses. I think Alice Fay has nice lips, and Ann Sheridan's look good enough to eat."

Nicky said he thinks women look a lot better with lipstick than without it, and that of his 30,000 lip prints, about 29,000 were expanded beyond their natural confines.

"Women change their characters from day to day by changing the shapes of their mouths," he explained. "They are a lot more interesting that way."

"A tight-lipped woman knows she can never look sexy the way nature made her, so she puts a few artistic touches on the white skin under her nose. I think that is wonderful. A woman has a right to defend herself any way she can in the battle for men's kisses."

Senate Group Orders Review Of Aid Grants

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 — (UP)—The Senate Foreign Relations committee today ordered public review of foreign aid grants to Britain as result of a statement by Christopher P. Mayhew, British undersecretary for foreign affairs.

Mayhew told the United Nations Economic and Social commission on Wednesday that Britain's economic recovery is almost complete.

At the insistence of Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R-Mich.), the committee today summoned Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and Thomas K. Finletter, chief of ECA's London mission, to testify Monday on "wide discrepancies" between Mayhew's statement and ECA estimates of the extent of British economic recovery.

In 1946, John LaTouche and Duke Ellington turned out a modernized version, called The Beggar's Holiday which included such popular music as: I've Got Me, Tomorrow Mountain, The Wrong Side of The Railroad Tracks, I Wanna Be Bad, When I Walk with You and Take It Easy.

The campus production will feature such hummable tunes as: Venus's Girdle, A Maid is Like the Golden Ore, Our Polly Is A Sad Slut, Fill Every Glass, My Heart Was So Free, and Thus I Stand Like the Turk.

So far as can be established the alliance of five campus groups marks the first off Broadway production since it was done by the Stanford university players in 1942 with former Playmaker Hubert Heffner directing.

MUSIC PROVIDED, TOO

WATERLOO, Ia. (UP)—The Waterloo city library often has been asked to help couples with all the details of their weddings but until now there was only one detail staff members couldn't furnish. That detail, music for the wedding can be taken care of now. A Waterloo attorney gave to the library records of wedding music played by famous artists.

NSA Issues China Appeal

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 25 — A special emergency appeal was issued today by the U. S. National Student association (NSA) to investigate the critical condition of Chinese students in the United States who have found themselves without enough money to live on as a result of the inflationary conditions in China and the stoppage of monetary transfers to this country from China.

In a letter to the Immigration and Naturalization service, NSA requested that attention be given to the emergency character of the Chinese students' problem and pointed out that the students are suffering as a result of a government regulation which requires that holders of student visas can accept employment only when it does not interfere with the carrying of a full course of study in day classes.

NSA stated that this regulation, under the pres nt [illegible] conditions, is unrealistic and [illegible] many students from [illegible]

Umstead Opposed To Tuition Increase

Dedmond, Fowler Urge Action Now

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body here, and Martha Fowler, president of the W.C. student body, yesterday urged that all students write their legislators in Raleigh immediately stating opposition to the proposed tuition increase.

The action followed Representative John W. Umstead's statement yesterday expressing a belief that the necessary money to raise faculty salaries could be found in state funds without raising tuition.

"Students at all three branches of the University, their parents, their friends and all North Carolinians interested in the welfare of the greater University should write to their representatives in the state assembly and urge them to appropriate the necessary funds," the student leaders said.

"These letters," they continued, "should be mailed in order that they may be in the legislature mailboxes by Monday or Tuesday."

Miss Fowler, who is also president of the Greater University Student council, expressed appreciation on behalf of students in the University for Umstead's stand on the increase.

"We are greatly encouraged," she said, "by Mr. Umstead's statement and his support in opposition to the increase. We feel that if the people of North Carolina will show the legislators, through their letters, that they too are opposed to the increase, the legislature will find funds elsewhere."

Plans were made yesterday afternoon to contact Fred Kendall, Jr., president of the student body at State and request that State college students join the flow of letters to the Capitol building.

AT A CONTEST staged in Miami, Fla., O'Hara Jones of New York City won the title of "Miss Brevity of 1949." The suits worn by the contestants had to be modestly brief.

Raise in Tuition Voted by Regents

ATLANTA, Feb. 26—(UP)—The Georgia Board of Regents today sliced $1,409,781 from the budgets of the university system's 16 units and voted to increase tuition fees for all students.

The cuts first proposed were softened by the vote to increase tuition charges at all senior colleges by $10 per quarter, and those at junior and Negro colleges by $5 per quarter. This hike will increase the system's revenue by an estimated $363,390.

However, the sums were so allocated that no unit of the system will have its accredited standing jeopardized.

Ackland Ruling Is Established For Last Time

Ends Long Fight Over $1,500,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—The University of North Carolina's right to the long-disputed $1,500,000 trust fund from the estate of the late William Hayes Ackland was established beyond legal revocation yesterday when the United States District court here issued a judgment awarding the fund to the Chapel Hill institution.

In issuing the judgment, the court acted in accordance with a mandate from the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia which reversed an earlier decision of the District court that had given the fund to Rollins college in Florida.

The judgment, made on motion of the law firm representing the University of North Carolina, specifically designated that the fund should go to the University, that Rollins should be removed from further consideration in the case, and that court costs of $850 be assessed against Rollins.

The fight for the fund was begun in the University's behalf in 1943 by the late O. Max Gardner, former N. C. governor. The battle was carried on, always without charge, by his Washington, D. C., law firm.

In the words of Attorney Ward E. Lattin, who spearheaded the final arguments for the Tar Heel university, "This court action signs, seals and delivers the fund to the University of North Carolina."

Due to certain legal formalities invplved, the formal transfer of the fund cannot be accomplished for another two or three months, Lattin said.

Lattin said the University can now proceed with selection of a definite site, and have plans drawn for the memorial art museum specified in the will. Actual work on the museum could begin sometime this summer, he added.

Officials to Aid Income Tax Filing

Any single person receiving more than $1,000 or married person receiving more than $2,000 during the year must file a return.

It's Our Next Move

New light has been cast upon the tuition raise. The old sob story coming out of Raleigh that "there just isn't enough money to go around" and that the raise is a matter of necessity has been debunked. Every member of the legislature knows exactly where to find the money to put in the place of a tuition raise.

The legislature can stop the tuition raise if it will—and it will if its members realize that that is what the people of the state want. Unfortunately our legislators have no way of knowing what is in our minds unless we tell them. That is why each one of them who is trying honestly to do his job appreciates letters expressing the opinions of the people he represents.

The president of our student body and the chairman of the Greater University student council have urged that students, their parents, and all others interested in the welfare of the University and of future generations of students write their opinions to their representatives. For these letters to be most effective they should arrive in Raleigh tomorrow or Tuesday. They should flood the mail boxes of the representatives.

Students here have shown themselves reluctant to write letters to the legislature, but unless they want to pay higher tuition rates for themselves and for their children they had better overcome that reluctance in a hurry.

Tuition Plan To Be Aired By Trustees

Raleigh Meeting Slated Tomorrow

The proposed tuition increase for the Greater University of North Carolina will be a feature in the business of the semi-annual meeting of the University Board of Trustees when they meet tomorrow at 11 o'clock in the Capitol building in Raleigh, officials said yesterday.

Also slated to be presented at the meeting is the annual report of President Frank Porter Graham for the year 1947-1948. The president's report will also include reports from the chancellors of the three branches of the Greater University, W. C. Jackson of the Woman's college, J. W. Harrelson of State and R. B. House of the University here.

The special visiting committee for the University at Chapel Hill, headed by Victor S. Bryant of Durham, will also submit its report of findings here.

The tuition increase was recommended unanimously last week by the Executive committee of the Trustees when it met in Governor Scott's office in Raleigh. The increase, if approved, would raise the annual tuition for North Carolina students from $81 to $150 per year and out-of-state students from $288 to $357.

The special Visiting committee was appointed by former Governor R. Gregg Cherry and met in Chapel Hill recently to investigate various campus problems, including Saturday classes, student automobiles and housing. In their report to the Board, the committee is expected to give a decision on the six-day-class week issue.

Says He Will Vote To Kill Proposal

Local Representative Expresses Belief That Money Is Available in State Funds

"I am not in favor of the proposed tuition increase and will vote to find money to avoid it," John W. Umstead, Orange county representative and member of the Board of Trustees, said yesterday.

"I believe that money can be found in state funds to avoid raising the tuition without interfering with the University's permanent improvement program," he continued. "I do not think the tuition increase is an open and shut proposition.

If the legislature is willing to appropriate the funds, there will be no need for an increase.

Umstead, who is also a member of the Executive committee of the trustees, abstained from voting when the committee unanimously passed a resolution favoring the increase last week.

"There is a definite need in North Carolina for more teachers," the legislator said. "However, the people who make the best teachers are those who come from the rural areas of the state where they have learned the seriousness of the teacher shortage in their schools. The extra money which the tuition increase would require will work against these people."

Umstead indicated that he will work towards the defeat of a tuition increase if such a bill is introduced in the legislature. The increase is expected to be considered by the Board of Trustees when they meet in Raleigh tomorrow morning.

The increase, if it is passed, would place a blanket increase of $69 on the tuition paid by all University students each year.

Brosa, Long Plan Concert Here in Hill

Recital Slated For Tomorrow

Antonio Brosa, violinist, and Kathleen Long, pianist, will present a concert of Beethoven, Brahms and Stravinsky tomorrow night at 8:30 in Hill hall. The duo is sponsored by the University Music department.

Both as soloist and chamber-music player, Brosa has given first performances of many new works and has built up a reputation for interpreting both classical and modern works with equal understanding and authority.

He founded the Brosa string quartet in England in 1925, and toured Europe and America with success. In 1938, he disbanded his quartet in favor of solo appearances. Brosa came to this country in 1940 to appear with the Philharmonic in giving the world premiere of the violin concerto by the British composer, Benjamin Britten. Since then he has appeared in recitals and with major orchestras throughout the United States, and broadcasted for the British Broadcasting company.

Miss Long has played at more than 60 national gallery wartime concerts. She traveled in convoy to Iceland in 1941 to give five recitals to the people of Reyjavik.

They Doused Coeds

Action May Be Taken On Girl's Dorm Raid

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Feb. 26—(UP)—Officials of Augustana college said today that "appropriate disciplinary action" may be taken against 250 male students who invaded the girl's dormitory, dumped the coeds out of bed and doused some of them in bathtubs.

The Rev. Harry B. Johnson, dean of men, said the affair was a "prank," and that "such things are unnecessary."

But one coed said "it was really more fun than anything else."

The raiders roamed through the building, dumping over beds, upsetting furniture and pulling out dresser drawers. Mattresses were soaked with water and some of the coeds were hauled, kicking and screaming, to the filled bathtubs.

Some of the more spirited girls grabbed waterbuckets and doused the intruders. But all was pretty much confusion, for the boys had pulled light switches and silenced telephones. They even locked the house mother, Mrs. Alma Johnson, in her room.

The affair lasted 10 minutes. The boys posted a sentinel and, as Rock Island police approached, he sounded "retreat" on a bugle. The boys scattered into the night and there were no arrests.

A similar raid occurred on the woman's dorm in 1946 and students said the men then had taken a pledge not to give a repeat performance.

In the earlier raid, it was said, one male student cut his hand escaping from a window and another was banged over the head with a chair by a coed.

Group Will Show Two Films Today In GM Lounge

Two movies, "Henri Matisse" and "Un Grande Verrier" will be presented at the regular meeting of the Cosmopolitan club today in Graham Memorial at 4 o'clock.

The Matisse film is based on the life of the contemporary painter, and presents several of his paintings. Matisse has been called the last of the "naturalistic painters." Musical background for the film is furnished by Cesar Frauck.

Both films were obtained by Genevieve Faucher, Algerian graduate student in romance languages, from two bureaus in Washington, D. C.

The Matisse movie will be presented through the courtesy of the French Cultural Relations society, and "Un Grand Verrier," the story of a famous glassmaker, through the Audio Visual Franco-American company. The latter film will depict the process involved in the manufacture of artistic glassware.

Card Party Set By Church Group

A card party, sponsored by the Rosary guild of Chapel Hill, proceeds of which will go to the building fund of the proposed Catholic church, will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Veterans clubhouse, it was announced yesterday.

The party, originally scheduled for Jan. 31, was postponed to this date because of bad weather, a club spokesman said.

Table and door prizes will be awarded, and refreshments served. The admission charge will be 50 cents. Reservations may be obtained by phoning Mrs. Giles Horney, 3526.

Student Group to Give Show For Hospitalized Veterans

A cast of some 20 student entertainers will perform in a variety show, "Carolina Presents," for patients at the veterans hospital in Fayetteville on Thursday under the sponsorship of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. G. E. Shepherd, chairman of the instruction and entertainment committee for veterans hospitals, said yesterday that "all of us appreciate the fine student cooperation which makes the show possible." She added that during the war years the veterans were entertained constantly, but that the program has lagged until now a show once a month is a novelty.

She commended the student theatrical group highly for its "fine spirit in furnithing a diversion for the veterans," some of whom will be "hospitalized for life."

Produced and directed by its master of ceremonies, Mark Barker, who is also co-chairman and announcer on the weekly Rendezvous program, "Carolina Presents" will include talent from all theatrical groups on the campus along with the Town Talk trio which will furnish the music with Jack Strugell at the piano, Gene Stryker, bass, and Jimmy Terese, sax and clarinet.

Vocal selections will be given by Ray Weems, Ann Martin, Sam Green, and the Harmony Five: Lanier Davis, Jack Clinard, Bob Hurley, Milton Bliss, and Dick Smith.

A comedy skit will be given by Jim Hammerstein, Barker, Larry Peerce, and Bailey Hobgood also doing a comedy monologue. A dance sequence is scheduled with Nita Sanders, Edna Dooley, Ann Voorhees, Gayle Hancock, and Mary Neely.

Shapely Footsteps

Lamont Following Tallulah's Role

By Sam Hirsch

Louise Lamont, cast as Regina in the forthcoming Playmakers' "The Little Foxes," is following in some famous and shapely footsteps. Cousin Tallulah Bankhead, who created the leading role on Broadway, was very happy to hear that Louise will do Regina early in March.

"You certainly ought to be able to do the part," Tallulah told Louise. "In fact, you'll be damned good!"

Louise's most vivid memories of Tallulah's performances in this (by now) family play are when she visited her backstage during the run. "We'd be chatting along until it came time for Tallulah's cue to scream at her husband Horace offstage. She'd stop talking—scream at him—then talk again—then scream, without missing a cue or a word of conversation!"

LOUISE LAMONT

However, despite this family theater contact, Louise Lamont has never used her cousin's name to get jobs as an actress. From Birmingham, Ala., where she played with The Blackfriars, she later came to Chapel Hill to work with "Proff" Koch and the Playmakers. Her outstanding performance here was Queen Gertrude in "Proff's" Hamlet. She remembers that he was 60 and she was his mother at 20, but nobody seemed to mind, least of all "Proff."

Last seen here as Mama in "I Remember Mama," Louise plans to live in Chapel Hill with her husband. The village has tender memories for her because she was married here. She has been taking courses with the Playmakers just to keep working in the theater. In fact, she wrote two one-act plays in Sam Selden's class.

Louise Lamont will be seen as Regina March 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 in a production staged by John W. Parker. Her performance will be viewed by the Southeastern Theater conference to be held here at the same time.

Tomorrow the board of trustees meets in Raleigh, and one of the topics under consideration will be the proposed raise in tuition at the three branches of the University.

In the last few weeks much has been written and said about the tuition raise. Most students are in agreement that the raise will be detrimental to the University and to many prospective students. They do not agree that although regrettable the raise is unavoidable as many people claim. But in denouncing the proposed raise most students have aimed their remarks at Governor Scott because of his faux pas in saying that the University tuition rate should not undercut that of denominational colleges. The governor, however, should not be the primary target. Although it is true that he favors the raise, it was not he but the advisory budget committee that recommended it and the joint appropriations committee that approved it. Yet neither are these bodies the responsible party—not yet. The board of trustees is the one group that has authority to declare a raise in tuition.

The student Council of the Greater University, which represents the students of UNC, WC and State, has sent a letter to each trustee pointing out that there is a possibility the state legislature will vote to supply funds which would make the hike unnecessary. For this reason the trustees are being asked to postpone action on the raise until their meeting in June. If in the meantime the legislature does not increase the appropriation, the trustees will be forced to raise tuition—but the blame will be upon the budget commission and the legislature for forcing them to. If, however, the board acts tomorrow to institute the raise, then the board of trustees and only the board must accept full and complete responsibility for the increase.

Klan Is No Criterion

As dangerous to the American philosophy of Democracy as the Communist doctrine is the influence of its opposite number, the Ku Klux Klan. The radicals say "change everything, and change it immediately." The reactionaries say "don't change anything ever." Dominance of the one group means chaos; of the other, stagnation. Neither is the path America would follow.

It is good to note that even in its southern stronghold the Klan is more and more losing its grip upon the younger generations through the process of education. That this is true was shown when students at the University of South Carolina disagreed with a speech by Samuel Green, Grand Dragon of the Klan, last week. A comment Green made about the students was illuminating. "I was young once," he said. "I did some foolish things then myself."

If by this Green means he is now a criterion of wisdom, then thank God for fools.

Some Attacks Are Justified

By Jonathan Marshall

The American press has been taking quite a beating recently, and although much of it is unjust, there is some foundation for these attacks.

Newspapers in this country have traditionally played an important part in the lives of men, and there can be little disputing the many contributions that the press has made to our nation.

For any democracy to succeed, it is essential that a virile and honest press disseminate news and help to educate the people. In order to do this, the press must always be free.

It was unfortunate from many standpoints that President Truman used the language he did in his recent speech; aroused at Drew Pearson's attack on one of his aids, the President said that he would not let any "S. O. B." tell him what to do.

In this particular case Mr. Pearson was pointing out the relationship between General Vaughan and the fascist government of Argentina. Such an article seems within the realm of good journalism, for it is when the press abuses its rights, not when it gives opinions and facts, that it should be called to task.

Anna Louise Strong's attack seems far more valid. She said that the papers were trying to achieve sensationalism and were forcing the world to war. In her own case she had been deprived of privacy by the press. A common practice in getting news and feature stories.

All human beings, regardless of their importance, deserve the right of privacy. Although the press should give opinions and news, it should not build up golden idols and it should not attempt to arouse mass hysteria which may threaten the peace of mankind; it should be calm and objective in its reporting.

Although the sports department of the DTH has attacked a recent article of mine, I do not believe that it is worthwhile for either of us to become involved in an internecine battle. Attacking personalities for opinions is not beneficial for either side, and I respect Mr. Carmichael for his ideas, his hard work, and as a person.

I would, however, like to make two points. Some people may have gained the impression that I think Charlie Justice is the devil incarnate; this is not so. I have great admiration for Justice as an athlete, but I have more respect for his sportsmanship and his modesty. Shaking hands with opponents after games and giving his teammates credit for their share made more of an impression than did his long runs.

The other point is that great stars existed before college football was professionalized, and they are still remembered.

Sweet, Unambitious Vultures

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute on a matter that should brook no further delay. I wish to speak in defense of America's vultures.

I feel that these birds have been unjustly traduced and calumniated. While I am not a member of the vulture bloc in Congress, I believe in the glorious principles of American fair play.

My distinguished colleague, the Hon. John A. McGuire, of the 3rd district of Connecticut, has seen fit to attack these feathered friends before this august body. I am willing to concede that the honorable gentleman may not have realized the enormity of the injustice, but one should look (laughter) before one leaps (rising applause).

The distinguished gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McGuire) arose before this body yesterday and said we should give more thought and attention to colleagues who are ill. He suggested we should send them "Get Well" cards.

Well and good. This shows the distinguished gentleman's heart is in the right place. But, Mr. Speaker, he threw in a gratuitous insult to our great vulture population.

He said, Mr. Speaker, and I quote:

"At the present time our ailing colleagues must feel that their colleagues are hovering over them like vultures . . . so they can edge up a place on some particular committee."

On behalf of our vultures I resent this, Mr. Speaker. I challenge the gentleman from Connecticut to name a single vulture who ever tried to edge up a place on a committee.

This is a clear case of slander, Mr. Speaker. If I were a rabble-rouser I would stand before this distinguished body and cry: "Vultures of America, arise!"

Tobacco tycoon Reynolds, who used to be treasurer of the Democratic National committee, has made a niche for himself in the sports world. He is also married into the sports fraternity.

His second wife, known on the stage as Marianne O'Brien, is the stepdaughter of Abe Attell, once featherweight champion of the world.

Little Abe, who held this title for nine years, is still quite a character around New York, although he is hitting his mid-sixties. He's as spry as a colt.

He's also full of reminiscence. The other night in Toots Shor's he was matching fight reminiscences with Teddy Hayes, former trainer of Jack Dempsey.

They got taking about fighters being belted silly. Mr. Attell contended that the knockout with the most protracted effects was administered to Kingfish Levinsky about 10 years ago by Joe Louis.

"Levinsky was out cold in his dressing room for more than two hours after Louis tagged him," said Mr. Atwell, dreamily. "It must have been a lovely punch.

"They finally got Levinsky into a shower and dressed. His trainer figured a walk in the air might do him some good. . .

"They continued to stride through the downpour. The trainer was about to call it off, convinced his charge was back to rationality, when Levinsky stretched out his hand and felt the raindrops.

"'Say,' he said, 'don't you think this rain will hurt attendance when we go to the fight tonight?'"

A bunch of heavy lenders from the Economic Cooperation administration were before the Senate Foreign Relations committee asking for more billions to give away.

Naturally, since they were only asking for our economic life blood, they didn't cause much excitement. In fact, Chairman Tom Connally became so bored at all the talk over a few paltry billions he picked up his newspaper and buried himself in it.

CPU Soapbox

Readjustment, Not Collapse

By Henry Adams

If you're looking for a job anywhere this year, you'll have a harder time of it than any year since the war. That long-predicted postwar slump may be with us to stay. UNC students looking for jobs will definitely feel the pinch.

Unemployment has been steadily climbing in the last few months. It is estimated that two to three millions are now out of work. More workers are drawing unemployment claims today than any time since 1942. Almost every major industry is laying off workers. The postwar boom has up to now made it possible for men laid off to find work elsewhere, but with the slackening of the demand for labor today people out of jobs are out of luck.

Unemployment is just one aspect of the new economic picture that has been developing in recent months. The country's economic system is suffering a hangover from the postwar inflation jag. Producers who made whoopee with prices in the war and postwar seller's market now find themselves in the cold, gray dawn of a buyer's market.

The public is no longer falling over itself to pay high prices for shoddy goods. To take one example, the demand for textile products is off 30% from the postwar peak, while prices for certain items have fallen as much as 50%. Clothes, shoes, furniture, and other consumer goods are meeting an apathetic demand. Even automobiles, which have been the hardest item of all to get in the postwar market, no longer command grey-market premiums. Some makes can be bought without waiting for delivery.

Farm prices have already slid far from the recent highs. Bumper crops have brought wheat down from about $3 a bushel to $2.25, and cattle from $37 to $23 per 100 pounds. Many commodities would have dropped further except for government supports.

From surface indications it might appear that the country is right back where it was in 1929, right at the beginning of another depression. The fall in prices and demand looks ominous, if we study the beginnings of past business crises. However, there are some new factors in the present situation which make comparisons invalid.

For one thing, heavy spending by government promises to check any general decline before it goes far. A federal budget of at least $40 billion dollars is in the cards for next year, and there is little chance of its being below that figure. The need for new schools, roads and public works which went unfulfilled during the war has still not been met.

Housing, especially for low-income groups, is millions of units short. It will take many years for building to catch up with this demand. Public aid to housing is becoming recognized as necessary if the country is to provide decent accomodations for all its citizens. Should unemployment become a problem, it is to be expected that public housing would be pushed to take up the slack. In any case, home-building, both public and private will doubtless continue at a high rate for some time to come.

The general impression that emerges from current economic is that we are going through a temporary postwar readjustment, but unsatisfied public demand, and government spending, will keep it from becoming another 1929-variety collapse.

A-Bombs for 'Pop' Quizes

Editor:

Finally I deem it necessary to make a confession about myself. You see, since I entered the University 'way back in 1946 it has been my humble conviction that the world is wrong and that I am altogether right. No matter what problem is discussed, I have always felt that my conclusion was good and proper, even though it was in direct contrast to that of the majority. In other words, my motto has been "To heck with the world, yours truly above all!"

Unfortunately, it has been impossible for me to gain a single follower of my so-called "school of thought" impossible, that is, until I happened to read today's (Thursday) "Write Away" column and realized that Bill Robertson is virtually "jumping his traces" to join with me. My opinion is based on the fact that Mr. Robertson heartily supports the life-time sentence recently handed to Cardinal Mindzsenty by the Communists in Hungary. Mr. Robertson supports this sentence even though everyone—from the most distinguished engineer over at Duke to the most scrawny cow at State—wholeheartedly condemns it.

So, welcome to the club, Mr. Robertson! It's really nice to know that I'm no longer alone. Incidentally, our next meeting will come in the near future, in which we will discuss the possibility of arming each Communist on campus with an atomic bomb so as to enable him to get higher marks on "pop" quizes.

Textile Industry Defended

Editor:

Mr. Myers, an instructor in French, has written that we should soak the rich, namely the tobacco, textile, and furniture industries in North Carolina, who have wrung enormous profits out of their workers' sweat. This same thought is contained in a pamphlet about the textile industry entitled "the Nation's Most Prosperous Industry" published about a year ago by the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO.

Using the information contained in the statistical tables of this pamphlet I find that the average annual profit made by the textile industry over the 19-year period 1929-1947 (a representative period of boom and bust) amounts to the tremendous sum of 3½ cents on each dollar of sales. Further examination discloses that this 3½ cents was used as follows: (1) one plus cents was paid in dividends to stockholders (who used it among other things to pay state taxes and to send their children to the state university to study French and other subjects); (2) one plus cents was reinvested in better and larger plants; (3) one plus cents was saved as a reserve for a rainy day.

Take it away Mr. Myers and the TWUA (CIO), take it away and let some political scientists run the country's business. I feel certain they wouldn't make 3½ cents profit on each dollar's sale!

Malicious Gossip

Editor:

Why didn't Wink Locklair condense his article and merely say that Margaret O'Brien is a poor actress and that she is illegitimate. It seems a needless waste of space to devote two columns to an article which approaches, or might even be rightly labeled, malicious gossip.

As for Locklair's contention that O'Brien is an insincere actress—what difference does it make what the real emotions of an actor or actress are as long as he or she gives the desired impression to the audience?

'Little Foxes' Opening Takes the Spotlight

By Vestal C. Taylor

Holding the spotlight in campus entertainment for the coming week is the five-night stand of "The Little Foxes," beginning March 2nd and running through March 6th, under the direction of John Parker, Playmaker business manager.

This drama has enjoyed a long and successful career, beginning back in 1939 when it was first produced on Broadway as a stage play. Since that time the "Foxes" has appeared as a screen play, and at the present is being prepared for presentation as an opera.

The "Foxes" will play for the visiting firemen later in the week when the campus plays host to the representatives of theater groups from 10 states (not 15 as originally planned), gathered here for the Southeastern Theater conference, scheduled for March 4th and 5th.

The Pan Hells begin work during the coming week on their charity show and plan to open the spring quarter on March 25th with a full-grown variety show, with a melodrama thrown in for good measure. The girls will do a repeat performance on March 28th. Both dates are booked at the Rendezvous and production is under the watchful eyes of Edie Knight and That Man Strader.

This writer would like to urge all parties to keep this show in mind and plan to attend. These good people are going to produce a show that will be fully appreciated by the audience, but more important is the fact that they are doing this thing to raise money in order to adopt, by proxy, a small war orphan.

The Pan Hells are negotiating with the Foster Parents plan an organization caring for these unfortunate kids. Interested persons or organizations may adopt a child for one year by donating $180 to cover the cost of clothing, medicine and education. Don't balk at the door charge collected at the door on show night.

In order to clear up a popular misconception among the public, it is timely to say that neither "Beggar's Opera" nor "Apple Tree Farm" are being sponsored or co-sponsored by the Playmakers. The rule reads that unless a member of the staff is actively participating in a production, it is not to be considered a Playmaker production. This excludes both the aforementioned plays. It is correct to state that both are being produced with the cooperation of the Playmakers.

Carolina Trackmen Victorious In Conference Meet

Bill Albans Wins Five Events; Sets Three New Loop Records

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's jet-propelled tracksters scored a smashing victory in Woollen gymnasium last night, pounding out 52 points to win the 14th running of the Southern conference indoor track meet. The University of Maryland thinclads gathered in 33 points, good for second-place.

Bill Albans, the Tar Heels' sensational ace of the board track, stole a one-man show out of the affair, winning five first places and setting three-new records.

The lanky speedster from Cranford, N. J., won the 60-yard dash, the 70-yard high and low hurdles, the high jump and the broad jump. Albans set a new standard in the low hurdles, whacking two-tenths of a second from the old standard, and also set a new record in the high jump.

Albans also became the first trackster ever to win five first places in the conference meet.

Duke's track crew finished third with 25 points while Virginia Tech scored nine. Georgia Tech rolled up 36 points to win the non-conference division. Tennessee took second with 20 points and Virginia was third with 14.

George Washington high of Alexandria, Virginia took first place honors in the scholastic division with 14 points. Neighboring Washington-Lee high of Arlington, Virginia was second with 11.

Action got under way at 9:30 in the morning with running of the scholastic and freshman broad jump in the Tin Can. Nichols of Duke won the freshman division and the Mitchel of Newport News high won in the scholastic division. The winning jump was 6 ft. ¾ in. in both events.

The sensational Albans picked up two of his firsts in the afternoon by copping both the high jump and the broad jump. Albans' jump of 6 ft. 4⅛ in. broke the old record of 6 ft. 3 in. set by Carolina's Bill Corpening in 1940.

Carolina swept the first three places in the broad jump with Jack Moody and Laddie Terrell finishing second and third respectively. Moody and Billy Joyner were in a three-way tie with Virginia Tech's Monroe for second in the high jump.

In one of the more exciting races of the night, Maryland's Bob Palmer edged Carolina's Julian MacKenzie to win the mile run in the fast time of 4:17.9. MacKenzie led most of the way, but Palmer took over on the last lap to pound out a five-yard margin of victory.

Albans sped back into the picture for Carolina in the conference 60-yard dash as he chalked up his third win of the night, winning the distance in 6.5. Joe Preston, LSU's one-man team, scored a surprise victory in the non-conference bracket by edging favored Buddy Fowlkes of Georgia Tech in 6.5. Mac Byrd of Washington-Lee high in Arlington, Virginia sped to a 6.6 win in the scholastic 60. Woodlee of South Carolina won the frosh 60.

The conference shot put was won by Duke's Jim O'Leary with a toss of 47 feet 4½ inches. Carolina's Bob Seligman was second with a close 47 foot flip. In the non-conference division Harvin of Georgia Tech won with a toss of 43 feet 11½ inches.

Southern Conference Indoor Champs

Veteran Blues Top Reds In Winter Grid Tilt, 14-0

Like June in January, football in February came to a close yesterday morning when the Blue team of the winter-practicing Tar Heel eleven defeated the Red team, 14-0, in an hour and a half scrimmage session.

The Blues, composed mostly of old timers to the varsity service, had a little too much experience for the Reds, who were mainly made up of freshmen and newcomers. They scored early in the action and then added the clincher as the morning drew to a close.

The first touchdown was a 74-yard pass play from Billy Hayes to Ed Washington. Hayes had his receiver a trifle overspotted on the play, but the big wingman made a stabbing one-hand catch in the neighborhood of the midfield stripe and then outraced the Red secondary for the score.

A freshman renegade playing with the veteran Blues ran 45 yards for the other touchdown. Tailback Ted—Skeeter—Hesmer gathered in a punt from deep in Red territory and with the aid of some pin point blocking, got a good running start down the sidelines to his right, dusting to the Red 10. When the blocking began to give out, he simply drove the rest of the way on his own for the six points.

Golfer Cox one-putted the extra point.

The rest of the scrimmage saw spots of brilliance that were squelched before they could result in scores. Freshman Goo Goo Gantt stepped off 48 yards with another punt return while Dick Bunting got away for some 45 when he discovered an oversized off tackle hole.

On the defense, the man that made the tackle famous—Irv Holdash—was the leading light for the Blues while yearling Bill O'Brien of Portsmouth, Va., on the side of the Reds was the leading thorn in the side of the Blues.

Committee Meets

DURHAM, Feb. 26.—The selection committee to determine which eight teams will participate in the annual Southern conference tourney here next week meets today at 12:15 in the Washington Duke hotel. The selections will be made public this afternoon.

Teams expected to be extended invitations are State, the defending champion; William and Mary; Carolina; George Washington; Davidson; Maryland; South Carolina; and Wake Forest.

Duke, the host team, was all but eliminated when Carolina handed it a crushing 64-40 defeat Friday night.

Carolina Frosh Down CH Swimmers, 44-29

Carolina's freshman swimmers set two new records yesterday morning in defeating Chapel Hill high, 44-29, to complete their dual meet season with a 7-4 mark.

The Wildcats could garner only one first place, and that in an event in which there was no Carolina entry, but came close in the diving where Tar Baby Andy Bell edged out Heonig by .2 of a point.

Sprinter Kirby Ambler had a hand in both new records. He established one of his own in the 150-yard individual medley by chopping three seconds off the old mark of 1:53.5 set by Art Greenbaum earlier in the year and then he joined Williamson and Smith in lowering the medley relay time to 1:27.7.

Coy Carson Leads Carolina Cagers In Season Totals

Coy Carson, Carolina's All-Conference forward, captured high-scoring honors for the Tar Heel cagers with a neat 400 point total in the locals' 26 regular-season games.

The Asheville sharpshooter, who is also the leading point-maker in the Southern conference, accounted for 17 points in Friday night's win over Duke, enough to raise his season total to the 400 mark. Nemo Nearman, Tar Heel pivotman, was in the runnerup position with 249 points, while Hugo Kappler was third with 229 markers.

The final tabulation:

Player	fg	ft	tp
Carson	161	78	400

Soccer to Begin Here on Tuesday In Mural Program

The Intramural department embarks on a completely different program this week when soccer will get under way for both fraternity and dormitory competitors.

The actual play among the campus fraternities will be inaugerated Tuesday afternoon when a good portion of the 56 entries are scheduled for action. This response of the fraternities in the number of teams is decidedly heartening to the mural bigwigs, the turnout being over twice the number of teams that competed last year.

While the frats start Tuesday, the dorm division is still lacking in the number of anticipated entries. For this reason the dorm deadline for submitting teams has been extended to Wednesday and the dorm leagues will probably commence play later in the week.

One of the highlights in the week's activities is the gigantic Sports Carnival that is planned for Wednesday night in Woollen gym. The first part of the program in this extravaganza will be the boxing matches between the respective winners of the frat and dorm divisions for the Campus championships. Following the last bout the Beta Theta Pi basketball team, winners of the fraternity laurels, will engage the Unknowns, the dormitory division victors, in a clash that will determine the intramural campus cage crown.

Tickets Now on Sale For Charioteer Game

Tickets for Thursday night's basketball game between the Carolina Clowns and the Charioteers of McGuire hospital are now on sale at four different locations on the campus.

The pasteboards will be available at the Circus room of the Monogram club, the Scuttlebutt, the information office at Graham Memorial, and the cashier's booth in the book exchange. The tilt is the first of its kind ever to be staged in Woollen gym.

The McGuire team, composed of disabled veterans, and the Clowns will play in wheelchairs, although the rules of the game are basically the same as in standard basketball.

Sixty of Golfdom's Leaders Entered in Augusta Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 26.—(UP)—Sixty major tournament titlists and 15 other top linksmen were invited today to compete for golfdom's most cherished crown in the Master's tournament here April 7-10.

Injuries will keep two familiar names from the ranks of the blue-ribbon crew that will battle the fine Augusta national course through four days of match play, although they have been invited as a formality.

Bobby Jones, the unforgettable grand slammer who has played only in the Masters' since his retirement from competitive golf in the early 'thirties, has developed a spinal condition.

Hogan Injured

Bantam Ben Hogan, twice runner-up in the Masters' but never a winner, is still recuperating from back injuries suffered in an automobile wreck several weeks ago.

But the highly pedigreed affair still offers the finest array of them all. Claude Harmon, last year's surprise winner, will return to defend his title. His duties as "alternating" professional at the Winged Foot Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y., and the Seminole Club in Palm Beach, Fla., have kept him comparatively inactive since his 1948 triumph and he has added no important laurels.

Of the major tournament titlists, 21 are former USGA open champions, 17 are former USGA Amateur winners, nine Masters, seven the PGA, and three apiece the British Open and British amateur.

Fifteen new names are on the list. They qualified by showings in either the USGA Open, USGA amateur, PGA or Inter-Service.

Thinly Trapped

The Augusta National course is thinly trapped, but the layout incorporates the best features of the finest courses in the world. Daily strategic shifts of pins and distances makes it as rugged a stretch as exists today.

Average distance is 6750 yards, with a minimum of 6400 and a maximum of 6900.

The roster of invited competitors reads like the topmost fraction of a golfing "400."

Byron Nelson, the 1937 and 1942 Masters' winner who has virtually dropped from tourney golf, is one of the invitees who still make the Masters' their only real tournament effort.

SC Swim Tourney

Five teams have already sent in their entries for the Southern Conference swimming championships to be held here next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday with the prospect of more coming in before the meet gets under way.

N. C. State, Duke, VMI, and VPI have already joined Carolina, the defending champion, and it is expected that the other schools in the loop which sport swimming teams will file their entries.

This is the 16th renewal of the tourney, which Carolina has entered only the last eight years, winning in the last seven. Last year The Tar Heels totaled a record number of points, 101 to win the tourney and they are strong favorites to repeat, although not by such a large margin.

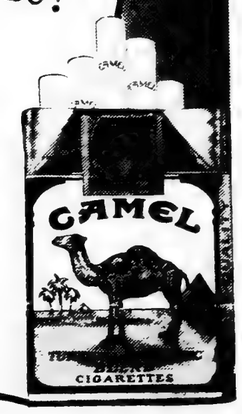
How 'torchy' can a song be?

Hear Fran Warren singing—"What's My Name?", a new RCA Victor disc ... and you'll know!

Titian-haired Fran Warren, with tears in her voice, sings a tuneful lament about love. The title of Fran's new disc, "What's My Name?", leads to another question, "What's Your Cigarette?" Fran answers, "Camel!" As Fran sings it, "Ever since I made the 30-day mildness test, Camels are my cigarette."



How MILD can a cigarette be?

SMOKE CAMELS FOR 30 DAYS —AND YOU'LL KNOW!

In a recent, coast-to-coast test of hundreds of men and women who smoked only Camels for 30 days—an average of one to two packs a day—noted throat specialists, after making weekly examinations, reported

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION DUE TO SMOKING

CAMELS

Money-Back Guarantee! Test Camel mildness for yourself in your own "T-Zone." T for taste, T for throat. If, at any time, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you've ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and you will receive its full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. Aquinas Club Fetes Campus And Officers

Weekend social events were highlighted Friday night by the Aquinas club dance at the Chapel Hill Country club where students of the University were entertained for five hours with recorded music and refreshments.

Other in-coming officers are Sol Monsour, social director; John J. Beshara, publicity director; and Paul Paschon and Marjorie Holland, executive members at large.

The merchants of Chapel Hill helped to finance the dance, which was an informal "stag or drag" affair, by purchasing advertizements on the dance program.

Members of the club's dance committee include Angelo Verdicanno, chairman: Sol Monsour, Gene Frances Caraher, and John Stoioff. Genevieve Trott was in charge of refreshments, and John Beshara was publicity director.

GETTING HER GUITAR in tune for tonight's Latin American trio music program in Hill hall at 8:30 is Julie Andre', mezzo-soprano and guitarist.

Vela Montayo, dancer, and Neal Kayan, pianist, will also appear on the Graham Memorial sponsored presentation. This will be the fourth in a series of weekly concerts given by the student union.

Miss Andre', who is a native of Denver, Col., has made a thorough and prolonged study of the folk-songs of Central and South America. She has toured all over the United States, Canada, Honolulu, and the Southwest Pacific. Her appearances have included concerts in several universities throughout the country.

Her album of Latin-American folk-songs, entitled "Songs from South of the Border," has been termed authoritative in its choice of selections.

Rendezvous Presents Radio-Floor Show

By Don Maynard

The Carolina Rendezvous room, Lib Stoney, and program producer Mark Barker played host to nearly 300 guests at their weekly Friday night airing of the WDUK feature "Rendezvous Time."

During most of the show, and in the off-the-air song and dance performances afterwards, the performers kept their audience alternately in stitches and in arms, mixing mood music with Herman Ethelbert Emshiviller.

Gracing the Rendezvous presentation, perched behind the bar, was Jasper.

Jasper is a critic-about-town. And, as such, he had a few words of praise for the show Friday night. "You know," Jasper confided, "the longer the Room is open, the bigger and better the shows become."

"Take, for instance, the Harmony Five quintet, Bob Hurley, Jack Clinard, Lanier Davis, Dick Smith, and Milton Bliss. Their singing of Frank Matthew's original arrangements Friday night were smooth. "The Walls of Jericho," "Sleep, Kentucky Babe" and the "Whiffenpoof Song," were just what the student body ordered."

Jasper turned away to slip a lump of ice into a coke cup. That's his business, placing tooth-cracking chunks of ice in coke cups. He works at that evil from under the bar of the Rendezvous room, and consequently gets all the word on campus conditions. But Jasper was critisizing this night, no gossip.

"And Barbara Edwards, she's the girl who sang "Can't Help Lovin' That Man,' u-m-m, she's class," Jasper mooned. Barbara sang the lead in last year's production of "The Mikado," and leads "Beggar's Opera," to be in Memorial hall next quarter.

"Barbara and the quint really clicked with their collaboration on 'I Love You,' didn't they? That's the point," Jasper murmured, "the Room is getting some table-grade talent these days."

"And Mark Barker was standing by with his wife when I overheard him mention a rival night club show from Duke. Plans are being made by a fellow wireless man of Mark's to transmit over WDUK also," he hissed.

Jasper broke the jaw of a customer with his ice, then turned back to us and continued jawing. "Stuff like Herman Ethelbert Emshiviller, alias Ralph Mulford, goes over big. He became a bit monotonous, but his script was funny in parts, and I chuckled when he told his mother in their program interrupting conversation that the Carolina tradition was 'short-sheeting, not cheating, Mother!' "

Aside, Jasper grunted, "How about that guy Junius Scales contemplating a tuition march on Raleigh? What next!"

Becky Holton, Tommy Thomas and Dick Johnson wowed their audience with the song and dance routine "Tea For Two." after Tommy and Dick had warmed everyone up with "By the Light of the Silv'ry Moon" and "My Blue Heaven." Becky starred in the Alpha Gam portion of the floor show last week in the Rendezvous.

"I asked Dick where he got the baby bonnet he donned in the 'Tea' number," Jasper said. "Dick replied, 'I got it downtown at a sale.'

"So I asked him what he was going to do with it now," Jasper mused as he chewed on his last fistful of ice and disappeared under the counter at the approach of another customer.

"And Dick answered, 'I'm going to keep it for future use . . . of course."

Claudia Lee To Be Entrant

Claudia Lee, senior from Marshallville, Ga., will compete for the title of Azalia Queen of Wilmington next week-end, when she will attend the festival there as a representative of three women's organizations of the University.

Winner of this year's Yackety Yack queen contest, Claudia was a cheerleader last fall and is a member of Alpha Delta Pi. She is being sponsored at the annual azalia festival by Chi Delta Phi, Panhellenic council, and the Carolina Independent Coed associations, the organizations which regularly sponsor May Day.

PiKA Pledge Ball Is Given At Inn

The Tau chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity held its annual pledge dance in honor of the pledges and their dates here last night. The dance was given in the Carolina inn ballroom with music furnished by Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra.

The ballroom was decorated with emphasis on the colors of the fraternity, garnet and gold. A large pledge pin was hung horizontally from the center of the ceiling with garnet and gold crepe paper branching out from it. The walls of the ball rooms were draped in crepe paper of the same colors.

Immediately following intermission Jim Phillips, master of ceremonies, introduced the pledges and their dates while the orchestra played the PiKA song, "May I Speak My Heart Now?" The couples entered the ballroom through the outline of a large pledge pin and moved to the front of the bandstand where they formed the Greek letter, "Pi", the PiKA pledge symbol.

The pledge officers and their dates entered last and formed the crossbar of the "Pi". All the pledges wore white carnations, and their dates wore purple orchids. The introduction of the pledges and the formation of the figure was followed by a no-break dance.

As a future reminder of the occasion, each of the pledges' dates was presented with a miniature pledge paddle by Pledgemaster Pappy Darnell. Following this ceremony refreshments were served.

Chaperons for the dance were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Mal Kenny, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Davis, and Lt. G. E. French.

Board Votes For Tuition Raise

Committee Reports Unfavorably On Six-Day Week

Bryant Says System Would Be Detrimental

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 28—Saturday classes in Chapel Hill were disapproved today in a report by the special visiting committee to the Board of Trustees at their semi-annual meeting here.

In a written report submitted by Chairman Victor S. Bryant, the committee said it had found that "a very large majority of both the faculty and students believe that the six-day system would be definitely detrimental to the University."

"Instituting a six-day week in hope of curbing the week-end exodus," the report continued, "is too drastic a measure if it is going to hamper the serious and best efforts of the University."

The committee also refrained from any specific stand on student - owned automobiles. The problem, they decided, is being handled capably by the campus-University safety committee.

The committee members reported, however, that they were "reassured to find that the administration is prepared to recommend at any time it considers necessary an outright prohibition of the operation of cars by students who do not need them for transportation to the campus or for other reasons."

In a discussion of faculty needs in Chapel Hill the report urged an increase in salaries in order to meet actual living needs and to meet competition among colleges and universities.

A need for additional teachers, especially in the philosophy, accounting, and geology departments was noted. More faculty advisers for freshmen and sophomores were also recommended.

In the field of faculty-student relationships, an improvement was reported. The committee recommended, however, "that the administration re-emphasize its policy of encouraging the faculty both to be hospitable to advances by students and to take the initiative in establishing acquaintances by conferences and in all natural and becoming associations on the campus."

Low Temperatures Cover North State

By United Press

A snow flurry at Asheville was yesterday's reminder that North Carolina isn't through with winter yet.

A trace of snow hit the mountain City early today but wasn't enough to stick on the ground.

The weather bureau predicted sub-freezing temperatures in interior portions of the state tonight with similar chill on the coast. For central and western North Carolina the mercury was expected to his between 22 and 28 degrees. On the coast the weather bureau predicted temperatures of 28-35.

Last night the mercury sagged to 17 atop Mt. Mitchell, 33 at Asheville, 36 at Winston-Salem, 39 at Raleigh and Charlotte and 46 at Wilmington. Today's forecast called for clearing skies with considerable wind, fair and colder tomorrow. No rain or snow in sight, the weatherman said.

CPU Debates U.S. Economy At Roundtable

'Disinflation' Is Topic of Meeting

The political and economic implications of the so-called "disinflation" of the American economy was the topic of discussion at the regular roundtable meeting of the Carolina Political union Sunday night.

Henry Adams, sociology major, started the discussion with a report on specific instances of price decreases, unemployment, the economic role of the government, and concluded that the present situation would not likely develop into a major economic collapse.

Various participants leveled criticisms at the basic, particularly steel, for making a large contribution to our troubles. Others characterized the affliction as "too much government" and called for a return to "capitalism and freedom."

The majority indicated that the government must continue to exercise a considerable amount of economic influence in terms of legislation on unemployment compensation, social security, and similar things.

Herb Alexander, chairman of the union, announced the admission of Henry Goldstein and Jack Hopkins to membership in the union. He also stated that there are several membership vacancies and that anyone interested in becoming a member should attend the regular Sunday night sessions in the Grail room of GM.

Pan-Hel Tryouts Will Open Today

Try-outs will be held today and tomorrow at 5 o'clock in the Rendezvous room for a melodrama to be included in the Pan-Hellenic variety show, to be held March 26, 27, and 29, president Ferne Hughes announced yesterday.

Frank Graham Makes Report On University

Pearsall Praises Annual Statement

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 28—"Critical self-examination of our University," Dr. Frank Porter Graham said today in his annual report to the Board of Trustees, "reveals deficits in the number and quality of our staffs, inadequacy in guidance, and shortages in class rooms, libraries and laboratories.

"We also find," he continued, "a comparative lowness of salaries, short funds for extension services, lack of funds for scholarships, fellowships, professorships, travel, publications and for applied and basic research."

The report, distributed in booklet form to board members, was termed "one of the greatest documents ever compiled" by Thomas Pearsall, board member from Rocky Mount.

The report, 83 pages in volume, included individual reports from Chancellor W. C. Jackson of Woman's college, Chancellor J. W. Harrelson of State and Chancellor R. B. House of Chapel Hill.

The present salary scale for the University, Dr. Graham pointed out, is not only at the bottom of all such scales in the Association of American Universities, but is below other Southern institutions which have not been admitted to the association.

"This crisis of the faculties," he said, "is a crisis for the youth, the people, and the future of North Carolina."

"We have too few scholarships in all three institutions," he continued, "Despite the need for and the aspirations of high-talented students, too many of them find the door of college unequally closed because, with all their will to work, the scholarships are not provided for them at the three institutions of their own state university."

"History teaches beyond the denial of bigotry or the sneer of cynicism that the answer to a difference in color or creed is not the KKK, is not tomatoes and eggs, is not a concentration camp," Dr. Graham asserted in a discussion of the freedom of the mind versus totalitarian dictatorship, "the answer to error is not terror, but the cleansing power of light and liberty under the laws and the Constitution of the United States of America."

"To be American in the great

Nine Students Die In Dormitory Fire

GAMBIER, Ohio, Feb. 28—(UP)—The president of Kenyon college set the death toll at nine today in the fire which destroyed the 122-year-old men's dormitory here.

President Gordon K. Chalmers said hope for six missing students had been "given up" and one of two others critically injured had died. More than 15 students received minor burns in the fire which was discovered at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Chalmers said it probably would not be safe to search the ruins until late today when the embers had cooled. He estimated damage at $1,000,000.

The dead were identified as Edward H. Brout, 19, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and Marc S. Peck, Fenton, Mich., both of whom died of injuries suffered when they jumped from windows to escape the flames; Ernest Ahwajee, 19, Akron, O.; Albert J. Louis, 19, Hazelton, Pa.; George Pincus, 19, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Stephan M. Shephard, 19, New York, N. Y.; Colon Woodworth, 20, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; and Martin E. Mangel, 17, New York, N. Y.; Jack McDonald, Hamilton, O.

One of the injured students in the hospital said he saw Ahwajee dragging a fire hose into the basement of the blazing building at the height of the fire.

Louis was last seen at 8 o'clock when he told friends: "I'm staying here for the weekend."

College officials said they had abandoned hope for Pincus who last was seen in bed by his roommate, shortly before the latter jumped for his life.

Ten other students were in serious condition and more than 15 were treated for minor injuries. Most of the injured were hurt when they jumped from windows of the three-story building or clambered down the ivy-covered walls.

Firemen said the fire apparently was started by sparks from an unprotected fireplace after a party in the dormitory lounge.

Chalmers said the college volunteer fire department was hampered by the lack of water and could do little to halt the spread of flames. When the school's reservoir tank went dry the fire fighters had to take water from a nearby well.

There was no panic during the blaze and Chalmers commended the students for their behavior and the way they helped each other. About 75 students were temporarily housed in other dormitories and private homes.

Firemen said the students in the buildings' two wings managed to save their personal belongings but that those in the central section where the fire started lost everything.

Phi to Debate FEPC Tonight In New East

Is First Issue On Civil Rights

President Truman's proposal for a Fair Employment Practices Commission will be debated by the Philanthropic assembly in Phi hall, New East at 7:30 tonight.

A resolution introduced by Bryan Griswold, if passed, would put the Phi on record as opposing the FEPC as "detrimental" to the nation.

The FEPC bill is the first civil rights issue to come before the Phi this year. Last year the Phi voted in favor of a federal anti-lynch law, and by a tie vote failed to pass a resolution for the admission of Negro students to the University.

If the Congress passes an FEPC law, no employers engaged in interstate commerce could deny employment because of religion, color, or creed.

According to press reports originating in Washington last week, Southern Congressmen will support a revision of the Taft-Hartley bill and permit passage of an anti-lynch law, and Northern Democrats will agree to shelf the FEPC.

A special invitation has been sent to the local chapter of the Students for Democratic Action to send supporters for the FEPC.

Tonight's meeting will be the last discussion program of this quarter since election of officers has been scheduled for next week.

Speaker Dave Sharpe will continue his practice of extending the privileges of the floor to visitors.

Philological Club To Hear Sisson

Professor Charles J. Sisson, visiting professor in the English department, from the University of London, will read the paper "The Tragedy of Lady Macbeth" at the Philological club meeting in Gerrard hall this evening at 7:30, club president George R. Coffman, announced yesterday.

The lecture is open to the public, Coffman said, as well as club members. "The lecture will be over in time for those who wish to attend the Weil lecture by Dr. Robert McIver at 8:30," he said. aGg....IauF-$frob TH HMMH RI

Bill to Exclude Red Students Is Brought Up

Wilmington Man Authors Measure

RALEIGH, Feb. 28—A resolution which would prohibit any person who is member of or affiliated with the Communist party from being enrolled or employed by the University of North Carolina was introduced at the semi-annual Board of Trustees meeting here today.

The resolution, introduced by Jack LaGrand of Wilmington, was referred to the trustees' executive committee for action and report at the board's June meeting.

The amendment to refer the resolution to the committee was made by L. P. McLendon of Greensboro.

LaGrand is also the author of the 1941 Legislature bill an interpretation of which Chancellor R. H. House used recently to prohibit John Gates, Daily Worker editor, from speaking in Memorial hall.

LaGrand, in introducing the resolution, stated that he had learned that a "group of students in Chapel Hill' had invited a Communist, whose name he did not remember, to the campus to speak.

He added that he had been alarmed by this and other actions in Chapel Hill,' and therefore felt that his resolution should be acted upon.

Court Ruling Favors Union

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(UP)—The Supreme court today ruled 6 to 3 that four North Carolina cotton mills must let employes use a community hall for union meetings.

But it decided that the National Labor Relations board must rewrite an order, stating more explicitly the terms under which the CIO Textile Workers union may use the hall.

The decision affected the mill town of North Belmont, N. C. where workers' houses and the three public buildings are owned or controlled by the Stowe Spinning Co., Acme Spinning Co., Perfection Spinning Co., and Lanford Mills, Inc. The companies have joint ownership.

Group Ballots 58-15 For Increase of $81

By Bill Buchan

RALEIGH, Feb. 28—The Greater University of North Carolina Board of Trustees approved the proposed tuition increase from $69 to $150 here today by a vote of 58 to 15.

The vote on the issue, however, did not show the bitter fight which divided the board members when they met in the hall of the House of Representatives.

The trustees' approval was given in a resolution by member Frank Hancock which stated that "the recommendation of the executive committee and the Advisory Budget commission be approved by the board."

John Sprunt Hill of Durham amended the resolution to recommend the approval of the increase for the "present emergency." That was the amended bill which passed.

Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte lead the anti-increase forces in their battle against the move. "It would be foolish," he stated, "to abolish the policies we followed through the years and make this a rich man's college."

Parker wanted a committee of five persons appointed to study the proposed increase and the advisability of free tuition for North Carolinians.

He charged that "instead of having a free institution we are proposing to raise our tuition rates to the third highest in the United States." The well-known jurist then read a comparison of tuition rates and fees for all state universities.

Supporters of the proposal, however, argued that while they were supporting the tuition increase, they were doing so reluctantly. Members pointed out continuously that any state funds which might be used to avoid the increase would inevitably come from University funds delegated for use elsewhere.

Major J. P. McLendon of Greensboro, who was the main spokesman for the raise, said a refusal to raise tuition would hurt the North Carolina public schools.

"I would estimate that 30 per cent of the freshmen who enter the University fail because of poor public education. The forgotten man," he said, "is the poor teacher. Surely no one would suggest that we jeopardize the public teachers and the University faculties by refusing to raise their salaries."

There is no worthwhile boy or girl in the state," he continued, "who cannot go to the University if he wants to on a $150 tuition basis."

Controller William D. Carmichael, Jr., who presented the tuition raise in his report, admitted that there were many University students "hanging over the cliff" at the present time.

"However," he stated, "no boy or girl will be forced out of college because of this increase. We will not allow it."

John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill, who came out in opposition to the increase Saturday, maintained his stand in the meeting. "The time comes," he said, "when

Campus Drive Of Red Cross Opens Today

Will Continue Through Friday

An extensive campus-wide campaign to raise funds for the American Red Cross will open here today and continue through Friday, Co-Chairman Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon announced yesterday.

No goal has been set for the university this year, but drive leaders asked everyone "to contribute with the spirit of giving to a worthwhile cause."

With plans already mapped out for them, some 90 solicitors will contact individually all dormitory, sorority and fraternity house residents with the purpose of enlisting and renewing ARC memberships. With each $1 contribution, a membership card will be issued while a donation of any amount will merit a lapel button.

Co-Chairmen Pritchard and Gordon have initiated a "check list" plan whereby a contributor will be contacted only once. Red Cross workers will be on duty in the YMCA lobby from 9 to 12 o'clock every morning, tomorrow through Friday. Pritchard said that the booth is being set up "especially for town students who wish to contribute."

Mrs. Mable Brittain, local field secretary for the ARC, reported this week that the Chapel Hill chapter has served through its home service 1,404 cases in 1948. Of these, 1,264 were veterans and their dependants, 95 were service men, and 45 were, civilians, she added.

'Elijah' Recording Will Be Presented

The recording of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," which was presented in January by the Chapel Hill Choral club, will be played for club members at 7:30 tomorrow night in the Swain hall studios of the communications center. This will be the only opportunity for members to hear the recording, club officials said yesterday.

What's Her Problem?

Southern Belle, Style Of 1900 Has Versatile Coed Worried

By Sam Hirsch

"To be, or not to be, that is the question." Barbara McIntyre, attractive blonde junior from Goldsboro, is faced with this dilemma in her portrayal of Alexandra, 17-year-old daughter of Regina in "The Little Foxes," the Carolina Playmakers production opening tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Playmakers theater.

Barbara, sociology major, will make her first appearance with the Playmakers in this part. She loves football, the movies, cokes, music, the beach, dances, likes to design and sew and make clothes, and wears bobby socks and sweaters.

What's her problem? How can a modern 1949 coed understand and sympathize with a crinoline Southern belle of 1900? "To be, or not to be?" Barbara said. "Alexandra grew up with all those mean characters all around her. Looks like all the meaness there is in the world is right there in that house, in her own mother too, yet she seems to be untouched by it all. I can't understand why any girl 17 years old could never see those things going on. I think I would have seen them."

However, she is enjoying the contrast her part has to the rest of the cast. "She's so sweet and they're so mean," she said, that it's a relief to be playing Alexandra." She is looging forward to the audience sbecause she loves the excitement.

Freshmen May Sign for W.C. Dates To Class Dance in Y Lobby Thursday

Members of the freshmen class who want to arrange dates with Woman's College girls for the forthcoming freshman dance may do so by coming to the Y lobby tomorrow or Thursday between the hours of 10 and 4 o'clock. A representative of the class will be in the Y lobby to take the names of any freshman who would like a date arranged.

Final plans for the dance, to be held here on April 9, were made at a class meeting of the officers and council members. President Dalton Ruffin said that if any admission were charged it would be less than $1, stag or drag, adding, "This dance is for the freshman class alone. If it is to be a success we need the wholehearted support of every member. We are hoping to have a large number of girls present, because without a sufficient number no dance can be a real success."

NROTC Students Receiving X-Rays in Mobile Apparatus

A mobile X-ray unit from the United States Navy Medical department arrived here last Friday and is now in the process of making X-rays of the 240 students in the Naval science program, the instructors in the department and their families.

Commanded by Lt. (Jg) J. W. Hooper, Jr. HM First class Edward Johnston, and HM Third class Arthur Depaemelaere, the unit is one of two that has been put into operation since the war.

"The Naval department requires all personnel to have one chest X-ray a year," Lt. Hooper said yesterday, adding, "This unit makes it possible for us to take the X-rays at a much lower cost per take." This is the first appearance of such a unit at the University, but according to Lt. Hooper it will be an annual affair.

"Regular size X-rays took more equipment and cost from $3 to $4 each," Hooper said. "With this unit we can not only take them cheaper but also faster. This one is capable of turning out 600 a day if we can get that many people."

Operating out of Bethesda, Md., the unit has made visits to the University of South Carolina and Duke. Other places that are scheduled for visits by the unit include Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, the Naval Air station at Birmingham, Ala., Panama City, Fla., Tampa, Miami, and Key West.

Lives For Convenience

With the final passage of the Hardison bill in the state senate, North Carolina was divested of its auto inspection law. Since it seems unlikely that any new inspection law will be pushed through before the end of the legislative session, it will be two years before a new program can be instituted, and then the task will be even more difficult than previously. A flood of second hand rattle-traps will be brought into the state from the North, and existing inspection personnell and equipment will be dispersed.

The chief cause for complaint is the inconvenience to which car-owners were put. Another more serious objection was the sometimes unnecessary expense of repairing brand new cars. Probably there is not a citizen in the state who would object to the program, if he, personally, were exempted. It feels a little safer to know that we are no longer at the mercy of every brakeless, un-steerable trap.

The auto-inspection program was a sincere attempt to save lives and property on the highways. Considering the obstacles in its path, it did fairly well. It could be expected that the inconvenience would diminish during the next months. As it is, however, we have simply thrown away a great deal of time and money for nothing. It would be difficult to estimate how many lives will be lost in the state due to the legislature's hasty revocation as more cars pour out of factories onto the roads. We are swapping lives for convenience.

One More Step

At last the long controversy over the $1,500,000 Ackland estate has been concluded. The University will become the site of the memorial art museum projected in the will of William H. Ackland.

Much credit for the University's acquisition goes to the law firm of the late O. Max Gardner which for six years has acted as the legal representative of the University without charge. The art center will be one more step in the establishment of the University as the foremost cultural center in the South.

Scraps of Paper Binding No One to Anything

By Charlie Kauffman

The United States government is on the verge of expending a vast amount of money and energy as pertains in the arms negotiations going conducted side by side with those which are rapidly bringing the North Atlantic pact to the roundtable stage. The amount to be requested the first year of our arms program will probably be $1,200,000,000. Our commitments over the rest of the world may well give us cause to scrutinize the pact most carefully.

Let us look to the future by all means. The position of Soviet Russia in Europe is too familiar. It should suffice to say that her divisions ready for instant action outnumber those of all the Western powers by ten to one. An outlay on our part sufficient to match this strength would by all previous standards, come to considerably more than our government may promise to expend, over a long period of time, in addition to tremendous long-term commitments already made. Neither do we have any assurances of what sort of resistance the Western powers would be willing to put up in the face of attack from the East. Certainly any possible war with Russia will be fought on the land, and just as certainly, France will play the main role in any such future European conflict.

Apparently the Western powers have decided to sink or swim with the pact, and it is here, in its provisions and in its chances for success that the peace of the world may lie. What are these chances? We do have some very valuable and military on which to base our calculations. In the first place, the pact does not require its signatories to refrain from military violence in the pursuit of diplomatic objectives. Nor does it offer any assurance that even the full-scale invasion of a signatory would require the others to come to its defense. The real decisions on assistance, if any, much less the actual declarations of war, are left entirely to the discretion of the member powers. The pact does not require any signatory to submit to controversy in an effort to settle a conflagration already commenced.

What exactly do these considerations boil the North Atlantic pact down to? It's not an alliance at all. It amounts to little more than a handshake wherein previously known and repeated convictions and sympathies are being codified and ratifications of such will be exchanged amid great ceremony, not in the belief that any great or lasting security will be forthcoming. It can hardly be credited as being anything more than the end of a desire of stiffening the upper lips of the Western nations by way of giving them a shot of this plentiful, yet coveted commodity, this non-durable American brand of security.

The gaping weaknesses in the North Atlantic pact will be revealed in its applications. To a great extent this is no different from all previous pacts which have called for multilateral action against aggressors. They are scraps of paper binding no-one to anything.

Overheated Brass in Shorts

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

An Army bomber, loaded with big brass, was on an inspection flight out West. Something jammed in the cooling system and the plane became unbearably hot.

The brass hats shed their tunics, then their shirts, finally their pants. The clothing was piled in a huge heap.

At last the pilot, dripping perspiration, decided to have air at any price, so he opened the bomb bay. This was where the clothing was piled.

Garb of generals, colonels, and whatnots was spread all over the California landscape. The brass had to disembark at Muroc air base in their shorts.

A couple of young charmers known as Austine and Helene conduct a weekly fashion show here. In the course of a season they present some weird guest performers.

This week they had an aberration which topped their own proud record. They decided to give a raft of prizes, including a smoked turkey and four different shades of lipstick (presumably for anyone who wished to be four shades), to the dame who collected the most shoes off the feet of the audience.

By exercising their sinister allure, the two sirens prevailed upon a weak-minded fellow named Dixon to conduct the shoe auction. This poor imbecile, practically senile since birth, had no idea what it would be like having dames running wild in a room in their stocking feet snatching each other's footgear.

Contestants came staggering up on stage under armloads of shoes, some of which must have belonged to females without toes. One determined lady made a dive for the addlepated auctioneer's shoes and would undoubtedly have gotten them too except that nervous perspiration made them stick to his feet.

From a quick casing of the joint, I thought only dolls were in the place. But in the middle of one heap were a pair of horseshoes.

I don't know who the filly was, or how they backed her into a seat. But, with feet that big, she'll nver win the Preakness.

Political Parties Present Views

U.P.: The Oldest Party: No Meeting Can Be 'Packed'; Responsible Representatives

By Rita Adams

Party-nominated candidates are having their names blasted across the front page; retreaters from Montreat are still talking about their commission on campus politics; posters and hand-bills are being printed for the coming election. And, yet, many students on campus continue to come in contact with these high tension political wires without knowing what it's all about.

The truth is that it's next to impossible to have a clear conception of the whole picture—a knowledge of all that comes before even a party nomination of its candidates. But to have an understanding of the three political parties on campus is a must for an intelligent voter. In order to promote that understanding the following explanation of the University party is presented.

This is a party [illegible] representatives are [illegible] responsible. Each one is elected to represent his member organization and is given one vote in the steering committee of the party. According to this plan, no meeting can be "packed," although visitors are always welcome.

To obtain membership in the party, a campus organization must have 25 or more members. The newest member of the group is Ed Tenney, representing Victory Village. Quite frequently several members from the organization besides the elected representative are regular attendants at the meetings.

Founded in 1927, the party is the oldest group of its kind on campus. It has maintained its activities under such leaders as Miles Smith, Thurman Williams, and Joe Leary. Under the chairmanship of Williams, a set of by-laws was recently drawn up, setting forth policies of the group. Tangible accomplishments of the party's services to University students include last year's redistricting, which was promised in the spring platform. Both students and townspeople have benefited from the addition of new long distance lines out of Chapel Hill, a request voiced by the party members.

C.P.: First True Political Party at UNC; Opposes Leftism and Inefficiency

By Jim Southerland

In accordance with the new DTH policy concerning political columns, the Campus party will present each week its official position on the issues of the coming campaign and on questions involving student government in general.

It will be the policy of the Campus party to avoid mud-slinging campaigns and to concentrate on facts and honest opinions. The CP believes that the student body has a right to know what is going on behind the political scenes and the reasons why.

Since campus political alignments have been fluctuating so rapidly in the past few months, it is not out of place to note briefly the present composition of the Campus party. The CP is composed of coeds, fraternity men, and non-fraternity men. Earlier in the quarter the would distinguish within the party three different groups which have since merged into a unified whole. These groups were roughly, the remainder of the "old guard", a large number of promising new men, and a group which recently withdrew from the Student party.

The Campus party was formed two years ago when a strong element in the SP withdrew after a bitter fight centering around A. Lowenstein. In the spring elections of 1948, the CP secured for its candidate a joint nomination with the University party. Following the election of President Dedmond, the CP began to decline as many of the older leaders became inactive or became satellites of the UP.

In the recent fall elections the Campus party suffered a great setback in spite of the efforts of its energetic and promising new blood. These younger members were unable to counter an experienced and aggressive Student party dominated by the so-called "practical wing."

On the surface then, one might assume that the Campus party is on its way out of Carolina politics. Such is not, however, the case. The group that dominated the Student party during the fall elections withdrew at the beginning of the winter quarter, after sharp knives were placed in its back by the man who then rose to the SP chairmanship. The SP was thus weakende considerably. It was reduced to the third party position when the "practical wing" united with the Campus party.

The studentbody may well watch closely the actions of a growing Campus party. Its spirit is flourishing anew and it is gathering support as it never has before. The CP has every chance in the coming election of moving up from its secondary position to become the dominate force in Carolina politics.

S.P.: Program May Not Be 'Expedient,' but Is Honest; Meetings Open

By Walter McCraw

The Student party bases its political philosophy and actions on the belief that student self-government is a vital part of the education and of the rights of citizenship of the students of the University of North Carolina.

It also believes that with these rights go responsibilities of active participation, honest thinking, and personal self-discipline. For these reasons, the Student Party is engaged in student politics as a means to bring about effective, honorable and forward-looking student government.

We solicit support from all students who would participate in open discussions of their problems, who would expect of their officials a sense of responsibility to those who put them in office. We solicit the support of all students who feel that the principles of a democratic and ethical world are worth fighting for in all governments everywhere. Without tolerance to these principles democratic government cannot long deserve to endure.

We are human and we shall make mistakes, but these mistakes will not be determined by the winning or losing a student election, nor by the votes we get or do not get. Rather shall our success or failure be measured by the quality of leadership we offer, by the program for student welfare which we sponsor, and by the devotion to the Honor and Campus codes that we demonstrate in the offices we fill.

We feel that we have followed this program in the nominations which we have already made for the spring elections. We urge your consideration of the qualifications of the following Student Party candidates: Bill Mackie, for president of the student body; Harry Horton, for Vice President; Chuck Hauser, for Editor of the Daily Tar Heel; and Norm Sper for Head Cheerleader.

We invite you to examine the organization of the Student party, its operation, membership, candidates, and its platform, which is soon to be released. We want to win and we feel we can win, but we want to win victories based on something more worthy than being the most expedient of the vote-soliciting groups on the campus.

Our meetings are open, and though you may not find there a bunch of oratorical "wheels", there will certainly be a group of conscientious students striving to find the way to honest and effective student government, through objective study and open discussion.

Write Away

Evasion of the Issue

Editor:

Just how progressive is this "progressive" governor the people of North Carolina have elected? His narrow-minded unreasonable reasoning is clearly demonstrated when he suggests that the University raise its tuition so as not to compete with the denominational schools. If we may be permitted to ask, what is the purpose of a state university?—To serve such schools as Davidson, Wake Forest, and Duke, or to serve the people of the state!

Some members of the administration and the Board of Trustees adopt a somewhat different attitude. They claim the faculty needs the money, with which we all most certainly agree, and, they say since the state is doing nothing, we will have to resort to raising the tuition. Gentlemen, the fight to make the state recognize its responsibility in the field of education is a hard one. Your attitude is one of unbridled appeasement, an attitude which smells of complacency and whose deodorant is but a weak rationalization.

Mr. Governor, you would not have the people raise the needed money for their University through taxation. Instead you would substitute an assessment upon the men and women who wish to take advantage of their educational rights. The facilities of a university whose purpose is to serve all the people you would limit to but a few, those who could get deep enough into their own or their parents' pockets. Those who cannot afford must pay just as much as those who can afford more. Is this right? Mr. Governor, you may not tax the people for their university, but in such, you are taxing wisdom and common sense.

The state must recognize its responsibilities! Any such action as is being considered now would be but a dishonest evasion of the issue, and a bitter defeat to the people.

Let no governor, administrator, or trustee [illegible] thinking otherwise.

David E. Cope.

To Keep the Record Straight

Editor:

I would like to correct a misquotation of my speech at the Phi debate on the question of raising tuition.

In Thursday's Daily Tar Heel I am quoted as calling Governor Scott a reactionary. This is not true. What I actually said is that Governor Scott's proposal [illegible] reactionary. I did denounce this proposal as a betrayal of the best interests of the young people of this state but I did not intend to pass judgment on the whole of the Governor's program.

I will appreciate your printing this letter so the [illegible] may be kept straight.

Correction & Apology

On February 12 there was published in this column a letter written by Edwin M. Since publication of the letter we have received evidence from the associate editor of In Fact, Victor Weingarten, that tends to show that these statements were erroneous. MONOGRAM MUSINGS

Gong Have Party

With a very successful initiation-party in the immediate background, at which the Club played host to the Tri Delt Sorority to the new letter winners, this week finds another party on deck for the wearers of the NC. The chief purpose behind the affair, aside from general recreation, is a sort of reunion for wayward monogrammers, according to President Laddie Terrell. It is an open party to all men who have won varsity monograms, despite time or sport.

In sanctioning the party Terrell stated that, "it is the idea of the club to especially invite those club members who have not been attending meetings lately, in an effort to demonstrate to them that the Club is still interested in them, and attempt to enlist their active support. We sincerely hope that the turnout will be large and that the older members will come and bring their wives and dates. It's going to be sort of an 'old home night' for everyone."

Pete Hoxner, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced that the party will be held at the new Mercury Club which is situated about three miles out on the Greensboro highway just this side of the Terrace View, on the left hand side of the road. This spot has just recently been opened to the public and is under the management of Jimmy Williams, a well known Chapel Hill youth. The building itself is highly suitable for private parties, as well as being a very pleasant place to soak a few suds while dancing with your best girl on one of these soon-to-be-cold nights. The atmosphere is cordial and friendly, with plenty of table and dancing space.

Never the usual calibre of Monogram Club parties, this one holds the promise of many laughs and a terrific time in general. There will be the routine course of refreshments with soft drinks, also, being served to those desirous of such. Pretzels and potato chips will dot the agenda, with the promise that there will be an abundance of everything.

The shindig will begin promptly at 8 o'clock on the eve of Saturday, March 5th and will last until daybreak, or until the refreshments give out . . . whichever occurs first. So polish up your shoes, the ones with the handles, as well as the ones with the heels, and mark the time and the place on your "to be there" list. The Club is looking forward to seeing lots of old, but welcome faces, along about 8 o'clock on this Saturday, as the good times roll.

At Last!

It looks like the Clubroom of the Monogram Club is going to finally get its face lifted. Comptroller W. D. Carmichael, Jr. has informed President Terrell that work will begin before the end of this week and should be finished within five or six days thereafter. The renovation is to include new furniture, drapes, a rug and the necessary essentials for a beautiful and comfortable lounge. The club's pool and ping-pong tables will also be reinstated to their former positions in the room, space permitting.

It is the hope of the Club that upon the completion of the remodeling, the attendance of the meetings will increase proportionately to the handsomeness of the room. With the new facilities and shorter meetings, plus the ever increasing activities of the Club, it is firmly believed that an unprecedented interest on the part of the members will be forthcoming.

Attendance Bonus

In line with this increased attendance angle, the attendance committee, ably headed by Joe Romano, has put forward the nucleus of a plan that would put attendance on a sport-to-sport competitive basis. The idea is still in a neophyte form, but it would be something like this: attendance records would be kept according to sport and the number of letterwinners in that particular sport. At the end of each quarter, or year, as the case may be, a party would be held at the expense of the Monogram Club for the members of the sport (and dates) with the highest percentage of attendance.

This scheme would encourage the more active members to haul some of their teammates along to the meetings with the overall result that attendance figures would reach an unprecedented high. In any event, it's a fine idea and should be followed through.

Wheel Chair Tilt on Tap

One of the most interesting basketball games in the history of Woollen gymnasium will be presented to the public Thursday night when the Carolina Clowns play the McGuire Hospital Charioteers of Richmond.

The McGuire team is composed of veterans of the last war who suffered leg injuries while who play in wheelchairs. The Clowns will take to the chairs in an effort to become the first team ever to defeat the Charioteers.

All proceeds will go into a fund which will be used to put lights in at the Chapel Hill high school athletic field.

Coach Dave Reiniger's five has won 23 straight games and holds wins over the varsity squads of both Duke and Wake Forest. Captain of the Charioteers is Carl Bankhead from Shelby.

Billikens, Wildcats in NIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(UP)—Kentucky Wildcats and St. Louis Billikens today received and accepted bids to the National Invitational basketball tournament at Madison Square garden. Kentucky also indicated that, by doing this, it was not disqualifying itself from a berth in the NCAA tournament, too.

The Wildcats have been rated the nation's no. 1 team almost from the start of the season and their only loss in 26 games was by one basket to the Billikens in a game at the Sugar Bowl. Last year Kentucky won the NCAA tournament.

St. Louis, which is apparently out of the running for an NCAA bid after losing twice to the Oklahoma Aggies in the Missouri Valley conference, will be the defending champion in the Invitational.

According to Asa Bushnell, chairman of the NIT selection committee, St. Louis and Kentucky are the only two teams so far invited.

Cagers Battle Terrapins In Tourney Opener

Scott Gives Team Afternoon of Rest For Play at Duke

Coach Tom Scott ordered a day of rest for his Carolina basketball charges yesterday before beginning preparations for the big Southern conference tournament in Durham this weekend.

The local mentor was well pleased wth the fine performance of his team in its rout of Duke, 64-40, on Friday night and he felt the boys deserved a brief respite from drills in recognition of the good work against Duke. The win over the Devils was particularly impressive in view of the fact that Duke was playing on its home court and was determined to beat Carolina to gain a bid to the tourney.

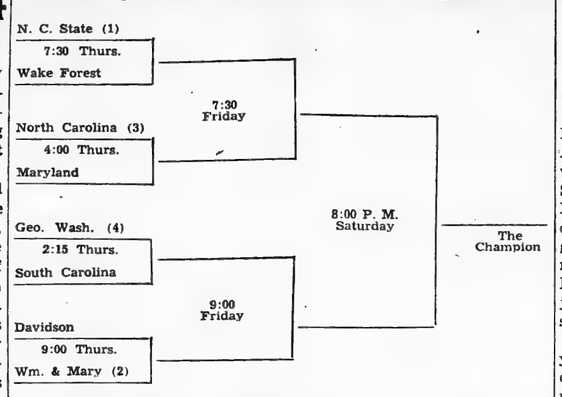
But the layoff will be all over for the Tar Heels this afternoon as Scott begins to map his strategy for the tourney. In pairings this week, the Tar Heels were pitted against Maryland in the opening round. Carolina will be favored in this assignment but their second round opponent probably will be N. C. State, a team which already has soundly thrashed the Heels twice.

First Round Game

Other first round games will see State meeting Wake Forest in the first game Thursday night, George Washington vs. South Carolina at 2:15 Thursday, and Davidson vs. William and Mary at 9:00 Thursday night.

The Carolina-Maryland tiff will begin at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Veteran tournament observers are picking George Washinton and State to meet in the finals Saturday night, and a large number of them are predicting the Colonials from Washington to defeat Everett Case's Raleigh quint for some unknown reason. The Wolfpack has by far the most lustrous loop record.



Conspicuously absent from this year's tourney field is Duke university, which failed to qualify for the event for the first time since 1929.

Loop High Scorer

Carolina has the distinction of having the conference's high scorer on its squad. Coy Carson led the loop in scoring in conference games only, although Chet Giermak of William and Mary had a higher seasonal total. Carson's total for the year was 402.

One Hugo Kappler is expected to lend a potent hand in the scoring column. The blonde sophomore transfer from Georgia has been particularly impressive in the late season games. He played a great game under the backboards against Duke and chipped in with 14 points. His floor play and accuracy on push shots and set shots have played a big role in Carolina's late season success. Kappler had 208 points for the year.

'Cats Beat Siler City, 43-21, For Eighteenth Straight Win

Chapel Hill's red-hot cagers rang up their 18th straight win without a defeat last night with a rousing 43-21 victory over the Siler City hardwooders on the local high school court.

The Chapel Hill lassies made a clean sweep of the twin bill by defeating the Siler sextet, 29-26, in the preliminary tilt.

Bill Grice's tournament bound Wildcats forged ahead after a tight first quarter that saw the score deadlocked at 5-all, to run up a 21-point total at intermission. The Siler City lads weren't able to crack the Chapel Hill defense even once in that second period and left the court at halftime with only five points to their credit.

The second half was all Chapel Hill, with Coach Grice giving his reserves plenty of experience. Guard Ivalee Hill was the big gun in the local's offense, racking up a neat 21 points.

Durham and Parker scored 10 points apiece in pacing the Chapel Hill girls to a close 29-26 win over the Siler City lassies. Scott was best for the visitors, with 10 markers.

Charlie Justice, Nancy Merki Lees Get Teague Awards at High Point

HIGH POINT, Feb. 28—Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice, brilliant All-American halfback of the University of North Carolina's great Sugar Bowl eleven, and Nancy Merki Lees, Olympic swimming champion, were awarded the Teague memorial trophies here tonight at a banquet given by the Mercury Athletic club in conjunction with the Carolinas' association of the AAU.

The trophies are presented each year by the Carolinas' association of the AAU to the outstanding male and female amateur athletes in the Carolinas, honoring the late Lewis E. Teague, who was for many years an active officer in the National Amateur Athletic union and the Carolinas' union.

The recipients were chosen by a sportswriters' tribunal from the two Carolinas.

The presentation of the awards to the two athletes, who both hail from Asheville, N. C., was made by Frank Spencer, Sports editor of the Winston-Salem Journal.

Justice is the second UNC athlete to receive the award. Paul Severin, another Tar Heel football great, was awarded the trophy in 1940. Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, outstanding woman golfer of Chapel Hill, has been named recipient three times in the past eight years.

Tar Heels Seek to Continue Seven-Year Tank Domination

It will be Carolina against the Southern conference this weekend when the Tar Heels play host to mermen from about the loop in the 16th annual conference championships.

The weekend will be a full one, too, with both afternoon and evening sessions being scheduled for the three-day affair. Tickets will be available at the door for each of the six sessions and will retail at 50 cents apiece. As the events are run by the Southern conference, passbooks will not be honored.

Five schools have already entered and there is a chance that entries will also be forthcoming from the five other institutions in the conference which sport swimming teams.

While there is little chance that Carolina will be dethroned from the position of champion it has held for the past seven years, it is doubtful that the Tar Heels will be able to equal their record-breaking total of 101 points.

Carolina captured eight of the first places last year and all but one of the individual champions are back again. Few, however, will be entered in the same event in which they triumphed in '48.

In fact the 50-yard freestyle is the only event which will see a titleholder trying to repeat. Floyd Dre wset a new record of 0:23.2 in winning the 50 last year.

The other champions will generally be favored to win title in new events.

Jim Thomas, who won the backstroke title last year is now competeing in the distances while Captain Dick Twining, who holds both distance titles has been switched to the sprints and may also swim the breaststroke, which Bob Ousley, now coaching the freshmen, won.

The makeup of the relay teams will be changed with Norm Sper, Twining, and Steve Osborne doing the medley in place of Thomas, Ousley, and Jesse Greenbaum.

HE HAS BUILT A BRAND NEW CITY

The "telephone man" is mighty busy these days!

Since the war, among many other things, he has built or enlarged 2,800 buildings . . . scores of them large enough to fit into the skyline of a modern metropolis.

These buildings are more than brick, mortar and telephone equipment. They are jobs for thousands of men and women . . . more and better telephone service for millions of people . . . more business for the towns and cities in which they are located.

But most important of all, they are an indication of the Bell System's earnest efforts to keep up with the nation's ever growing needs for communications service.

Satchmo To Open Biggest Hangover

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 28—(UP)—Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong, considered by some critics to play second trumpet only to Gabriel, will open the nation's No. 1 hangover construction project Wednesday in the early, and probably chilly, dawn.

Wednesday is Mardi Gras, and Satchmo, who used to be a "po' boy from back of town," is king of the Zulus. This honor entitles him to wear a grass skirt and rabbit-skin vest, throw coconuts at his "subjects" and declare open house at any Negro saloon he passes.

Satchmo gets off to an earlier start than the white people's Rex, lord of Mardi Gras misrule, and his queen. Satchmo is supposed to arrive in his royal barge on the New Basin canal at 8 o'clock in the morning. Rex won't get started until 11 o'clock.

At least 500,000 people will see Satchmo, the so far unidentified Rex, and Comus parade tomorrow. Most of the spectators will be wearing costumes and masks and the police will restrict their frolicking to bounds just this side of bodily assault and, mayhem.

The weather tomorrow is expected to be fair with a high temperature of 60 to 64 degrees. This probably will cause the costumes to run heavily to a red flannels motif and greatly increase the alcoholic consumption potential of the celebrants.

But cold or not, it will be hard to get within 50 feet of the Zulu or Rex parades. Satchmo, a very black man with a voice like a bullfrog with laryngitis, announced that he was "going to blow my head off with that trumpet."

Since he charges a minimum of $5,000 for one appearance of a six-piece hot music combination he leads, he was expected to attract thousands of extra spectators to the Zulu parade.

Although Satchmo will start his parade at 8 o'clock, it may be night before he reaches the Gertrude Geddes Willis Funeral home, where Queen Zulu awaits. The queen this year is Bernice Oxley, a brown-skinned ticket taker at the Ace theatre.

The Zulus never know where they are going. When the king leaves his royal barge, a coal barge the rest of the year, for his throne on a float, he takes off in any direction his fancy dictates.

DEPORTED FROM SOVIET RUSSIA on charges of being an alleged spy, Dr. Anna Louise Strong, veteran pro-Soviet writer is served with a summons by a Federal agent following her arrival at New York's LaGuardia field from Gander, Newfoundland. $69 may be the difference between a boy or girl trying to get to school."

"There will be thousands of boys and girls in North Carolina who will look that $69 in the face and be discouraged, and I want to go on record as opposing it."

O. Max Gardner, Jr., board member and University law student was an active fighter against the raise. "Before the 30 per cent of the freshman class can fail," he remarked, "they have to get into the University to do so. I am opposed to the increase and will continue to be. The students at the University are concerned, not because they themselves may be affected by the measure, but because they are concerned for the State."

"Students are going to be denied higher education if the tuition is raised," he said, "The time has come to call a halt to higher education."

Gardner introduced an amendment to limit the tuition raise to two years duration, this measure was defeated, however, by a 47 to 18 vote. Gardner later introduced a resolution to reduce the interest on student loans from 5 per cent to 3 per cent. This resolution, the only one which was to the advantage to University students, was passed.

N. C. Legislature Is Criticized

STATESVILLE, Feb. 28—(UP)—A former Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol criticized North Carolina's lawmakers sharply today for their whole handling of the Motor Vehicle Inspection law and said it was "typical of the general ignorance" of safety programs.

Rear Adm. P. W. Foote, retired naval officer and one-time Pennsylvania Patrol commissioner, said neither the legislature which passed the law nor the one which repealed it actually understood the safety program.

The previous legislature greatly overrated the importance of the inspection as affecting deaths on the highway and the present one greatly underrated it," he said.

"The action in each legislature was the result of ignorance of the basic cause of automobile accidents and the part which defective motor vehicles play in accidents," he added.

DTH Staff Favors Buchan For Editor

THE GIANT NAVY FLYING BOAT, Carolina Mars, set a passenger-load record for airplanes and then broke it. Here, the four-engined craft is shown after it arrived at the Alameda, Calif., Air Base from San Diego with 222 persons aboard—218 transferred Navy men and four crewmen. This was less than three hours after it had landed in San Diego from Alameda with 207 aboard. The previous high was 169 persons, carried by a twelve-engined German Dornier plane in 1929 in a flight from Switzerland.

Choice Named Unanimously At Meeting

Candidate Served As Associate Ed

Bill Buchan, former Daily Tar Heel associate editor and summer managing editor, was nominated by acclamation yesterday by the Daily Tar Heel staff for the editorship of the newspaper during the coming year.

Buchan's nomination by the staff followed an announcement by Chuck Hauser, managing editor and triply-endorsed candidate for the post, that he would not be able to run because of his academic standing.

Hauser's withdrawal from the race will necessitate new nominations from the three campus political parties.

A native of Pinebluff, but now of North Wilkesboro, Buchan joined the newspaper staff in the summer of 1947 when he entered the University as a freshman. He served as an editorial assistant for a year under Editor Barron Mills and as an associate editor under Ed Joyner, current editor, last spring.

In the fall, he moved to the news staff where he covered student government, features and special news stories. He has served as acting editor and managing editor during the absences of Joyner and Hauser from the campus during the year. He has also written a semi-weekly column, "This and That," on the editorial page for the past 15 months.

Before coming to the University, Buchan served overseas in Europe with the Army for 18 months. He was discharged from the Army in Germany and remained in Bremerhaven as a War Department civilian for a year where he served as assistant public relations officer for the Bremen Enclave and as editor of the eight-page weekly, the 17th Reporter.

He attended high school in Aberdeen and at Mt. Berry, Ga., where he was editor of the school paper. While at the University he has been a member of the Di senate and the Town Men's association.

Chuck Hauser Leaves DTH Editorship Race

Chuck Hauser, triply-endorsed candidate for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, announced yesterday that he would be unable to take the post in spring elections.

Hauser, the second candidate for editor in as many years to be endorsed by the Student, University and Campus parties, said his academic status would not permit him to run for the position. As yet, no independent candidates have announced their intentions of running against him.

At a Daily Tar Heel staff meeting yesterday afternoon, Bill Buchan was nominated as the staff candidate for editor. He is the first person to officially enter the race since Hauser dropped out.

Political circles buzzed with other possibilities for the job, however. Among the names suggested were present sports editor Billy Carmichael, III, former staff member John Stump, present associate editor Al Lowenstein and numerous dark horses.

Hauser said yesterday he was "extremely sorry" he had to withdraw from the race "after so many people have demonstrated their faith in me. To them, I want to express my deepest appreciation."

The former candidate has served as Daily Tar Heel managing editor for the past year. Before that he was news editor, campus editor, and worked as a reporter for his first year on the staff. He has also been treasurer of the Publications board for the past year. His outside experience includes work as a staff writer for the United Press.

Woodhull Named Managing Editor

Ed Joyner, Daily Tar Heel editor, yesterday appointed Sally Woodhull, present DTH news editor, as managing editor, subject to approval by Publications board.

A senior journalism major from Bethlehem, Pa., Sally has served as news editor this year, and worked as reporter for the DTH and as advertising layout manager for the Carolina Magazine last year. She is president of Chi Delta Phi and of Valkyries, secretary of the YWCA, and a member of Pi Beta Phi.

Balfour to Take Orders for Rings

Lee H. Blackwell, eastern Carolina representative for the L. B. Balfour company, will make his quarterly visit to the University tomorrow to take orders for junior and senior class rings.

Blackwell will be in the YMCA from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4:30. He said that only orders taken this week will definitely be delivered before graduation.

DR. R. M. MacIVER

Democratic Ideas Backed By MacIver

Declaring that there is no economic or political democracy, but only one kind—a way of governing and being governed—Dr. Robert M. MacIver, Lieber professor of political philosophy and sociology in Columbia university, told a Hill hall audience last night that "democracy, in a word, liberates human nature. All other forms of government inevitably distort humanity."

Dr. MacIver, who delivered the first of the annual series of three Weil lectures on American Citizenship here, said "when democracy fails, it is not because its principle is faulty, but only because men are too short-sighted or interest-blinded to understand what it means."

When democracy fails it is not the common man alone who suffers most, he said, "but the true elite among men—the thinkers, the artists, men of deep faith and generous hearts and a free spirit—in short, the creators of all that has enriched and ennobled mankind."

Dr. MacIver was introduced by Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University. Chancellor Robert House presided.

Giving three lectures on successive nights, Dr. MacIver's general topic is "Perils to American Heritage of Democracy." Last night he spoke on "perils due to our misunderstanding and lack of appreciation of what democracy means." Delivering his second speech tonight he will speak on "The Violence of Change" and tomorrow he will speak on "The Danger from Without."

Candidate Is Charlie Long's Running Mate

Is Now Serving As CP Chairman

Banks Talley, rising senior and chairman of the Campus party, will seek the office of vice-president of the student body in the spring elections, CP officials announced yesterday.

Talley will be the running mate of Charlie Long whose nomination for the presidency of the student body on the CP ticket was announced two weeks ago.

Elected chairman of the CP at the beginning of the winter quarter, Talley is currently CP floor leader in the Student legislature. He is a member of the legislature Ways and Means committee and a member of President Jess Dedmond's Coalition cabinet.

Hailing from Bennettsville, S. C., Talley was the first secretary of the Carolina forum and has been a member of the tri-partisan board which selects candidates for the Men's Honor council. He is also president pro tempore of the Dialectic senate and chairman of the Di Ways and Means committee.

Upon accepting the CP nomination, Talley said:

"If elected I will consider it my duty to make the Student legislature operate smoothly and to assure the passage of the Campus party's campaign platform.

"The legislature is infamous for the careless and indifferent attitude of its members. I shall demand that committee chairmen perform their duties and I will strive to secure the active participation of all 50 legislators. A few members of the legislature have done all the work in the past while the majority sit back idly and refuse to give their voters the representation they are entitled to expect."

The CP's nomination of Talley completes nominations of the three campus political parties for the two top student body offices.

Ballots in the April general election will carry the names of Long and Talley on the CP ticket, Dick Gordon and Ten Leonard on the University party ticket and Bill Mackie and Harry Horton on the Student party ticket.

Don Shropshire, former chairman of the Student council, yesterday released a statement endorsing Talley. Shropshire said, "Talley knows student government, its merits, and most important of all, its shortcomings. If he were serving as vice-president of the student body, the campus could rest on the assurance that it had a man in office who would refuse to be blindly led, and a man who could firmly 'tan the seat' of disgusting incompetance."

Committee Kills Liquor Measure By 28-4 Ballot

RALEIGH, March 1—(UP)—The main bill for a statewide liquor referendum was killed today by the House Propositions and Grievances committee.

By a 28 to 4 vote, the committee quickly and quietly voted an unfavorable report on the liquor bill introduced by Rep. L. A. Martin of Davidson county and backed by Gov. Kerr Scott. The measure would have called a statewide vote next Nov. 1 on the question of outlawing liquor in the state entirely, or retaining the present ABC system.

Tuition Raise Opposed By Durham Republicans

DURHAM, March 1—The Durham County Republican club announced today that letters have been sent to Durham county legislators protesting the tuition increase for the Greater University of North Carolina which was passed yesterday by the Board of Trustees in Raleigh.

The letters were signed by Carl D. Delamar, acting president of the club, and stated that the "increase in tuition in our state-supported schools has considerably disturbed many of our people who are deeply concerned with the possibility that a number of our young men and women will not, for financial reasons be able to attend an institution of higher learning.

"The state-supported schools have always been in the logical choices of students from low-income families and of a large number of 'self-help' students," the club declared. "A dollar more or less is of the greatest importance to these students and their families. High costs of food, clothing, textbooks and other items could well make an increase in tuition the straw that breaks the camel's back.

"Some of our most astute professional people are the products of the state schools. Our need for certain of these categories is not and cannot be filled. A tuition increase may well provide an effective block to prevent the materialization of brilliant engineers, chemists, architects, textile experts, agriculturists, artists, government experts, pharmacists and others of equal importance.

"So many of these specialists come from humble homes of small means that the state of North Carolina would, in effect be discarding some of its most valuable raw materials because it is usually true that those with limited means strive the harder for success."

Students in Alaska Will Be 'Working on the Railroad'

By Tookie Hodgson

"I've Been Working on the Railroad" will be the song most likely to replace "Hark the Sound of Tar Heel Voices" on the lips of a large number of Carolina students who will entrain next month for railroad construction jobs in Alaska and the Canadian Northwest.

The students-attracted by high wages-will be "hired as unskilled laborers" by the Alaskan Railway co., a government-subsidized firm which is currently pushing railroad construction into "America's Last Frontier."

The Chapel Hill students, who will work as section hands and storekeepers, are due to receive about $300 a month and keep, if conditions this year remain the same as last.

Living accommodations, according to Dick Fleming of Greenville senior who made the Northern jaunt last year "are not exactly what you'd have in your own home."

"The food is plentiful," Fleming said, "but a little monotonous. I ate my share, though. Concerning the sleeping accomodations, I don't remember too much about them. When I came in at night, I was too tired to notice what I was sleeping on."

Unless you like to hunt or fish, recreation is practically nil. Anyone who brings along a rifle or shotgun, however, can have a lot of fun.

"The country is full of game. I saw deer, bear, elk, grouse, and partridge in large numbers. Sometimes, you had to work a ways back into the woods to get a decent shot at them, but often the game will come right up to the camp itself.

"Of course, Cal was with me all the time," said Fleming, referring to Cal Woodard, of Wilson, "but still, if I'd made the trip alone, I would have met a lot of other fellows from colleges all over the country, who'd gone up to work there for the summer, some of whom belonged to my fraternity."

The work consists mainly of

Proposal for Socialized Medicine Will Be Topic of Di at Meeting Tonight

The Dialectic senate will debate socialized medicine at a 9 o'clock meeting tonight, according to an announcement yesterday by Banks Talley, chairman of the Di ways and means committee.

The bill to be argued pro and con this evening was introduced by John Brockman at an earlier meeting. It would have the senate go on record as favoring voluntary health insurance, as exemplified by the Hospital Savings association in this state, in preference to socialized medicine.

If this bill passes, the Di will write a letter to the proper representatives of this state in the federal government, advising the defeat of any measure leading to socialized medicine.

The bill proposed includes several objections to socialized medicine as "whereas" clauses.

It criticises the socialization idea first on the grounds that it would eliminate parsonal interest of a physican in a patient.

Was McCorkle

The road to educational opportunity for all has been a long and rocky one, fraught with twists and turns and obstacles, and heading toward an almost unattainable goal. There are still many in the world who think it not a road that should be traveled, who hold that education is too precious, too dangerous to be entrusted to the "common herd." Once their position would have been deemed correct. Once only kings and noblemen had the right to education. More recently the right belonged only to those who could pay and pay hansomely for it.

But the youthful United States too young to know "what was good for it," daring to defy all the centuries of previous experience in human government to begin its revolutionary experiment in democracy—this country was not afraid to set out upon the road toward educational opportunity for all. In the years since 1776 the idea has grown and expanded, and the United States has profited by it. "This country belongs to and is governed by the people who live in it," we are now taught. "And in order to govern wisely the people need education." On October 12, 1793, Samuel E. McCorkle, addressing those who gathered upon the present site of Chapel Hill to observe the laying of the cornerstone of the University's first building, said, "Liberty and law call for general knowledge in the people and extensive knowledge in matters of the state, and these in turn demand public places of education." As late as University day, 1948, a pamphlet published by the University stated, "In a single sentence, McCorkle struck the keynote of the purpose and ideals of this institution."

Was McCorkle wrong? Was the idea of the middle ages right? Is education even now merely a commodity to be bought and sold to those who can pay a high price? Even today there are many who think so.

Last Monday the University Board of Trustees took a step backward along that road to education which the state of North Carolina has fought so long and hard to travel. The trustees raised tuition rates at the three branches of the University by approximately 85 percent. In so doing they closed the doors of the University to the youth of the state whose number can not be estimated.

The trustees took this backward step "with regret." "We look forward to the time when economic conditions will permit a return to the present tuition rates," they said. And they showed their sincerity by voting down an amendment which would limit the raise to a two-year period covering the "emergency."

The trustees have given their order, and now maybe those young squirts at Chapel Hill and at State and at Woman's college will put up more money and shut up complaining about things their elders know more about.

But it is not yet quite time to shut up.

Other people besides the students are beginning to get mad. Radio commentators announcing the trustee's decision Monday night were indignant. Yesterday letters and calls from people of the state were beginning to reach members of the legislature. At least one legislator was considering doing something about it.

The letters and calls are going to the right place. Action by the state legislature is the one and final hope of holding tuition down. The legislature has not yet voted upon the University's appropriations, and if the legislature votes to increase the appropriation so that tuition will not be raised, the trustees will have no choice but to reverse their decision.

Letters and telegrams and telephone calls are the right procedure to use—personal messages to legislators from students, parents, the taxpayers who are paying so that the University can function as the constitution of the state intended it to—with tuition "as nearly free as practicable."

Letters and telegrams and telephone calls are the most potent weapon. They are the only weapons students have left in a hard fight for what seems a hopeless cause. But unless students will fight for themselves no one else will fight for them. The chance is slim. Everybody but the students agrees that the tuition question is settled. But then "everybody" agreed Dewey was going to be president—everybody but Harry Truman.

Wrong Solon, Ditto Embassy

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Since his return from Spain, where he was entertained by Franco, Senator Chan Gurney, of South Dakota, has been saying many nice things about that country.

Aglow with appreciation, the Spanish embassy here decided to honor the solon with a high-class reception. A gold-braided aide was dispatched to Senator Gurney's apartment house at 2407 15th St. N. W., with the formal invitation.

The desk clerk, being no linguist misunderstoord the aide's heavy Spanish accent and thought he was asking for Senator Sheridan Downey, of California, who only recently moved from that building.

The aide was directed to Chevy Chase, where Downey now has a house. The emissary first issued the invitation orally, then handed over the embossed card, and with much bowing and "gracias" took his departure.

Senator Downey, who also had trouble with the aide's accent, thought the invitation was from the Mexican embassy. He was greatly pleased, thinking his years of advocating the good neighbor policy was at last paying off.

Beaming with satisfaction, the Californian informed his family of the high honor that was to be accorded him, explaining that it wouldn't do him any political harm either with the thousands of Mexican-born in his state.

His daughter read the invitation and looked puzzled. "Since when," she inquired, "has your name been Gurney?"

Downey retorted that his name had never been Gurney, so far as he could recall. "and," added his offspring, "it's from the Spanish embassy, not the Mexican!"

Senator Downey, out a free meal, sadly forwarded the invitation to his South Dakotan colleague.

While I am prepared to admit that everything is big in California, I am afraid this bigness may be stimulating inflated ideas. The above-mentioned Senator Downey has similar misgivings.

He has just received a letter from a lady constituent, who describes herself as a widow woman, stating that in order to maintain a home "as I want to" she must have $1,000 a month in social security payments.

The poor widow enclosed her household budget as proof of her contention. She stated she needed $200 a month for food; $150 for clothing; $270 to keep up payments on a house and furniture; $200 for operating expenses, including upkeep of an automobile, and $200 for "advancement."

She did not explain what she meant by "advancement"—and Senator Downey says he does not think he will attempt to find out.

The solon is also puzzled by her figures. He keeps adding them and they come out to $1,020 a month. He wonders how he'll be able to get her that extra $20.

Rep. John A. Carroll, of Colorado, has been receiving all sorts of unhelpful suggestions from colleagues in The House since the proposal that an emergency national capital be established near Denver in the event Washington is bombed in an atomic war.

Congressional wags, he says, have been suggesting that the House Un-American Activities committee could hold hearings in Red Rocks park; that the Senate could met in the cave of the winds, and the Democrats causus in the garden of the gods.

A Belle of St. Mary's Speaks

Nurse Jeckyl and Mrs. Hyde?

By a St. Mary's student as told to A. Frank Moore

I am a student at St. Mary's. To you at Carolina, I am what is generally known as an "import." Up until now, I had always been under the impression that this title was very complimentary. That was up until now. Now, I have before me a copy of Tookie Hodgson's little article entitled Sunday Blues, (which an anonymous coed at Carolina quite deliberately mailed to me), in which Mr. Hodgson carefully advises all the Carolina gentlemen on how to rid themselves of their imports on Sunday morning. In a very clever style, easily comparable to that of a longstanding writer for the New Masses, Mr. Hodgson proceeds to tell how every import portrays the role of Nurse Jeckyl on Saturday night and immediately upon waking on Sunday morning, turns into Mrs. Hyde.

To say that I am shocked after reading this little bit of journalism would be putting it mildly. Rather, I am moved, deeply and profoundly moved.

First, I must ask this question: Why would Mr. H., of all people, have the audacity to write such a thing? I am certain that Mr. Hodgson will never have to worry about getting rid of an import. His main trouble would probably lie in getting an import to date him in the first place. I have it straight from a friend of mine who once double-dated with him, that Tookie Hodgson has about as much sex appeal as Oscar Wilde's mother (and anyone knows that Oscar Wilde's mother never had any sex appeal). Second, I simply do not believe that any of the girls who go to Chapel Hill for the weekend are confronted with the problem of their dates trying to shove them on the earliest greyhound leaving Chapel Hill. However, in the event that some of my fellow imports do have to put up with this, I have hereby set up the proper procedure with which to counter-attack in the hope that a few of them might read this Hearstwhile newspaper:

If he is an advocate of the typical American beauty, smear on all the Max Factor you have left, making sure to cover any signs of risque living, and look very glamorous; on the other hand, if he is athletic and prefers the Ingrid Bergman, outdoor female, then wear a scandinavian jumper and no makeup, with only enough mascara to hide the bags under your eyes, being sure to tell him how pert and fresh you feel to impress him with your agility.

(2) If he suggests a drink, go ahead and drink with him, but make certain that he gets looped quick and passes out, thus giving you ample time to kibitz and guffah with some of his fraternity brothers whom he wouldn't introduce you to the night before.

(3) If he blows cigar smoke in your face as Mr. Hodgson suggested, then inhale it with sighs of ecstacy and tell him how your uncle always blew smoke in your face when you were a child and how you grew to love it. Then light a Pall Mall and return the compliment.

(4) Don't ever go to the Little Girl's room, not even if he serves you raw oysters. In fact, don't leave his presence under any conditions.

(5) Be cautious if he fills his cigarette lighter.

(6) Tell him you'd love to meet his wife and baby.

(7) Inform your date that you play baseball passionately.

(8) Suggest a cup of hot Vienese coffee.

(9) Buy a bag of yams or kumquats; most Carolina gentlemen enjoy munching on either.

(10) Tell him that you're a Botany major. This is inevitably followed by a walk in the arboretum, which is inevitably followed by an invitation to return to Chapel Hill for the next dance.

(11) Casually mention that your father's name is listed in Dunn & Bradstreet.

(12) Super Duper Special—hit him rather playfully over the head with your suitcase and roll him; if you get his frat pin, he's sure to ask you back again.

(13) For special cases: If you are dating J. R. Cherry, Jr., I suggest you discuss the Hardy boys; if you're dating Hans Freistadt, whip out a copy of The Daily Worker; if you're dating Tookie Hodgson, I suggest you have your head examined.

Interest in Chamber Music

Praise for Coolidge Concert

By "Wink" Locklair

February, a month which saw weekly chamber music programs sponsored by Graham Memorial, and appearances by the Vielle Trio and pianist Robert Wallenborn under the auspices of the University music department, came to a close Tuesday with high calibre performances of Beethoven, Stravinsky and Brahms, given by the noted English pianist, Kathleen Long, and the well-known Spanish violinist, Antonio Brosa, in Hill Hall.

The concert was arranged in cooperation with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation of the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C..

The program opened with the "Kreutzer" sonata of Beethoven, a work which the composer wrote for the Negro violinist, George Bridgetown, a professor of music at the Paris Conservatoire; thus the composition's sub-title. The theme and variation in F minor in the second movement are a challenge to all musicians although they are treated in purely classical style. Miss Long and Mr. Brosa played them with much skill, and brought the sonata to its conclusion with a sparkling interpretation of the presto movement.

Next came the Duo Concertante, which Igor Stravinsky wrote in 1932, just two years after his powerful "Symphony of Psalms," for chorus and orchestra. This piece for violin and piano attempts to be a musical counterpart—a kind of anthology—of classical pastoral poetry. Tuesday evening's audience greeted the five-part work with more than average enthusiasm.

The highlight of the recital was a reading of the Brahms D minor sonata, after intermission. And not enough praise can be given to Miss Long for her magnificent playing throughout this melodic and moving masterpiece. The "adagio" contains one of Brahms' loveliest melodies. The finale, "presto agitato," also shows the composer in great form, and it also proves that Miss Long is an artist in the Dame Myra Hess tradition.

The audience demanded an encore at the conclusion of the program, and the two artists performed the final movement from Gabriel Faure's sonata in A major.

The reception all of these small essemble programs have received during the past month is ample proof that there are a number of students and townspeople who are connoisseurs of chamber music. One suggestion might be offered, however, which would greatly increase the appreciation and enjoyment of such programs. If the Playmakers theatre—a house of excellent size and acoustics for such recitals—could be had, and there is reason to believe that it could, the musicians would get a better hearing and the size of audience would increase also.

Write Away

Parallels Communist Line

Editor:

Readers of Thursday's Daily Tar Heel will have been alert to note the parallel between the Communist party line on Cardinal Mindzsenty and the content of Mr. Robertson's letter.

The present line on Cardinal Mindzsenty, coincidentally echoed by Mr. Robertson, is to smear him, vocally and in print, chiefly with charges of Nazi collaboration and anti-Semitism.

In contrast with Mr. Robertson's implications is the clear testimony of Bela Fabian, a Jewish gentleman of distinguished record in Hungarian public life and a four-time veteran of Hitler's concentration camps. His testimony is primary and based on fact; his summation: "The truth is that few men in the world today have as striking an anti-Nazi record as Cardinal Mindzsenty." (America, February 26, 1949).

That record is consistent, lasting from 1935, when Father Mindzsenty was parish priest of Zalaegerzeg, and reached a climax on November 27, 1944, when he was jailed by the Nazis on charges now odiously duplicated. His opposition to persecution of the Jews was equally courageous, high-lighted by bold public utterance, (e. g. his forthright challenge of Nazi persecutions in 1944) and personal action, such as his public visitation of imprisoned Jews at Zalaegerzeg and his concealment of twenty-five hunted Jews in his episcopal palace at Vezprem.

These are facts. Even the Communists on accession to power were forced to recognize Mindzsenty's extraordinary anti-Nazi record. Among those who did so publicly acknowledge it were Rakosi, Rajk, Kossa, and Revai. But ambitions for a cominform religion have determined a different verdict.

Here we have Mr. Robertson obliged to disagree with a Jewish victim of totalitarianism and to concur with Vilmos Olthi (president of the "People's Court") and Martin Bodonyi (state prosecutor), two "Aryans," former Nazis, and members of the Arrow Cross. Odd, isn't it? Or is it?

ODIUM TO WOMAN

(Inspired by campus coeds)

Love entity thwarts ambition,
Woman detracts man from his goal,
She turns mild lust to madness
And divides him—body and soul,
For man must know as God so knows that woman is for him a necessary treason, wounding him with perplexity of feeling,
giving him posterity at the price of his reason.
And man must know that in so brief a span the secrets of a life, that cannot go beyond the dead.
are not reckoned in terms of beauteous woman and the forces that she wills upon his head.
For woman, aside from man, can conceive no God, her motives, her very purpose, overlooks the greater plan.
and when at war with life and conscious, man uplifts his erring head to some God of abstract Justice,
. can woman understand?
She does not seek some obscure pattern that might reveal the secret of it all.
her complete destiny is within her grasp.
MAN she seeks to forego and forestall.
By the forces that dwell within her she fights to keep man's fate in place, that he may not break the leash
by which she lets him make his petty pace!

Gala Mural Sports Carnival Slated In Gym Tonight

Action Set to Begin at 7:15; Big Crowd Expected for Show

By Lew Chapman

Once again the Intramural department has put all its eggs in one basket and has come up with a star-spangled show that promises to be a roaring success. The annual Sports Carnival, slated for tonight, promises to provide entertainment for over three solid hours, and all students are invited to come down to Woollen gym this evening and enjoy themselves.

First on tap to start the proceedings will be a foul-shooting contest that will be held at 7:15 in the gym. This contest will be open to everyone eligible for intramural competition and a trophy will be given to the student who compiles the best percentage of fouls made out of 50 shots.

All table tennis enthusiasts will find the scheduled ping pong to their liking. This competition is slated to begin at 7:30 in the main gym while at the same time a bait-casting tournament will begin at the indoor pool.

Badminton Finals

Also at 7:30 the finals of the University badminton championships will be held with the feature match between Clark Taylor and Ed Cloyd for the men's singles title.

Third in the listed schedule of events is the challenge volleyball match between Phi Gam fraternity, the campus winners, and a powerful squad composed of the Pharmacy school faculty. This clash is slated for 7:40, the same time that a water ballet will be presented to the public in the indoor pool.

The concentrated action commences at 8:00 when the campus boxers hold the stage. Eight promising bouts are scheduled between the winners of the fraternity and dormitory divisions and the leather will fly fast and furious as the boys will give their all for the coveted all-campus championship.

Cage Playoffs

There will be no relief for the spectators at 9:00 when Beta fraternity five and the Unknowns, the dorm division representatives, will engage each other in battle for the campus cage crown. Both squads have come through a trying season still undefeated and are well-rested for the supreme effort tonight. Ken Powell will lead the Betas while tall Jim Landis is expected to pace the Unknowns.

Same Old Story

CINCINNATI, O., March 1.—(UP)—Jake Mintz, manager of heavy-weight contender Ezzard Charles, said today that no contract has been signed for Charles to fight Jersey Joe Walcott in Chicago this summer for a subsequent shot at the title.

Charles, one of the ranking contenders for the title, said: "I can only wish Joe Louis all the success he deserves in his new venture. As for my future fights, everything is up to Jake Mintz."

Carolina Clowns Set to Entertain Injured Veterans

Carolina's colorful clowns will be putting a three-year 43-game win streak on the line when they take on the McGuire hospital Chairoteers in Woollen gym tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The game, played in wheelchairs, promises to be one of the toughest the Clowns have ever faced. Coach Dave Reinkiger's wheelchair cagers also have an impressive win streak, with 23 straight victories to their credit. The Chairoteers bowled over the varsity squads of Duke and Wake Forest earlier in the season.

All proceeds from the tilt will go into a fund to be used for lights for the Chapel Hill high school athletic field. Admission is $1.00 per person, and tickets can be obtained at the Scuttlebutt, the Circus room of the Monogram club, the cashier's booth in the book exchange, and the information office at Graham Memorial.

Cagers Prep For Loop Tilt With Terrapins

Coach Tom Scott herded his Tar Heel cagers back into Woollen gym yesterday afternoon for a routine drill after Monday's lay-off. Most of the day was spent in polishing the Carolina offensive attack, although considerable time was spent on the defensive phase of battle.

The Carolinians have drawn Maryland's Terrapins as opening-round opponents, and will meet the Flucie Stewart charges at 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon in the first round of the annual Southern conference basketball tournament.

Carolina trounced the Terps twice during the regular season, 55-47 and 66-52, and are odds-on favorites to cop Thursday's opening-day bout.

Coach Tom Scott has been well-pleased with the showing of his team this season, and will be out to pull one more trick out of the bag before the final curtain is rung down on the current season.

The entire Carolina team has shown up exceptionally well in recent outings, and should be in at a peak for the weekend battling.

Huge Kappler, recovering from an ankle injury, turned in a 15-point scoring job against Duke in the season's finale, and seems to be rounding into top shape again.

John Tsantes proved himself a capable reserve when he stepped into Kappler's shoes during the latter's brief absence, and will be counted on heavily in the tourney struggling.

COEDS VS. MEREDITH

The University coed basketball team will play Meredith college this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Woman's gym. The Meredith girls won out over all attending the last meeting of State coed team at WCUNC, Greensboro.

Meredith is mythical State champion.

Louis Leaves Ring for Good; Charles, Walcott to Tangle

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 1—(UP)—Heavyweight king Joe Louis today vacated his title and announced the promotion of a heavyweight championship fight between Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott.

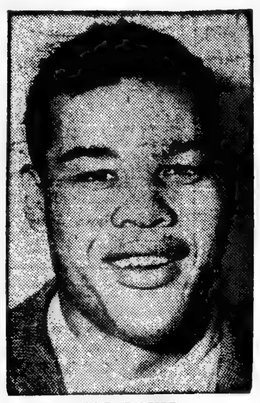
Abe Green, National Boxing association commissioner who released letters from Louis announcing the retirement and the promotional venture said officials of the NBA had conferred and approved the Louis plan for a fight between Walcott and Charles.

The Walcott-Charles fight will be held in June under the promotion of a new organization formed by Louis, Arthur M. Wirtz and James D. Norris to be known as the International Boxing club.

Both Walcott and Charles have signed agreements for the fight by which the winner and new champion will fight either Gus Lesnevich or Lee Savold within 90 days, Louis' letter said.

NBA to "Go Along"

Green, who called a press conference at his hotel here to announce the Louis retirement and title fight plan, said the NBA would "go along with this plan" provided the title contest arrangements can "procede in an orderly fashion."



"There has been no attempt to create a champion by any dictum," Green said. "The championship will be won in the ring."

He said the NBA always has been opposed to "title freezes" and that the Louis plan would "avoid chaos which would result from a mad and disorganized scramble."

Off to Nassau

Louis' letter announcing his retirement was dated Feb. 28. The ex-champion leaves Miami today for Nassau in the Bahamas for an exhibition match. His retirement note to Green said:

"I am certain you know how sorry I must be to let the championship go this way. I have held it for a long time and I won it in the ring. I expected to lose it the same way I won it. However, things have developed so that I think I ought to stick to the retirement announcement that I made some time ago."

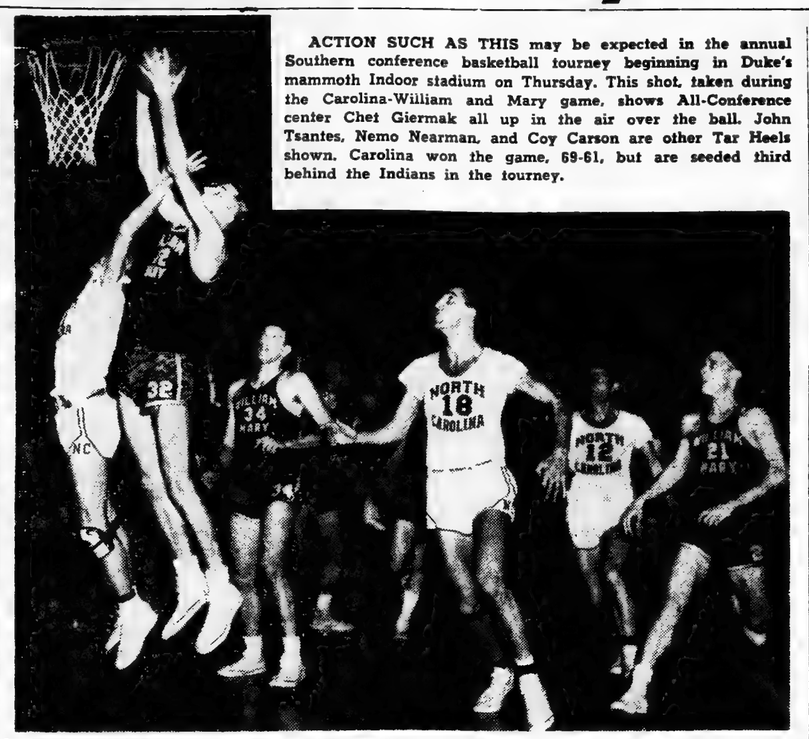
BRADENTON, Fla., March 1—(UP)—Boston Braves Manager Billy Southworth planned to send 32 of his National league champions, including 18 pictures, through their first light practice sessions for the 1949 season today.



All the Braves except the five still unsigned—Warren Spahn, Clyde Shoun, Phil Masi, Eddie Stankey, and Jeff Heath, plus infielder Connie Ryan, who has permission to arrive tomorrow—will take part in today's morning and afternoon drills.

TUSCON, Ariz., March 1—(UP)—The World Champion Cleveland Indians were scheduled to begin training today with two of their key players, pitcher Bob Lemon and second baseman Joe Gordon, still unsigned.

Gordon, who was believed to be asking for $35,000, was to talk with Indian president Bill Veeck today. Lemon is still at his Long Beach, Cal. home.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 1—(UP)—The Philadelphia Phillies will begin training today with pitcher Robin Roberts, one of their most stubborn holdouts, wearing a satisfied smile.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 1—(UP)—Three players were unaccounted for as Casey Stengel officially took over the helm of the New York Yankees today for the start of spring training.

ACTION SUCH AS THIS may be expected in the annual Southern conference basketball tourney beginning in Duke's mammoth Indoor stadium on Thursday. This shot, taken during the Carolina-William and Mary game, shows All-Conference center Chet Giermak all up in the air over the ball. John Tsantes, Nemo Nearman, and Coy Carson are other Tar Heels shown. Carolina won the game, 69-61, but are seeded third behind the Indians in the tourney.

Three-Day Conference Swim Meet Nears

Swimmers from five schools, Duke, N. C. State, VPI, VMI, and Carolina will invade Bowman Gray pool on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week for the annual Southern conference swimming championships.

Other than these entries officials believe that several mermen from the other five schools in the conference will register for participation in the meet before the opening event gets underway Thursday night.

The Tar Heel tankmen have scored decisive victories over Duke, VPI, and VMI in dual meets this season and are considered a good bet to dominate most events and capture several of the trophies which will be awarded. Carolina with its wealth of reserves will prove fairly strong in the distance, backstroke, and sprint races.

The 1500-meter freestyle will be run off Thursday night and preliminaries in 13 other events will take place Friday and Saturday mornings. The finals in these races are slated for the same evenings when an admission price of 50 cents will be charged.

Interdormitory Complaint Posts Filled

Ralph Morris and Victor Bowles yesterday were appointed by Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council, to work with J. S. Bennett, director of operations. Morris and Bowles form a committee of the council to handle all complaints that come under Bennett's jurisdiction, Gerns said.

Morris, president of Ruffin dormitory, and Bowles, advisor of Alexander dorm, constitute a go-between between the council and Bennett to provide a basis for more efficient handling of dormitory problems, Gerns said. The new system will help cut red tape by giving Bennett two men close to dormitory life to meet with problems that arise.

Students who have suggestions regarding dormitory operations and their improvement are asked to see Morris, 313 Ruffin, or Bowles, 313 Alexander.

The Interdormitory council at Monday night's meeting approved an amendment to the council constitution which proposed that a student who commits an offense in a dormitory other than his own would come immediately under the jurisdiction of the Interdormitory council.

Another amendment approved by the council stated that five members would constitute a quorum in the judiciary committee.

Yuval Elizer, Student From Israeli, Will Address IZFA This Afternoon

Yuval Elizer, Israeli student, will address members of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America at 4:30 this afternoon in Hillel lounge on "The Cooperative Farming Community in Israel."

In his birthplace of Jerusalem, Yuval edited the monthly magazine of the Tsofim movement by which group he was named the liaison officer for the Young Judea in America. During his first summer here he worked with various Zionist groups and was appointed by the youth department of the Jewish Agency to do Zionist work through the IZFA.

Speaking of the IZFA, Elizer said that the organization "will serve as the human link between American Zionism and Israel."

Elizer, who was educated at the Gymnasia Ivrit in Israel, is now enrolled at the University of Missouri where he is prominent in the IZFA. He is carrying on his work in this country by virtue of his association with the youth of his native country.

YUVAL ELIZER

His participation in the Tsofim movement gave him an insight into the thinking of Israeli youth who participated widely in the rebuilding of the land.

Cold N.O. Starts Biggest Blowout

NEW ORLEANS, March 1—(UP)—Half a million masked merrymakers, fortified against the chill pre-dawn with red flannels and plenty of alcoholic antifreeze, packed New Orleans streets today to top off the biggest, loudest, costliest blowout in the world.

Tomorrow there will be hangovers, but today there's Mardi Gras.

French Quarter night clubs, always eager to help a tourist celebrate (and spend a buck), didn't close at daybreak today, as they usually do. They were doing full blast and will continue all day, with the strippers doing their bumps and grods in shifts.

Kerr To Run For Tarnation Editor

Budget For Year Is Main Problem Of Solon Session

A proposed $103,142 student government budget will be introduced to the Student legislature tonight for the fiscal year, July 1 through June 31, 1950.

Based upon an anticipated enrollment of 7,200 students, the budget lists an income of $87,000 from 5,800 undergraduates and $16,170 from 1,400 graduate students.

Anticipated income as proposed will fall $2,830 below that of 1948-49 when student fees rose to $105,000 with an unappropriated balance of $1,384 as compared with a $28 balance this year.

Campus publications topped the list of 13 estimated expenses in the proposed budget with $63,902 while Graham Memorial would get $21,600. Next largest item is the Student Entertainment committee with $7,300.

Other proposed expenses include: debate council, $3,750; class organizations, $2,400; Student legislature, $995; executive branch student government, $925; coed senate, $890; debate council, $640; judicial branch student government, $320; University club, $250; Men's Interdormitory Council, $85; and Carolina forum, $85.

Estimate expenditures for the Yackety Yack was the largest item in the publication budget with $45,247. The Daily Tar Heel would get, under the proposed budget, $42,680 and the Tarnation $8,655.

An act to supplement the by-laws of the student legislature pertaining to committeemen duties is also scheduled to be presented to the legislature tonight along with six other bills. They will include an amendment to the student constitution to provide for the filling of vacated student government offices and another to amend the redistricting bill which states that all resignation from the legislature occurring 14 days or more prior to a general campus election shall be filled in the general campus election.

Second Talk Is Delivered By MacIver

Professor Cites Society's Perils

Citing "violent social changes and the breakdown of the individual's sense of attachment to society" as the two perils of democratic civilization, Dr. Robert M. MacIver last night told a Hill hall audience that to meet these dangers, "democracy must become self-conscious of its own worth."

Dr. MacIver, Lieber professor of political philosophy at Columbia university, delivered the second in the series of three Weil lectures on American citizenship.

He was presented by Dr. C. B. Robson, head of the political science department, who presided. The third and final address will be given tonight at 8:30.

His general subject for the series is "Perils to American Heritage of Democray." Last night lecture was concerned mainly with "the violence of change."

"The diseases of group anarchy and of personal loss of responsibility are peculiariy incident to modern democracies," MacIver said.

"Democracy places responsibility in the individual and in the group. But it must on that account assure its citizens and conditions in which they can exercise their freedom. It must guard them from haunting economic insecurity or their civic freedom becomes a mockery."

Tuition Action

RALEIGH March 2—Representative John W. Umstead of Orange County said tonight legislative action which may affect proposed $69 tuition increase at the Greater University of North Carolina may be forth coming within the next six or eight days.

Umstead repeated his statement that students can help kill the raise by writing and wiring their legislators immediately, especially members of the appropriations committee.

The board of trustees approved the $69 across-the-board increase at a meeting here Monday.

School Funds Asked in Bill By D.L. Ward

Liquor Measure Is Disapproved

RALEIGH, March 2—(UP)—North Carolina lawmakers today disapproved the last liquor bill before them and received a bill to spend $50,000,000 for state aid to school construction.

The Senate committee vote on liquor seemed to sweep the liquor issue aside and clear the way for a major fight on education.

However, the House received a bill to raise the tax on liquor and wine.

Sen. D. L. Ward of New Bern tossed in a bill to appropriate $50,000,000 to set up a special fund for construction, improvement and repair of school facilities.

Ward titled the measure "an act to settle a long-standing debt owed by the state to the counties."

Ward said the $50,000,000 could come from:

1. All money in the Literary fund next July 1.

2. All general fund surpluses next July 1, which when added to the Literary fund do not exceed $50,000,000.

3. Issuance of bonds of the state which may now be issued without a vote of the people, if necessary to bring the fund to $50,000,000.

4. Offiuance of other necessary bonds to make up the difference, is approved by an election this year.

In lieu of bonds, Ward said, the Governor and council of state could apply $30,000,000 from any general fund revenues which were not in a sinking fund next July 1.

Under the bill, each county would get up to $500,000 for school building and repair, under direction of the state Board of Education. If the board decided the did not need that much, the excess would go back to the general fund.

Kamphoefner, dean of the School of Design at North Carolina State college; "The College Theater—Why?" by Walter Pritchard Eaton, noted critic, playwright and teacher; "Some Notes on Wolfe's Reputation Abroad" by Richard Walser, author of "North Carolina in the Short Story."

"The Existentialism of Jean-Paul Sartre" by M. Jacques Hardre, French department professor and "I Go Haggling" by Ruth Wolfe, an article based on her experiences with the American Legation in North Africa, are included.

Short stories by Betty Peirson, Nancy Murphy, Lois Latham and Helen D. Harrison are joined by poetry by Charles Eaton, author of "Bright Plain" and instructor of creative writing.

Franklin Street Blaze Causes Slight Damage

Flames from an overheated oil stove caused slight damage to a house at 307 E. Franklin street, a student occupant said last night.

Leslie Merritt said the blaze broke out about 10:30. Fire shot out of the back of the stove and threatened to ignite the wall.

A neighbor who refused to devluge her name said that she had trouble getting the fire department. "The phone rang three or four times," she said. "Finally a voice answered and I said, 'there's a fire at the Whitehall shop on East Franklin, come quick."

"The voice answered, 'did you say Whitehorse?' And I said 'no, Whitehall across from the Episcopal church,' and the fireman replied, 'did you say behind the Episcopal church?'

"Engines were quick to respond after I finally got him to understand. The telephone connection was very bad."

Merritt said he doused the flames with water and had them out before the firemen arrived.

Russian Pilot Views War Start

Faculty Rules To Be Applied To Top Posts

Decision Covers 14 High Offices

The same faculty regulations governing eligibility of students to participate in athletics, dramatics, music and debating will be applied to 14 top elective positions in student government and activities, a ruling from the dean of students' office declared yesterday.

The regulations as stated in the catalogue of the University impose a scholastic requirement of 35 quarter hours, half C grade or better, during the three quarters of residence preceding nomination to any of the 14 offices.

A ruling on eligibility of candidates was called for after discovery that Chuck Hauser, triply-endorsed candidate for editor of the Daily Tar Heel, was academically ineligible for the position and that the status of other candidates was questionable, Dean Fred Weaver said.

Decision to enforce the scholastic requirements was agreed upon at a meeting of the Dean and the assistant dean of students with the chairman of the elections committee and the chairmen of the three campus political parties.

Candidates immediately affected are those for the offices of president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the student body; editors of the Daily Tar Heel, Yackety-Yack and Tarnation; chairmen of the Student, Men's and Women's honor councils; president of the Pan Hellenic, Interfraternity and Interdormitory councils; and president of the Coed senate.

The ruling is open to revision, the dean said.

Under the regulation forty quarter hours, half C grade or better, are required if summer school or correspondence work is necessary in addition to two regular terms.

Al Winn, Joe Leary, Gran Childress, Banks Talley, Ed Joyner, Al Lowenstein, Dean Weaver and Assistant Dean Bill Friday took part in the discussion leading to the decision.

Ring Inquiries Will Be Heard

Students who wish to make special inquiries about class rings may see Lee H. Blackwell, eastern Carolina representative for the L. G. Balfour company, today in the Y from 9 o'clock until 4:30, Dougald MacMillan of the Order of the Grail said yesterday. MacMillan also said that orders taken after today cannot be assured of delivery before graduation.

Candidate Picked For SP-CP Ticket

TOM KERR, present managing editor of Tarnation, will run on a CP-SP ticket for editor of the humor magazine. He is a rising junior from Pasadena, Calif.

Nominee Serving As Managing Ed Of Publication

Tom Kerr, present managing editor of Tarnation, will run for the editorship of the humor magazine on a double-endorsed SP-CP ticket, officials of the two parties announced yesterday.

Kerr, a native of Pasadena, Cal., will oppose Lem Whitsett and Charlie Burns, UP co-editorial candidates.

The nominee, a rising junior, served as associate editor of the humor mag last year. Other publication work includes serving as columnist and night editor for the Daily Tar Heel, and publicity director of the Glee club. He helped organize the Carolina Quarterly last spring. He was editor of his prep school newspaper for two years and worked a year on New York magazine dealing with South American relations.

Kerr is presently serving as a member of the Student legislature and member of the Campus party steering committee. He is a member of the Ways and Means and Archives committees of the legislature. The candidate is a former Student party legislative floor leader.

A philosophy major, Kerr was a member of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honor society.

In accepting the nominations, Kerr said, "With two years behind me on the editorial staff of Tarnation, I feel when elected editor I will have the Tarnation machinery moving smoothly and can better concentrate on a more popular humor magazine for next year."

'True Love' Comes Out on Top In Alleged Ice Pick Battle

Despite a momentary relapse, true love won out in a close decision for Chaenl Green, local Negro, Tuesday morning in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Green was charged with assaulting his wife, Annie, with an ice pick Wednesday night two weeks ago. He declined to testify in his behalf and Annie told her story to Judge Henry Whitfield.

She declared her husband did not actually strike her, but that he was flailing the air in her direction so she called the police.

She said Green was drinking and that they had no trouble living together when he was sober. She also declared he had taken good care of her and their five children during seven years of happy married life.

Judge Whitfield told Green that liquor was his biggest trouble. He advised the defendant to leave whiskey alone and let him off with prayer for judgment continued.

Other cases heard were: John Robert Rogers, Negro, arson, bound over to Superior court under $1,000 bond; Charlie Hackney and Betty Brooks, Negroes, costs; Cedrick Harris and James Wright, Negroes, affray, nol pros on Wright, prayer for judgment continued on Harris; William Henry Collier, drunken driving after license had been revoked, $400 fine, appealed; Napoleon Jones, assault with a deadly weapon, non suit.

Tie-Breaking Vote by Speaker Passes Phi Assembly Bill Opposed to FEPC

A tie-breaking vote cast by Speaker Dave Sharpe was needed to pass a resolution by the Philanthropic assembly Tuesday night opposing a Fair Employment Practices commission.

Bryan Griswold, author of the resolution that termed FEPC "detrimental" to the nation, contended that the proposed commission is "constitutionally shady" and is "horrible to contemplate." Griswold charged that the wartime FEPC, instituted by executive order, was composed of 50 percent Negroes who created a need for an FEPC against the FEPC.

Other advocates of the resolution were Bill Duncan, Ben Erdman, John Giles and Peter Gerns.

Those favoring FEPC included Hugh Griffin, Elwood Clinard, Bob Coulter, Bill Dawkins, Peter Burks and Herbert Yates.

Griffin asked for America to give up the "luxury of discrimination" during emergencies.

According to Bill Dawkins, "Discrimination is incompatible with democracy."

Intercollegiate Zionists Hear Address by Israeli Student

Equality is not the goal of the Israeli collective settlements, Yuval Elizur, Israeli student, told members of the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America yesterday afternoon in a talk on "The Co-operative Farming Community in Israel" in Hillel lounge.

"Rather," he said, "the idea is for each individual to contribute to his need and his ability to give."

The Israeli leaders are not trying to regiment the people. Nor are they trying to introduce a new social philosophy, Elizur declared. The secret of the success of the Israeli system is directly due to the fact that everything is voluntary.

Each settlement is considered as a unit, and any Israel citizen who does not like his part in the Israeli system may leave whenever he likes.

Elizur expressed his belief that peace has definitely been established between Israel and Trans-Jordan. However, he said there are still many problems that the new state will have to work out.

Israel has a big immigration problem at the present time. Over 125,000 immigrants have arrived in Israel in the last 10 months and at least that many more are expected to come there in the next year.

Other problems that Israel has to face include setting up a workable democratic form of government, he added. A parliament has already been set up and governmental continuity will be the crucial problem to be overcome next

For Once They're Right

For once the Republicans are on the right side.

From our neighboring city of exciting stoplights yesterday came the news that the Durham County Republican club has sent letters to the county's legislators protesting the increase in tuition passed by the board of trustees for the Greater University.

"The state-supported schools have always been in the logical choices of students from low income families and of a large number of self-help students," the club declared. A dollar more or less is of the greatest importance to these students and their families. High costs of food, clothing, textbooks and other items could well make an increase in tuition the straw that breaks the camel's back."

When Republicans become concerned about the lower income brackets, the news is really significant. Perhaps this will be incentive for Democrats, too, to write their legislators.

It's Hard but Fair

Although the ruling made public yesterday concerning the eligibility of candidates for campus offices will cause a few headaches in present and future political circles, it is eminently fair. There is no reason why students participating in extra curricula functions such as student government and its related activities should not be required to maintain just as high scholastic standing as students participating in extra curricula athletics.

The ruling will undoubtedly result in the loss to student body organizations of some exceptionally well qualified leaders, but this hardship will be no greater than is already imposed upon the debate squad, glee club, band, and Playmakers.

In its favor the regulation has the advantage of preventing students already upon shaky scholastic ground from hurting themselves by devoting too much time to extra curricula offices instead of to their studies.

Reform--or Be Discreet

We always suspected it! Durham County ABC agents have announced that they had discovered a still on Duke campus, almost in the shadow of the Duke chapel! The steam-operated, fifty-gallon still had been used at least once when discovered by the agents, who waited without success for a couple of weeks for the operators.

It wouldn't be quite gentlemanly to hint that Duke is inhabited by embryo bootleggers, so we'd just rather suggest that a bus ride downtown is much quicker and a bit more legal than making your own.

If the Duke student body has a bus-phobia, or some such ailment, Carolina students would be glad to give them a lift to the business end of the Durham-Chapel Hill refreshment run. We realize that our Duke cousins (we use the word very loosely) might not be quite bright and we'd hate to see them behind the wrong kind of bars.

So let the Duke students repent and reform—or be a bit more discreet when choosing the site for extra-curricular chemistry activities.

Of Minor Importance

At the meeting of the board of trustees on Monday Mr. Jack LaGrand of Wilmington introduced a resolution to prohibit any person who is a member of or affiliated with the Communist party from being enrolled in or employed by the University.

Mr. LaGrand evidently has given credence to the rumors that Chapel Hill is a "hotbed of Communism." In order that he may read a first hand day-to-day account of how the Communists are taking over the University we are sending him a complimentary subscription to the Daily Tar Heel. After a few weeks of reading about the activities of the Campus party, the Student party and the University party, he should be convinced that the Communist party is of relatively minor importance—at least at this time of year.

A. A.'s Advice

Try Alderman, For Example

By Adelaide Addle

Dear Miss Addle:

I am a senior commerce major, but that's not the problem. This is the problem.

I am engaged to two girls at once. This is a problem because one of them lives in Tampa, Florida, and the other lives in Womelsdorf, Pennsylvania, which is near Knauertown; and they both have invited me to visit them over vacation. I love them both, but there is a law against bigamy.

The one in Womelsdorf owns a steel mill, and is worth roughly seven million, is beautiful, and well-brought-up. Money doesn't concern me, though I have no immediate job prospects. The Tampa girl is beautiful, has brains, and is a divine dancer, and Florida has a wonderful climate. But climate means nothing to me, though I do get sinus.

Needless to say, I am perplexed. Should I take a cabana, or a steel mill?

Signed: Commercial

Dear Commercial:

I'm glad that neither money nor climate influence you, for you must be objective. Both girls sound delightful. Since the Tampa girl has no money, and you have no job, think twice, for you can't dance through life. Steel mills around Womelsdorf, near Knauertown, have their disadvantages too.

In either case someone will get hurt. Therefore, I suggest you look nearer home. Young ladies in North Carolina are very nice, and I hear that there are several in Alderman dorm who are looking for men.

Dear Miss Adelaide:

Last week I asked you how I could overcome my shyness and propose to my girl. You told me to sweep her into my arms and be master of the situation and then say, "My love," but something went wrong.

We were in the Arboretum, when I tried. I am 5ft. 7in. and weigh 130lbs, and she is 5ft. 9in. and weighs 140 lbs. The sweep was a slow drag. I stammered and she thought I said, "Don't shove you gorilla." I now have a black eye. How can I win her?

Signed: Bashful Bean

Dear Bashful Bean:

Chivalry is not dead. Get a guitar and propose in song; of course if you can't sing or play a guitar this has certain disadvantages. In that case, fall on bended knee, recite Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," and when the wind blows strong, propose.

Distinguished Son of a Beloved Tar Heel

By "Wink" Locklair

Last week in Washington, members of the North Carolina delegation in the House of Representatives, dusted off the welcome mat for Jonathan Daniels, former DTH editor, now editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, who had come to the capital for his first visit as their new Democratic national committeeman.

However politics, like journalism, is not a new field for Mr. Daniels. The son of a famed and beloved civic leader—the late Josephus Daniels—his paper was one of the few which supported Harry Truman last year with more than luke-warm enthusiasm.

Mr. Daniels edited the Tar Heel during 1921-22, one year after Thomas Wolfe was graduated from Carolina. Paul Green, play-wright, and Legette Blythe, novelist, newspaperman and semi-play-wright, were also testing the literary waters with an experimental toe here in the early 20s.

In 1938, Mr. Daniels wrote "A Southerner Discovers the South," a book which won the famous Mayflower cup award as the North Carolina "book of the year." This marked the

Mr. Daniels took over the editorship of the News and Observer in 1935 when his father went to Mexico City as United States ambassador for Franklin Roosevelt. (Jonathan was FDR's press secretary for a time in 1945.)

The most recent journalistic award to come to Mr. Daniels was for an editorial, "The Task [illegible] the South," which won first prize for the best editorial of 1948 at the North Carolina press institute here in Chapel Hill recently. The sentiments expressed in that long and probing essay had been said earlier by him, however, in an address he made at the Woman's college of Furman University in March, 1939. Those who read his Raleigh paper are familiar with them, also. He said, "The only defense against the South is the salvation of the South and that is a task for both this [illegible] and this Nation. Its solution will not wait while its critics grow. We should be wise everywhere in America if we fear it and face it. The Southern problem is not merely Southern—a unique American problem grows in the South."

Jefferson-Jackson Sidelights

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Ran into former Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard at the $100-a-blue-plate Jefferson-Jackson dinner. Out of politeness I asked if Mrs. Wickard was with him.

"No," he replied, sadly. "Mrs. Wickard doesn't have $100."

Each year I become increasingly baffled by that Jefferson-Jackson thing. Why would anyone pay $100 to get a punch in the nose?

The President kept taking pokes at the "special interests" just as he did a year ago. And, once again, the representatives of special interest applauded as if he were talking about someone else.

If you don't think the vested interests were heavily represented, where do you think they dug up the $100-a-dish customers? You ain't paid $100 for a $2 snack yourself lately, have you?

I don't see how the President could have failed to detect the irony in it. But he played it straight—and so did the patrons. It's a strange game, mates.

It made me wonder, sort of, whether the President realizes the campaign is over. The stuff he gave out smacked of straight vote-getting material.

The Midases present must have squirmed until they got cricks in the back. But they continued to smile sickly even next day when the Republican criticism got going.

The G. O. P. had a lot of stuff to play with. The President, it contended, had hit out too wildly without any specific direction to his blows.

Former Assistant Attorney General Roy St. Lewis summed up some of the opposition feeling next day at lunch with John L. Lewis. The Mine Workers boss asked Mr. St. Lewis what he thought of the speech.

"I think the President overreached himself in punching at the vested interests," replied Mr. St. Lewis. "There are quite a few voters in this country who still have vests."

The mine boss grunted.

The day after the $100 dinner I was listening to a S. O. B. (Sweet Old Ballad) when my social secretary, Mrs. Tabitha Talcott Pratt came waltzing in. She asked what I was looking so glum about and I said I was bemoaning the fact that I hadn't been able to afford a bottle of champagne to crack over Perle Mesta.

"She made her maiden speech before the Jefferson-Jacksons," I explained. "Naturally this called for a rare vintage to be dashed over her prow but I was a little short of champagne money."

"I heard about that maiden speech," cut in my senior naval aide, Machinists Mate Michaelangelo Rembrandt Kelly. Where did Perle hire the maiden?"

I informed him this was merely a figure of speech and that it was quite a la mode for a matron to make a maiden speech. Mr. Kelly muttered that they didn't do things that way when he was a kid.

Mrs. Pratt asked if her dear friend, Perle, had delivered a good address.

"It must have been," I said "People paid $100 a Democrat to hear it. That's more than it costs to hear a seal play "My Country 'Tis of Thee' on the horns."

Mr. Clarence W. (Slats) Rafferty, the retired safecracker, said he understood Mrs. Mesta had to speak in competition with President Truman and asked how that came about.

"There were two Jefferson-Jackson dinners," I said, "So many suckers were dying to kick in a hundred slugs, now that the Prez looks more permanent, that they couldn't all be gotten in one room. So they had one dinner at the Statler where Mr. Truman made his major speech and another at the Mayflower where Perle orated."

Miss Reid wanted to know which I thought was better.

"I figure it for a draw," I said. "The President spoke with more authority, but Perle presented the more impressive figure."

Machinists Mate Kelly said there certainly had been a lot of excitement around the capital lately.

"There's been all sorts of things to make life interesting," he added. "Like the President calling a name which I used to get my mouth washed out with soap and water when I said it—and the big fight over Taft-Hartley — and — but I gotta go now."

I asked him where he had to go in such a hurry, and he said:

"I gotta beat it over to the White House and give another medal to General Vaughan."

Write Away

T.V.A. Trip Planned

Editor:

May I use your "Write Away" column for an unusual purpose? The Cosmopolitan club are making arrangements for a group of their members to visit the TVA installations at Knoxville at the beginning of the spring quarter. It is hoped to leave Chapel Hill on Thursday, March 31, and return on Sunday, April 3. In inserting this letter in your column I hope that those members of the club who were not present at the meeting when the trip was arranged, and who wish to go, may be able to get in touch with me before it is too late.

Secondly, we have a problem in finding transportation. It occurred to me that some of your readers who own automobiles might like to join in the trip and thus do a service to the foreign students on the campus, none of whom possess any form of mechanical propulsion. By going in cars and pooling expenses, we hope we shall be able to keep down the cost of the trip to a reasonable minimum.

I would be glad if any interested car-owners would contact me at 105 B dormitory (phone F-403), or at any of our 4 o'clock Sunday meetings in the Horace Williams lounge in Graham memorial.

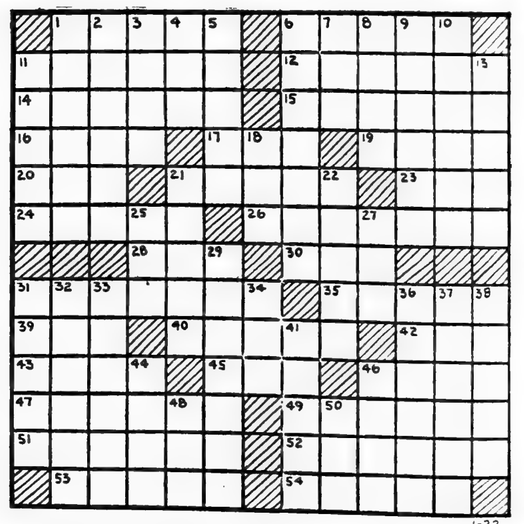
Same Disorganized Polemics

Editor:

Having profited greatly by the chastisement which Mr. Freistadt administered to me earlier this week, I approached Mr. Bill Robertson's latest opus with fear and trembling. I was all set to find in it the sincerity, the logic, the high intellectual tone which Mr. Freistadt had led me to expect in the public utterances of his cotagonists. I added no gratuitous "noes", and I gave it more than a cursory glance: I was more than ready to argue with what he said, not with what I would like him to have said.



Frankly, I didn't find much that I would like him to have said. I found the same frenzied and disorganized polemics that I had found before. Except for his statement that Cardinal Mindzsenty seemed to be himself physically (and who can say exactly what that might have meant?), Mr. Robertson did not give one really relevant fact about the Mindzsenty case. What he did give us was a long string of rhetorical questions (not out-and-out statements, be it noted) about the Cardinal's behavior, all designed to give the impression that they referred to crimes which were common knowledge.

This is the very attitude which always arouses a feeling of rebellion in me whenever I read Bill Robertson's columns or his more recent efforts—the bland assumption that every pronouncement made by Moscow or one of its satellites is the divinely-given truth. I myself have read things in defense of the Cardinal—that he opposed the Nazis and their anti-Semitism, that he sheltered the Jews during the Nazi occupation, that the Nazis emprisoned him for these activities. Of these claims Mr. Robertson had not a word to say, even though they were widely disseminated. He did not even deign to observe that the commercial press seemed to approve of the Cardinal's alledged opposition to the Nazis and his help to the Jews. I fail to see how anything like this could lead to "serious debates between students equally searching for the truth." And as for all that business about having "full respect for one another's sincerity," I get the impression that Mr. Robertson must consider his opponents (not to mention his readers) more simple-minded than sincere.

So in the end, all of Mr. Freistadt's excellent advice came to naught. Well, not entirely, I must admit, for I have taken a vow—I will never again misquote Bill Robertson, even knowingly. In return for this, I hope Mr. Freistadt will not accuse me any more of quoting Engels, even unknowingly. If he will look around a bit, he will find that there were philosophers before Engels as well as brave men before Agamemnon.

Sincerely,
James S. Patty

P. S. I have stocked up on salt in order to have a few grains around in case Mr. Freistadt should persist in being so generous with his advice.

Alpha Gams Honor KAs At 'New' Fete

By Don Maynard

Jasper had a night off Tuesday. About 7:15, he put the lid on his cracked-ice-box in the Rendezvous, tamped a handful of ice securely into his hip flask, and trudged off to the Alpha Gamma Delta-Kappa Alpha "pahty."

He had met his girl, Orphelia, earlier that day and she had asked him over.

"But I'm not a KA," he protested through a mouthful of cracked ice.

"That's all right," Orphelia retorted, "you won't be noticed Everyone will be eating, singing, playing spin-the-bottle, chewing marshmallow strings, acting out charades and eating."

So, Jasper went to the Alpha Gam house. The moment Orphy and he entered the door, they were wedged into the molding by the surging 45 Alpha Gams and 80 KA's.

"Jove," Jasper murmured, twisting around and glancing back at the door through which he had entered, "They're calling this the 'New South Pah-ty.' What happened to the Republicans?"

The house was all bedecked in crimson and gold, traditional colors of Kappa Alpha. The girls were all bedecked.

Jasper wandered through the rooms, getting underfoot, until he found himself a niche and spectated Bob Kirby and Barbara Crawford gobbling a piece of candied string, trying to beat each other to the coveted marshmallow suspended half-way between them.

"Barbara got it after a tussle," Jasper said. "'Course, she cheated. You can't trust these coeds. And do you know what she said after all that illegial holding and chewing? 'It was well worth it!'"

"Why, what's wrong, Jasper?" asked Allene Warren.

"This is a most ravenous pahty. . ." Jasper whispered.

"Dortch (you-knew-he-would) Warriner won the string-gobbling contest with Eleanor Hope Newell. And all he had to report was, 'Wuff!'" said Jasper.

Jasper said the "pah-ty" then moved to the floor, where three spin-the-bottle games were going on. "Senator" L. P. Martin was the first to break the House ruling that all KA's were obliged to kiss the ladies' hands. No one spotted when or where he broke it, but Jasper was firm, "He broke it, all right, all right."

Discontent zephered through the participants, and Tom Able typified the feeling when he said, "OK, now let's all start playing quarter and half, instead of this five and dime stuff."

"Yeah, the girls had a few chances to kiss the boys—gently on the guys' cheeks," Jasper complained.

Charades took the spotlight, and several, not all, of the bottlers moved from their rooms to the large living room to take part in the representations of "Darktown Strutter's Ball," "Down at The Station," and the brain-stumper of them all, "Red Sales in the Sunset."

"I kept looking for Charlie Justice taking off into that sunset, but then, he's not a KA, is he?'" Jasper reflected.

"I got a kick from John Cooper's burlesque of a patent-medicine testimonial, and I looked forward to singing "Hark the Sound," but when three KA's waved a coke bottle over my head and made me stand in reverence for 'Dixie' I wuz there, but I wuz through. All we Jasper Tutes hail from Brooklyn, USA, the heart of the world."

Jasper and Orphy waved goodnight and thanked housemother Mrs. Clark for the "Russian" tea and cookies, but Jasper could be heard repeating as he walked into the night. "I wuz intimidated."

Honored at Tea

Members of the Pan-Hellenic council were entertained at tea Monday afternoon at Alderman dormitory by the Stray Greek society. Mrs. Jane Cobb poured tea.

SPE, Alumni Hear Address By R. B. House

Chancellor Robert B. House spoke before the Sigma Phi Epsilon brothers and alumni at a Founder's day dinner Saturday, playing his harmonica, relating anecdotes of his own college experiences and then turning to the more serious aspects of the college career.

House extended a challenge to fraternities saying that fraternity men must strive individually for the good of the group. In this way, he said, they will gain from their college experience the implements, both cultural and social, which will make them leaders in the country and prove the worth of the fraternity system.

Fraternities must set their scholastic standards higher than the University standards, he added. By doing this, the individual fraternity will enhance its name on campus as well as among universities of America, House said.

Among alumni present were, J. S. Massenburg, a state attorney; Carlton Pitman, speaker pro-tempore of the State legislature, and Hearne Swink, secretary of Cannon Mills.

The local Sig Ep chapter was founded in 1921, but was inactive for seven years during the war. The chapter was reactivated in the summer of 1946.

McIver Dance Set Tomorrow Evening

Against a background of shamrocks and green coloring, McIver dormitory will give a St. Patrick's day dance in its parlor tomorrow night from 8:30 until 12 o'clock.

Carrying out the theme, McIver coeds will place card board shamrocks on the curtains and table cloths and will serve green-colored punch and cookies. Music will be furnished by a record player under the loud speaker system.

During intermission, Lucille Arnott, senior from Persia, Tenn., will sing Irish songs.

With blanket invitations sent to the University fraternities, approximately 400 guests are expected at the dance, Grace Snead, social chairman of McIver dormitory said. Marjorie Norris is chairman of the decorations committee.

Lenten Observance Heads Church Plans

In observance of Lent, a penital period extending from Ash Wednesday to Easter, members of the Episcopal church celebrated Holy Communion yesterday morning at 7:15, and the Rev. David Yates spoke on the Beatitudes yesterday afternoon at 4:30 at the Ash Wednesday service.

Further services during the Lenten season are being held Monday through Friday afternoons at 5:15. At these daily services, which last about 30 minutes, Mr. Yates presents a series of talks about the services of the Episcopal prayer book. Students of all denominations are invited to attend the services.

The Rev. E. C. Cooper will speak at the first of the Lenten services of the Lutheran church this Sunday at 5:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Under the direction of Edlyn Freerks, devotional chairman for the Baptist Student union, short meditation periods are held each week-day at 1:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The Presbyterian Westminster fellowship will meet Friday evening at 6 o'clock for supper and a discussion program. And Saturday night the Presbyterians will have their last square dance of the season.

Pan Hellenic 'Olio' Set for 2-Day Run March 25 and 28

The Pan Hellenic council will present a variety show March 25 and 28 in the Rendezvous room of Graham Memorial featuring skits of individual singing and dancing, by the five campus sororities, and a "sophisticated" melodrama, Ferne Hughes, president of the council announced yesterday.

The show will be titled the "Olio," which in theater circles means the vaudeville part of a burlesque performance or minstrel show. Tickets will cost 50 cents each or two for 99 cents.

The Pan Hel is sponsoring the show in an effort to raise money for adopting a European war orphan through the Foster Parents association. Money sent through the association will provide food, shelter, medicine, and schooling for the orphan for the period of one year.

Pete Strader will direct the melodrama with Edie Knight as assistant director.

YWCA, Pine Room To Give Big Party In Lenoir Friday

Decorations of balloons and bright colored crepe paper will greet guests at the first big combination party and dance sponsored by the recreation committee of the YWCA tomorrow night in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

Given in honor of law, medical and pharmacy students, members of the Y Junior council, Y cabinet, Advisory board, and second floors of Spencer, McIver, and Alderman dorms, the dance will last from 9-12 o'clock.

A floor show featuring a tap routine by Becky Holton, comic ballet by Eleanor de Grange and songs by Anita Gates will highlight the evening. Nancy Curtis will accompany dances and singers on the piano and Norm Sper is to be master of ceremonies.

Lime ice and cookies will be served during intermission.

A second social event is planned for spring quarter and will honor various other groups and departments on campus.

IDC Banquet Will Be Held Monday Night

Slated by Group As Annual Event

The first annual Men's and Women's Interdormitory councils' banquet will be held at 6 o'clock Monday night in the Carolina inn, officials announced yesterday.

Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver, principal speaker, will address some 50 members of both councils on "Men and Women in Student Government." He will be introduced by Pete Gerns, president of the Men's IDC, who is working in cooperation with Sue Stokes, president of the Women's IDC, in arranging the affair.

Gerns said yesterday that both councils have participated in banquets before, but added that this year will mark the beginning of an annual occasion.

Besides Dean Weaver's address, Gerns will present the Intramural Debate Championship cup to LeRoy Milks, president of Old East, whose dormitory team won the award last fall. He will make the presentation in behalf of the Di and Phi assemblies.

Gerns added "Men and women dormitories which have achieved distinction in the past year will be recognized at the banquet. Sue Stokes will preside in recognizing the women."

Weil Lectures Are Finished By MacIver

Dr. Robert M. MacIver, noted social scientist and author, delivered the final in a series of three Weil lectures on American citizenship last night in Hill hall.

Noting that, "today a new peril has arisen against the whole historical tradition of democracy, the campaign of Marxist communism to usurp the name of democracy," Dr. MacIver outlined steps for combatting the forces working against the American heritage of democracy.

"We must make the democratic faith a positive and vital thing," the Columbia university professor emphasized. "We need to bring its meaning to the people. We have all the resources in the world—of what use are they if we do not use them to build a greater and deeper fellowship among ourselves?"

Hitting at insidious propaganda, MacIver continued, "it threatens our democracy in two opposite ways. On the one hand it breeds confusion in the thoughts of a significant number of liberal-minded persons, and it has a different but no less dangerous influence on the more conservative groups."

He said Russian propaganda confuses and tends to divide the more liberal groups, and that in the conservative groups a defense is developed that "dangerously approaches the fascist mode."

Theater Session Will Open Today

Samuel Selden, chairman of the University dramatic rats department will welcome delegates from 10 states to the opening session of the Southeastern Theater conference at 10:30 this morning in the Playmaker's theater.

The conference will last through tomorrow, with its purpose to "promote, through cooperative means, a more active theater of high standards in the Southeastern region."

Dorm Council Gets Increase From Solons

Coeds, Classes Enliven Evening

By Charles McCorkle

The Student legislature approved a $102, 167 student government budget last night after hacking a $1,000 chunk out of the recommended funds for Tarnation, the two-year-old campus humor magazine.

The only other changes of any importance made in the budget were an increase in funds for the Men's Interdormitory council of $25 and a separate item of $600 for the National Students association substituted for the "travel" sub-item in the student legislature budget.

The solons spent a total of three hours approving the budget item by item.

Legislator Al Lowenstein pushed the cut in the publication's proposed budget while Tom Kerr, present managing editor of Tarnation, battled to keep intact the budget of the magazine he hopes to edit after spring general elections in April. He is running for the post with Campus and Student panty backing.

The Tarnation budget as finally approved gives $4,995 of student fees to the magazine, while the original sum recommended by the Budget committee and Finance committee of the legislature was $5,995.

The Finance committee reported the budget out with seven favorable votes to one opposing. Chairman Andy Cornish said the committee thought the budget was "a very fine piece of work."

The recommended budget for the Men's Interdormitory council was increased from $85 to $110, with the additional $25 go-

First Contributions For Red Cross Given

First contributions, totaling $75, to the 1949 campus-wide Red Cross campaign by individuals and organizations were announced yesterday by Co-chairmen Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon.

The drive will end tonight with final reports on contributions to be announced Monday.

President Frank P. Graham contributed the first check for $25 to the co-chairmen Monday morning in his office. Yesterday, Gene Newton, president of the University Veterans association, mailed two $25 checks, one from the UVA and the other from F. C. Shepard who contributed through that group.

Newton's letter which accompanied the checks read in part:

"Many students have commented to us on the services they received while in the armed forces and since they have returned to Chapel Hill as students. All of them have endorsed the Red Cross 100 per cent.

"We wish to offer our services in any way that might be of help to you," the letter continued.

Pritchard said yesterday that contributions will not be totaled until Monday. He added, "The Red Cross campaign is making commendable progress with workers reporting fine student cooperation."

W. Nathaniel Sellers, chairman of the Negro division of the Chapel Hill Red Cross campaign, announced yesterday that workers began solicitations Tuesday. He said that their goal has been set at $5,642.

'Beggar's Opera' Opens Thursday; Tickets on Sale

Tickets are now on sale for the five-campus-group production of "The Beggar's Opera" which plays in Memorial hall next Thursday and Friday.

Business Manager Howard Myers says that both general admission and reserve seat tickets may be obtained at the Carolina Sports shop, the "Y" lobby, and Hill hall.

Produced by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Sigma Alpha Iota, music fraternities, with the cooperation of the music department, Sound and Fury, and the Carolina Playmakers, "The Beggar's Opera" is a lusty musical comedy.

The show is directed by Dr. Jan P. Schinhan of the music department and M. David Samples, graduate student in dramatic arts.

Barbara Edwards of Troy, who plays the part of "Polly" in the production, and Catherine Covington of Chapel Hill, (Mrs. Peachum), have sung leading roles in nearly all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

Student Council To Meet Sunday

The Student Council of the Greater University of North Carolina will meet Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Judicial board room of Alumni house at Woman's college in Greensboro, a spokesman for the Carolina delegation said today.

The Council, composed of members from Carolina, State, and the Woman's college, will discuss projects that were passed on at the last meeting of the Project committee.

A meeting of the Project committee at 3 o'clock will precede the regular meeting of the Council.

Dedmond Asks More Support For Umstead

Wants Students To Use Y Set-Up

Student Body President Jess Dedmond issued a call yesterday to University students to support John Umstead, representative from Chapel Hill, in his fight to make funds from the state treasury serve in lieu of a tuition increase at the University.

"I also want to urge all heads of campus organizations to encourage members to use facilities at the Y and other means they can think of to defeat the tuition boost," he declared.

A table has been set up at the Y by the University party for students to write letters to the state legislators protesting the tuition hike. The table has pens, ink, paper, envelopes, stamps and the name and addresses of state legislators. The booth will be open from 9 to 5 today and tomorrow.

Representative Umstead pointed out in yesterday's DTH that action on the tuition increase may come up in the next six or eight days. Umstead repeated his statement that students can help kill the raise by writing and wiring their legislators immediately.

President Dedmond and other student government leaders are making an attempt to confer with Umstead this week end.

All students having questions about the tuition raise are encouraged to contact Miles Smith, Joe Leary, Gene Newton, Hugh Wells, Ed Joyner, Sandy Harris, Dortch Warriner or Dedmond.

Comedy Preview Slated Tonight

Under shady cover of the Rendezvous room, the main character of "The Beggar's Opera" will give a preview of the coming musical comedy tonight at 9:30 o'clock.

Players in the production, given by the Sigma Iota and Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternities in collaboration with the Carolina Playmakers and Sound and Fury, will stop their nightly rehearsal and descend on the Rendezvous room in full costume.

In order to get "warmed up" before the broadcast over WDUK, the characters will begin their program just before going on the air with an "unairable" song, Lib Stoney, entertainment director said. They will be accompanied during the preview by the Town Talk trio.

Bill Buchan Out of Race For Editor

Second to Lose Chance for Job

Bill Buchan, Daily Tar Heel staff member, endorsed unanimously by the paper's staff for the editorship, announced yesterday that he would be unable to run for the post because his academic status would not permit him to do so.

Buchan was nominated by the staff after Chuck Hauser, former managing editor, withdrew from the race for identical reasons. Dick Jenrette, assistant sports editor, was nominated Wednesday by the University party for the position.

While the Student and Campus parties have not made their nominations, political circles were expecting stiff competition for the party bids. In addition to Jenrette, Sally Woodhull, DTH managing editor and Billy Carmichael, III, DTH sports editor were being mentioned yesterday as potential candidates.

Buchan has worked on the newspaper since he entered the University in June, 1947. He has served on both the editorial and news staffs and was summer managing editor last year.. He served as an editorial assistant for Editor Barron Mills and as an associate editor for Ed Joyner, current editor.

Teach 'Em Young

Kids Take 'Phone Lessons At Y

By Caroline Bruner

Instead of having their daily English lessons, 11 Negro children of the first to the sixth grades learned to use the telephone Wednesday afternoon in the YWCA office with members of the Y Human Relations committee as teachers.

In anticipation of the event, the children practiced on toy telephones all week. Then, Wednesday committee members picked them up at their school building and took them to Gay Currie's office for the real thing.

Arriving at the Y building about 3 o'clock, they placed the first call with some misgivings and with some wide grins. Calls were made from Miss Currie's office on the first floor to one of the offices on the second.

First-grader Johnny Junior Atwater, who made the first call, looked a little puzzled when he dialed and received the busy signal. "What's wrong," Miss Currie asked, and the little fellow grinningly said, "It's buzzy." After three tries, Johnny got his call through, asked the usual "How are you doing. I'm fine, too," and smiled knowingly.

Then it was time for the children on the second floor to call down. The little girl who waited anxiously for the phone to ring declared emphatically she would "turn the phone loose." One of the group to save the telephone, held the receiver to her ear.

In the middle of the lesson, the children were astonished when someone in the Y building put in a long distance call to New York city. Wide-eyed and alert, they expressed their amazement with 'oh's ah's."

On leaving the Y building, some of the children said they'd like to do all their visiting by telephone, even though the voices sounded different from in "real life."

Claws at Bicuspid

Spike Jones Stops Here; Reason--'I Was Hungry'

By Wilbur Amberson

Clawing at a middle-aged bicuspid with a Marathon toothpick, band leader Spike Jones remarked early yesterday morning that the only reason he stopped in Chapel Hill was: "I was hungry."

The king of corn, dressed in a gray checked sport coat, a bright blue flannel shirt and a dazzling blue and red patterned tie, sat in a front booth at 2:30 in the morning, chewing on his onion-covered hot dog, freezing his face into an expressionless mask of boredom.

"I did what I did to music," he said with little effort, "because I was bored with the conventional way of playing it."

"The rest of the band is traveling on a special train from Greensboro to Raleigh. We're traveling in a Ford." The car in question turned out to be a 1942 convertible, a little worse for wear.

"I was educated," he said at the Subnormal Normal School for Backward Boys and Girls." Obviously attempting a humorous statement, he flashed what might have been recognized as a smile and began to talk about Kay Kyser.

"I'm a good friend of Kay's, Skinny Ennis and John Scott Trotter. Matter of fact, I worked for Trotter for five years," he continued. "I'm going to wire Kay tonight and tell him I stopped in his old stomping grounds."

"What does everybody do around here at this time of night?" he asked, heading for the counter for another cup of coffee.

He returned, slumped down in the booth and resumed his bored expression.

"Well, if there're no more questions, we might as well go," he said as he gulped down the rest of the java and stood up.

And he and his two companions put on their coats, went outside, climbed into his convertible and disappeared in the general direction of Raleigh.

On Salaries and Tuition

The newspapers are carrying the stories today of the increase in pay which was granted to teachers and state employees by the Legislature yesterday.

The salary increase was needed and deserved. We are happy that it was finally passed and that it was passed unanimously. Fine. But let's see what it will do to the students here.

Every janitor, every teacher, every maintenance man, every laborer who works for the University here has had his salary raised. With this raise, the cost of rent, the cost of food, the cost of maintenance will increase also.

Students will find that their cash will not go far toward covering their expenses as it has gone before. Students who have to stretch their pennies already will find the going rough.

And yet, we also are faced with the ill-famed tuition increase. Some of our more fairminded Representatives and Senators in Raleigh are against the increase and are trying to do something about it. They are confident that the necessary money to provide the salary increases can be found without taking it from the students pockets.

They are aware of the strict financial status of many, many students. But they need help in the hard fight they must wage. We can provide the help. The table in the "Y" lobby, provided by one of the political parties, makes writing a letter a simple proceedure.

The salary increase which will increase every day living is just another one of the numerous, reasonable, clear arguments against the tuition increase. If you haven't written your letter, do it today. Do it now.

Trash Cans Are Required

It was an encouraging note yesterday to see the "Keep This Area Clean" signs that have been placed around South building and the "Y" court. Much has been written and still more has been said about the condition of our campus, but little has been done to rectify the situation.

One of the worse areas is the district between South building and Franklin street. Along the walks and over the campus, trash is everywhere.

There are two ways that the mess can be cleaned up. Students can stop throwing the trash on the ground, or the administration could place trash cans along the paths in the area.

When a man or a woman decides to throw a piece of paper or an empty cigarette pack on the ground, he or she is going to do so, regardless. Talking and writing editorials isn't going to change that way of life. There would be some hope, if a trash can was in plain view and in the close area. The mpulse to toss the paper away might be restrained until the can was reached.

The answer, then, seems to require the cans. It is certainly worth the effort of placing them there for a trial.

Kick Inefficiency Out

Many student leaders will admit readily that our student government system fails to function properly occasionally. Many more will tell you that the student legislature is filled with members who seemingly take little interest in the proceedings.

The leaders will admit the shortcomings easily, but what are they going to do about them? The first release on candidates for the legislature are announced on the front page today. They will be followed by more.

Some of them will include the men and women in office now who have been doing little to prove they should hold their jobs. Residents in the various districts should ascertain for themselves what their representatives have done. If the report is favorable, the candidate should be re-elected. If his record shows disinterest and failure to participate in the work of the legislature, he should not be returned to office.

Any visitor to the legislature meeting quickly sees for himself who the active working members are. He also sees the legislators who make the assembly meetings a social gathering.

The complaints about the legislature have been repeated on campus too often. If our student government is to be effective, they must be eliminated immediately.

'R.A.T.-S.O.B.': Two Meanings?

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Senator Robert A. Taft is talling this on himself: He says he hopes it involves no double entendre.

The G.O.P. strong man reports he had some stuff sent on to him from his home in Cincinnati. In due course it arrived in the Senate mailing room.

The mail clerk marked it for re-delivery to Mr. Taft's suite in the Senate Office Building. But, in view of current events, his penchant for employing initials had what might seem to be rather undiplomatic results. In heavy black pencil he marked the passage:

"R.A.T., S.O.B."

A beautiful plan to bring the South Carolina Dixiecrats back into the fold has been loused up, at least temporarily.

Democratic National Chairman McGrath had it all set with South Carolina Senators Burnet R. Maybank and Olin D. Johnston for a hatchet-burying, pipe-of-peace, powwow here in Washington. Leading Dixiecrats were to assemble, confess their sins, and be shriven.

But the demon rum gummed things up. One of the Dixiecrat big wigs got himself stiff down home and went around bellowing that the noble gen'men from Suth Ca'lina would never accept any overtures from the low-down Democrats.

Want to hear something exceptionally screwy in the way of Congressional debates?

Reps. L. Mendel Rivers, of South Carolina, and Glenn R. Davis, of Wisconsin, were having hot and heavy at each other over the proposal to repeal the tax on oleomargarine. Interjections were tossed in from time to time by Reps. John Rankin, of Mississippi; Clare Hoffman, of Michigan; and Freshman Compton I. White, of Idaho.

In their ire, Reps. Rivers and Davis forgot parliamentary courtesy, whereupon Mr. Hoffman rose to a point of order. This followed:

Mr. Hoffman: The gentlemen are out of order in using the term "you" to each other. It is contrary to parliamentary principles.

Mr. Rankin: Yes; they ought to say "you all."

This was kicked around for a while, then the debate continued:

Mr. Davis (evidently with his mind on his Wisconsin farmers): Butter being a superior product—

Mr. Rivers: I assume the gentleman does not want any of his constituents to eat margarine.

Mr. Davis: Under the state law very few of them are permitted to do that. It is not the federal law that is doing the thing rigidly according to that.

Mr. Rivers: I am very fond of the gentleman from Wisconsin, but also very fond of my constituents.

Mr. White: I suppose the gentleman also thinks that synthetic cheese is as good as the natural product?

Mr. Rivers: The gentleman speaks for himself in tones very eloquent at times.

Mr. White: Would the gentleman advocate carrying this thing through with synthetic butter and synthetic cheese?

Mr. Rivers: What about synthetic Idaho potatoes?

Mr. Davis: They would be good if you had a way of making them.

Mr. Rivers: If there were a way of making them, I bet you would find it.

Mr. Rankin: Have we not just about got around to the point of using synthetic money?

The Speaker: The House will come to order.

Rah for 'The Foxes'

Orchids For All Concerned

By Jonathan Marshall

Wednesday night the Carolina Playmakers presented "The Little Foxes," by Lillian Hellman, before an enthusiastic audience in the Playmakers theatre.

The play, which was given on Broadway in 1939 and later made into a movie, is the story of two brothers and their sister in a small Southern town, and of their effort to rob each other and exploit the land.

The brothers have made a business deal with a Chicago banker, but they need additional money from their invalid brother-in-law; however, the sister, Regina, has no intention of letting them get the money unless she is given a larger share.

Brother Oscar's son, Leo, a weak and wild boy robs his uncle in order to obtain the money after the uncle refuses to give it. Gordon Argo, as Leo, gave an intelligent performance, and was thoroughly convincing. He brought the character out, and made it real, with a sincere job of acting.

James Geiger, as the shrewd and ruthless brother Ben, exemplified the malignance in the decadent family. He was one of the "people who eat the earth and all the people on it." Playing his 40th role for the Playmakers, Mr. Geiger was always aware of his fellow actors, and fitted his part into the whole: he not only brought out Ben's brutality, but also the fine sarcasm of the part.

Oscar, played by A. E. Westover III, was weak and slow, yet he was no less diseased than the others. Westover's performance was subtle and thoroughly convincing.

For many members of the audience the real star was Barbara McIntyre who played Regina's daughter, one of the few warm characters. In her first Playmaker performance Miss McIntyre was thoroughly at home on the stage. She seemed to feel the part and reacted to the other actors as if she personally felt each line and action in the play.

Callous and scheming Regina was played by Louise Lamont. Although she was powerful and gave a good performance, Miss Lamont left one with the impression that she was playing against, rather than with, the other members of the cast.

One of the finest performances of the evening was given by William MacIlwinen who played the husband, Horace. His control and ability to build into the climatic death scene was brilliant, and the feeling portrayed by MacIlwinen through the use of his facial expressions was one of the most effective features of the production.

Birdie Hubbard, Oscar's wife, is the victim of the poison that permeates the family. Lillian Prince, who played Birdie, added both pathos and humor to an otherwise serious play. As the neurotic but warmhearted victim of her stronger relatives, Miss Prince was well cast and gave a sensitive rendition.

The three smaller roles were all capably handled. Mr. Parker's direction definitely caught the mood of the play; and his handling of the less experienced actors was especially good and contributed largely to their effectiveness. The cast as a whole, however, often acted like so many individuals, each playing as a seperate entity, taking no cognizance of the rest of the stage.

The only major criticism of the directing that was apparent is that the death scene was too melodramatic and overdone.

Miss Hellman's play is not a pleasant one: in fact, it is little short of sadistic. The people are among the most despicable that have ever been created on the stage, and they are more nearly akin to tigers than men.

Fortunately the play is well-written, but it is so overly negative in its approach to life that, even with a good performance, one cannot help feeling that the characters are not real.

Sidelines

Responsibility to the People

By Don Shropshire

If there ever were a time students should band together for common defense, it is now. As the Daily Tar Heel stated Wednesday morning, the one last hope for a change in the new tuition status rests now with the legislature. That hope is such a dim one, that the only way to alter this position is to bombard Raleigh with pleas for a change that must come. Letters, telegrams, personal visits—all should be of such volume that those in our legislative bodies could not help but recognize our requests.

What might still eliminate this raise in tuition? If students, their parents, relatives, and friends would raise their voices in protest, there is a very slight chance that an increase in appropriations by the legislature could change this distasteful situation. Nothing is impossible as long as there remains one last ray of light; that light is there—very faintly, but there just the same.

It is quite hard to see some of the reasoning behind some of our leaders when they say that funds are just not available. One is inclined to believe that there is always a way if it is sought after with such enthusiasm and determination as was demonstrated for such things as good health, roads and many other things we stand in need of today.

And notice within the halls of the state Capitol are not [illegible] cries of hardship. It is strange to see them "throw away" great sums of money by suddenly "junking" such programs as the automobile inspection law. When one thinks of the cost of setting up that program, the costs to keep it in operation, and the costly equipment which is now going to waste—well, one wonders what would have been the action of the Board if that sum involved had been added to the amount by the Budget commission for the three divisions of this institution.

Students must not sit around when there is still work to do. They should challenge that "bunk" about sudden emergency" conditions. Sure, we are in a state of emergency, but we have been in that state for the last ten years. This columnist stands on the conviction that unless the legislature acts before adjournment to eliminate this raise in tuition, the state of North Carolina is going to be even in a greater state of emergency. Greater authorities have already predicted that the Board action will work harm in the public school system. If this state gets any more "cruck-pots" for teachers in our public schools, it is going to take more than action by a board or a legislature to immediately correct that real pressing situation.

Tuition is bad enough at $81, and the salaries paid the faculty here is nothing short of disgraceful. This type of "emergency" should not be borne by students or parents who are having to pay regular taxes over and above regular school fees, but should be faced by the elected representatives of our state, who sometime must wake up to their responsibility, to the people they serve, of encouraging opportunity and, competent instruction in the field of education.

Write Away

Tuition and the Bootleggers

Editor:

Much has been written about the proposed increase in tuition for the Greater University, and also about the proposed statewide ABC referendum, but I don't think anyone has brought out the possibility of a connection between the two. I believe that there is a connection. Here's the way it looks to me. A group of legislators in Raleigh is fighting for a state liquor referendum in hopes that the state will vote dry. This will deprive the state of some $20,000,000 yearly revenue, which must be made up somehow. Thus we have the proposed tuition increase, the proposed taxes on amusements, bottled drinks etc., and various other parts of prohibitionist Governor Scott's program.

Of course, we need increases in faculty salaries, but not at the price of raising a college education out of the reach of the less properous people of the state. A better way to obtain money for this pupose would be to increase the tax on whiskey, and to deprive the dry counties of the benefits they now enjoy from ABC money in the general fund. It is hardly fair that the dry counties should benefit equally, as they do now, from the whiskey revenue obtained solely from wet counties. If either or both of the above suggestions were adopted and the resulting funds applied to the needs of the Greater University, it would certainly eliminate any need for higher tuition.

Of course, this presupposes that the local option law be kept, as it should be. It has been pointed out that local option is certainly the most democratic and homogenious method of deciding the question. All this talk that the Allied Church league and the bootleggers put out about a statewide referendum being the only true method of letting the voice of the people be heard, is, of course, only a smoke-screen of political expediency.

It is true also that the wet or dry legal status of a state or county doesn't have much effect on the amount of whiskey there. The only question is: who gets the money? The state and local governments, or the big bootleggers? Under the present ABC setup, the state general fund gets 8.5 per cent of a county ABC board's gross receipts before even operating expenses are deducted. This amounts to a total of about $20,000,000 a year. The remainder of the profit is split up by the county and the cities. Last year my home town, Wilmington, got $250,000 and New Hanover county got $187,000. I hate to think what the tax rates down there would be if it weren't for this income.

In conclusion, I call on all those who oppose departing from the state Constitution by raising tuition, to actively oppose the return to the discredited, undemocratic, crime-breeding institution of prohibition, and its consequent diverting of our money from the coffers of the state to those of the bootleggers.

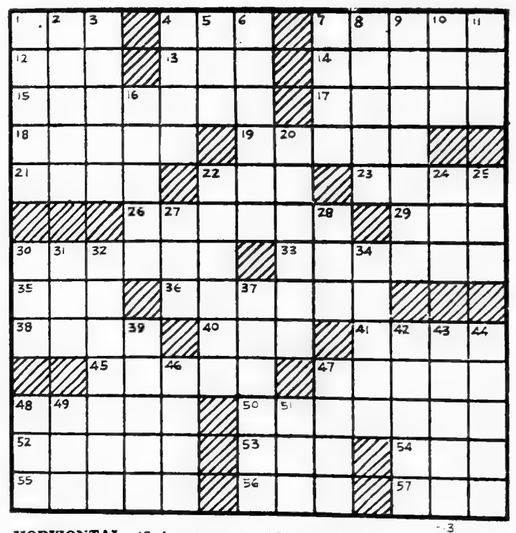
Personal Debate

Editor:

Is Mr. Hans Freistadt writing to the editor or to Mr. Patty in his letter of February 22? Ninochka (Dear Friend) Freistadt starts out fine; however, in the second paragraph of his letter he begins to direct his remarks to James S. Patty.



I believe that a newspaper owes a service to the community within which it serves, and should avoid all letters which could greatly multiply post office receipts by warning the writers to write to each other when there is a debate between them — such as Mr. Freistadt's letter.

If the letter by Mr. Freistadt is a personal one than I think he should refrain from making side remarks concerning the press of a preconceived taint.

Mr. Freistadt reveals his own weakness or presumtion in trying to look behind another person's statement and then attributing the wise words to one of his idols. "Truth is complex." I wonder how many wise men have said that in one form or another?

I have ignored the obvious in this letter. . . . . the preaching of some political concept under the guise of asking another man to be more specific. Hah!

Tar Heels Wallop Terps; Wolfpack Rolls To Victory

Carolinians Crack Point Mark In Ringing Up Easy 79-61 Win

By Billy Carmichael, III

DUKE INDOOR STADIUM, DURHAM, March 3—Two seeded teams sprouted throught the first round of the annual Southern conference basketball tournament here this afternoon as fourth-ranked George Washington solved the mysteries of zone defending South Carolina, 62-45, while the third-tabbed Tar Heels of North Carolina produced the first real signs of winter in snowing under Maryland, 79-61.

The Tar Heels turned in the most impressive win of the opening session when they set a new tournament record for most points scored by a single team in one game in amassing a 79-point total. This surpassed the old mark of 76 set by Duke against Maryland in 1945. The two team total of 140 was also a new record.

The lads from Chapel Hill had possibly their best outing of the year with the same quartet that usually produces the quality and quantity for this year's Caroina team again doing most of the heavy work. Hugo Kapper, Coy Carson, Charlie Thorne, and Dan Nyimicz were the high point getters in that order. Kappler's high of 21 points served as a fitting example for both teams.

The Tar Heels got away from the post rather slowly with the two teams spending the early minutes of the game walking up and down the floor to shoot fouls. After about four minutes of this foolishness, Thorne suddenly put a stop to it with a field goal. Carson and Kappler followed suit. Then Thorne and Carson returned for encores and the Tar Heels had five goals in less than two minutes and a 11-4 lead.

Toward the end of the first half, a Marylander by the name of Charlie Mack staged a one-man attempt to get the Terps back in the ball game. He tossed in four baskets in the course of a mere minute and 20 seconds. That left the Tar Heels with a mere 31-25 lead at the alloted breathing period.

The second half dawned clear and hot for the North Carolinians though, and before anyone could say Tom Scott, the Tar Heels, Carson, Nyimicz, and Thorne strong, had three field goals in fifty seconds and a 37-27 lead after two minutes.

This mission was finally accomplished by none other than Rip Ryan, who tossed in a set shot at 17:45 to raise a new standard.

The first game was nipped and tucked for the opening part of the initial half with the Gamecocks and the Colonials tying the score up eight times in the first 10 minutes. With South Carolina's Jim Slaughter leading the way with 10 early points, the tatily ran to 16-16 after nine minutes and it looked like anybody's ball game.

Here Mr. Slaughter's efforts stalled slightly and before he could return to high gear, the George Washingtons had a 29-20 advantage with but five minutes to go in the half. Even then it took the best the big 6-9 Palmetto center had to hold the Colonials to 34-26 at halftime.

At the beginning of the second time around, George Washington froze the ball the first time they got their hands on it.

The Colonials held the ball for some four minutes amid assorted boos and finally lost the ball to a fast-breaking South Carolina basket. The crowd went wild and then even wilder as Slaughter flipped in two more scores to pull the Gamecocks to 32-34, after six minutes.

That was as close as they got. The Palmetto entry hung desperately on for a few minutes, but tired fast during the remainder of the game. George Washington had too much finish.

Wrestlers Leave For Loop Tourney In Lexington, Va.

Three Tar Heel matmen left last night for Lexington, Va., where they will compete in the Southern Conference wrestling championships today and tomorrow. They are Phil Kemp, Oscar Gupton, and Ed Turnley.

Kemp, ace 155-pounder, finished the dual meet season without a defeat. He was the only undefeated member on the squad and is rated one of the top contenders for the individual conference title in his weight. Last year he was runner-up in the 145-pound class.

Gupton, the team co-captain, suffered one loss during the past season—to Duke's John McMaster. However, Gupton wasn't at his best and could beat McMaster if he meets him during the tourney. He started the season with an injury incurred in an auto accident, but rounded into shape and performed well throughout.

Turnley, who will represent the Tar Heels in the 136-pound class, is in his first season. He is almost out of the picture as far as individual titles go, but will gain needed experience for next year.

The Tar Heels, as a team, finished the season with three wins, four losses, and a tie. Wins came over Davidson, VMI, and The Citadel. The four defeats were pasted on the Carolinians by N. C. State, Duke, Maryland, and defending Conference champions Washington and Lee. The tie was a 16-16 effort with VPI.

The Generals are favored to retain their title this year and with four individual champions back, should have little trouble in doing so.

Like the Tar Heels, most of the other schools in the Conference will be sending only a few individuals to compete against the power-laden Generals—the only team in the circuit supported by scholarships.

Schoolboy Tourney Begins at Wake

WAKE FOREST, March 3—Wake Forest college is host to the Region One teams of the State Class A basketball tourney which opens here Friday.

Chapel Hill's unbeaten cagers will engage Washington at 7:30 in the opener. The second game of the evening will pit Kinston against Roxboro at 8:45.

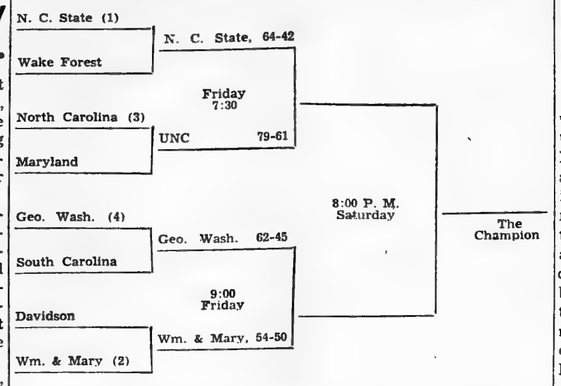
ORLANDO, Fla., March 3—(UP)—Walt Masterson of the Washington Senators, who mistook March for July and spring training for mid-season, paid the penalty today when he became the first pitcher to be yanked from the mound in 1949.



The bespectacled right-hander, cutting with an assortment of curves and fast balls, was waved from the box by Senator owner Clark Griffith. Griffith explained his action by recalling that Masterson developed a sore arm last spring through a similar incident.

LOS ANGELES, March 3—(UP)—The Chicago Cubs were ready to concede today that Emil (Dutch) Leonard's knuckle-ball is as effective as ever. Leonard, acquired from the Phillies during the off-season, has Cub hitters wildly fanning the air yesterday as he pitched a good portion of batting practice.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., March 3—(UP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates were beginning to wonder today what's holding up outfielder Ralph Kiner, who said he would be on hand yesterday but wasn't. Manager Billy Meyer said he was hopeful the home-run hitting star would report to camp today.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 3—(UP)—Detroit Manager Red Rolfe today began to emphasize bunting drills for his pitchers. "I don't intend to lose any close games because a pitcher doesn't know how to advance a runner," Rolfe said.

Southern Conference Tourney

Hutton Takes Opening Event Of Conference Tank Tourney

Last night was the first time that the 1500-meter freestyle has been run in the Southern conference, but Carolina's trio of entries acted as if they had been doing the 65-plus laps for years by sweeping the first three places to give the Tar Heels an early lead in the defense of their loop title.

Bob Hutton, who led most of the way, has the honor of clinching the first championship of the meet. Hutton's winning time of 21:45.1 was also automatically installed as the Conference record.

Twenty yards behind Hutton came the next two Tar Heels, Ronnie Basescu and Sam MacCauley, who finished in a dead heat way ahead of the rest of the pact. The second place time was 22:02.6.

The fourth position also belonged to the Greater University. Bick Morris of N. C. State came home fourth in 23:12.0 with Ted Wood of VPI fifth in 23:34.0.

Tonight's event gives Carolina a total of 13 points, State two, and VPI one.

The Tar Heels are expected to start racking up the points today when preliminaries and finals in eight events will be run off.

Low-board diving trials are slated for this morning at 9:30 and preliminaries in two freshman and five varsity events will be held at 2:30 this afternoon. Finals in all the events start at 8 o'clock tonight and 50 cents admission will be charged for the evening session.

Buddy Crone, who is bowing out after a long career at Carolina, is the ruling favorite to cop the title that Norm Sper won last year. Sper isn't competing in the springboard event this season so Crone's greatest opposition for the title will come from John Connor of Duke. State will present a strong pair of divers in Nunis and Cramer while Gil Beam will carry the remainder of the burden for the Tar Heels. Jack Wichard, Carolina's number two diver, is out with an infected leg.

The freshman 440-yard freestyle will open up the afternoon action and will be followed by the yearling 100. Freshman Coach Bob Ousley has entered Cecil Milton and Conrad Cates in the quarter-mile and Kirby Ambler, Fred Williamson, Harvey Marcus and either Jack Cohen or Bill Roberson in the century. Milton is a very strong favorite to win his event.

Varsity trials in the 50-yard freestyle, 150-yard backstroke, 220-yard freestyle, 200-yard breaststroke, and 400-yard free-

Chairoteers Upset Clowns 42 to 26 In Rolling Victory

Led by the eagle-eye shooting of Dick Kaiser, the McGuire hospital Chairoteers rolled to a 42-26 victory over Carolina's renowned Clowns before a small crowd in Woollen gym last night.

While the Chairoteers built up a ten point lead in the first few minutes, the Clowns did nothing more spectacular than fall flat on their faces and jerkily roll their wheelchairs in everybody's way.

The visitors' mechanized attack never let up once, and the Clowns were never within more than four hard-earned points of the smooth-going veterans.

Hero of the evening was Kaiser who alone scored almost as many points as the entire Carolina aggregation. His total for the contest was 22, eight more than his teammate, George Brendock.

Throughout the performance the Carolina tumbling clowns kept the crowd in stitches with their antics and stunts.

Hilltoppers Given Bid To NIT Cage Event

NEW YORK, March 3—(UP)—Western Kentucky's Hilltoppers, led by their famed towel-tossing coach, Ed Diddle, today were booked for their fourth appearance in the National Invitational tournament starting March 12 at Madison Square garden.

The Hilltoppers and Bradley university's Braves became the third and fourth teams to accept bids for the annual post-season shindig yesterday. Defending champion St. Louis university and Kentuckey accepted invitations earlier this week.

Western Kentucky has lost only three games in 28 starts— to Kentucky, Louisville and Bowling Green.

Frosh Swimmers Have Top Prospect In Cecil Milton

By Larry Fox

Two years ago when entries were open for the Southern Interscholastics held annually in Bowman Gray pool, the coach at Albemarle High school got an invitation to send a team. Albemarle had neither a swimming team nor an indoor pool and the announcement was received Monday afternoon for the Friday meet, but a group of boys journied to Kannapolis, the site of the nearest pool, for a one-day "workout" and then came on to Chapel Hill.

None of the boys placed in any event although the freestyle relay team took a third.

That was the only experience of competitive swimming for Cecil Milton, a self-styled "summer-swimmer", who is now the most promising member of Coach Bob Ousley's freshman swimming crew and holder of three yearling records—records held by such present-day stars as Dick Twining and Jim Thomas.

Milton's introduction to Carolina swimming was not much more auspicious than his performance in the Interscholastics. He didn't come out for the team at first and it was only through the urging of a friend that he came down to the pool one afternoon.

He was one of the inexperienced crew which greeted Coach Ousley at the beginning of the season. Inexperienced is hardly the word, for of the 11 men present, only one had ever won a race against any kind of opposition.

And Milton, who started out as a sprinter, was one of the greenest.

"He could hardly swim three widths of the pool," recalls Ousley.

Milton has advanced far beyond the three-widths stage. He is now the star freshman distance man and is expected to gain further laurels in the freshman 440 event of the Southern Conference championships here this weekend.

The husky freshman star had the biggest day of his short career against the Norfolk division of William and Mary several weeks ago when he set a new record for the 220-yard freestyle and tied the existing mark for the quarter mile.

"I'd been working for the 220 record all year," says Milton, "and I guess my biggest swimming thrill came when I got it."

Several meets later, against Sewannee Prep, Milton slashed his own record in the 200-yard freestyle by doing the distance in 2:06.3. According to his coach, Milton was ahead of his record-breaking time for the 220 and would probably have lowered the record by about two seconds.

State Takes 64-42 Decision; Indians Edge Davidson, 54-50

By Zane Robbins

DURHAM, March 3—A pair of rip-roaring cage battles were run off here tonight in the first round of the 28th Annual Southern Conference Basketball tourney. Powerful N. C. State lashed out behind the 14-point effort of center Paul Horvath to take the measure of a so-so Wake Forest aggregation, 64-42 in the opener, and a hustling band of William and Mary Indians came through on the power of a valiant last-ditch rally to dump inspired Davidson, 54-50 in the nightcap.

Wolfpack Wonderman

N. C. STATE FANS have sworn by Sammy Ranzino all year, and with just cause, too. His tourney performance last night gave Wolfpack supporters something more to cheer about.

State's legions got off to a slow start in the night opener, but gathered steam as the evening progressed and hung up a 64-42 win over the Wake Forest five.

Paul Horvath was the brightest among State's collection of stars as he turned in a total of 14 points before fouling out and leaving the remainder of the scoring chores to his Red and White cohorts. High man for the gentlemen from Deacon Hollow was Jack Mueller with 11.

Sammy Ranzino opened the scoring for State with a foul shot at 10 seconds. From that point on State was never headed, although Wake managed to cut their margin to one point three times. At 9:50 the count was 9-8. Then State cut loose and the Deacons were just five men in black.

The defending champions continued to build up their lead and when the intermission arrived, the Wolfpack had 15 points more than the challengers, 34-19.

In the second half, the story was the same. State had it while Wake searched, but never quite found it. At 9:40 Bob Hahn's tap-in gave the 'Pack a 50-28 lead.

Both teams managed to score the same number of points in the last 10 minutes of the half and Warren Cartier threw in a push shot at 19:40 to make the final count 64-42 for State.

Then came the finale, a rootin'-tootin', action-packed thriller from start to finish.

Although the game started on a slow note and the first half ended with William and Mary leading by only 27-22 in a comparitively low-scoring game, there were thrills-aplenty for the 8,000 basketball hungry fans that jammed Duke's mammoth indoor stadium for the tournament event.

Davidson rolled to a quick three-point advantage in the early stages of the game before the Indians could score, but were soon engulfed in the midst of

Illinois May Get Red Investigation

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3—(UP)—The Illinois House of Representatives, taking exception to a group of students who protested pending anti-Communist bills, called today for an investigation of alleged communist activity at the University of Chicago and Roosevelt college.

One legislator declared that the protesting students "didn't have the clean-cut look of our American youth."

Another, a graduate of Chicago university, said he wouldn't send his "pet dog" to his alma mater now.

The tempest started yesterday when a group of 100 students from the two Chicago schools flocked into Senate galleries and hissed proponents of five anti-Communist bills.

The bills, now grinding through legislative machinery, include a proposal to require all state employes, including teachers, to sign non-Communist oaths.

Today the house struck back with a resolution calling for an investigation by the State Seditious Activities committee. It passed with only a single dissenting vote and was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

The resolution was introduced by state Rep. G. William Horsley, R., Springfield, who said there was "something peculiar" about the students, "in their eyes, in their faces, and in the way they wore their clothes."

Horsley said they didn't look like clean-cut American youths at all, and told the House "it appears that the students are being indoctrinated with Communistic and other subversive theories" at the two schools.

At Chicago, Dr. Edward J. Sparling, president of Roosevelt college, said he would welcome an investigation.

"We have nothing to conceal," Sparling said.

Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, said that "under our philosophy of government they (the students) as citizens have a right to question the wisdom of this kind of legislation."

Colwell said the State legislature investigated the university in 1935 and found no evidence of Communistic indoctrination.

"We are confident that none can be produced now," he said.

Bruner, Weaver Named to Board Of Mademoiselle

Two English majors, Caroline Bruner, junior from Petersburg, Va., and Doris Weaver, senior from Four Oaks, have been appointed to Mademoiselle magazine's college board, the young woman's magazine announced yesterday.

The appointments enable the two coeds to compete for college guest editorships of Mademoiselle, the announcement said.

Twenty guest editors, chosen from the college board on the basis of three assignments given by the magazine during the year, will be brought to New York city for four weks. From June 6 through July 1, the apprentices will help write and edit the annual August college issue.

For this work, the 20 editors will receive a regular salary in addition to payment of their round-trip transportation fare from their homes to New York.

A full calendar of activities designed to give them a head start in their careers will be arranged for the guest editors.

Among the activities to be scheduled are interviews with top celebrities in their chosen fields, personalized career guidance and trips to newspaper offices, fashion workrooms, radio stations, stores, agencies and printing plants.

Students' Bodies Are Being Sought

GAMBIER, O., March 3—(UP)—Search of the smouldering ruins of the Kenyon college dormitory today produced more than 35 bones, presumed to be those of six of nine students who were killed.

Three students died of injuries received in leaping from windows The other six were presumed to have perished in the $1,000,000 blaze early Snuday.

A jaw bone was taken to a Mt. Vernon, O., dentist in an attempt to check identification. College officials said it probably would take several days to comb the ruins thoroughly.

Kenyon President Gordon K. Chalmers said a four-way investigation indicated that the flue had allowed sparks from a first floor fire-place to creep into the space between the first floor ceiling and the second floor.

Other items approved in the budget were:

Graham Memorial, $21,600. Daily Tar Heel, $24,670; Yackety Yack, $33,237; executive branch of student government, $925; judicial branch, $320; Student legislature, $395; Coed senate, $390; Student Entertainment committee, $7,300; University club, $250. Class organizations, $2,400; Debate council, $3,750; Carolina Forum, $640; Student Activity Fund office, $85; National Students association, $900.

Two other budget items caused considerable debate—the Coed senate and class organization funds—but they were passed as recommended by the Budget and Finance committees.

The Coed senate budget came under fire in a hot discussion which involved the $1 fee the coeds pay in addition to the regular $5 block fee per quarter. It was pointed out that the items listed in the Coed senate budget to come from student fees were either called for by the constitution or the whole campus benefited from them.

Nat Williams, who remarked that he has "been a senior for three years," pushed a motion which would have boosted the senior item in the class organizations budget, while freshman legislator Bill Prince defended the rights of the lowerclassmen style relay will follow in that order.

All of these events are rather wide open, although the odds are that the winner will come from Carolina.

Floyd Drew, the defending champion; Jesse Greenbaum, Ike Norwood, and Steve Osborne are the Carolina entries in the 50 with Bill Kelly of State providing the biggest opposition. Kelly took seconds in two very dissimilar events last year—the 220-yard freestyle and the 200-yard breaststroke.

Sper in Switch

Another man switching events this year is Norm Sper, who will be favored to triumph in the backstroke. Jim Clement and Bob Page round out the Tar Heel roster with Lojko of State outstanding among the visiting mermen.

Jim Thomas, who gained fame as a backstroker in the last campaign, is now the leading distance man in the Conference. Thomas just recently resumed workouts after being sidelined by illness and this event should be close. Ronnie Basescu, Bob Hutton, and Sam McCauley complete the Carolina distance crew.

Officers Candidate School Supplements NROTC Program

A naval reserve officers candidate school program has been instituted to supplement the NROTC, it was announced yesterday.

The program, open to freshmen and sophomores enrolled in accredited schools, leads to appointments as ensigns in the naval reserve.

The training consists of two six-week summer courses at ROC schools. Applicants who finish this indoctrination and their college work are eligible for commission.

Applicants must be not less than 17 years old and must not reach their 28th birthday by July 1 of the year in which they become eligible for commission. They must be enrolled in, or affiliated with, a division or a squadron of the organized reserve in an enlisted status.

Summer schools will be held at Newport, R. I., and San Diego, Cal. Applications for this summer must be submitted by April 10. The 1949 program is limited to 2,500 reserve officer candidates.

Further information on the program may be obtained from housing director J. E. Wadsworth at the Housing office, or from the Navy Training center, Foster street, Durham.

No End Sighted In Church Trials

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 3.—(UP)—Church leaders said today that nearly one-third of the Protestant pastors in Bulgaria are under arrest or investigation and that more trials will follow.

The leaders counted 40 ministers in jail or under investigation, including the 15 now on trial for espionage, treason and blackmarket currency dealings. There are only 138 Protestant pastors in the country.

Sixty of the churchs still free met in Plovdiv Feb. 20 to outline a new policy of cooperation with the government for the Evangelical Church of Bulgaria, the sources said.

The pastors condemned the activities of their "traitorist" colleagues, and named a committee to prepare for the election of a new Supreme Council of the United Evangelical churches. The 12 members of the present council are all defendants in the present trial.

Since several witnesses who appeared in court during the past two days were preachers under arrest more trials are expected to follow the present court proceedings.

The State department, in a note delivered to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov by the American Embassy in Moscow, backed him up to the hilt.

At the same time, it reiterated its "profound dissatisfaction" over Russia's refusal to allow American citizens to leave the Soviet Union.

There has been "no adequate response," it said, to repeated requests that the Russians speed up the repatriation of Americans who want to return to this country

U. S. Backs Clay In Red Dispute

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(UP)—The United States backed Gen. Lucius D. Clay today with a formal demand that Russia withdraw "forthwith" its Repatriation commission now holed up in its blockaded headquarters in Frankfurt, Germany.

It threw its full support behind the U. S. occupation commander in rejecting Russia's claim that Clay abrogated international agreements by ordering the mission to get out of Frankfurt.

It also dismissed as "inacceptable" a Russian protest that the United States has permitted organizations hostile to the Soviet Union to disrupt work of Russian repatriation missions in both Germany and Austria.

Clay set last Tuesday as the deadline for the mission to leave. When it refused, he blockaded its headquarters and cut off water, food and power supplies.

Professor W.P. Eaton Opens Theater Session With Keynote Address

Professor Walter P. Eaton told delegates to the Southeastern Theater conference yesterday that tastes of regional audiences do not differ too much from the masses as a whole.

"A play, grave or gay, which is popular in Times Square will be equally appreciated in Austin, Texas, or Greensboro, N. C.," the noted playwright and drama critic said. "That is," he added, "it will be if it is done well."

Professor Eaton was the keynote speaker during the first session of the two-day theater conference to which delegates were welcomed by Samuel Selden, head of the dramatic art department and chairman on the organization of the meet. The affair was held in the Playmakers theater.

At 10 o'clock this morning, delegates will complete the formation of the Southeastern Theater conference with the election of officers and the appointment of committees. At 11 o'clock Thomas E. Poag will speak on "The Negro in the American Theater," and at 11:30 a series of speeches on the "Theater in the South" will be given. At 12:30 officers will meet for lunch at the Carolina inn.

Highlight of the evening schedule will be the presentation of "The Little Foxes" to which delegates have been invited. In the afternoon "Theater Architecture for a Low Budget" will be discussed at 2:15; "Portable Stage Setting for Touring" at 3:00; "Theater in the Round" at 3:30; and a film: "The Art Director," at 4 o'clock.

Professor Eaton's main proposals were: First, to develop local playwrights by choosing a play written within the conference and to pay the author the usual royalties; second, to bring to the region one or more actors or directors from the professional theater and to let them spend three or four weeks at the college, giving them a chance to participate in productions.

"Whatever increases student understanding of professional standards improves productions," Eaton said. "This increases audience pleasure and so insures the permanence of regional theaters. This will help create a public demand that colleges be given better playhouses."

Garret Leverton, one of the chief editors for Samuel French, Inc., spoke briefly about the condition of the professional theater on Broadway as he observed it. "Broadway is just hopeless," he said. "The answer to the whole thing is the university theater."

Just Shoot Me

GREENVILLE, S. C., March 4. — (UP) — Night watchman James Seaborn Chambers was dead tired and aching all over when he came home from work this morning.

"Why don't you just shoot me?" he joked, unbuckling his pistol and handing it to his wife.

She took the pistol smilingly, pointed it at his head and pulled the trigger. He died instantly with a bullet through his brain.

Mrs. Stella Chambers, 36-year-old mother of seven, ran into the yard shrieking hysterically.

She was taken to Greenville hospital where she told police she thought her 61-year-old husband had been joking. She didn't think he would hand her the pistol if it had been loaded.

She was transferred to Greenville county jail pending an investigation.

She said Chambers returned from work at about 7 o'clock in the morning and unstrapped his pistol from his uniform. He sat down and complained, "I'm dead tired, aching all over. Here's my pistol. Why don't you just shoot me?"

USSR Action Taken in UN With Surprise

Policy Question Remains Unsolved

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., March 4.—(UP)—News of V. M. Molotov's removal as Russian foreign minister caught the United Nations by surprise tonight and left delegates floundering as to whether his removal meant a stiffening or an easing of Soviet foreign policy.

Eastern bloc delegates turned aside all inquiries with a bluff "no comment" when asked their opinion on the sweeping cabinet changes announced by Radio Moscow.

But in the lobbies of this world organization for peace one question recurred in every conversation: "What happens to Andrei Gromyko?"

Gromyko was replaced last year as permanent UN delegate of the Soviet Union by Jacob Malik, and his career in Russia since has been obscure. There have been reports that he was put in charge of the American section of the Russian foreign office and there was speculation here tonight that Gromyko, more popular in the UN than any of his fellows, might succeed to the chief deputy foreign minister post vacated by Andrei Vishinsky who was named in Molotov's place.

Informed quarters here were not satisfied that Vishinsky's appointment meant Molotov had been superseded in power. There were some who believed that the announcement might portend greater power for Molotov, long considered second in power within Russia only to Josef Stalin, reports of whose illness are recurrent. But nobody was willing to say so.

Six Firemen Thought Dead

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 4—(UP)—A six-alarm fire swept a downtown five and ten cent store today and six firemen were believed to have perished in the the flames.

Four firemen were known to be buried in the charred ruins of the three-story structure.

A fifth was reported missing, and Fire Chief J. L. McLane said two others were missing.

The victims were trapped when a floor of the building collapsed as they worked their way up a smoke - filled stairway. They plunged into the fiery basement where the blaze started.

THE TANGLED WRECKAGE OF TWO PRIVATE PLANES (indicated by arrows) is scattered about a Culver City, Cal., field, following a crash in which three persons were killed. Horses graze quietly just beyond the plane at left in which the pilot, Herbert J. Conover, 30, Santa Monica, Cal., met death. The ship caught fire and burned. In the other craft were Earl Powell, 39, and Lloyd Clark, both of Portersville, Cal. The planes collided about 200 feet above the ground, while coming in for a landing at the airfield.

Sigma Xi's Will Hear Talk By Psychologist

Dr. Arnold Gesell, noted Yale psychologist, will speak on his research in child vision at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in Page auditorium on the west campus of Duke university, under the sponsorship of the Sigma Xi chapters at Duke, Carolina, and State College.

His talk at Durham will be the seventh in a 24-city lecture tour that will carry him from New Jersey, south to Georgia, and west to Indiana.

Dr. Gesell is a member of the child vision research department of the Yale school of medicine. He has named, through his investigations, some 43 stages of childhood. He says that the knowledge of these stages applied to bringing up children will help further democracy.

In his research, Dr. Gesell has used over 500,000 feet of film to record systematic moving pictures of the stages of child development. He says that his records start in the feta stage and run through the first 10 years of life.

Education Board Asks Insurance Of N. C. Schools

RALEIGH, March 4—(UP)—The North Carolina Board of Education today asked the general assembly to enact a law allowing the state to insure school property.

Board officials estimated the self-insurance plan would save North Carolina about $200.000 in its first year, and as much as $400,000 annually once it got underway. Rates would be fixed at about the same level with those of private companies prior to a recent 25 per cent boost, board Vice-Chairman D. Hiden Ramsay of Asheville explained.

The board named a special committee to work out details of the plan at its regular meeting yesterday, Ramsay said. At the same time, the board voted to drop policies with private companies on its 5,000-bus school fleet.

School plants up to now have not been covered by the four-year - old state self - insurance plan.

Southern Solons Still Confident

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—Southerners were confident today that they can defeat any administration attempt to choke off the Senate's anti-filibuster debate.

Norway May Sign Atlantic Treaty

OSLO, Norway, March 4.—(UP)—Norway proclaimed to the world today its determination to join the Atlantic pact and its firm refusal to tie itself to Russia in a non-aggression treaty.

The government's action, taken in open defiance of the Soviet Union, was overwhelmingly approved by parliament.

Denmark likewise prepared to join the Atlantic pact. The Foreign Relations Committee of its parliament decided to send Foreign Minister Gustav Rasmussen to Washington for talks.

Medical Reports Will Highlight Conference Here

Addresses and reports by nationally known speakers and state authorities on present medical care conditions will highlight the second annual State Rural Health conference to be held here next Friday under the joint sponsorship of the North Carolina Good Health association and the State Medical society.

The morning session will feature an address by Thomas A. Hendricks of Chicago, secretary of the Medical Service council, American Medical association.

A report on the County Good Health council's program by Miss Charlotte Rickman, Taylorsville secretary, and addresses by James H. Clark, chairman of the North Carolina Medical Care commission; Dr. C. Sylvester Green, editor of the Durham Morning Herald; and Dr. Fred C. Hubbard, Rural Health committee chairman, are scheduled.

The morning session will be concluded with an address by J. B. Slack, state director of the Farmers Home administration for North Carolina.

Following lunch, the delegates will attend discussion groups on such topics as "Rural Public Health Service, "Rural Medical Care," "Rural Community Organization," and "Rural Maternal and Child Health."

No Housing Shortage

'Tenting Tonight' Before South Bldg.

Visitors to the campus were startled Friday afternoon to see six students busily engaged in setting up a tent in front of South building between Old East and Old West dormitories.

One elderly man stopped his car in front of South and beckoned to a passing student. "Is the housing shortage around here really that serious?," he asked, nodding toward the tent which was almost in position. When informed that the whole thing was only a part of an initiation program of the Alpha Alpha chapter of Sigma Gamma Epsilon the visitor looked slightly non-plussed, then shrugged his shoulders and drove away.

A closser inspection of the students who were busy putting up the tent might have led the visitor to believe that the campus had just been invaded by a group of doughty prospectors. The students, Ray Hall of Charlotte, J. S. Fletcher of Elkin, Maurice Powers of St. Paul, Vernon Geyer of Chatham, Va., Richard Bowen of Athens, Ga., and Richard Rodgers of Washington, D. C. were in the last stages of their initiation program as new members of the Alpha Alpha chapter of Sigma Gamma Epsilon.

For the last week the pledges have had to refrain from shaving or having their hair cut; they have had to wear old field clothes, carry an SGE emblem pinned to their shirts or hung around their necks, carry a package of cigarettes for use by their fraternity brothers, and one geologic object or tool such as a hammer, compass, or gunny sack.

Many people stopped to watch as the students went about the business of setting up a camp as field geologists, complete with bed rolls for sleeping, a stove for preparing meals and some canned food.

After completing the job of setting up the camp, making a drawing of all the paths in the area and cooking their supper over an open fire, the students began the job of taking down the 14 by 20 foot, 300 pound tent and getting back to their dormitories to clean up and prepare for the final initiation ceremony which was held at 8 o'clock last night.

UNC Receives $4,500 Prize For Research

Money to Be Used For Pyrones Work

The Research corporation of New York city has contributed $4,500 to the University for the support of a project entitled "Pyrones," under the direction of Dr. Richard H. Wiley of the department of chemistry, it was announced recently.

The money, in the form of a Frederick Gardner Cottrell grant, will be used to expand theoretical work in polymer chemistry through a fundamental study of the structure of polymers derived from pyrones.

New types of pyrones, which are of current interest as differential cell growth regulators and as anticoagulants in the treatment of intravascular thrombosis, will be studied, Dr. Wiley said.

Dr. Wiley is an associate professor of chemistry in the University. He was a research chemist with the du Pont Company from 1937 to 1945, when he came to Chapel Hill.

He was graduated from the University of Illinois with an AB degree with honors in 1934, took his Master's degree there, and received his doctorate at the University of Wisconsin in 1937. He was awarded the LLB, at Temple university in 1943.

Simple Request

Reading College Grad's Copy Is Just One of Life's Struggles

Rex Winslow of the Commerce school faculty recently asked Kiplinger magazine for permission to reprint an article from their publication which he thought would be of interest to North Carolina merchants.

Following are excerpts from the correspondence which took place between Mr. Winslow and Clarence G. Marshall, senior editor of the magazine:

Marshall: "My uncertainty about the propriety of permitting you to make your own reprints is due largely to a letter of protest we received the other day from a private research organization . . . that thought our article, 'Help for Businessmen From the Campus,' constituted an endorsement of the activities of tax supported institutions of learning in the business field in competition with private companies.

"I replied that I didn't think it was an endorsement, only a report of what was being done . . . but I am not sure I have the right to give the permission to reprint to you which I could not extend to a private organization. What is your opinion?"

Winslow: "In my opinion . . . the question is not one of right in a legal sense but one of business policy. Whether the Kiplinger organization would be better off in this particular instance by refusing the request of a public client to prevent possible unfavorable reaction from a private client, I would not guess. Certainly I give Kiplinger credit for understanding its own interest . . ."

Marshall: "There is no question of self-interest involved here. It is rather one of ethics. We certainly would not refuse . . . you permission to reprint . . . simply because it might mean the loss to us of private clients. But we would refuse if we thought in giving such permission to a public, tax supported institution, we were doing an injustice to a private organization, whether the latter is a client or not . . ."

Winslow: "The second paragraph in your letter . . . intrigued me very much. Being one of those fellows who takes an interest in philosophic conundrums and semantic merry-go-rounds, I was much exhilarated by your adroit

Work to Begin Next Tuesday, Marshall Says

Has Been Stored In Woollen Gym

Installation of the $75,000 Zeiss planetarium instrument in the Morehead building will begin Tuesday, Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the planetarium, announced yesterday.

The instrument, which has been stored in Woollen gym since its arrival, will be set up under the 58-foot dome by Dr. Marshall and planetarium technician Tony Jensano. The main part of the intricate projection equipment towers 10 feet above the floor. Some 250 smaller projectors are inset in the main body of the instrument.

Dr. Marshall estimated that it would take until the middle of April to get the machine adjusted, although the installation of the main part will take only about two days. The large projector weighs about 2300 pounds, while the entire machine, when assembled, will reach nearly three tons.

Other work is moving "very fast" now, Dr. Marshall said. Asphalt tile flooring is being laid in the main auditorium, and seats will be installed after the flooring is done. The auditorium will seat 492. Painting of the dome is also in progress.

The main part of the projection instrument, which arrived in 14 separate crates, has already been given a trial run to test motor and operation. Dr. Marshall said it took about two weeks to assemble the machine for the test.

The projector, one of five such instruments in the U.S., is capable of projecting 9,000 stars, the visible planets, the sun and the moon in all their movements, the aurora borealis, meteor showers and all else that can be seen in the heavens.

Hoyle Will Speak To Air Reservists

Lt. Com. V. A. Hoyle, professor of mathematics, will give a lecture on navigation at the regular meeting of the Naval Air Reserve unit on Monday night at 7:30 in the NROTC armory annex, Lt. R. E. Simpson, officer in charge, announced yesterday.

Pet Dog Case

OXFORD, Miss., March 4—(UP) — Bramlett Roberts, law professor at the University of Mississippi, won the first legal skirmish today over his student in a court case involving the death of a pet dog.

Almost the entire law class turned out for the student versus teacher case before Justice of the Peace Arthur Huggins.

The dog was owned by Jesse B. Holleman, junior law student and state legislator from Stone county, Miss. Holleman filed suit for $100 damages against the Taxi company involved in the accident.

The company hired Roberts to handle the case.

Holleman called his wife as a witness. An ex-debater, the student painted a picture of the animal "lying dead in the street" because of the driver's negligence.

Holleman then declared that cab owners were protected by insurance. Roberts challenged the statement as being outside the record.

Huggins sustained Roberts and declared a mistrial.

"This is not over," Holleman said. "I'll sue again at some future date."

The Saturday Letter

Fable of the Writer

(By R. E. Manchester, Dean of Men, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio)

Once upon a time, halfway between slow and fast clocks, in a kingdom by the pond on the Elite Golf course, there lived (between noon and midnight of each day) a second rate biped with a first rate bank account—a biped who had the weird idea that money would buy things. In his noodle was a notion that what he wanted could be obtained by writing a few words on the front side of a printed slip (furnished by a bank—any bank) and presenting said slip to a man at a desk—(any desk).

So long as he wanted things made of wood, steel, gold, silver or plastic he had no trouble and kept his book of "wants" and "haves" balanced. The technique was simple (1) desire (2) penmanship (3) have.

But there came a day when this check writing citizen noticed that others who frequented the kingdom had a lot of fun with things money couldn't buy. Conversation, memories, projects, argument and wit were some of the things our friend seemed unable to do much about when he said "How much does it cost?"

Our fountain pen artist noticed that when he walked into a group of good timers those of the group walked out. When he pulled his chair up, others pulled theirs out. When he tried to tell a story he didn't have one. When others "remembered when" he didn't "remember when." If a foursome was made up his number was five. If a little bridge game was suggested he had to play solitaire. An expert on statistics might have assumed that he (the hero of this essay) didn't belong.

The kingdom wasn't such a ritzy doozy spot when ideas began to filter through the bone and tissue. Sadness and lonesomeness followed the money artist as he drifted from room to room, from desk to chair and from "wake up" to "nighty night." If he had been a little smarter he might have jumped into the pond during the dark of the moon.

There isn't any happy ending because there isn't anything out of which a happy ending can be fabricated. As far as I know the kingdom is still by the pond and the check writer is still living out his gray foggy existence. It really doesn't make a difference in any other man's world, anyway.

Moral—Money is nice but inadequate.

New Haymes Releases Tops

Klassification Key

* Fine
 Fair
 Futile
* Foul

Tommy Dorsey
½ Someone Like You
 Where Is the One

"Someone" is a semi-jump vocal by Denny Dennis which is pretty good. It is helped along by a fine arrangement featuring section work. "Where" is a slow, sentimental vocal done up by the Clark sisters and Stuart Foster. It is a little too slow for dancing but fine music for dreaming.

Perry Como
 I Don't See Me in Your Eyes Anymore
* Forever and Ever

"Anymore" is an ex-lover's lament with a smooth vocal by Como. It is appealing but not exciting. If you have heard one of Como's records, you have heard them all. There are some exceptions to this such as "Huba, Huba, Huba." "Forever" is a waltz-time flop which wouldn't appeal to a dead flounder.

Vaughn Monroe
 Don't Lie to Me
* A Senorita's Bouquet

Neither of these are Monroe at his best. "Lie" is typical of the usual Monroe interpretation with choral background. There is absoluterly nothing new about this side. "Bouquet" is a boring, dragging vocal with no redeeming qualities. Vaughn is capable of better work than either of these.

Buddy Clark
 I Don't See Me in Your Eyes Anymore*
 I Get Up Every Morning

This rendition of "Anymore" is much better than the same tune by Perry Como. The arrangement is much better and Buddy's vocal is much more pleasing. His natural tone and unforced voice make the record. The reverse has the same inspired vocal and fine arrangement, but the tune and lyrics are particularly important.

Dick Haymes
* Where or When
 Say It Isn't So

"Where" is one of the best records of its type to hit the market in many a day. It is a wonderful tune sung excellently and arranged perfectly to top it off. It could have been improved in one spot by violins instead of the solo on trombone but aside from this, this side is tops. The reverse is almost as good, but the tune isn't of the same top quality. What a combination this Haymes and Cavallaro make!

Technical Faults Conquered

New Quarterly Well Done

By Sally Woodhull

The promise of good things to come made by the attractive cover of the new issue of the Carolina Quarterly is well carried out by the entire magazine. Such technical faults as misplacing of ads and crowding of material which appeared in the first issue have been conquered, and the magazine presents an attractive appearance, with excellently done illustrations adding to its appeal.

The five articles by professionals are well done and of great interest to readers. Dean Henry L. Kamphoefner's discussion of "Contemporary Architecture and the Southern Tradition" is particularly noteworthy in view of its regional appeal. Though the uninitiated layman may want to disagree violently with Mr. Kamphoefner's attacks on beloved Gothic and Georgian styles of architecture, he will want to know the professional's views on "the development of a dynamic and progressive architecture in the south."

The article by Richard Walser on Thomas Wolfe's reputation abroad is disappointing in that it is, as its title points out, merely "some notes on" the subject. Interesting as it is to have a list of translations of Wolfe's works and of comments on them by foreign critics, one could wish for a fuller discussion of the significance of all these foreign phrases.

Ruth Wolfe furnishes delightful reading in her vivid description of the picturesque city of Tangier and her experiences in bargaining with the natives in the market place. M. Jacques Hardre's article on existentialism is necessarily quite at the opposite extreme, demanding slow and careful reading to gain an understanding of it. Walter P. Eaton's article on the college theater as a "weapon to preserve the beautiful art of the drama in America" is of great interest to Chapel Hillians and to theater lovers throughout the country.

Fiction and poetry are in general above the quality of the fall issue. The short stories, all written by women, deal with unusual subject matters in interesting fashion. Nancy Murphy's story laid in a mental hospital is excellently done. "A Fish for Gracie" by Helen D. Harrison is powerful in its simplicity. "The Red Car" by Betty Pierson is a brief, concise, well directed treatment of a murder theme. Lois Latham draws her characters with unusual competence in her sketch, "The Provincials." Richard Cheatham's almost New Yorker-like book reviews add much to the magazine. The poetry, though in some cases too deep for the casual reader, is not the meaningless twaddle that one fears from young modern poets.

Adelaide Addle's Advice

Notes on Ph. D.'s and Politics

By Adelaide Addle

Dear Miss Addle:

After many months of trying to overcome my excessive shyness, I finally succeeded in asking a young lady, who, though a coed working for a Ph. D., is truly angelic of countenance, for a date next Saturday; and to my immense relief she accepted me.

Since I wish to be at my best that evening, I have made plans to do my work early that day, and to take an extended nap in the afternoon. However, my two roommates have announced their intention of listening to the Metropolitan Opera broadcast that Saturday afternoon.

Even though I suspect that their sudden interest in matters cultural has no source other than their desire to spite me, I do not want to antagonize them excessively, since I shall be compelled to live with them for some time to come; on the other hand, my future might depend on how alert I am Saturday evening.

What shall I do? Shall I report my roommates to the Honor Council? Or shall I risk making a poorer than optimum impression on the woman I love?

Signed Lovelorn

Dear Lovelorn:

Since your girl is the intellectual type, it might give you a good subject of conversation if you listen to the opera. In order to get sleep you have several possibilities; try a sleeping pill or ear muffs. A safer method would be to convince the infirmary that you have appendicitis; by the time a blood count is made you will have gotten your sleep. Your only worry might be that they might find you really sick; in that case, tie two sheets together and climb out of the window.

Dear Mrs. Addle:

I am very much in love with a boy, and he is very much in love with me; in fact, we both love each other. Recently he became a Communist and now wants me to give away my fur coat because it embarrasses him.

Not that I agree with him, but I do respect his feelings. He says if I don't give the coat away or burn it, he will leave me. I voted for Thurmond in November, but I don't think that little things like politics should interfere with true love.

Should I keep the coat or the boy? The coat is mink.

Signed: You All

Dear You All:

Hmmmm. Although your letter does not sound genuine, it presents a problem. Ask the boy whether he would compromise for a raccoon coat (they were popular in my day) or perhaps rabbit.

Your ideologies really aren't too far apart, and you might try to convince your love to be a state's righter. If neither of these ideas work, you will have to decide whether you want luxury or love. They both have their advantages.

Since summer is near at hand and warm weather will soon be upon us, with the flowers blooming and the birds singing their lovely songs, the argument might be postponed until next year by which time the boy may have changed his ideas—you might not love him by next winter either. Only you can decide what to do.

Dear Adelaide Addle:

Recently I bought your cook book and tried your recipe for "Old Plantation Pickled Liverworst." It failed. Do you put the pickles or the Liverworst in first?

Signed: Cookie

Dear Cookie:

Neither. First put the onions in, then salt vineger, olive oil, pepper, yoke of egg, beat thoroughly. Next add cloves, flour, and half cup of milk; then put the pickles and liverworst in together. I hope you enjoy the dish this time.

Write Away

Not Exclusive to Childhood

Editor:

In his sports page defense of professionalism in college football, the sage of Hillbilly Hill really went off on a tangent in his frenzied effort to support such antics. That athletics has its place in college activities cannot be denied, but that shouldn't give anyone room to believe, as Wild William evidently does, that state universities should be a minor league for the All-American conference or the National football league.

If the scheduled game with Notre Dame next season is not gross professionalism, then never has a man donned a football uniform for the distinct purpose of making money. The most gross hypocrisy of it all is that it cloaks itself in the name of higher education. The type football we have in college circles today brings greenstuff into the safe of the athletic department—also true. But is it a necessary stimulation in the process of education? Perhaps we'd be better off with Marjorie Main, who, after all, is a much better actress than Betty Grable.

I should certainly hate to believe, even in my weaker moments (such as this), that the Carolina spirit is "generated primarily" by the standings of our athletic teams in the box score, ebbing and flowing according to position. I would much rather believe that this spirit is generated and nourished by the liberality which exists here.

The using of Paul Fauche, orphan, to substantiate his argument almost worked. It was very appealing. Let us say that instead of being a sure-fire college calibre player in line for a football scholarship, Paul comes along as merely a mediocre ballplayer but with a fine mind. The college talent scouts have decided that he would be doomed to ride the bench for four years if he got that far. His teammate, Speed Bolt, on the other hand, drives the fans wild with his massive broken-field running, but his name rests securely on the bottom of the scholastic ladder. Which man gets the college scholarship? Mr. Carmichael, Third, knows the answer as well as anyone. Is Paul going to be trained to believe that you must be a great football player or have money in order to get a college education, or will the day come when he will know that it's the deserving who gets the chance? If this seems idealistic, it's because seeking justice (brain and brawn equality) is in itself idealistic. It's difficult to believe that one who speaks of professional football, education, and boys on the same plane can have a genuine interest in the boy.

As to what "professional students" and "amateur academics" consists of, I'll never know. Doubtlessly more of the sports editor's Notre Dame shifting. And hero worship is not exclusive to childhood. Is it, Billy?

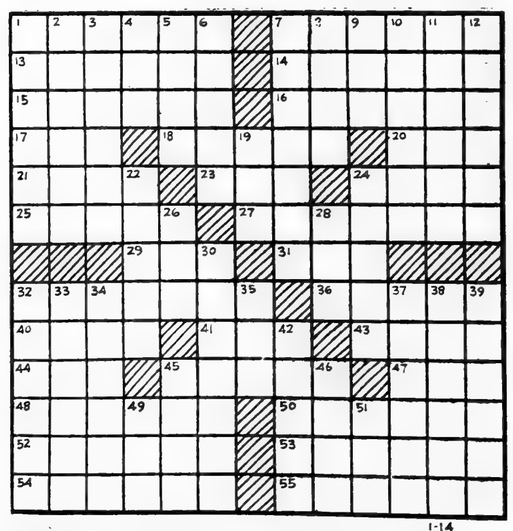
On Purely Aesthetic Grounds



Editor:

On purely aesthetic grounds, I regret the inclusion of the Daily Worker with the newspapers for sale at meal times at Lenoir hall. I contend that the majority of the students would prefer to eat without being subjected upon passing the newspaper stand to whatever emotion, ranging from irritation to disgust, that publication evokes in most of us.

Clearly this letter leaves itself open, for critics so inclined, to sarcastic attack based either upon the principle of freedom of the press or upon an assumption of a predilection for ulcers on the part of this writer, which he fervently hopes will prove false withal. In defense, I want to make it clear that I do not advocate banning the paper. I do want the outside readers of the Daily Tar Heel to know that, if the number of sales is a fair criterion, the average student is not likely to read William Z. Foster with his morning coffee.

It will sadden few of us when the lack of profits removes the Worker from the Lenoir hall stands, for surely those interested in reading the Worker for one reason or another can find other ways of procuring it without adding this latest contribution to what is in fact a false impression of the Carolina student body as a whole. It should be pointed out that the total circulation of the Worker throughout the United States is little more than twice that of the Daily Tar Heel on this campus.

Pro-Filibuster Senators See Foes as 'Wolves in Sheep's Cloture'

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King features syndicate Inc.)

Senate Southlanders have taken practically a blood vow to stop at nothing to preserve the filibuster, but their latest assault smacks of sheer terrorism.

In efforts to prevent passage of a cloture rule, limiting debate, they have perpetrated a punning horror. They are referring to opponents as:

"Wolves in sheep's cloture."

Washingtonians are going nuts over a game called "Lobby," devised by Mrs. Douglas L. Hatch, wife of one of our more politically-minded attorneys.

This revealing game, which has some of the superficial trappings of a once-popular thing called "Monopoly" (played in the evil old days when people thought they could make money), is worked with a regular cardboard playing surface, dice, and fac-similes of Congressional bills.

The idea is to get a bill through both Houses, signed by the President, and made into law.

Every hazard that a real bill could encounter—including heat from pressure groups, for and against—rears its distracting head in the game. Measures become stymied in committee; run into filibusters, and become snarled, snookered and snafued in amendments.

Painfully true to Congressional procedure, players can also logroll: Trade votes with other players to get support for their bill.

The thing is instructive; too bloody instructive, some Congressmen are yelping. It shows, move by move, just what can happen to a measure from the time it is dropped in the hopper. (If you will pardon the expression) until it dies, withers from inaction, or becomes law.

Mrs. Hatch has had her game praised and denounced in turns by senators and representatives who have been conned into playing it. Quite a few contend it is okay for "inside the club," meaning them, but that it exposes too much for the rank and file of voters.

They have expressed the pious hope that its popularity won't spread beyond the capital, because it might prove too much of a revelation to the folks back home. The game is self-explanatory—but whether it explains too much is the issue at hand.

I wouldn't be surprised if some of our lobbyists started lobbying against "Lobby."

My esteemed friend and mentor, Mr. John L. Morrison, editor of thhe Greenville (Pa) Record-Argus, takes a subtle way of reminding me that he keeps abreast of developments in the capital. He submits this—without comment:

"Some years ago, when we still had Republican Presidents, a man in early middle life was brought before Justice of the Peace William D. Reznor here charged with assault and battery on his mother.

"The defendant-son pleaded guilty. Squire Reznor, in considerable indignation asked: 'Why in the world would you strike your own mother, sitting in a rocking chair in her own home?'

"The defendant promptly replied:

"'She called me a S. O. B. and I won't take that from anybody!'"

Once again my romantic soul is aglow over the combination of love and heavy industry in the "People's Republic" of Czechoslovakia as reported in this Reuters dispatch:

"In the new Czechoslovakia, it appears, the usual lover's greetings are out of order.

"It is no longer correct for a sweetheart to say: 'Darling, I love you.'

"Instead, worker-lovers should coo: 'Darling, how are your production norms today?'"

Seems a little personal, though.

Tar Heels Lose Heartbreaker; State-GW In Finals Tonight

Goals by Dickey, McComas Bring Victory to Wolfpack

By Dick Jenrette

DUKE INDOOR STADIUM, DURHAM, March 4—A scrapping band of Carolina Tar Heels played their hearts out here tonight, only to lose to heavily-favored N. C. State, 43-40, in the most thrilling game yet in this 28th annual Southern conference basketball tourney. A capacity crowd of 9,000 witnessed the struggle between the two old rivals.

As a result, State, which is the top-seeded team in the tourney, moves into the finals tomorrow night against George Washington. Game time is 8 o'clock.

Coach Tom Scott's Carolina cagers, who had been soundly thrashed by the Wolfpack twice during the regular season, made a battle of it all the way. The lead changed hands frequently throughout the encounter, with the biggset deficit between the two teams at any one time being six points. On this occasion, State ran up a 25-19 lead just at the start of the second half.

Led Most of Way

However, the Tar Heels managed to hang on to the lead for most of the game, and were ahead by 40-39 with 3:30 left to play. With the pressure on at this point, Jack McComas, who had been effectively bottled up all evening, connected on a long set shot from the right side of the court to move the Pack into the van, 41-40.

Coach Everett Case's State outfit then began a slow, deliberate brand of play. Carolina got the ball on only one occasion, and Charlie Thorne's long set missed. With 2:30 left, State's All-Southern Dick Dickey pumped in a jump shot to provide the clincher, 43-40. State successfully froze the ball for the rest of the way, waiving one foul shot to take the ball out of bounds.

The Tar Heels were able to garner but nine field goals tonight, but hit on 22 attempts from the free throw line to keep in the running. The most prominent feature of Carolina's play was the Tar Heels' great rebound work. Hugo Kappler, Dan Nyimicz, and Nemo Nearman did yeoman work under the boards.

Kappler Leads Carolina

Dicky was the high scorer for the night. The strawberry blond hustler netted 13 points on five field goals and three foul tosses. Kappler's 10 was high for Carolina, with six of these coming on free throws.

Only two men fouled out tonight, both of these being State players—and centers. The pair were Paul Horvath and Bob Hahn.

The first half tonight was equally as thrilling as the second, with the biggest lead for either team being two points. With just 45 seconds left in the initial period, Nyimicz dropped in a free throw for a 19-18 Tar Heel lead. But that same combination which later was to spell defeat for Carolina—McComas and Dickey—came through in the waning seconds. McComas hit a foul shot to tie the count, and Dickey looped in a miraculous hook shot from the right for a 21-19 State lead at the half.

Brightest Point

Carolina's victory hopes were brightest in the second half when the Scottmen built up a 38-34 lead with seven minutes to go in the second half. But Joe Harand and Dickey added a total of three foul shots to cut it to 38-37. Nearman hit a foul shot for Carolina making it 39-37 with less than six minutes and then added another charity shot for a 40-37 lead with 4:50 to go. Harand shook loose for a push shot to narrow the score to 40-39 with 4:30 left.

Dickey and McComas then took charge with their key field goals to round out the final 43-40 score. It was a heartbreaking loss for the Tar Heels, who put all they had into the game.

Ben Hogan Improving Following Operation

EL PASO, Tex., March 4.—(UP)—Bantam Ben Hogan was responding "wonderfully well" today to a critical, two-hour operation by an internationally-known surgeon who set up a "detour" in the golf star's bloodstream to keep blood clots from his heart.

Attendants at Hotel Dieu, the El Paso hospital where the diminutive links king has been bedridden for more than a month, said Hogan was in considerable pain as an aftermath of the operation but that he was resting well.

Royal Hogan, an elder brother, said Ben had a "good night," but still was "a little groggy" from the effects of the intricate surgery performed last night by New Orleans' famed Dr. Alton Ochsner.

Kemp and Gupton In SC Mat Finals At W&L Tonight

LEXINGTON, Va., March 5—Tar Heel matmen Phil Kemp and Oscar Gupton won semi-final rounds here tonight to advance to the Southern Conference championship bouts here tomorrow night.

Kemp won his bout handily, defeating Phoebus of Maryland, 8-1. Gupton also had an easy time winning over VMI's Blackwell, 10-3. Kemp will face Meredith of VMI for the title in the 155-pound class and Gupton will meet Harrison of Duke for the 165-pound title.

Gupton, talented 165-pounder drew a bye in the first round this afternoon. He finished the dual meet season with one lone defeat.

Ed Turnley, Carolina's representative in the 136-pound class was pinned by defending champion Joe Sconce of Washington and Lee in the third period. Turnley, who was pinned by Sconce earlier this year in a dual meet, was much improved over his last appearance, but Sconce was just too much for the inexperienced Tar Heel.

Charlie Harless, another Tar Heel with only limited experience, lost to Maryland's Lysakowski. The Marylander pinned him early in the first period.

Kemp put on a good show in his first round match, defeating Scott of the Citadel, 8-0.

As the tourney proceeds, it still looks like the potent Generals of Washington and Lee are the class of the Southern Conference wrestling circle. They won the title handily last year, having four individual championships awarded to the Lexington crew.

UNC Swimmers Take Eight Firsts To Cement Loop Championship

By Larry Fox

Taking every first place in the varsity and freshman events tonight, the Carolina swimming team were mathematically assured of victory in the Southern conference swimming championships being held here with a total of 79 points as compared to 19 for Duke in second place.

The competition will be resumed this afternoon with trials in the final six events beginning at 2:30. The finals, at which a 50 cent admission will be charged, will start at 8 o'clock this evening.

One record was broken as the Tar Heels made their clean sweep of first places and now every Conference record belongs to Carolina. Captain Dick Twining set the new mark of 2:25 in the 200-yard breaststroke in the afternoon trials and then proceeded to chop another tenth of a second off in the evening finals. The old record of 2:25.9 was held by Bill Kelly of State.

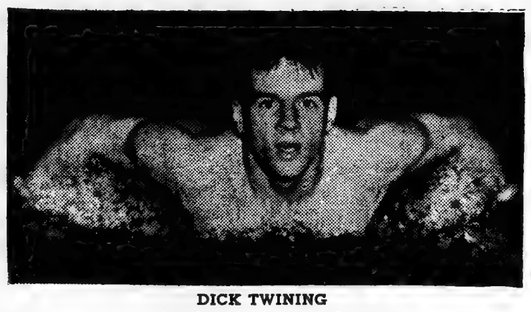
Norm Sper captured the George Tullidge Memorial trophy for winning the 150-yard backstroke in 1:37.6. Sper led all of the way to continue the Carolina string of firsts. Mat Lojka picked up four points for State college by finishing second and Paul Gubbins of Duke was third.

The 220-yard freestyle saw Tar Heels in the first three positions, although Jim Thomas was way in front at the finish in 2:17.2 with Bob Hutton, who won the 1500 last night, second and Ronnie Basescue third.

The same pattern held true in the 200-yard breaststroke where Twining set his record. He was followed home by Dan Breeden and Gerry Cook, in that order.

About the closest event of the evening was the diving, which Carolina's Buddy Crone took over John Connor of Duke by 2.2 points. Crone won possession of the John Feuchtenberger Memorial trophy with a total of 130.1 points.

Events scheduled for today are the freshman 200-yard breaststroke and 150-yard backstroke, and the varsity 100-yard freestyle, 150-yard individual medley, 440-yard freestyle, and 300-yard medley relay. There will also be exhibition high diving.



The summary:

Joe Lewis Corrals Talent In Promoters' Title War

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 4—(UP)—The National Boxing association today counted itself out of the "promoters' war" over the heavyweight crown but said that promoter Joe Louis "seemingly has corralled the recognized contenders."

NBA commissioner Abe J. Greene, who announced Louis' formal ring retirement Tuesday, said in a statement that the Louis plan to select his successor has averted disorganization.

The man who wins the crown under the Louis plan "will undoubtedly be universally accepted as the champion, regardless of the general appraisal of his place in pugilistic history," Greene said.

If Greene did not desire a war over selection of a new heavyweight king there were others who obviously did.

Chairman Eddie Egan of the New York Boxing commission has announced officially that his organization will not recognize the Ezzard Charles-Jersey Joe Walcott bout as a title fight, the plan offered by Louis and his associates in the International Boxing club.

Aged and ailing Mike Jacobs also announced that he would return to take over the helm of the 20th Century club which said it had Charles under an exclusive contract which will not expire until next November.

Upon his retirement, Louis had submitted to the NBA a plan to stage the Charles-Walcott fight in June with the winner picking up his crown. Lee Savold and Gus Lesnevich, other contenders recognized by the NBA, would have a later shot at the winner of the June fight.

Colonials Edge W & M, 78-74 In Triple-Overtime Thriller

DURHAM, March 5—George Washington University and The College of William and Mary put on one of the best shows of the Southern conference basketball tournament here tonight as the Colonials were forced to carry the ball game into three overtime periods—setting a new precedent for tourney history—before winning over the determined Indians, 87-74.

It was mainly through the efforts of Indian Center Chet Giermak, who set a new individual scoring record with 36 points, that William and Mary forced the Colonials to go all-out to win. Giermak was injured after one minute of the third overtime and was given a great ovation by the capacity crowd as he left the ball game.

At the end of the regulation game, the score was tied at 62-all. The Washington, D. C. crew put on a daring second half attack to come from behind and knot the count. As they left the floor at half-time they were trailing the Indians by 12 points.

The first overtime period ended in a 65-65 tie. With one minute left the Colonials, thinking there were two more minutes to go, put on the freeze and the gun sounded without an attempt at the basket.

Maynard Haithcock opened the scoring for the Colonials in the second overtime with two foul shots after one minute had elapsed. McNiff added a layup a minute later and GW was ahead by four points. At this point the fans, who had seen a whale of a lot of basketball during the eevning, began to head for the exit, thinking the game was on ice.

But the spectacular happened and William and Mary pulled up on a foul shot by Sokol with 35 seconds left making the score 69-66. Giermak added another foul toss with 20 seconds to go and sank a push shot as the gun went off to tie it all up again, this time at 69-all. By this time five GW players were out of the game on fouls and the Colonials were forced to unload the bench in the attempt to stay ahead.

The third overtime opened with a foul shot by Phil McNiff. A few seconds later he added a layup shot to give the Presidents a 72-69 lead. It was at this point that Giermak suffered a leg cramp and left the game. Holley added a foul toss for W & M and the Colonials were ahead by two points. Schreiber tallied on a push shot and a layup within the next minute to make it 76-70.

Cindermen Drill In Preparation For Next Meet

Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton had their Tar Heel cindermen outdoors again yesterday as they drilled the boys long and hard, preparatory to their next meet—the Florida Relays to be held in Gainesville, Fla. on March 26.

The Carolina squad will be practically the same one that took the Southern conference indoor championship in the annual meet in Woollen a week ago.

Versatile Bill Albans, Sam Magill, Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow, Jack Moody, Percy Flowers, and Bob Seligman are a few of the brighter prospects of the current Tar Heel edition, but a number of other boys are coming along rapidly and big things are expected from them this spring.

Although their first meet is some three weeks away, the Carolinians have been working hard all week, and as a result seem to be at a peak.

At least one member of the Carolina contingent will be a title defender when the squad journeys to Florida. Moody took first-place honors in the high jump event in the "Sunshine State" event last year, and has

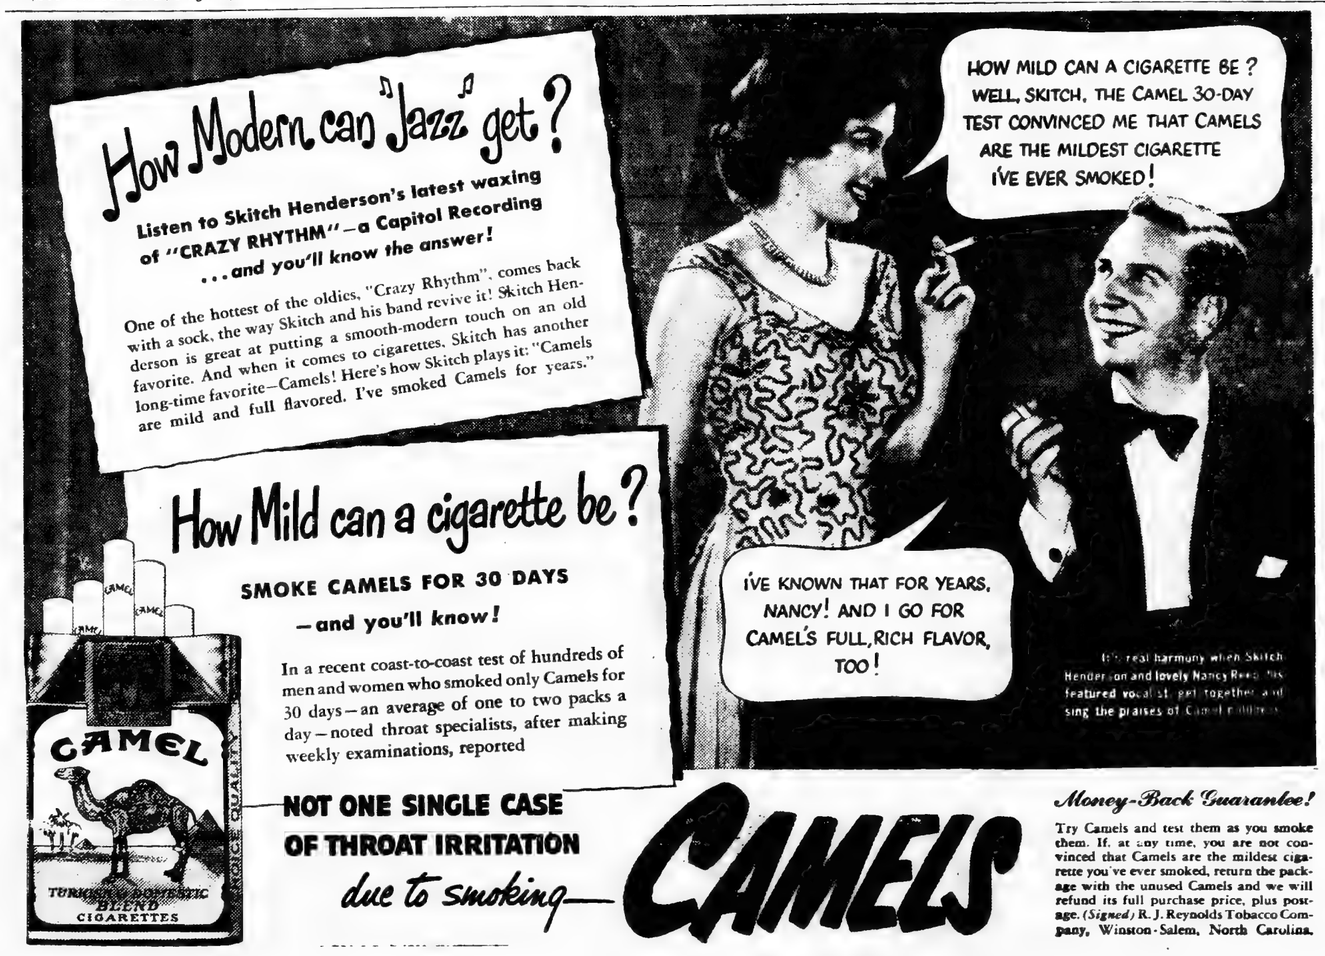
Chapel Hill Downs Washington; Advances to Semi-Final Round

Chapel Hill high school's amazing Wildcats added another win to their lengthy list last night and advanced another rung towards the state championship by defeating Washington high, 33-24.

Tonight the Wildcats will be fighting it out with Kinston for a spot in the championship playoffs at Duke. Kinston advanced to the semi-finals by virtue of last night's 48-35 win over Roxboro.

The Chapel Hill-Washington game was close all the way, with Coach Bill Grice's boys pouring it on in the last quarter to win by a nine-point margin.



As the first half ended Chapel Hill was ahead by only one point, but the superb defensive play of J. Q. Phillips allowed the Wildcats to maintain the advantage. Phillips also was one of the top scorers with 11 points.

Hill of Chapel Hill led the scoring for both clubs with 12 points. Bowen of Washington was third with ten and Tee Maultsby of Chapel Hill tallied seven.

Defense Proposals Pushed For Action

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—The House Rules committee today cleared four key defense bills for speedy House action, including a super-secret measure legalizing the Central Intelligence agency, the nation's top espionage organization.

The other bills provide for a vast radar warning "screen" around North America, a 3,000-mile guided missile test range, and the creation of a new under-secretary of defense.

The measures are slated to come up for House action Monday and Tuesday under "closed" rules barring amendments not offered by the House Armed Services committee and limiting debate to one hour.

House leaders may seek an even stricter debate curb on the spy bill by using procedure requiring passage by a two-thirds vote. Under that process debate is limited to 20 minutse for and 20 minutes against a measure.

Members of the armed services committee have stated that the spy bill is so vital and so confidential that almost nothing can be told of its aims.

The CIA is the clearing house for all espionage by other government agencies. Its duty is to evaluate intelligence information and give its conclusions to top policy-makers, including President Truman and Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson.

Sponsors of the measure used that argument today when Rep. Francis E. Walter, D. Pa., asked that the bill be left open to amendment. He wanted a chance to remove a clause permitting up to 100 "informers" from behind the iron curtain to be admitted to this country each year.

Walter explained that a judiciary subcommittee, which he heads, is drafting an immigration measure that will cover such informers, but Rep. Dewey Short, R., Mo., ranking Republican on the Armed Services committee, protested.

"I might say this is more or less dirty business we are dealing with," he said. "It is highly secret." Then he added to the mystery surrounding the provision by asserting:

"These 100 men are wanted for a very special purpose that is very necessary."

The proposed radar "screen" would warn of the approach of "enemy" planes. It would be built by the United States and Canada jointly. This country's share of the cost would be $161,000,000.

Gillin To Speak To Hillel Group In Student Union

The culture of our average man in comparison with the average man in Guatamala will be the point of Dr. John Gillin, principle speaker at the monthly supper forum of the Hillel foundation, tomorrow afternoon at 5:30, in Roland Parker lounges 1, 2 and 3, Graham Memorial. His talk is entitled, "You and Your Insecurity."

Dr. Gillin, professor of anthropology, who worked in Guatamala several years, claims that in some respects their culture resembles ours.

One unique trait the natives have, Dr. Gillin said, is that of making a person feel at ease. His discussion Monday will deal with how people are able to feel secure with their culture, and will answer the question, "Is our culture the type in which one gets the expected rewards?"

Here in the United States, people seem to lose their personality, Dr. Gillin said. They seem to think that it is gone and they can't "click" in society as they once did. But, he goes on, in Guatamala they call it "soul-lost."

This term comes from the superstition the natives have that at times they feel as though their soul is literally lost. To cure this ill, they have a medicine doctor who performs rituals in an attempt to regain the "lost soul."

The medicine man seems to make the natives think the spirits are on their side, Dr. Gillin stated.

Labor Group O.K.'s Repeal Of Labor Bill

GOP Protests Are Overruled

WASHINGTON, March 4 — (UP)—The Senate Labor committee overrode angry Republican protests today and approved President Truman's single-package Taft-Hartley repeal bill without even changing a comma.

The strictly party line vote was 8 to 5.

Sen. Robert A. Taft. R., O., co-author of the Taft-Hartley act, denounced the decision as "a most high-handed procedure." Sen. Wayne Morse, R., Ore., a Taft-Hartley foe, nevertheless chimed in that the committee had used "iron-curtain tactics."

The measure would repeal the GOP-sponsored labor-management law and revive the old Wagner act with these "improvements":

1. Curbs on jurisdictional strikes and "unjustifiable" secondary boycotts.

2. A 30-day "cooling-off" period in national emergency strikes.

3. Return the independent conciliation service to the Labor department.

All of the Taft-Hartley act would be discarded, including provisions for 80-day court injunctions to block emergency strikes, closed shop ban, and a requirement that union leaders must sign non-Communist affidavits to be eligible for services of the National Labor Relations board.

City Managers To Discuss Jobs

"Administrative Problems of the City Manager" will be the topic for discussion at the Monday meeting of the American Society for Public Administration at 8 o'clock in 208 Caldwell hall, Randy Hamilton, president of the University chapter of the society said yesterday. The public is invited.

Discussion leaders will be City Managers Gilbert Ray, Chapel Hill; Roy S. Braden, Raleigh; C. R. Perkins, Winston-Salem; W. E. Carper, Burlington and J. R. Townsend of Greensboro.

In his announcement of the meeting, Hamilton said, "This meeting will offer an unusual opportunity for the discussion of administrative problems with some of the leading city managers of North Carolina who are exceptionally well qualified to lead this discussion."

Communist Jury System Challenge Brings Lengthy Rejection by Judge

NEW YORK, March 4.—(UP)—The Communist challenge to the federal jury system here was rejected in all respects today by Judge Harold R. Medina who ordered the trial of the party's top 11 U. S. leaders to begin in earnest on Monday.

After seven weeks of legal skirmishing, Medina upheld the validity both of the grand jury which indicted the Communist "National board" and the petit jury panels from which the men and women who judge the guilt or innocence of the defendants will be picked.

In his 25-page decision, Medina found there was no "deliberate, wilful and planned discrimination" charged against Negroes, Jews, women, the poor and labor groups.

"Had any such iniquitous system as that alleged by the defendants," he wrote, "been in force for such a long period as that from 1940 to 1949, or indeed for any substantial period, its existence would necessarily have been widely known and it is hard to believe that a storm of protest would not have arisen and immediate steps then taken to uproot such intolerance and discrimination.

"Of all places in the United States, it seems to me that New York city would be the one least likely to permit such a system to flourish in its midst."

Committee Backs Control of Rent Overwhelmingly

WASHINGTON, March 4 — (UP)—The House Banking committee today overwhelmingly approved a bill to continue rent controls for 15 months and end the "voluntary" 15 per cent rent hikes allowed under present law.

The measure, endorsed by a 20 to 4 majority, is stronger than the existing rent law but not as strong as the administration wanted.

Chairman Brent Spence, D., Ky., said it will reach the House floor next week. The Senate Banking committee is considering similar legislation.

Existing rent controls are due to expire March 31.

Soldiers, Firemen Rush to Aid Town

By William Sexton

PEACHLAND, March 4—(UP) — A task force of soldiers and firemen from surrounding cities raced to this town of 500 today to put out the volcano-like fire that threatens to destroy it.

A huge mound of sawdust covering three acres burns out of control, tossing flames and smoke over the village.

National guardsmen and firemen, using equipment borrowed around central North Carolina, joined to battle the blaze. They estimate the task may take a week.

The sawdust has been collecting for 20 years at the Peachland Lumber Co., one of two mills here. Smoke started pouring from it six weeks ago, and flames burst forth a week ago. The fire spread rapidly over the 100-foot tall mound and was out of control by Monday.

Flying sparks already have ignited a feed mill and cotton gin. They burned to the ground Monday because the town has no fire equipment. The nearest supply of water is a creek nearly a mile distant.

Flying sparks are a constant threat. Men idled by the fire take turns patrolling the streets and yards to put out sparks that land there.

The blazing mound stands near the center of town. By night its flames light up the streets and attract the curious from miles around. At day it pours smoke into homes and stores.

'Danger Over' In Peachland, Firemen Say

Town of 500 May Now Rest

PEACHLAND, March 5—(UP)—Smoke - grimed firefighters, weary after a solid night of pumping water on the flaming mound of sawdust that once threatened to destroy this community, reported "danger over" today.

It was the best news for the 500 sleepless residents of the small lumbering village. For a week they feared the sparks showering from the three-acre sawdust pile might wipe out their homes.

National guardsmen under Master Sgt. Robert L. McAmulty of Charlotte, firemen from surrounding cities and volunteers manned pumps and hoses through the chilly night.

By dawn they had beaten out most of the flames from the mound, which once stood 100 feet tall. It still burned inside but the threat of flying sparks appeared at an end.

The guardsmen and firemen manned two fire engins and two trailer pump units stretched through field, swamp and woods to bring water from a creek nearly a mile, the nearest source of water.

Through the night local citizens took turns at the nozzles, pouring water on the volcano-like mound.

Whether they could continue controlling the fire depended on stamina of the pumps, which had been in operation at full capacity without rest since they arrived yesterday. But the pillar of fire which for a week had lighted the sky for miles around by night was gone for the present.

"Yesterday morning it looked like a volcano," one grimy, weary smokeater said. "Today it's just a big mound of charred, smoking wood. But the fire's still inside."

Firemen from Charlotte and Greensboro, 50 miles distant, joined National guard units sent in by Gov. Kerr Scott yesterday. It took all day to lay hose over the rough terrain. Firemen had to borrow hose from seven cities before they completed the double line to the creek at nightfall.

Concert Set By Orchestra In Hill Hall

Program Planned Tuesday Evening

The University symphony orchestra, conducted by Earl Slocum, will present its second concert of the year this Tuesday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

To be heard on the program will be "Symphony in E Minor," by Brahms; "Concerto in D Minor," by Sibelius; and Virgil Thomson's suite, "The Plow That Broke the Plains."

Soloist for the occasion will be Edgar Alden, playing the Sibelius violin concerto in D minor. Mr. Alden, instructor and graduate student in the music department, is well-known in North Carolina as a musician of outstanding ability.

After graduating from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, he came to Raleigh in 1937 as teacher of violin and theory at Meredith college where he was heard in many solo recitals. While there he organized the Raleigh string quartet and also the Raleigh Chamber Music guild which he conducted for many years.

Alden also found time to serve as concert master of the North Carolina symphony and as soloist for the Mozart festival in Asheville under the direction of Thor Johnson, present conductor of the Cincinnati symphony.

At present he is a member of the University string quartet and Symphony orchestra.

Exhibits to Be Shown Today On Architecture, Sculpture

A color photograph exhibition of Taliesin and Taliesin West, the two houses of noted architect Frank Lloyd Wright, will be on view in the Person hall art gallery beginning today and continuing through the week.

The photographs were made by Ezra Stroller and were used by Fortune magazine to illustrate an article on the work of Wright. Both houses reveal the use of native materials which Wright has employed in their construction.

An exhibition of sculpture in plastics by Leo Amino will also be featured in the Person art gallery this week. Amino is recognized as the first sculptor to explore the possibilities of plastics as a medium for sculptural expression.

He has had many years of experience in carving and modeling in conventional materials. His sculptures are abstract but they have realistic titles. Strange Landscape, Memory of the Sea, and Modern Totem are the names of some of Amino's works.

Amino's works are largely the result of his self-teaching. He has had nine one-man exhibitions. The present display in Person hall is on loan from the Clay Club Sculpture center in New York city.

Those in charge of the program are Bill Brown, Mrs. Lorita Fishe, Ed McLeod, and Buddy Crone.

For those interested in a vacation and earning money at the same time, positions are open at resort centers such as the Blue Ridge mountain assembly and at YMCA centers where students may take special Y courses. Camp councelors are also needed in various places.

Help is needed in industrials plants and in state mental hospitals. Chances to study government and be empolyed in a government agency is being offered this summer in Washington, D. C.

Patrolman Warns Motorists to Get Lights Repaired

State Highway Patrolman E. C. Parnell yesterday warned all owners of automobiles in the Chapel Hill area to have lights on their cars functioning properly when traveling at night.

"The state automobile inspection law has been repealed, but there is still no excuse for drivers to operate cars with improper equipment."

Parnell said he had noticed a decided increase in the number of cars traveling with improper lights since the repeal of the State inspection law.

The highway patrol is still spot checking cars to make sure equipment is in order, and one truck was stopped last week that did not even have wiring for a tail light.

Father Koch attended the University's school of journalism and was assistant to Father Morrissey during the summer of 1947. At present he is pastor of St. Eugene's church at Wendell and editor of the "North Carolina Catholic," a weekly newspaper published by the N. C. Catholic Laymen's Association.

Truman Asks More Powers For Johnson

Defense Secretary Would Unify Groups

WASHINGTON, March 5—(UP)—President Truman today asked Congress to give the Secretary of Defense complete control of the nation's military with broad enough powers to weld the three services firmly into one mighty fighting unit.

His proposals would make the secretary second only to the President himself in supreme command of the Army, Navy and Air Force. They also called for a new "chief of chiefs" of the various armed branches who, in effect, would be the country's ranking military man.

Mr. Truman told Congress the proposals represented a swift step toward the long-sought unification of the armed services. The last war, he said, proved such a program "essential in the modern world" to protect the nation or to fight any kind of new war.

In general, Mr. Truman followed recommendations of the Hoover commission in his special message to Congress. That commission urged demotion of the secretaries of the three branches and a combining of work duties for more efficiency.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, former Army chief of staff now on leave from Columbia university, is serving temporarily as chairman of the joint chiefs of staff to work on unification. It was believed Mr. Truman had the full benefit of Eisenhower's wartime experience as top allied commander in making today's recommendations.

The President said the need to unify the armed forces was learned the hard way in World War II when rigid divisions hampered the country's effort.

"No one advocates a return to the outmoded organization of the days preceding the (1947) National Security act," he said. "On the contrary the issue today is not whether we should have unification, but how we can make it more effective . . . the effective and workable organization . . . of our armed forces is essential in the modern world."

Mr. Truman's recommendations came as his newly-appointed Secretary of Defense, Louis A. Johnson, prepared to take over the job from retiring Secretary James Forrestal, who leaves March 31.

Fraternity Group To Hear Dr. Lyman

Dr. Richard S. Lyman, of the neuropsychiatric department of the Duke medical school, will address Alpha Kappa Delta sociology fraternity at its meeting Monday night at 7:30 in Alumni hall. He will speak on "Preliminary Comments on Social Influences in Negro Psychiatric Problems."

All students are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Deadline Set For Nominees

Student political activity at the University, intensifying in preparation for Spring elections, tightened up still more yesterday with the announcement that nominations for coed officers must be turned in to Chairman Eleanor de Grange in Smith dormitory by midnight Monday, March 14, accompanied by a list of qualifications.

Nominations for legislature must be accompanied by a petition signed by 25 coeds. Nominations for Honor council, officers of WAA, and speaker of Coed senate must be accompanied by a petition of 15 names.

Nominations for senators must be accompanied by a petition signed by a majority of girls in one social organization, and no one may sign more petitions than there are existing vacancies.

Nominations made by the executive councils of WAA and Coed senate need not be accompanied by a petition.

Meetings of the town girls and of the girls in each dormitory will be held Tuesday. The first undergraduate compulsory mass meeting for preliminary elimination elections will be held Wednesday, March 23, at 5 o'clock in Memorial hall and the official list of candidates will be posted in the Y court and in each dormitory the following day.

A mass meeting presenting all campus candidates to the student body will be held in Memorial hall, Thursday, March 31, at 7 o'clock. Coeds are invited to come at that time, but the actual compulsory coed mass meeting will not start until 8 o'clock, when coed candidates running for major offices will give short speeches.

All expenses are due by 6 o'clock, April 4, for the April 5 elections. Runoff expense accounts are due by 6 o'clock, April 11, for the April 12 elections.

STA Elects First Slate Of Officers

Reardon of Duke Named President

Yesterday morning 55 delegates in the Playmaker theater saw the formation of the Southeastern Theater association, with Kenneth Reardon of Duke, President; Mrs. Katherine Battaglia of Norfolk, Va., Little theater, vice-president, and John W. Parker of the Playmakers, executive secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Thomas E. Poag spoke on "The Negro in the American Theater" in the morning's session. Following his talk, the following council members were elected by the body: Roger Sherman of William and Mary (Virginia and West Virginia); Sam J. Francis of the Little Theater of Greenville, S. C. (North Carolina and South Carolina); Howard Bailey of Rollins college, Winter Park, Fla. (Florida and Georgia); Telfair Peet of Alabama Polytechnic institute, Auburn, Ala. (Alabama and Mississippi); and Dr. Thomas E. Poag, Tennessee Agricultural and Industrial State college, Nashville, Tenn. (Kentucky and Tennessee).

Two additional officers elected were Mason Bliss of The Barter theater, Abington, Va., representing the commercial theaters in this conference area, and Dr. Poag, who will represent the Negro theatrical activities.

Highlight of the afternoon talks and demonstrations was Fred Koch, Jr., who discussed his experiences with the "Theater in the Round," a new form of staging plays in an arena-type theater, with the audiences around the actors. As Koch described this central staging method, "it is just like a hot dog—wrap the audience around the actors and there you are!"

Fred Koch, Jr., son of the late "Proff" Koch, is chairman of the department at the University of Miami. He had, at one time, three theaters operating at the same time, but recently lost one when the southern section of the university was disbanded. He is a graduate of the dramatic art department at this university.

Lawson Built Golf Course, Then Learned to Play Game

Hewing a nine-hole golf course out of rocky, red-clay hills is a big order, particularly when it is done as a hobby, and with the help of only one assistant.

That's just exactly what Dr. Robert Baker Lawson of the University Physical Education department, has done. Taking over some of the worst sort of hilly land, which had three makeshift holes from which to start, he began work during the early days of the depression and worked ceaselessly until he had completed the nine-hole course that now provides recreation for professors, students, and the townspeople of Chapel Hill.

Not only did Dr. Lawson build this course, but he started from scratch and learned the game of golf after he was 50 years of age. He learned so well that he won most of the seniors championships in this section at one time or another, and tutored his daughter, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, to the national Women's Amateur championship and the role of an internationally known golfer.

Dr. Lawson's contribution to golf in Chapel Hill was the subject of an article in the current issue of Golfdom, a national publication, which was written by Jim Kluttz, of Chapel Hill.

The article points out that "Not only did Dr. Lawson perform the seemingly impossible, but he gave all this time and effort to the project without receiving one penny of remuneration, in fact he has paid his own club dues during the club's existence."

Letter of Thanks

Dear Senator Allsbrook,

Not long ago, I was riding with a friend along a residential street in Durham. We were traveling just under the speed limit when a child, a four-year-old boy, rode his tricycle out of a drive-way and directly in the path of our car. Fortunately, my friend had been watching the road and he applied the brakes immediately. The car stopped abruptly, almost touching the child.

After we had blessed out the kid, seen him safely on the side-walk and started again, I glanced at the inspection sticker on the windshield and wondered who was responsible for its being there. My friend must have read my thoughts. "You're right. I'm doggone glad my brakes were okay, doggone glad."

There are a lot of people in this state who ought to be doggone glad about the establishment of auto-inspection, Senator Allsbrook. Some wouldn't be alive otherwise.

Now I know who was responsible for the sticker and the saving of the child's life. I saw your unsuccessful senate fight to save the inspection program which you had instituted in the previous session. I heard your opponents speak against the cost and the inconvenience but not a word about the saving of lives on the highways. So I just want to say thanks for what you've done and what you've tried to do against great odds. For my friend, the child, and the state of North Carolina, thanks.

Write Away, Right Away

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, spoke with a representative of the state legislature yesterday morning. From the telephone conversation Dedmond came to this conclusion:

The letters against increase of tuition at the University are coming in from students and citizens throughout the state. It is anticipated that action in the appropriations committee pertaining to the increase will come on next Thursday at the latest.

The letter-writing should be continued and intensified, the president declared. "We need support in this movement and the best means of giving this support at present is by means of letters from the students to their home county representatives. These letters are more effective than anything else at this stage."

President Dedmond suggested that it might be advantageous if other campus organizations would set up tables in Lenoir hall and other strategic spots similar to the table in the Y sponsored by the University party to furnish paper and envelopes for use in writing to legislators.

The idea is a good one.

Of Cabbages. . . .

With the return of spring fever weather people are beginning to look at the campus lawns again and to regret the unsightly paths and bare patches that mar their beauty. Maybe the evidence in sight will remind students to walk on the walks, not on the grass.

It would be a boon to campus government if instead of merely complaining about the dirt in student politics more students would do something about cleaning up the dirt.

The time and energy students are spending in worrying about the approach of final exams would do them more good if spent in working rather than worrying.

Students in general complain about the lack of personal contract between students and faculty. Yet few of them take the opportunity to meet the president of the University, who holds open house at his home every Sunday night.

Human nature is peculiar. Students spend four years or more going to college but instead of trying to see how much learning they can get out of it, most of them try to see how much learning they can get out of.

The Problem Of Red Profs

By Hal Darden

At the present time, there is a bill before the state legislature of this state which would require all student and faculty members alike to sign non-Communist affidavits. The question of students taking such an oath is of small consequence. The majority of us can withstand the fanaticism of ones like Bill Robertson and Hans Freistadt. But what about Communist professors? This problem came into the national spotlight a few weeks ago when several professors at the University of Washington were suspended for being Communists. Should we allow them the privileges of teaching at this "liberal" university?

Before going further, let me show that there is a difference between one who is a Communist and one who has Communistic beliefs. The reason that this is important in this discussion is that a professor who has Communistic beliefs is free to teach the objective truths. On the other hand a professor who is a Communist is pledged to "remain at all times a vigilant and firm defender of the Leninist line of the party, the only line that insures the triumph of Soviet power in the United States." This, I admit, would certainly be vague in many classes. But would this: "Communist teachers must take advantage of their position, without exposing themselves, to give their students to the best of their ability a working-class education"?

Therefore, the basic point is not whether or not a Communist holds undesirable beliefs, but that a Communist has sworn to teach in a way which violates the accepted notion of academic freedom and responsibility. Space does not permit me to show examples of how Communists are controlled in thought in all lines of academic endeavor. However, let me assure you, that according to the Communist party itself, politics is bound up, through the class struggle, with every field of knowledge — art through zoology. And remember: No person who is incompatible with Moscow's views, on anything, is allowed membership in the Communist party.

It would be hard to catch a professor in the act of inculating the party line in the minds of his students. But if a professor is a member of the Communist party, this is evidence, in itself, that the professor does not believe in or practice academic freedom, for no Communist party member is ignorant of what classroom practices are expected and required of him.

'There Aren't Enough Of You'

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

One of the strictest rules of the Senate is that there be no demonstrations from the gallery. Spectators are to be seen but not heard.

The rule applies to applause as well as manifestations of disapproval. Transgressors are given the heave-ho just as quickly as the octogenarians who guard the visitors' galleries can move on creaking joints to eject them.

The other day, Senator Tom Connally, the white-thatched orator from Texas, roared one of his finest speeches in defense of the filibuster. As he brought his remarks to a crescendo finish, a lone galleryite rose and cheered.

The venerable solon looked up at his fan and said sternly:

"Do not do that. There aren't enough of you."

When I came in today Miss Reid was talking about the Mayflower hotel. "One of the dame secretaries at the White House has just reported to the coppers that she lost a $4,500 mink coat in the lobby the night of the Jefferson-Jackson dinner."

I said that a $4,500 mink coat seemed a fair hunk of fur for a secretary, even a White House one. Sniffing like a giraffe with a March cold in the head, Miss Reid retorted that not all people liked their secretaries to go around in burlap.

"This White House doll — Mrs. Estelle Fredericks, her name is—is not working for a miser, like some poor sucker I could mention, meaning me. I think it is high time you caught onto the idea that the days of the poor struggling working girl is over. We ain't going to be downtrodden by you gluttons of privilege—the President said so himself."

I don't know why, but I couldn't get that lost coat out of my mind. If it isn't found, the lady dictation-taker is out $4,600 for the evening, it having cost another $100 for her dinner. Then I got thinking about Presidents Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, in whose honor the faithful Democrats wolfed a C note's worth of victuals.

I wondered how these two worthies would have reacted had they been told the voters were being nicked a century apiece to break bread with them. Looking up stuff on Jefferson in the Encyclopedia Britannica, I found this:

"He eschewed the pomp and ceremonies, natural inheritances from English origins, that had been an innocent setting to the office of his two predecessors.

"His dress was of 'plain cloth' on the day of his Inauguration."

(Note: To be absolutely fair, I will admit that Mr. Truman didn't wear any satin knee britches either.)

Of Jackson, the heavy book said:

"He left his party strong, perfectly organized, and enthusiastic on a platform of low expenditure, payment of the debt, no expenditure for public improvement, or for glory or display in any form, and (shades of changing democracy!) low taxes."

I wonder what Old Hickory meant by glory and display "in any form"? I suppose he wasn't referring to his secretary?

Freshman Rep. A. S. (Syd) Herlong Jr., of Florida, is hugging himself with glee these mornings. He figures he has personally settled the old supremacy dispute between his state and California.

Mr. Herlong has set up an orange juice stand in his office where he dispenses free Florida orange squeezings to all comers.

He chortles that his steadiest cuff customers since the West Coast freeze have been the staff of Freshman Rep. Clinton D. McKinnon, of California.

Federal Trade Commissioner Lowell Mason has had numerous disagreements with his fellow commissioners. In fact they see eye to eye infrequently.

Recently Mr. Mason was elevated to acting chairman. He looked forward to the first board meeting with misgivings, fearing a chilly reception.

He confided his apprehensions to Mr. George Goddard, the food expert. The latter said he happened to have just the thing—an old badge issued to him in wartime when security restrictions were in force.

Commissioner Mason came to preside over the board meeting wearing the badge. It read: "Visitor No. 1."

Senator Zales Ecton, of Montana, was stalled for 16 hours in a snowbound train en route from his home to Washington. When he got here he found his desk piled high with letters complaining of hardships from the blizzard.

Several writers said that, being snug in Washington, he couldn't appreciate what his constituents were going through.

Inveigled Into a Date:

The Freshman Thought: 'This Is Raw, Crude Life!'

Tookie Hodgson
as told to Tookie Hodgson

I am a student at Carolina. To you at worldly, old St. Mary's, I am a goodie-goodie boy; almost as goodie-goodie a boy, in fact, as A. Frank Moore is a stinky-winky writer.

Up until now, I always thought that I was a pretty good date, but now I see how wrong I've been. My trouble is that I just don't have any sex appeal, at least not enough for a big, strapling hunk of passion like yourself, you old sex-box, you. But I have my reasons for it. "Good reasons" you'll say when you read my true story.

I remember it all started back in 1946, when I attended the summer session here at Carolina. I was still a freshman then, luxuriating in the first bloom of my now rampant masculinity. Prideful in my as yet untried virility, I was inveigled into accepting a date with a designing St. Mary's senior.

We went to dine at the Marathon, one of Chapel Hill's swankiest night clubs, and there feasted on hamburger steak, escalloped potatoes, and pepsi-cola. The richness of the fare exhilarated me. "This" I thought, "is life, raw, crude life!"

Then I noticed that my date was staring at me covetously. I became uncomfortable, and suggested that we leave the Marathon, and visit another one of Chapel Hill's many bistros. Secretly, I hoped the cool night air might ameliorate the intense emotional desires that were coursing through her bulky frame. It didn't though, as I later found out.

Dragging me by the arm, the St. Mary's girl entered one of the gaudiest pleasure-palaces in the village—Jeff's Imperial Bazaar. I had not been there a moment, before I felt Phillippa—for such was her soubriquet—pumping me full of Schlitz, Miller's, and other exotic beverages. Soon, I had consumed two whole bottles of the maddening drink, and I began to feel my self-respect oozing as the hot liquid enflamed my naive brain.

I glanced at my date, and noticed that she was gazing steadily into my baby-blue orbs, a greedy, insane look planted upon her face. It was, I said to myself, as if I were the prey of a hawk about to swoop down upon a soft, tender dove. Terrified, I paid the check, and made ready to leave.

Outside, I pretended that I had lost my Boy Scout combination pocket-knife. In reality, I was desperately searching the teeming mob on Franklin street in the hope of spotting a friendly face, so that I might see someone who might assist me in escaping from the demon at my side. But I was out of luck. All that I saw were more St. Mary's girls. "No luck there" I sighed to myself.

Finally, just as I was about to resign myself to walking home through the Arboretum with the monster, a taxi drove up. Quickly, I boarded it, and soon we were approaching Mebane.

It was a horrible experience . . . there—one that I won't easily forget. I fought her until my strength was almost gone, and there were moments during that ride when I thought I should never make it; especially, the time she grabbed both of my ears and whispered huskily at me: "I'm the easiest neck on this campus, catch on?"

Well, it's all over now. The taxi driver saved me at the last minute, and together we took her into the dormitory. She screamed and scratched all the way. I'll never forget her hysterical cry: "They told me you were a good-time Charlie, you shmo!"

Is it any wonder, St. Mary's girl and little, old A. Frank, that I don't turn on my sex-appeal? Would you, after such an experience? Answer me that!

Better Service, Please

Editor:

If I and my friends land in Perdition, it will be for one and only one reason—the use of profanity in describing the wonderful telephone service which is offered to us by th. great and glorious University.

Making a long distance call from this place has been one of the most memorable experiences of my short, sweet life. The only way to go about doing it (I'll explain it to you from my own experience this evening) is to start on the third floor of A dorm and here, naturally, you'll find that all of the coin slots except the one for nickels is firmly jammed with some "foreign" object. (Oh, well, one can only blame the "slugging" student body for this). Let us, however, proceed a little further. Next on our list of stops is the first floor of A and here we find another disappointment. The thing on the wall is utterly dead. In fact, it's so dead that it's beginning to smell. Well it's raining and cold outside and I only have on my pajamas, but B dorm is only a short dash away. Brrrr! Good old warm B Here, in these glorious walls lies success! After parlezvouing for another twenty minutes I hear that sweet, honey-dripping voice on the other end of the line and I'm almost convinced it's worth it. I walk back to the dorm, though, still feeling is if I'm sitting on a ton of TNT, and I begin to think, also, how tired I am of walking down town late at night to send a telegram. BETTER SERVICE, PLEASE! ! !

Despite 'Sleeping Liberals'

Editor:

"Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, the jealousies of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government."—G. Washington.

"Despite efforts to the contrary by such "sleeping beauty liberals" of the South as the F. Grahams and the J. Daniels's—and others (too numerous to mention) in other parts of the union, the conviction that the Communist menace must and will be checked is striking home to the American people. Events occurring in even so brief a period as the past week clearly reveal this popular trend. Let us point with pride to the fact that North Carolina is one of the state leaders in this evolution of thought (Shreve-Regan bill). The Lundy proposal to curb communism at this University is also under consideration by a committee of the Board of Trustees. Outside North Carolina and in other fields of activity such as schools, labor unions, and religion, the purge of "force and violence" is gaining momentum. In view of the recent statement by Communists that they would not defend the U. S. in what they are pleased to call an "imperialistic war," government spokesmen have begun thinking about another federal anti-communist bill.

Indeed, Mr. Editor, the citizenry is wising up to the specious arguments in favor of Communist toleration. America will defend herself yet, notwithstanding the passive clamor of the "submissivists." The wise slogan that is now rapidly coming into vogue is: "America for Americans and the American system, and no longer—"America for anyone and any system."

Prove Statements or Be Quiet

Editor:

I for one, Mr. Robertson, like to see proof before accepting other's statements. Most of us today are plagued with the trait of being too gullible for our own good and that of our nation. Would you be so kind as to tell us just where you received proof for your statements concerning Mindzsenty's affiliations with the Nazis and his desire to exterminate the Jews. Give me proven facts and my ears are open; until then, you are wasting words.

State Beats Colonials, 55-39, For Loop Championship

Big Second Half Rally Gives Pack Its Third Title in Row

By Dick Jenrette

DUKE INDOOR STADIUM, DURHAM, March 5—For the third straight season, Coach Everett Case's N. C. State college Wolfpack reigns as the Southern conference basketball champion, following a 55-39 victory over George Washington in the final game of the 28th annual loop tourney here tonight.

The Colonials from Washington, D. C., made a real battle of it for three-quarters of the game but wilted in the final ten minutes when State began to employ its famous pressing defensive tactics. So effective was the State defense that George Washington wasn't able to make a single field goal during the last 12 minutes of play.

State earned its way into the final game tonight by scoring wins over Wake Forest and Carolina. George Washington defeated South Carolina and William and Mary in its first two outings in the tourney.

No Individual Standout

There was no one particularly outstanding player in tonight's battle. Paul Horvath led the Wolfpack with 12 points, followed by Dick Dickey's 10. Dickey's spirited play in the second half was largely responsible for the State win. Bill Cantwell was tops for GW with 12, most of which came on nifty hook shots from the free throw lane.

The first half was a real thriller, with State finally emerging on top by 25-24. Horvath's tap-in follow shop gave the Pack a 25-22 lead with just 50 seconds remaining. But Cantwell got lose for a quick hook shot for GW to narrow the scohe to 25-24. State's greatest lead in the first half was five points, with about 5:30 left to play. But a pair of field goals by Cantwell cut it down quickly.

Starts With Bang

Little Gene Witkin got the second half off to a bang by swishing through a long set in the first minute for a 26-25 lead for the Colonials. Dickey regained the lead for State with a one-hander. Garrison made a foul toss for State, but it was sandwiched between a follow tap-in shot by GW's Adler and a free throw by Haithcock, so GW boasted a 31-28 margin after 4:30 had elapsed.

The battling was nip and tuck for the next few minutes with State going ahead at 36-35 when Ranzino successfully followed a shot and converted a free throw when fouled on the play. Cantwell's jump goal sent GW into the lead again at 37-36—but this was the last time the Colonials were ahead. State tightened up on its pressing defense and held the Washingtonians without a field goal for the rest of the game.

George Washington had employed the zone defense up until this point, but Garrison and Ranzino hit quick push shots and the Colonials shifted into a man-to-man defensive setup.

But it was to no avail. Dickey, Ranzino, and Warren Cartier accounted for 19 points between them in the last nine minutes to leave the Colonials baffled and far out of contention.

Kerr Scott Booed

DURHAM, March 5—Governor Kerr Scott didn't prove to be a very popular man when the public address system speaker blared out his name at the conclusion of the Southern conference basketball tournament here tonight. The mention of the new N. C. governor brought forth a chorus of boos and jeers from the crowd of 9,000.

Scott presented the championship trophies to the winning N. C. State tema folowing its victory over George Washington in the finals. But with a large proportion of those in attendance being college students, he wouldn't have won any popularity poll. Everyone agreed that Scott's plan for raising tuition must have been the reason.

Lacrosse Schedule Released

Lacrosse, the most recent addition to the agenda of Carolina sports, will be inaugurated at the University this spring with a tentative schedule of ten games.

The sport this year will be entirely on an unofficial basis but may become an official activity in the years to come if the present interest and enthusiasm is maintained.

The initial call for candidates for the team was issued two weeks ago by Coach Bill Darden and a response of over 40 aspirants was indeed encouraging to the Carolina mentor. Practices have been held on an intensive scale since the opening meeting and Darden has been especially pleased by progress made by his charges in preparation for their first game.

The main obstacle that Coach Darden is confronted with is the complete inexperience of the game by his boys. Of the 40 that turned out for practices, 35 are total strangers to the sport that is billed as "the fastest game on two feet."

Six matches, all home games, have been definitely slated for the squad by Coach Darden, himself a University student, and it is hoped that four more contests will be added to give the team a ten-game card.

The schedule so far is as follows:

March 31—Delaware
April 1—Delaware
April 2—Delaware
April 30—Annapolis Lacrosse Club
May 14—Washington and Lee
May 21—Virginia

Annual Southern Golf Meet Set

ATHENS, Ga., March 5. — (UP) — The 12th annual Southern Intercollegiate Golf tournament has been set for April 27-30 over the sweeping Athens County club course here.

The Southeastern conference tournament runs concurrently with medal play. The low-scoring Southeastern conference entry in medal play is an automatic SEC individual champion, and the low medal SEC team takes the loop team title.

Duck Swann of Georgia Tech won last year's medal and Louisiana State took team honors.

Injuries Chase Yankee Clipper Through Career

NEW YORK, March 6—(UP)—The big guy, Joe DiMaggio, is a hard luck guy, too.

Illness, injury or ill-advised holdouts have played a strange part in the Yankee Clipper's spectacular baseball career. When his ailing heel kicked up in Florida, it was the 10th time in his 11 seasons that he scared the daylights out of himself and the New York Yankees.

DiMaggio has completed only one uninterrupted year — 1948. And he limped through that one with assorted injuries that should have entitled him to a mid-season rest if his explosive bat weren't needed urgently.

Joltin' Joe knew a lot of medicos by their first names even before the Yankees bought him from San Francisco. The Yanks were gambling, in fact, when they made the deal.

Joe's troubles with the Yankees started almost immediately. Shortly after reporting in Florida in 1936 for his rookie campaign, he twisted a foot. When he sat too long under a diathermy lamp, his foot was burned seriously and he missed the first 17 games of the season.

In '37, he had pains in his right shoulder during training and that wasn't settled until he had his tonsils yanked in mid-April. Missed several league games.

DiMaggio hurt himself in '38 with his stubborn holdout for $40,000 when the Yankees were interested in paying him only $25,000.

And so to 1939, in which he missed 34 games because of a foot injury received in a collision. In 1940, a bad knee and a charley horse kept him out of 22 games. Missed 15 games with the same stuff in 1941.

The year 1942 wound up all right but he gave the Yanks a terrific scare in Florida. His throwing arm simply wouldn't function. As quickly as the ailment came, however, it disappeared in time for the opener and he went 154 games.

The army had him for the next three seasons but he celebrated his return in 1946 by missing a month of the campaign with a knee injury resulting from a faulty slide into third base at Philadelphia.

Along about this time, Larry MacPhail began to put his charges under the x-ray machines to see what he could see. He discovered DiMaggio had bone spurs on both heels. Joe had the left heel operated on in '47—missed training, first week of the season.

Tar Heels Rack Up 120 Points To Win Swimming Championships

By Larry Fox

Carolina's swimmers lost their shutout in the final session of the Southern conference swimming championships last night, but nevertheless managed to cop three of four first places, set two new conference records and roll up a record score to win the annual loop affair for the eighth straight time with 120 points.

N. C. State was second with 37 points followed by Duke with 27, VMI with 13, and VPI with seven.

The Tar Heels actually clinched the title Friday night after they had compiled 79 points and seven first places.

Bill Kelly of State was the man who broke the Carolina string of fictories, but he had to equal the Conference record of 53.3 to do it. Kelly had tied the mark for the 100-yard freestyle, which was the first varsity event on the scherule last night, in the afternoon trials, but was forced to the limit in the closest rare of the evening.

Carolina's Jesse Greenbaum, who won the 50-yard freestyle rhampionship the night before, was about a tenth of a serond behind Kelly while Tar Heel Steve Osborne followed Greenbaum by an even smaller margin. Duke's Bill Brackney edged Floyd Drew of Carolina for fourth.

The next event also saw a record broken. Tar Heel Captain Dick Twining sped home in the 150-yard individual medley in 1:35.5. This was the first time the event has been run in the Southern conference. Twining's time was only eight tenths of a second off the American record.

Carolina's medley relay team brought the proceedings to a fine end by slashing 2.1 seconds off the Southern conference mark set earlier this year. The trio of Norm Sper, Twining, and Osborne missed the pool record established by LaSalle by half a second.

Jim Thomas earned the William M. Thompson Memorial trophy presented by North Carolina, in addition to his second championship of the meet for John Connor of Duke got even with Carolina's Buddy Crone in the non-scoring invitational high board diving. Connor talled 133.5 points to defeat Crone, who had edged Connor in the Conference low-board competition Friday, and win the plaque presented by the University. This was the first time the jlaque has been awarded.

Duke dominated the freshman events last night by taking first place in the finals of both the 200-yard breaststroke and the 150-yard backstroke.

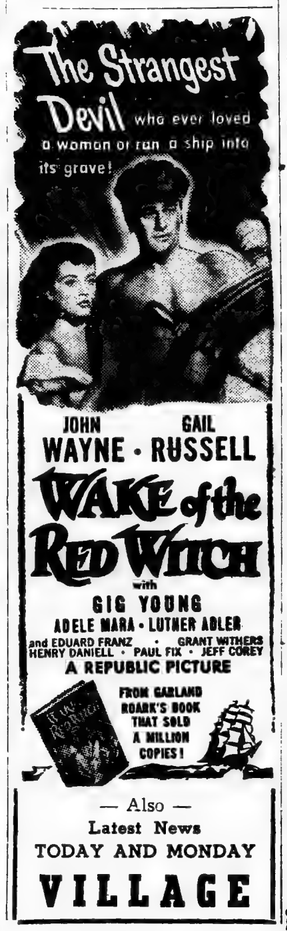
Kemp and Gupton Win Mat Titles In SC Tournament

LEXINGTON, Va., March 5—Battlin' Phil Kemp and Tar Heel Co-captain Oscar Gupton tonight won the individual Southern Conference wrestling championships in the 155 and 165-pound classes.

Kemp was awarded the trophy presented to the outstanding wrestler of the tourney. He went through the series of bouts without a point scored against him.

Kemp's win in tonight's final bout was over VMI's Pete Meredith. Kemp won on a 7-0 decision.



Gupton, who lost only one match during the dual season also won a shutout decision, blanking Duke's Harrison, 3-0.

Little Ed Turnley, Carolina 136-pounder, finished fourth in the Conference 136-pound class by virtue of a win over Husted in the first round of the consolation matches. In the final consolation round he lost out to The Citadel's Sachs, 4-2.

As a team, the Tar Heels finished fourth in the Conference. The still powerful Generals of Washington and Lee finished first. VMI was second and Maryland finished in the third spot. Duke was fifth.

The two individual championships won by Kemp and Gupton brought to a close the 1949 season in which the Tar Heels won three dual meets and lost four while tying one.

Big Variety Shows, Dance By Pan Hel Will Add Color To Spring Quarter Opening

The gala entertainment scheduled for spring quarter will get under way March 25 in the Rendezvous room with the first of a two-day run of the Pan Hellenic musical review presentation, featuring a "sophisticated" melodrama, skits by the five sororities, and individual singing and dancing.

The second performance of the vaudeville-type show March 28 and a semi-formal dance in Woollen gymnasium March 26 will complete the Pan Hel weekend.

With Sonny Couble and the State Men playing for their dance, members of the Pan Hellenic council and their dates will form a figure during intermission. The Pan Hel scholarship, won last quarter by the Chi Omega sorority, will be presented at the dance.

The "sophisticated" melodrama, highlighting the musical review presentation, will be "East Lynne," or "The Corn is Clean." Director of the melodrama, Pete Strader and assistant director Edie Knight yesterday announced the members of the cast, who were chosen at tryouts Tuesday and Wednesday in the Rendezvous room.

Those chosen are: Faith Adams, Frances Sowers, Nancy Curtis, Betsy Tom Lawrence, Lee Noll, Bunnie Davis, Mary Ann Taber, Edie Knight, and Ellen Smith.

Skits to be presented are "Clowns and the Pirouette" by the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. "The Ink Blots" by the Alpha Delta Pi's, "Anti-Saloon Sally and Her Sophisticated Seven" by the Chi Omega's, "The Fireman's Bride" by the Delta Delta Delta sorority, and "The Doors Swing In" by the Pi Beta Phi's.

Pan Hel is presenting the "big" weekend in an effort to raise money for adopting a European orphan through the Foster Parents association. Money sent by the council will provide food, shelter, medicine, and schooling for the orphan for one year.

Chairman of the committees working on the Pan Hel weekend are: Ann Cooper Knight and Harriet Sipple, co-chairman of the program committee; Peppy Lucas, decoration committee; Edie Knight, production committee; Beckie Holton, tickets; and Molly Craig, publicity committee.

Tickets for the olio presentation may be purchased for 50 cents or two for 99 cents.

Jasper Tutes Dances to Pine Room For YWCA Recreational Group Party

By Don Maynard

"I am Jasper Tutes," solemnly asserted, Jasper Tutes, in answer to a query, as he entered the Pine room of Lenoir hall with his date, Minerva. "Folks were dancing to the music of a piccolo at the first big combination party and dance, sponsored by the YWCA recreation committee."

"The dance was given from 9 to 12 in honor of law, medical, pharmacy, Y Junior council members. . ." Jasper took a deep breath, and went on, ". . .Advisory board, second floors of Spencer, McIver, Alderman dorms, and Jasper."

Ann Green was at the door taking the names of everyone who entered and noting them on separate lists, one for the girls, the other for the boys.

"The names were used later to select partners for a 'meetcher-neighbor' dance. That was after the 'Human' bingo game. Instead of numbers on the 'Human' bingo cards, names were substituted."

"Lee Rodenbode won, blast it," he growled.

"I wish," dreamed Jasper, "I wish some one would institute a custom of no-cut dances once in a while. It would be novel to dance with one girl for a complete number."

Norm Sper MC'd a floor show which featured Becky Holton in a naughty-tical tap routine. Anita Gates lulled two numbers, "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," and "I'm Just the Gal Who Can't Say No."

"Eleanor De Grange began what looked like a strip-tease, but unfortunately ended as a burlesque of ballet," Jasper said.

"Then, Gene Hines and Nancy Curtis presented an 'unrehearsed' skit. I shrewdly detected the presence of a script, however. They gave a five-minute repartee concerning men, national arboretums, and flirtatiously inclined Carolina gentlemen."

"Nancy and Gene closed out the show with a dig at our treasured visitors during big weekends," he said.

"Nancy lead with, 'Maybe someday I'll get the knack. . .it . . .it's kind of hard on your conscience, isn't it?'

Gene replied, 'Conscience!!. Baby sister. . .that's a long, lost word. I'm an import. . .'"

Tarnation Staffers Give Nod To Kerr In Editorship Race

Members of the Tarnation staff, Carolina humor magazine, yesterday endorsed Tom Kerr, CP-SP candidate for the magazine's editorship in the spring elections.

Thirteen members of the staff signed a petition supporting Kerr, currently managing editor. In their petition, they stated:

J. MELVILLE BROUGHTON

"We the undersigned, having worked in many various capacities on Tarnation over the past two years with Tom Kerr as managing editor, do hereby enthusiastically endorse his nomination for the editorship of Tarnation for the coming school year; and on the basis of his sound, skillful, faithful and efficient management, we do pledge our full support, not only to his campaign, but also to his production of an ever-better Tarnation in the happy event of his election."

Headed by Tom Wharton and Bob Smith, current co-editors of the humor magazine, the petition included, A. Frank Moore, Jack Taylor, Bert Hawley, Bill Bostic, James A. Mills, Dick Stoker, Ted Duval, Bob Sturdivant, Jack Niles, Bunnie Davis and Steve Horn.

Bob Smith, co-editor, in releasing the staff endorsement, said, "Tom has been the mainstay of the magazine as long as I can remember. He knows everything there is to know about the technical end of magazine production. By this, I mean financial intricacies as well as layout and printing.

"He has worked industriously and faithfully for two years and has been hand in hand with professional shops working with us. For this reason, we of Tarnation feel that he is the only man on the campus who merits consideration for the job of editor next year."

Kerr is running against Charlie Burns and Lem Whitsett, UP-endorsed candidates for co-editorship of the magazine.

Rites Are Set For Broughton In Afternoon

Nation Mourns Senator's Death

RALEIGH, March 7—(UP)—The body of J. Melville Broughton came home for the last time at 7:10 o'clock this morning.

The 60-year-old North Carolina Senator and former Governor died suddenly of a heart attack yesterday, only three months after he reached his life-long goal of election to the United States senate. Today he was to have made his first speech on the senate floor, in the Southern filibuster fight.

Instead he was coming home to the city where he headed North Carolina's government through four critical war years and maintained his law offices for more than a quarter of a century.

Broughton's body was to lie in state today, and funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Tabernacle Baptist church, where he taught Sunday school before going to Washington. Burial will be in Montlawn Memorial Park.

Dr. Frank P. Graham said today that "in the death of Sen. J. Melville Broughton North Carolina has lost one of her most beloved citizens and nobly useful leaders."

"America has lost a leader on the very threshold of high promise and dedication to his country at a critical time.

"In the threefold University, we have a deep sense of personal loss. The University mourns with his family and his state."

Girls Offer Aid To Fire Victims

FARMVILLE, Va., March 7.—(UP)—Girl students at the State Teachers college here today shared clothes and beds with 70 freshmen girls who lost everything but their lives in a disastrous dormitory fire early yesterday.

The pajama-clad girls fled to the lawn shortly after dawn, when great tongues of flame burst through the upper windows and roof of the building. Occupants of the top floor had moved out earlier, when fumes from an unknown source were noted there.

Farmville's fire department got to the campus in short order, and firemen said the girls were excited, but not panicky, as they streamed out of the building.

Many had their hair in curlers, and were choking in the heavy smoke.

The building burned out and the walls collapsed, but firemen summoned from several nearby towns including Lynchburg prevented the flames from heavily damaging the college chapel and main building. Only a charred white column and part of a wall were left of the dormitory-auditorium.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, said the building was covered by between $80,000 and $90,000 in insurance. He predicted the girls on their own campus yesterday, and said work would be hampered in her schoolwork because of the loss of books and clothes. Loss was over $100,000, the building was 43 years old.

Candidate Is In Legislature, On Council

Nominee Is First On Class Ballot

The University party announced yesterday that it will run Ed Tenney, Jr. of Chapel Hill for the office of president of the senior class in the spring general elections.

Tenney's nomination is the first to be released on the class officer slate.

He is a member of the Student legislature where he serves on the Parliamentary committee and is a member of the Student council of the Greater University.

A commerce major, Tenney is a member of Jess Dedmond's Coalition cabinet, the Town Men's association and served as an orientation counselor this year.

Tenney is a past chairman of the Student party, but walked out in December during a political rift within the party. He now holds a seat on the University party steering committee as the representative of Victory Village.

During the war, Tenney served as a sergeant in the Marine Corps, serving more than three years overseas. He is treasurer of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity pledge class.

Grads Must Pay Yearbook Charge

A charge of $1.50 will be levied upon all spring quarter graduates who wish to have copies of the Yackety Yack, it was announced today by Ted Fussell, business manager of the yearbook.

All seniors who will graduate this month and will not be in Chapel Hill during the spring quarter have been asked to contact the Yack office before Friday between 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Explaining the $1.50 fee, Fussel said that the money would cover the regular student fee for the spring quarter. He said that an additional 50 cents will be charged if students wish to have the yearbook mailed.

Fussel warned against waiting until the summer to request that a Yack be mailed: "Mail requests for Yacks may not be answered until next fall since staff personnel may not be here this summer. Therefore, it is imperative that all March graduates come by the office this week to make necessary arrangements," he explained.

Valkyries Tap One Coed, Honor Member At Dawn

ANNE CARLTON

Carlton, Currie Receive Honor

In a special mid-winter tapping this morning, black robed and hooded figures paraded the campus, bearing candles and tolling gongs, to tap one coed and one honorary member into Valkyries, woman's honor society.

The two tapped in this morning's special ceremonies were Anne Carlton, senior from Atlanta, Ga., and Gay Currie, honorary member, from Chapel Hill. Regular Valkyrie tappings are held in the spring and fall of each year.

Limited to two per cent of the women student body, Valkyrie membership is based on leadership, scholarship, character and service, and is the highest honor ever given a coed at the University.

Anne is house president of Alderman dormitory and a member of Woman's interdormitory council; an active member of the YWCA cabinet, where she served as an organizer for the Cosmopolitan club, as program chairman for the Montreat winter retreat; a member of Baptist Student Union, which she represents on the Council for Religion in Life; a student adviser and a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Gay has served as executive secretary of the YW since September. Previously she was with the Orange county public health office in Chapel Hill. She is a graduate of Agnes Scott college and of Columbia University's School of Nursing. She is the only honorary member tapped so far this year.

Compulsory Coed Meets Ruled Illegal

Council Votes Unconstitutional

The Student council yesterday passed unanimously on a ruling which would make compulsory mass meetings called by Coed Senate for other than "orientation" purposes unconstitutional, Chairman Bill Mackie announced.

The council held that the wording of the constitution which gives Coed senate power to "organize and conduct" mass meetings does not give them the power to make those meetings compulsory.

However, a second ruling was passed which stated that compulsory coed mass meetings are constitutional when done in cooperation with the campus orientation committee. This was to be interpreted to include the compulsory meetings called for by the present coed elections bill.

Last week Lindsay Tate requested that the council hand down a decision concerning the constitutionality of compulsory mass meetings. Her petition was brought about by the action of the senate in making compulsory a meeting on Feb. 25 in conjunction with the Women's Intercollegiate Government forum.

Yesterday's meeting of the Student council was the second meeting called to discuss the constitutionality of compulsory coed mass meetings. Emily Baker,

Council Meets, Plans Program For Next Fall

Student Assembly Voted Unfavorable

A recommendation for a Greater University day to be held at the University next fall on the day of the State football game, was discussed at the meeting of the Greater University Student council at the Woman's college in Greensboro Sunday afternoon. Martha Fowler, chairman of the council, presided over the meeting.

The proposal to have the council sponsor the state student legislature was brought out of committee with an unfavorable report.

A measure designed to obtain more quality points for seniors carrying extra-curricular activities received a favorable vote and was referred to a special committee.

An earlier proposal that copies of the constitution be drawn up in longhand, on parchment, signed by the charter members of the council and copies presented to the libraries of each school, received a favorable vote by the council.

Nominee Is Last For Major Posts

Candidate Is Present IRC President, Will Also Run for Legislature Post

John Sanders, rising senior from Four Oaks, will seek the office of secretary-treasurer of the student body on the Student party slate, it was announced yesterday.

Sander's nomination completes the three-party slates for the top slots in the executive branch of student government. The line-up is as follows: SP—Mackie, Horton, Sanders for president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively. UP—Gordon, Leonard and Williams. CP — Long, Talley and Williams (doubly endorsed with the UP).

A transfer from State, Sanders entered school here in the fall of 1947. He is president of the International Relations club, a member of the Dialectic senate, the Students for Democratic Action and has served since January as the IRC's representative on the Carolina forum.

In addition to holding the spot on the SP ticket for secretary-treasurer of the student body, Sanders will appear on the ballot for member of the Student legislature on the SP ticket from men's dorm district two.

Don Shropshire yesterday made the following statement on Sanders' nomination:

"The announcement by the Student party that John Sanders will be their nominee for the post of secretary-treasurer is an appropriate recognition for a man who is one of the most improved men in student affairs on the campus today.

"Sanders has demonstrated his ability, efficiency and willingness to put devotion to the task at hand ahead of his own personal desires in a variety of positions in which he has been of service. There is no doubt that this same rare conviction will enable him to make the job he seeks one of the really vital parts of a student government which needs more men like him."

Foushee to Talk On Decorating

Mrs. John Foushee will speak on "Interior Decorating Problems" at the meeting of the Carolina Dames club tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Orchestra Leader

Schinhan Had It Tough With Talk

By W. P. Covington III

"The Beggar's Opera," which plays Thursday and Friday nights in Memorial hall, will feature a complete 18 piece orchestra under the baton of Dr. Jan P. Schinhan.

Born in Vienna, Dr. Schinhan has behind him many years of professional conducting of operas. As conductor with the famous German Opera company, he came to America just prior to World War 1. With the outbreak of the war, Dr. Schinhan found himself stranded in a strange land where he could neither speak nor understand the language. Because of the language barrier, he was unable to obtain several excellent professional conducting offers in New York.

A friend in Cincinnati came to his rescue and helped him obtain a job there as organist in one of the churches. He did not have to know English to hold this job. While there he began to learn the American tongue, and today although the Vienese accent is still prominent, he shocks his students and the cast of Beggar's Opera by telling them how not to murder the King's English.

For a while he worked in Hollywood for Griffith Films, composing, arranging and conducting music for the silent films. When asked how he liked Hollywood, Dr. Schinhan replied simply but emphatically—"No!"

He came to Carolina in 1935 from San Francisco conservatory. Dr. Schinhan is now working with Dr. Brown of Duke university's folk-lore laboratory preparing a volume on folk music as part of a series of volumes on the subject.

The Beggar's Opera orchestra personnel includes some of the finest musicians on campus, according to Dr. Schinhan: Willis Gates, David McAdams, William Tritt, Sydney Von Lehen, Nancy Smith, Frances Simmons, Wilton Mason and Bradley Stroup, violins; Dorothy Alden, W. L. Benton, and James Andrews, violas; Efrim Fruchtman and William Klenz, 'cellos; Eugene Stryker, string bass; John Kiser, flute; David Serrins, oboe; and John O'Steen, piano and harpsichord.

The Beggar's Opera is being produced by Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota, music fraternities in cooperation with the music department, Sound and Fury and The Carolina Playmakers.

Phi Assembly Elections Are Set For Meeting Tonight in Hall

Speaker Dave Sharpe announced yesterday that the Philanthropic assembly will hold its quarterly elections in Phi hall, New East, at 7:30 tonight.

Preceding the elections, committee reports will be presented. Speaker pro-tempore Peter Gerns will give a cumulative report for the Ways and Means committee, and summaries of the activities of the Carolina forum, the Debate council, and the Di-Phi committee.

Treasurer Bryan Griswold will account for the assembly's financial status.

Retiring officers are Speaker Sharpe, Speaker pro-tempore Gerns, Treasurer Griswold, Clerk Bernard Plemmons, Parliamentarian Hugh Griffin, Critic Charles Britt, and Sergeant-at-arms Emily Baker.

In last Tuesday night's executive session the Phi voted unanimously to join the Dialectic senate in giving an annual award to an alumnus or faculty member "in recognition of his contributions to society, his achievements in his chosen field of endeavor, and his services to the University."

During the winter the Phi has discussed Bill Robertson's dismissal from the Daily Tar Heel, coed drinking restrictions, parking restrictions, publications fees, the tuition raise, and FEPC. The traditional Di-Phi debate was renewed with the Phi taking a two to one judges' decision while supporting a statewide liquor referendum.

More Participants, Please

The need for more students to participate in extra-curricular activities has been re-emphasized during the past ten days when two potential candidates for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel were forced to withdraw from the race because of their "academic status".

It is no secret among those in student government and other activities that there is a great need for more participants in the necessary campus activities. As the situation now stands, the few students who are active are now faced with a last minute book cramming in order to pass the impending exams.

It is obvious that too great a burden is often placed on the shoulders of active students because they do not have the support or necessary number of men and women working with them in their organizations. As a result, these leaders make poor grades on some of their courses. It is an unfortunate and unfair business for them, however the majority seem to feel that their work, whether it be in student government, publications or other activities is important too.

The solution, naturally, is more complete, wholehearted participation by more students. A liberal estimate has been given that not more than 750 students out of 7500 take any part whatsoever in extra-curricular work. The argument that class work and grades are more important will be offered to explain the wholesale lack of interest. This point, we readily admit, however campus activities have been an integral part of Carolina life since its earliest dates, and if proper support were given, there would be no need for any scholastic neglect on the part of anyone.

Cans In The Basement

Stories coming from "A" Dormitory tell us that there are a number of trash cans stored in the basement of that building. While we might be convinced that said cans might be needed in said basement, it would seem that they might be put to better use if they were placed along the more popular paths on campus.

Take, for instance, the trash-bedecked walks in the area between Cameron Avenue and Franklin Street. Seven or eight well-placed containers throughout this area would do endless good towards cleaning up our dirty campus.

For The Coeds Benefit

The Student council ruled unanimously yesterday that the famed coed compulsory mass meetings are unconstitutional. This is as it should be. The coeds are students on an equal basis with the men and there has never been any actual reason or need for their forced attendance at every little meeting that the Senate decided to hold.

The recent questions and investigation of coed affairs seem to be on the road to clearing a great many misunderstandings as to what the girls can or cannot do. The sooner the coeds place their government on the same standing as the men's student government, the more they will benefit from its operation.

That 'n This

Station JVH; An Institution

By Wilbur Amberson

The Carolina student body is on the verge of losing an institution next Thursday when all the exams are over and Joker John Van Hecke walks out of South building with a little card which certifies that he is a graduate of the University of North Carolina.

Van Hecke, you see, has been around a long, long time. Almost thirty years as a matter of fact. He's only been enrolled in the University (off and on) for some twelve years, but he has lived continuously in town and has made the mad town of Chapel Hill his headquarters.

Joker John (or Radio Station JVH, whichever you prefer), in addition to having a rich sense of humor and a tendency to sing, has done a great deal towards the advancement of student government and Carolina in general. While he has made no big name for himself by holding any high political job, he has been an active participant in numerous student affairs. In all of his work, he has served well and has earned the respect of those with whom he has worked, regardless of their political stand.

He was the brains behind the rebirth of the Town Men's association last spring and by straight, continuous work last fall and throughout the summer, saw the fulfillment of the 3 purposes which he had set to accomplish, (TMA representation on the Dance committee, University club and Graham Memorial Board of Directors).

He was, for many years, an active member of the Di Senate and worked diligently in that organization. His work in the Student legislature, however outshines the Di membership. Elected as a representative from town, he was an active, outspoken legislator, and served vigorously on committees.

Though he is not a legislator now, he is present at most of the meetings and more often than not, his opinion on some issue or another is sought.

Recently, he has been fighting the Legislatures action of taking the power to loan money from Graham Memorial. As a member of the Budget committee, he has also been called to the floor to discuss or explain various allottments in this year's student budget.

His interest in the Legislature over the Graham Memorial movement is only typical of his work in the Student Union, for more than almost anyone else on campus, John has been an integral part in it's operation. He has been on the staff, has operated the office and has taken an active part in its general operation for some time. Folks in Graham Memorial have been calling on him for advice and help with problems continuously.

Before he came to work actively on the GM staff, John was employed in the registration hall and in his usual manner, did excellent work there.

We're dern glad, you're finally going to make it, John. Thanks for a job well done.

Now You Can Eat, Drink, and Be Merrier

First Returns From Lenoir

By "Wink" Locklair

It has been about three weeks now since those cards appeared in the lobby of Lenoir hall, asking students for suggestions as to how the service could be improved there. The man responsible for the card idea is L. B. Rogerson, director of the University dining halls, and we walked over to his office in the basement of the Carolina Inn the other morning to see what sort of suggestions were being made.

"The first day I got about 1500 cards," he said. "And, as you know, the return of scoop ice-cream (over 700 requests), having a menu board, and putting vegetables on the plates, came about directly from suggestions made on the cards," he remarked.

Student complaints so far have been most bitter about coffee and eggs, Mr. Rogerson commented. There were also requests for five-cent milk (impossible because of wholesale price and breakage of bottles), more spinach, pan cakes, soft music, more attractive cashiers, and at least 500 other valuable as well as vulgar suggestions. Some of the criticisms are rather lengthy. A few students have typed long and obnoxious letters. One fellow drew an elaborate diagram showing how the lines could be made to move faster. Over 20 cards contained just two words: "Drop Dead!" Here are a few excerpts from the cards we looked at:

Set clocks to correct time with school bell.

Wife and I got four good-sized pieces of calf's liver in A & P for 88 cents last week. How do you have courage to charge 25 cents for four mouthfuls when you get food on contract?

A phone booth in lobby would be appreciated when caught in rain. It's nice to call one's roommate to bring over a raincoat.

Food is much better. Like the system which eliminates so many plates. Keep up the good work!

I like my meat cooked!

It would be a great help if we could have more shelf space to put books on. Can't even get in the door at lunch time without walking on books.

Burn the damned dump down!

Why can't you make a statement through the DTH as to how Lenoir buys its food, why prices are as they are. Most students do not know about the emergency bonus (20% raise). Having worked there two quarters, I will venture your laundry bill hits close to $9.000 a year since a dietician came. Cards are a fine idea. Glad to see someone is interested in what the students think.

Repair the coat hangers that are torn down. Play some music at supper.

Stop putting gasoline in the tomato juice.

Noise! Noise! Indigestion plus. Why not tell the boys to work a little quieter when clearing tables and not to disturb people who are eating. They'll grab a tray and shake the table enough to spill milk. They could be gentler. It takes someone to tell them how.

Take those sorry damn chairs out of the North room!

Give us pancakes again. And those french fried potatoes don't cost you any ten cents to prepare, either!

On the whole, Lenoir is very efficiently operated, but SEVERAL extra dry-cleanings of my pants have been necessary because of table scraps in the cuffs. (Usually try to examine the seat, but sometimes I forget.) One cashier is especially nasty in her duties, too!

Two roommates and I eat at 7 or 7:15 at night, as do many others. Couldn't something be done about having some other desert on the counter after 6:30 besides Brown Betty? I've heard many complaints about this.

I don't feel that there is always a healthy attitude present in the workers. This is as important as the food they prepare.

Don't you think it's about time to stop served pies and cakes?

Improve the impoliteness of the cashiers and employees behind the counter. Cashiers saying "thank you" is certainly an improvement over their previous "What's the matter?" attitude.

Food improved 100% in last six months. Meat prices could stand a little drop, but otherwise, okay.

Salisbury steak wasn't very good tonight. Never is. Cashier overcharged me three cents. Habitual. YOU'RE GETTING RICH!

Food is too high for non-profit cafeteria. Manager should smile more often.

Please do not put onion in salad. Leave in bowl and let each person do as he wishes.

Good biscuits. No complaints.

Cut prices. Approach the million dollar merchants of Chapel Hill to furnish ash trays with their names on them as advertisements.

Leave the juice on the prunes!

We think the Green room should be changed to the Pink room (pink satin-quilted walls) with a string ensemble, candle-light, and a floor-show on Wed. Also finger-bowls.

Some damn toothpicks!

The improvements are wonderful.

Suggest you publish menu every day in DTH, with prices.

I would like to have scrambled eggs for breakfast instead of that concoction now being served.

Can't the management enforce their own rule, "No Dogs Allowed?" It is repulsive to see certain stupid fools feed the dogs from the table. How do I know I won't be eating from the same dish tomorrow?

Roses are Red
Violets are Blue
I Like my rolls hot
How do you?

Would it be possible for you to get some jam without seeds? I've lost four teeth already!

Mr. Rogerson took over direction of Lenoir last Oct. 15. The dining hall has 98 permanent employees, 203 temporary student employees, and serves an average of 5,297 meals a day. "The employees work one meal and receive three meals for it, the equivalent of $1.83 a day," he said. (Students are hired through the student self-help officer, Edwin D. Lanier.)

A whole sheaf of figures arrives on Mr. Rogerson's desk each day, reporting price fluctuations (the price of ham soared 20% one day), cash sales, salaries, number of meals served, totals from denominator machines, which report what items the customer has on 2 reveal that 1,756 breakfasts, 1,811 lunches, his tray. These figures broken down for March and 1,640 dinners were served that day. "The average meal is 50 cents," Mr. Rogerson stated, "and the average for breakfast is 37 cents, 57 cents for lunch and 59 cents for dinner." Weekends cause a big drop in meals sold. One such period saw sales drop from 7,000 to 3,000 meals.

Mr. Rogerson has been at the University in various official capacities for over 27 years, and one of his major objectives now is to create a friendlier, more cordial atmosphere between employees and student customers. "The things the students have suggested on the cards are wonderful. I've learned many things from reading them and the things they are asking will, if at all possible, be carried out," he said.

Perhaps one of the most ambitious undertakings to come from the cards is the installation of a sound system in Lenoir which will provide music similar to that of the Inn and the Monogram Club. The equipment has already been ordered.

Lollipop Cop?

UN Needs Strengthening to Be Effective

(March 6-12 is World Government week.)

By Rex Stout

We, the people, do not approve of violence. Not liking disturbers of the peace in our cities and villages and countrysides, we go to a lot of trouble and expense to forestall them if possible and, failing that, to stop them and call them to account.

We have cops of many kinds—federal, state, county, municipal—and we arm them well. They have nightsticks, firearms and reserve arsenals, and they are backed up by statutes, prosecuting attorneys, and courts of law. This elaborate and powerful police machine can handle anything from a boy throwing a rock to a major race riot. Yes, rock-throwing boys had better watch out.

But of all the kinds of violence we don't approve of, the most destructive and dangerous and costly is international violence. War. To forestall that, and to stop it quick if and when it starts, do we have a cop now, the people of the world? Yes, indeed we do—a handsome young cop in a fine navy uniform. His name is the United Nations, and we are spending sixty-five million dollars for a magnificent office for him.

But it is hard to see how he can reasonably be expected to do the job we are hiring him for, since we have neglected an essential detail. We have given him a headquarters, an official title, and a salary, but no nightstick, no arms or arsenal, no statutes, no prosecuting attorneys, no courts of law. Instead of a nightstick he is armed with a lollipop. If he shakes a warning finger at a disturber of the international peace, whether actual or potential, and the disturber ignores him, he is helpless. If the disturber chooses, for reasons of his own, to talk it over instead of ignoring him, the cop makes a public statement praising the disturber for his devotion to the cause of peace. That's the lollipop.

No one would expect a cop armed with a lollipop and nothing else to handle a rock-throwing boy or a motorist running through a red light. How can he be expected to handle a nation—any nation—with an army which has decided that the time has come to start shooting?

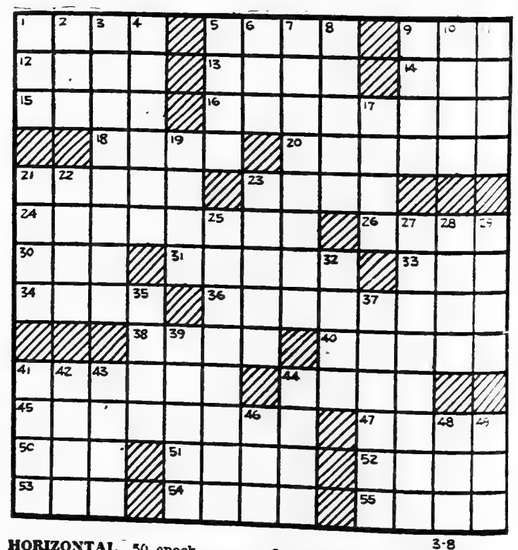
Moore's Irony Undetected

Editor:

Since coming to the University I have read with great interest all the letters to the editor. In my opinion ... of these letters were of excellent taste, but the rest ... pretty bad! The one which had the most foul odor of all came from one J. Richard Moore in the Feb. 23 edition of the DTH. He praised our honorable Governor for supporting the raise in the tuition. He praised the private schools. And last but not least he praised himself by saying, and I quote, "After all, there are too many people who should be digging ditches, attending school!"

As bad as I hate to do it I must confess I agree with him on his quote to a certain extent. That extent goes only this far. J. Richard Moore should leave school and start digging ditches. Then we would be one less of the too many getting educated who should be digging ditches.



He also said, "Orchids, to the great philosophical minds of our state lawmakers who wish to make the University self-supporting. . ." Orchids, my eye, better they should get stinkweeds for not being able to think of a better way to raise our teacher pay than by a raise in our tuition.

Colonel Moore, I would suggest you go to a private school where you won't have to associate with us "poor" ditch-diggers who are trying to get a decent education with which we can dig a better ditch.

I would like for all the veterans who will be forced out of school when their G. I. Bill gives out, due to the coming tuition raise, to go around and give J. Richard Moore their best regards.

If our public schools are being run according to socialism I guess you can chalk me up as a socialist because I like the method.

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

Although the form sheet held true in each of the seven games of the 28th annual Southern conference basketball tournament last weekend, the 33,000 fans who attended the three-day event probably went away feeling they had received their money's worth in entertainment value. There were five new records set and one old mark equalled during the battling.

Most prominent among these record-making events was State College's annexation of the tournament title for the third straight season. This equals the old record held previously by Carolina of winning the tourney championship three consecutive years. Back in 1924, the first year in which the annual Southern conference test was held, the Tar Heels captured the title and managed to hang on to it for the next two seasons. The tourney was held in Atlanta, Ga., then.

All three of the State college championships have come since the Wolfpack has been under the tutelage of one Everett Case, an ex-Indiana high school coach who brought the top cage stars of the Midwest to the State campus in Raleigh.

State Unimpressive Until Finals

In winning the championship this year, the Wolfpack showed flashes of greatness only in the second half of its game with George Washington in the tourney finals. State soundly drubbed Wake Forest by a 64-42 score in the first round and then eked by Carolina, 43-40, in its semi-final contest.

Carolina gave the Wolfpack its sternest test during the tourney, but at that Coach Tom Scott's Tar Heels had one of their poorest nights of the year from a shooting standpoint. Carolina could hit on only nine field goals during the night, but 22 foul shots and aggressive play under the backboards kept the Tar Heels in the game. State played a rather slow, lackadaisical brand of ball and let the Tar Heels set the pace for most of the evening.

Judging by State's performances on the first two nights, many of those attending the tournament regularly picked George Washington to upset the Pack in the finals. For about three quarters of the final game it looked as though these observers would be correct. George Washington held a 38-37 lead at this point.

But then Coach Case sent his speed boys in the game—Jack McComas, Bob Garrison, Warren Cartier, Dick Dickey, and Vic Bubas. This quintet began to guard the Colonials for the full length of the court, instead of dropping back to mid-court before setting up a defense. The result was that George Washington fell into utter confusion and failed to score a single field goal in the last ten minutes. The final score was 55-39 for State.

Made Fans Forget First Game

The feature of the tournament, however, was the precedent-shattering triple overtime game between George Washington and William and Mary. The Colonials, playing with five men relegated to the bench via the personal foul route (also a record), finally managed to win the hectic struggle, 78-74.

Not at all obscured by the closeness of this game, Chet Giermak, William and Mary's 6-4 center from Chicago established a new individual tournament scoring record by bucketing 36 points. This eclipsed the old mark of 28 held by Carolina's George Glamack. Giermak's shots were all of the sensational variety. They didn't come on follow-up shots and lay-up shots engineered by his teammates. Rather most of them resulted from Giermak's ability alone.

Carolina had the distinction of adding the fifth new record. The Tar Heels' 79 points against Maryland set a new team scoring mark, beating the old top of 78 which was held by Duke. George Washington's 78 points in the triple-overtime game also tied the old mark.

Tourney May Go to Raleigh

All told it was a highly successful tourney. Prospects are, though, that it will be the last to be played in Durham. With the completion next year of the N. C. State Coliseum, which will seat nearly 15,000 persons, the tourney officials doubtlessly will shift the site of the event back to Raleigh. It was played in the Capital City until 1947 when the ticket demand so exceeded the supply of seats in Memorial auditorium that the tourney was shifted to Duke.

There has been considerable agitation this year for a consolation game to be played on Saturday night between the two losers of Friday's semi-final tilts. The game could be held as a preliminary to the finals Saturday and would give the fans a greater entertainment return for their money without costing the conference any more.

All metropolitan tournaments, in fact nearly every major tournament in the nation, has a consolation game between the semi-finals losers to determine which team finishes third. There is no valid reason why the Southern conference should not adopt this policy.

Scribes Announce All-Tourney Quintets

Dickey, Giermak Top Voting; Hugo Kappler on First Team

By the United Press

DURHAM, March 7—Southern conference sportswriters today unanimously named Dick Dickey of North Carolina State and Chet Giermak of William and Mary to head an All-Tournament basketball team.

Other players chosen were Maynard Haithcock of George Washington, Hugo Kappler of North Carolina and Victor Bubas of North Carolina State.

The sportswriters disregarded positions of the players in choosing the All-Tournament five and simply chose outstanding men, executive secretary Ray Reeve said.

Dickey and Giermak each won the first-team ballots of all 31 newsmen voting. The sportswriters cast two votes each for the first team men and one vote each for the second team members.

On the second team, they chose Bill Cantwell of George Washington, Paul Horvath of North Carolina State, Eugene Witkin of George Washington, Ed McMillan of William and Mary and Coy Carson of North Carolina.

Last night, the sportswriters chose Giermak over Dickey as outstanding player of the tournament, and Everett Case of North Carolina State as outstanding coach.

Giermak, a six-four Chicago youth, set a new tournament scoring mark in the semi-finals Friday night. He personally accounted for 36 points although William and Mary was defeated by George Washington, 78-74, in a heartbreaking triple-overtime match. During the regular season Giermak scored 632 points for an average of better than 21 points per game.

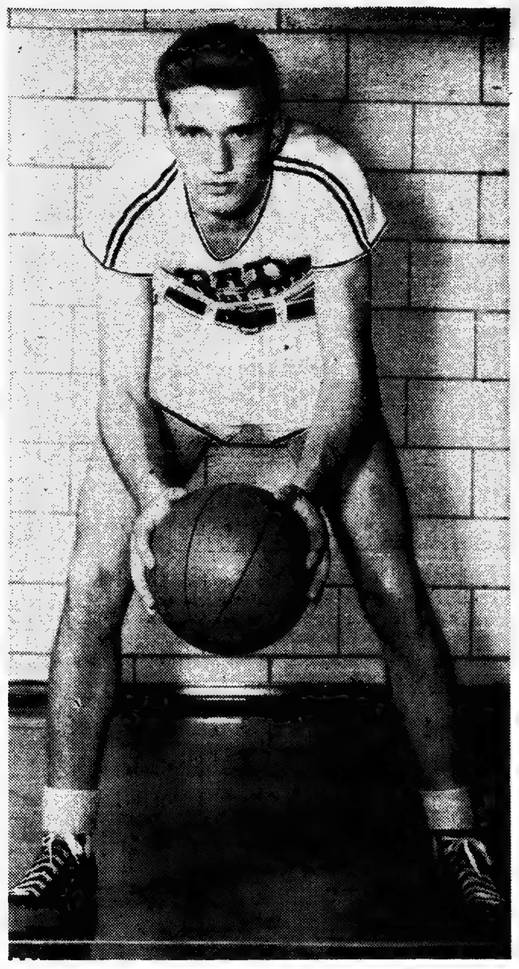
Case won out in a close race over North Carolina coach Tom Scott and George Washington coach George Garber. The conference championship Saturday night was the third he pulled down for North Carolina State since he took over the team three years ago.

State's 55-39 victory over George Washington in the tournament finals Saturday night capped a terrific season for the Wolfpack. In regular conference play, the team lost one game—to Wake Forest—and made up for that by whipping the Deacs later in the season and again in the tournament opener.

Chet Giermak Takes Honors In SC Tourney

The final scoring tabulations of the 28th annual Southern conference basketball tournament all point with pride to the scoring feats of big Chet Giermak, the William and Mary sophomore pivotman.

Giermak literally waltzed away with the individual scoring honors of the 1949 cage meet, largely through the virtue of an amazing 36 point effort on Friday night when Giermak and his mates were eliminated from any further competition by George Washington in an unprecedented three over-time period semi-final clash.



Cantwell Trails

Although he only participated in two games, the tall Indian hook shot artist ammassed 52 points for a nifty average of 26 points per game. This total was far over the three game output of runnerup Bill Cantwell of George Washington who tallied 37 points in the meetings. Cantwell, however, did exceedingly well when one considers that he was not a starter and only played a little over a half in each contest.

State, the winner for the third time in a row, also had an individual standout. Dick Dickey, the tousle-haired flash of the Wolfpack quintet, captured third place scoring honors with 32 points to edge out Hugo Kappler, the Carolina forward who raised many an eyebrow with his spectacular play during the Tar Heels tenure in the tourney. Kappler earned a two game total of 31 credits.

SWIM BANQUETS

The varsity swimming team's annual banquet will be held tonight at 7 o'clock at the Carolina Inn, while the freshman team's yearly shindig is slated to come off tomorrow night at 7, also at the Inn.

Two Tank Tests Slated

Now that the Tar Heel mermen have successfully defended their Southern conference title for the eighth time in a row, two more tournaments remain in the Carolina schedule before the 1949 season comes to an end.

The Eastern Intercollegiates are slated to be run off in two weeks and when students return to Chapel Hill for the new quarter they will be just in time for the NCAA championships.

Two trophies were awarded to the Tar Heels during the final night of the Southern conference meet. A cup representing the championship was presented to Captain Dick Twining along with a cup for the Conference Dual Meet title, which Carolina shared with N. C. State. Both schools were undefeated in loop competition this year and so a duplicate trophy was also awarded to State Co-captains Bill Kelly and Coman Gold.

Battlers Win at Asheboro

ASHEBORO, March 7—The Carolina Battlers of Chapel Hill turned in a 45-42 victory over the Asheboro Panthers in the first round of the Carolina basketball association tournament here tonight.

Jack Stratford tossed in nine points to take high scoring honors for the victors while Earl Murphy chipped in with eight and Briscoe Gassaway added seven.

The Battlers will meet Seagrove in the semi-finals Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. The finals will be played on Tuesday March 15. The Lions club of Asheboro is sponsor of the tournament.

Meeting of Track Candidates Called

There will be a very important meeting of all varsity and freshman track candidates in the Fetzer field locker room at 4:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Coach Dale Ranson urged all trackmen to be present and prompt. Plans for the coming outdoor track competition will be discussed at this meeting.

Coed Tourney

Two basketball games are on tap for tonight in Woman's gym in the opening round of a double elimination tourney to decide the campus champion in the girl's division.

Tri Delt 2 will meet Chi Omega 1 in the curtain-raiser at 7 tonight, and CICA 1 will go against Town 1 in the nightcap.

Capt. Donald W. Loomis, USN, commandant of the Naval ROTC unit here, yesterday announced that the Navy is interested in forming a volunteer research unit at the University as a part of the program of the Office of Naval Research of the Department of the Navy.

The mission of this program, Capt Loomis said, is to provide an adequate, trained force of naval reserve personnel who shall be available for mobilization in the event of an emergency for an assignment to activities under the management control of the Office of Naval Research.

A representative of the Office of Naval Research will visit Chapel Hill Friday, he said, to plan the formation of this research unit. A meeting of this representative and interested reserve officers will be held in the Naval armory at 7:30 that night.

Royall's Government 'Departure' May Be Announced Before March 20

KEY WEST, Fla. March 7—(UP)—Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall's departure from the government may be made public before March 20, it was learned here at President Truman's vacation retreat today.

Administration insiders have said for sometime that Royall, a tall North Carolinian, would be the next major government official to follow Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal into private life.

Royall has repeatedly brushed aside reporters' questions about his leaving the defense set-up. But there appeared little doubt now about his departure.

There was some speculation last week that the acceptance of Royall's resignation would be announced by Mr. Truman at the same time he disclosed the appointment of Louis A. Johnson to succeed Forrestal.

Tuition Protests Are Mailed By Council To All Solons

Resolution Hits Trustees' Action in $69 Increase

By Sam McKeel

The Student Council of the Greater University announced today that it had mailed copies of a resolution to each member of the legislature and to the governor strongly protesting the action taken by the Board of Trustees in the recent tuition hike.

This action of the board came after Governor Scott had recommended to the board that the tuition should be raised. The subsequent passing of the measure, calling for a $69 raise, brought the wrath of students from all three branches of the University on the legislature, the Governor and the board of Trustees. A flood of letters erupted from the campus at Chapel Hill, while petitions circulated at both State and Woman's college.

The Student council, after a thorough investigation, decided to go on record as being against the measure.

The resolution mailed to the legislators and the Governor said, "the Student Council of the Greater University of North Carolina strongly protests the action of the Board of Trustees in raising the tuition at the three branches of the Greater University because:

1. It will deprive many young people of the opportunity for a higher education.

2. It indicates a lack of appreciation for the democratic principles of public education and a complete disregard of the welfare of the youth of North Carolina.

3. The increase is an unjustified tax upon those who are less equipped to pay.

RUNNING MATES FOR SENIOR class president and vice-president on the University party ticket in the spring general elections are Ed Tenney of Chapel Hill (left) and Don VanNoppen of Morganton. VanNoppen's nomination by the UP was announced yesterday along with that of Armecia Eure for the position of senior class secretary. The University party nominations for the three senior class positions are the first to be released by any of the three campus political parties.

UP Names Candidates For Senior Class Posts

University party officials yesterday released the names of two more senior class nominations.

Don VanNoppen of Morganton will seek the vice-presidency and Armecia Eure of Raleigh will run for secretary on the UP senior class ballot in the spring general elections.

The nomination of Ed Tenney, Chapel Hill, was released yesterday for the office of president.

VanNoppen, Tenney's running mate, is a commerce major and a past president of the Minotaur club, sophomore social club.

He is a member of the University club and the newly-formed Pledge Masters association on campus. A member of Zeta Psi fraternity, VanNoppen is a squad leader in the Naval ROTC unit here. He graduated from Virginia Episcopal school in Lynchburg, Va., in 1946.

Armecia Eure, the UP's candidate for senior class secretary, is a journalism major and president of the Chi Omega sorority. She also serves as a member of the YWCA Campus affairs committee.

A transfer from St. Mary's in Raleigh, Armecia was business manager of the yearbook there, a member of the honor council, fashion editor of the school paper and a member of the May court for two years.

Student Dies In Car Crash, Four Injured

Auto Catapults Into Deep Ditch

LEXINGTON, Va., March 8—(UP)—Albert C. Holland, 17-year-old Washington and Lee university freshman from St. Petersburg, Fla., was killed instantly early today and four other students suffered serious injuries when their car crashed near the town limits.

Officers said the car swerved off the road and catapaulted into a 15-foot ditch about 10 o'clock in the morning. The car snapped a telephone pole, rolled about 150 feet and exploded.

Officers listed the injured as Ken Finley, 19, of Clear Creek, Ind., William Gleason Bean, Jr., 19, of Lexington; Thomas P. Whitaker, 20, of Tampa, Fla., and Emor West Bitos, 19, of Tampa.

Bean, son of a Washington and Lee professor, was driving.

College officials said Finley won the southern conference 155-pound wrestling title last week.

Suit Is Filed In Asheville Hospital Fire

ASHEVILLE, March 8—(UP)—A second damage suit was filed today in the tragic Highland hospital fire which killed nine women mental patients a year ago Thursday.

The estate of Janice Rita Borochoff, one of the victims, sought $50,000 damages from the hospital, its directors and its staff and from Duke university, which owns the institution.

Yesterday a $75,000 suit was placed before Buncombe County Superior court by the estate of Mrs. Sarah Hipps of Asheville. Both actions charge "gross negligence" by the hospital staff in the blaze which destroyed Highland's central building last March 10 and 11.

W. E. Dunn Talks On Latin America

"Latin America has been a useful laboratory for the development of many of the techniques which will be applied in President Truman's 'Point 4' program," said W. E. Dunn, foreign service officer of the State department in Washington, who spoke to a group of students on Latin American affairs at the University Monday night.

"The 'Point-4' program of technical assistance to less highly developed areas of the world which President Truman announced in his inaugural address lends new emphasis to what is already being done along this line in Latin America," said Dunn.

Donations to Aid Clothing Problem Of Fire Victims

FARMVILLE, Va., March 8—(UP)—Some 70 girls who fled in their nighties early Sunday morning when fire destroyed their dormitory at Farmville State Teachers college were ready to buy new clothes today after citizens here chipped in $4,200.

Some 400 residents held an emergency meeting in the court house here last night to discuss getting the ladies clad again.

When the meeting was over there was $1,200 in cash and $3,000 in checks on the table.

The Red Cross planned to give $600 worth of blankets. Local merchants promised a 30 per cent discount on clothes and personal belongings the girls wanted to replace.

Dr. Davney S. Lancaster, president of the college, said, "We'll see to it that no girl has to leave college because of the losses suffered in the fire."

Weaver Urges Dorm Unity At IDC Meet

First Annual Banquet Held

Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver urged "a closer unity in dormitory life" in his address to some 45 members and guests attending the first annual Men's and Women's Inter-Dormitory council banquet Monday night in the Carolina inn.

The speaker said that dormitory residents should have "a sense of belonging to their respective dormitories where there should be a sort of brotherhood." He continued that a fraternity house is based on brotherhood while a dormitory is "just a place to live."

In contrasting dormitory life with that of the fraternity, Dean Weaver said that both were necessary to college life, and that "no one should drive a wedge between them" whether it be in campus politics, social life, or scholastic standing.

While commending both dormitory councils for their efforts to improve the living conditions, he named two main goals for which the councils should aim: First, he said that there should be "the same kind of autonomy in dormitories as there is in fraternities." Second, he called for the eventual initiation of the "house plan."

Expanding upon the "house plan" idea, Weaver said that dormitories came closest to that goal in 1935 when the first inter-dormitory council was formed. He said that at that time men paid a $1 social fee which paid for radios and other furnishings in the social rooms of the men's dormitories (now used as living quarters.) Speaking of present conditions, Dean Weaver said that "the university should and must improve facilities of the dormitories."

Pete Gerns, president of the Men's IDC, presided at the banquet. He called upon Sue Stokes, president of the women's council, to recognize representatives of the women's dormitories which led in campus activities. Gerns recognized the men.

ARC Workers Asked To Turn in Funds

All campus Red Cross workers have been asked by Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon, co-chairmen of the drive, to check in all contributions from their respective areas before 3 o'clock this afternoon. Collections will be accepted at Dean Bill Friday's office in South building.

Members Join CP in Giving Endorsement

Wins Nomination By 27 to 7 Vote

Dick Jenrette, University party nominee for the Daily Tar Heel editorship, received the Campus party endorsement for the post and almost at the same time received the nomination of the DTH staff for editor.

CP officials announced early yesterday that Jenrette is their choice for the editorship.

In a special meeting yesterday afternoon staffers whose names appear in the masthead, members voted 24 to 7 to back Jenrette for editor.

Al Lowenstein, present associate editor, was the only person besides Jenrette to receive any votes. Lowenstein said that he was never an actual candidate for the position but would run "if the staff desires."

Jenrette, in accepting the staff endorsement, said, "If elected I will do my best to give the campus a top-notch Daily Tar Heel. I will expect the utmost cooperation of the staff."

A rising junior from Raleigh, Jenrette joined the DTH staff in the fall of 1947 and has worked on the paper continuously. He is present assistant sports editor and is the UP candidate for junior member on the Publications board.

Jenrette is in Phi Eta Sigma, honorary freshman scholastic fraternity, and is a journalism major. He is a correspondent for the Raleigh News and Observer, where he has worked during the summers for three years.

He is publicity chairman of the University party and holds a seat on the steering committee of the group. He is a member of Chi Psi fraternity and the Raleigh-Carolina club.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

New Deputy Premier

LONDON, Wednesday, March 9—(UP)—Moscow radio said tonight that Alexander Ilarionovich Yefromov had been named a deputy premier and thus had been freed "of the responsibilities" of Minister for the Machine Tool Building Industry.

Would Have Stayed

WORCESTER, Mass., March 8—(UP)—Rev. G. Antonio Laberge, A. A., American Catholic chaplain in Moscow, would have been ordered to remain in Russia if it were known that he would be denied permission to return after his vacation in the United States, it was announced today. Father Laberge was notified orally by the Soviet embassy in Washington that his re-entry visa had been annulled.

Flood Waters Rise

CHICAGO, March 8—(UP)—New flood dangers arose on the Missouri river in the vicinity of Omaha today as four central states battled high water in their lowlands and river towns. The big Missouri, shaking loose winter ice in its annual spring break up, was boiling down to the Mississippi, leaving behind thousands of acres of flooded farmland and thousands of homeless.

Odom Ends Flight

TETERBORO, N. J., March 8—(UP)—Lanky Bill Odom made good today on a 5,000-mile nonstop flight across half an ocean and all of a continent in a plane smaller than the one Charles Lindburgh flew to Paris 22 years ago.

Lunsford Says Folk Festival Will Return Here in Summer

The Carolina Folk festival, which enjoyed great success when held at the University for the first time last June, will be repeated this summer, according to plans released today by Director Bascom Lamar Lunsford.

Dates this year will be June 9, 10, 11, and the festival will be given in Kenan Stadium again.

Lunsford believes the prospects for an even greater festival this year are very bright. Many participants of last year's production have been invited back.

Spectators of the presentation last June will remember such performers as the Denton Square Dance team, under Marshall Floyd, winners of the dance contest, who will defend their title this year, and the group of 45 Texas performers under the direction of Mrs. Lillie Lee Baker.

The performances this summer are scheduled for three evening programs commencing "as early as sundown." Following each performance there will be a reception for the more than 600 participants and their friends in the women's gym of Woollen gymnasium under the direction of the sponsoring committee.

No Charge, Please

The YWCA, as usual, set a very excellent example during the past weekend when they held two parties on Friday and Saturday nights in the Pine Room of Lenoir Hall. Their parties were given for several organizations on the campus, including Law and Pharmacy students, and the residents of a couple of girls dormitory floors.

Comments from some of the men who attended the parties were more than complimentary. They were downright flattery, rich with praise. The YW, as usual, is taking a forward step in advancing the social life of the students, especially those who might be left out of the fraternity-sorority life.

The only catch to the parties is that the YW was charged $25 for the use of the Pine Rom! Why? Possibly, we

The only catch to the parties is that the YW was charged $25 for the use of the Pine Room! Why? Possibly, we realize, there may be good explanations. However, the only plausible explanation we can see is that someone had to be paid to clean up after the parties. Competant sources from the YW tell us that the girls decorated the room before the party and moved all the tables and other necessities necessary for entertaining. They expressed an equally willing desire to clean the room after the party.

Under these circumstances, and since the series (and we certainly hope they are going to be a series), is so vitally needed we can see no reason why the Pine Room shouldn't be given to the girls free of charge for their use. They have taken a huge step toward lightening the lack of friendship at Carolina and they should be encouraged from every side if possible. The $25 charge that the powers-that-be levy for the use of the Pine Room will not give them encouragement.

Strictly on Your Own

Our campus politicos are speeding up their work these days in publicizing their candidates and in assuring the voter that their particular man or woman is the best qualified to hold the job he is running for. As a result, we're going to have at least three "best qualified" candidates for each and every job unless they can wrangle a double-endorsement.

It must be slightly bewildering to the scholastic student who takes no active part in campus politics. It must be bewildering, that is, if the non-participant gives a tinkers-damn who is in office. We'd like to make a general suggestion to the voter:

If you are sincerely interested in maintaining student government for yourself and your campus, if you are sincerely interested in how that student government is run, then get out and make an interested attempt on your part to see who you should vote for in April.

Ask questions, read platforms, study qualifications, and then make your decision—strictly on your own. If the majority of the voting students will follow this procedure, then those elected will be those whose policies the campus wishes enforced during the coming year.

--10 Minutes To Idaho!

By George Dixon

This has not been announced publicly, because no official timer was stationed along the route, but the Air Force has evidence that its record-smashing B-47 left Dayton, Ohio, and passed over Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, ten minutes by the clock before the time it left Dayton.

Dayton is just inside the Eastern time zone: Coeur D'Alene just inside the Pacific. The plane left Dayton at 3 A.M. and was unofficially recorded over Coeur D'Alene at 7:50 A.M. The three time changes, talking by the clock, enabled it to get to the West before it left the East.

This is the same plane that previously flew from Moses Lake, Wash., to Washington, D. C., in the officially recorded time of 3 hours, 46 minutes. Its astonishing exploits have made our scientifically-minded senators very wistful.

This wistfulness was inspired by Senator Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington, who began wondering out loud in Senate cloakrooms, or wherever he could get an audience, if speed and space flying couldn't be used against the filibuster.

"If that plane could only travel West as fast as it traveled East," he sighed. "I could leave Washington tonight and be back home in Seattle only 46 minutes after the time I started. Think of all the people I could surprise!

"The Air Force is still improving that plane. This probably means that, with three time changes, it'll soon be able to land on the West Coast before it leaves Washington.

"Just think what we could do with a thing like that in a filibuster! Applying the same principles we could have a filibuster over before it started!

"We could load the filibustering senators in a B-47 and let them begin talking. They could orate westward until their tonsils collapsed and not a minute of our precious senatorial time would be lost!"

On the desk of President Truman is a trophy awaiting a winner. The President plans to present it to the one he deems most qualified.

The trophy, a masterpiece in bronze, was turned over to the President by Richard J. Reynolds, the North Carolina cigaret heir. Mr. Reynolds suggested the winner be chosen from among those who were loudest for Truman after Nov. 2.

The statue is that of a golfer in mid-swing. But, instead of a golf club, he is swinging a bull.

I feel no further explanation is required.

Round Two . . .

Slates Ready, Platform Due

CP: Long, Talley, Williams Superior Candidates: A Positive, Constructive Program

By Jim Southerland

The Campus party has completed its nominations for the spring election, adopted its platform, and completed its campaign plans. With Charlie Long, Banks Talley, and Nat Williams leading a ticket of superior candidates, and a positive, constructive program, the CP will conduct an energetic and intensive campaign in order to assure a victory for the party and for the student body.

The keynote of the Campus party platform reflects the basic philosophy of the party—a government of the students, by the students, and for the students. The party campaign and the campaigns of all its candidates will also reflect this fundamental political principle. Every CP candidate feels it his duty to present himself personally to the men and women he seeks to represent.

During the coming weeks Campus party candidates will conduct a door-to-door campaign through the dormitories, visit every fraternity and sorority house, and speak to all organizations interested in giving each candidate a fair hearing. The CP is confident that it has selected superior candidates and is willing and eager to place them side-by-side with their opponents. It feels that it knows what the student body wants in its candidates and asks only that the voters consider the candidates and the party with an open and serious mind. If the judgement of the Campus party is correct, it will win when the ballots are cast. If it is incorrect, it will lose and will deserve to lose.

The Campus party will state its stand on the issues facing student government on the basis of careful consideration of the problems involved, and after an intensive study of the facts. The CP is willing to stand or fall on its candidates and its platform without waiting to check the political winds with questionnaires or any sort of formal poll. The Campus party is composed of capable and sincere students to whom the desires of the student body are a subject of year-round study.

The Campus party platform will be given general distribution in the near future and all CP candidates welcome questions about any plank. One of the major functions of a political party, is to inform the student body on the issues and on the facts behind them. The CP accepts this responsibility without reservation.

SP: Candidate's 'Pull' Not Important in Nominating; Sanders Example of Top-Notch Choices

By Charlie Kauffman

In making nominations for the offices in student government, the Student party follows a hard and fast policy: the nomination of the men and women best qualified for the positions at stake, in disregard of the highly lauded "political expedient" of nominating those who have "the best chance of winning." We do not believe it is possible to be working in the best interests of student government, yet overlooking the people best qualified for various office in favor of others, favored simply because "everybody in District 3 knows Joe. He can't lose."

Joe may be just that, but if he is not a person of ability for any particular job, he will not get an SP nomination. Joe may very likely not be on the first slate at student government, and may care less. He may very likely be a person of no particular convictions, perfectly contented to [illegible] office, supposedly representing students, while in actuality bowing to some "party boss." The Student party does not recognize a prospective candidate's "pull" in a certain district, or over the campus as a whole, as [illegible] to fill office.

The very skeleton of the Student party calls this policy to work undisturbed by small interest-factions. The SP is not a federation of small [illegible] and arranging with the others for its place on the ballot. The principles of the Student party are built on the very ideas that we are neither a federation, in which case a tremendous amount of sacrificing here and there of the best prospects for candidacy is obviously required, nor a group of individual opportunists, each directing his political career toward his own exultation and everlasting glory. We contend that neither of these policies can possibly result in the best men available being offered at elections to the student body.

Last week the Student party again exhibited its policy of nominating the best man available for any position when it nominated John Sanders for the position of Secretary-Treasurer. Sanders does not have the campus popularity required for "expediency" in nominations. In this sense he will be at a disadvantage. Where John Sanders does hold the advantage is in his qualifications for the office, and it was on this basis that he was nominated. Thus, in conducting the campaign for this office, the Student party will do its best to make the superior abilities of its candidate known.

UP: Campaign Set to Acquaint Students With Gordon, Leonard, Williams, and Others

By Rita Adams

The University party is now launching a campaign to acquaint members of the student body with its nominees for offices in the spring elections. Over 85 people are working under the direction of Miles Smith, former chairman of the party, to publicize the outstanding qualifications of the men and women on their slate.

The campaign has been organized to provide available representatives for students in every part of the campus and town. Dave Sharpe will be in charge of the men's dormitory representatives, Marshall Roberts in charge of those in the men's town area, Nina Mosley, heading those in the women's dormitories, and Marletta Duke, representing the town women.

In accordance with the aim of the party to reach every voter and to be of service to him, these people have assumed a duty to inform the voters of the qualifications of the UP candidates and to explain to them the functions of the party. Through this method, UP hopes to make voters aware of the superiority of its candidates and to give membership to persons who are interested in the party.

Since these representatives will probably be involved in telling students about the offices their nominees have held and something about their efficiency in these offices, it is logical that they now learn something about the personal side of the three top men.

Dick Gordon, UP's candidate for president of the student body, hails from Pennsylvania. He is noted for going about his work in a quiet, efficient way, and for his clearly enunciated speech. Coeds often think of Dick as the person who began the investigation of the distribution of their funds in an effort to give them a clear picture of how their money is spent. Such action is typical of Dick's initiative.

Vice-presidential nominee Ted Leonard is something of a mutant in the conventional sense of the word, in that he comes from a Greensboro newspaper family and, yet, lacks those black sheep qualities often attributed to people associated with the fourth estate. In fact, he is the type person who keeps on a determined path to complete his tasks well. Deeply interested in politics, he is headed for law school.

The Gaw-ja cracker on the slate is Nat Williams, from Thomasville, Ga., the doubly-endorsed candidate for secretary-treasurer.

The Cardinal Did Plead Guilty

Editor:

Two recent letters took issue with Bill Robertson's comment on the Mindzsenty case. On the case itself there is little to add. The Cardinal did plead guilty in open court at an uncensored trial. No eye-witness gave any credence to drugging, torture, or frameup. The black marketing charges, according to the conservative Manchester Guardian, were well substantiated. It was a trial considerably fairer than the trial of the eleven indicated Communists in New York. No pronouncements by the Pope, the Secretary of State, or the U. S. ambassador to Hungary (directly involved in the case and hardly impartial) can change that. There remains the fact that one ought to be surprised to find a Cardinal whom some consider a "saintly spiritual leader" sink so low. Therefore, to mention the past activities of the Cardinal is not "smearing" him; it is merely providing the necessary background in the light of which the crimes of which he was recently convicted appear as the climax in a long career. The Hungarian Catholic church owned 1,000,000 acres of land and 100,000 serfs. It controlled the schools. The Cardinal therefore hated everything that threatened this medieval state of affairs. He was arrested before, in 1918, by the short-lived second Hungarian republic that preceded the Horthy dictatorship, for plotting to restore Otto of Hapsburg. He especially hated the present third Hungarian republic, which succeeded where the second had failed, distributing the land to the peasants, freeing the serfs, and secularizing the schools.

On the question of Mindzsenty's anti-Semitism, the testimony of one lone witness, writing in the Jesuit magazine America, cannot be taken as very conclusive. More interesting is the following AP dsipatch quoting the four leading Hungarian Jewish organizations, among them the Hungarian Zionist organization and the Hungarian section of the World Jewish congress: "It is with a great dismay that we see Jewish organizations and Jewish men in the field of public life in Western Europe and in American raise their voices on behalf of Cardinal Mindzsenty, the arch-enemy of Jews in Hungary and in Eastern Europe."

The following quotation was displayed at the trial in Mindzsenty's own handwriting: "It is our good fortune that the great 'reservoir' of Galician and Bukovinian Jews, the millions of the Jewish masses in the ghetto, have as a result of the German war of destruction been reduced to some 500.000."

Mindzsenty therefore, hated the present Hungarian republic which, for the first time in Hungary's history, has given the Jews complete and equal citizenship. Mindzsenty's arrest by the Nazis is also far less dramatic than some would have us believe. He was charged, not with being anti-Nazi, but with hoarding huge stocks of underwear, which happened to be unlawful even under the Nazis.

A Republican Supporter

Editor:

It is really generous of you to admit in this morning's Daily Tar Heel that the Republicans are "right" for one time. May I bring to your attention the fact that the Republicans, with just two exceptions, won the national election each time from 1[illegible] till 1912. The nation must have thought that they were right much of the time then, and in many people's opinion, they are right today. You forget that there is a relatively large number of Republicans on campus and we don't like at all your insinuating editorial of this morning!

You speak of the Republicans being so seldom concerned with the common man. They are just as concerned with him as the Democratic party is or ever was. You may note that the late "great" F. D. R. did not come from the class that he professed to love so much. He was born in the lap of luxury, while ex-President Hoover was just a blacksmith's son. And the man in the White House today is no prize example of what a good President should be. Most of the time that H. S. T. has been President, he has been chiefly engaged in such "constructive" acts as calling people bad names that don't just happen to agree with him.

'Beggar's Opera' Opening Tomorrow Highlight

By Vestal C. Taylor

With the final curtain closed on the "Foxes" the spot-light shifts up the street to Memorial Hall for the opening of the "Beggar's Opera." Slated for a two night stand, March 10th and 11th, John Gay's great work is being presented by the combined efforts of five campus organizations. They are: Playmakers, Sound and Fury, Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota music fraternities, and the University Music Department.

"The Beggar's Opera" has delighted countless audiences for more than 200 years. It was written as the outcome of a suggestion for a "Newgate Pastoral" made by Swift in 1716. The play enjoyed remarkable popularity from the first, and author Gay set about to write a sequel, "Polly," which was banned throughout England.

A doff of the topper to those hard working folks who have made this presentation of the first of all musicals possible.

Sound and Fury haas chosen a creation called "Livin' Can Be Fevy" for their spring show. This new musical was written by Frank Matthews and Forrest Covington, with Matthews contributing his best songs from a ten year period of writing and Covington authoring the book. These boys have returned to a style of show that emphasizes music and comedy and departs from the dramatic. A commendable departure, for the musicals we have been seeing in the recent past have been too slow with a definite leaning toward heavy drama.

Tryouts are scheduled for the opening week of the spring quarter.

Speaking of tryouts, it is timely to urge all those who are interested in the entertainment world to be on hand for all tryouts when parts are involved that may suit their type or interest. Too often newcomers to the campus lose heart after their first tryout if they fail to win the desired part. As a result the choice parts available are awarded to the same few, over and over, simply because the talent is limited. Everyone who is interested in displaying talent should stay posted on tryouts and be persistant in their efforts to win the part desired.

To those individual members of campus organizations who feel a gripe coming on about the lack of publicity given their group, it must be said that they will meet with more success if they will take the trouble to make a more concerted publicity effort on their own. Newspaper people are still human and space is still limited. Appoint an individual or an organization to push publicity and stress the importance of same, and the results will be gratifying.

It is said that Dusty Moore has had to hang up her dancing shoes again on the doctor's orders. That's too bad, for she is among the top few in campus entertainment circles. Here's hoping for a speedy recovery and an early engagement at the Rendezvous.

THE SPORTING PICTURE

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

A Household Word

DUZ AND CHARLIE JUSTICE, long household words in American homes, may have to edge over slightly in the coming days to make a place for a new face. Its owner is one Bill Albans, who like Duz and Juz, does everything. Mr. Albans did just that in the recent indoor games when he performed as if he had been the fellow that had originally put the meat in track meet.

Besides the fact that he won first place in the high jump, the broad jump, the high and low hurdles, the 60-yard dash and broke three meet records, Albans was not too impressive. He finished a mere third in the team score, being edged for top honors by Carolina and Maryland. For a guy that is supposed to be able to do everything, Albans could have at least been up in the stands selling peanuts and soft drinks between events.

The sad thing about Mr. A.'s five first places was that probably none of them was even his top performance. In the high jump, he stopped jumping after setting a new record to save time and energy for other endeavors. The rest of his showings were possibly also thusly handicapped and at the finish the weight of awards already won was getting to be a tiring load to carry. The record books turn over in their bookcases at the thought of an Albans crack at each individual mark.

The Whisking Wizard of Yards

MR. ALBANS ARRIVED at the University at the start of the winter which looked as if it might be pretty bleak for acting track coach Dale Ranson. After Mr. A.'s first workout, the colorful coach Ranson forgot about sleepless nights and bundled himself to dreamland each evening by counting little Bill Albans going over little mental hurdles. Here was a track man who caused a coach few worries besides getting him a uniform and someone to run against.

Albans soon became the center of attraction around the Tin Can to the delight of some who like track and the dislike of some who don't like centers of attraction. He could outrun and outjump almost everybody in the place, and on the side, had almost everybody on the run and jumping to boot.

People began to wonder about the Whisking Wizard of Yards until it turned out that Albans had been places in the track world—at least to London and back with the 1948 United States Olympic team. The tall New Jersey lad was No. 3 man for this country in the hop, skip and a jump which is a series of track contortions not done in college circles. That was Albans' ticket to the London games where he won seventh place in the world finals.

On the Subject of Self-Respect

ALBANS' EDUCATION is currently being resumed after a long pause created by the recent war. He saw extensive service through-t the war, receiving injuries that were possibly the biggest hurdle f his life. Last year, fully recovered and sporting Olympic awards, Albans felt the need of a college education and passing the neces-ary entrance exams, he became a Tar Heel in January.

Mr. Albans sports a brilliant self-respect that some might label nfavorably while the men who know tag it the self-assurance necessary for championship athletic performance. A supposed inci-ent that typifies Mr. A.'s spirit occurred in the recent indoor games. Before the start of the finals in one of the hurdle events, an opponent approached the already four-time Carolina winner.

"Albans," said the stranger, "I thought that you'd like to know hat I'm going to take a second off the record in this final."

Albans smiled softly, sizing his adversary as he would a high p bar. "You know I'm relieved to hear that," replied the Tar Heel ace, "because I'm going to be about a yard in front of you."

Mr. Albans' assurance should be an assurance that Carolina rack is looking up to this 6'3" cinder sender. The whole situation summed up in a question raised by a small boy leaving the ome of the recent Albans accomplishment.

What's that CAA stand for, daddy?" asked the tot.

For Charlie and Albans," was the reply.

Tar Heel Nine Preps For Florida Journey

Present Champs To Make Debut Against Gators

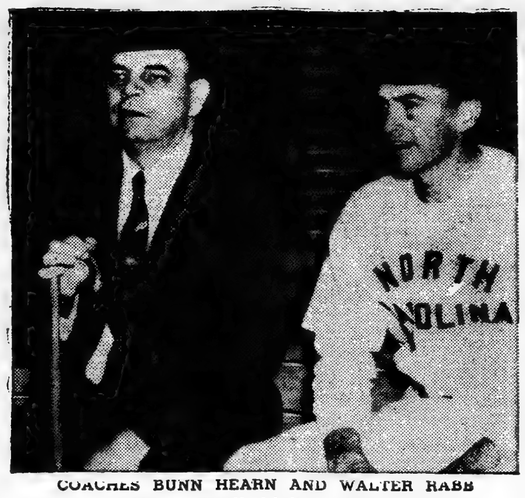
The 1949 edition of Coach Bunn Hearn's University of North Carolina Tar Heel baseballers will make their season debut at Gainesville, Florida March 18 with the University of Florida.

The Tar Heels, Southern Conference and Big Four champions and District Four title holders last year, will carry a squad of some twenty-odd players on the Southern "spring training" jaunt, according to Coaches Hearn and Walt Rabb.

The squad will leave Raleigh next Wednesday night by train and will arrive in Gainesville at ten a. m. the next morning. While at Gainesville the Tar Heels will be quartered at the White House hotel. While the majority of the players will be leaving Chapel Hill on Wednesday, several will depart the following night under the guidance of Coach Henry House.

The four-game schedule includes two games with the Gators and two with the Jacksonville Naval Air Station on March 20 and 21. The Tar Heels will return to the University on March 23.

With nine of last year's regulars missing, the '49 squad will be built around six returning lettermen. The returning lettermen are shortstop Rip Ryan, first baseman Willard Hobbs, catchers Andy Tranavitch and Sid Varney, and pitchers Bub Blair, Dean Cassell, and Tom Andrews.



Tranavitch, a top-flight catcher last season, has been switched to pitching duties to help strengthen the mound staff.

With all four experienced outfielders gone, Coach Hearn will be calling up last year's freshmen stars to fill the gap caused by the absence of Kenny Black, Ott Evans, Frank Jones, and Jim Kelly.

Vinnie DiLorenzo, ace southpaw moundsman last year, will be missing this year and the present situation seems to indicate that the bulk of the left-handed pitching duties will be put on the shoulders of Bill McGinn, freshman star last year.

The baseball schedule for March is as follows:

March 18—Florida at Gainsville; 19—Florida at Gainsville; 20—Jackson Naval Air station at Jacksonville, Fla.; 21—Jackson Naval Air station at Jacksonville; 28—Washington and Lee at Chapel Hill; 29—Cornell at Chapel Hill; 30—Michigan State at Chapel Hill; Michigan State at Chapel Hill.

Nyimicz, Twining Receive Awards At Basketball, Swimming Dinners

Banquets were held last night in Carolina Inn honoring two of the University's varsity athletic squads—the basketball and swimming teams.

A total of 26 players, coaches, and honored guests attended the basketball dinner held in the Club room of the Inn, and 35 were present at the swimming baquet held in the private dining room.

One of the highlights of the cage squad's get-together was the landslide election of Dan Nyimicz as captain of the 1948-49 team. Nyimicz's vote kept the election from being unanimous.

Another after-dinner feature was the exhibition of pictures made during the past season. The winner of the Foy Robertson Memorial award was also chosen by secret ballot last night, but will not be announced until award night in May.

Coach Tom Scott in commenting on this year's cage squad said that the team was "not one of the greatest in the University's history, but certainly one of the scrappiest."

There were several high spots during the course of the evening at the swimming banquet Coach Ralph Casey was presented with a beautiful Bulova wrist watch by members of the team, and Captain Dick Twining was awarded the Richard Jamerson Mem-

Tracksters Prepare for Florida; Strong Carolina Team Entered

Carolina's tracksters have been practicing very diligently for the past week as they round into shape for the University of Florida relays at Gainesville on March 26.

Coach Dale Ranson's team which won the Southern conference indoor title two weeks ago will continue daily workouts on the Fetzer field cinders this week. The Tar Heel tracksters will work out here several days after the spring vacation before leaving for Florida.

After they return from Gainesville, the Carolina cinder-beaters will be hosts in the annual Carolina Relays on April 2.

The Tar Heels have several strong men entered in the Florida meet. As in the indoor season, the locals will be particularly strong in the hurdle events

Student Enrollment Commences In Platoon Leader Training

Enrollment of eligible students for the Marine corps platoon leaders class has begun, according to an announcement by Maj. B. W. McLean, public information officer of the Naval ROTC unit.

Students selected for training in the platoon leaders class will receive summer training at Quantico, Va., and upon successful completion of the course will receive commissions in the Marine corps reserve. All freshmen, sophomores, and juniors are eligible to enroll in the course, Maj. McLean said.

Freshmen and sophomores who enroll will be required to attend two summer training periods of six weeks duration. Juniors who are veterans and have at least one year of service to their credit, are required to train for only one six weeks period, McLean said.

During their initial training period all students are rated as [illegible] corporals and receive $90 a month in addition to board, clothing, and medical care. During the advanced training periods the candidates receive the grade of sergeant and are paid $100 a month. All juniors are considered as advanced students, McLean said.

Students chosen for platoon leader training will be subject to active duty only in case of a national emergency or at their own request. After completion of the training periods and upon graduation from college, the students are eligible to receive commission as second lieutenants in the Marine corps reserve.

To be eligible for platoon leader training a student must not be enrolled in any other military organizations, he must be a citizen of the United States, not less than 17 years old at the time of enrollment nor more than 25 upon his graduation from college.

He must be single and agree to remain so until completion of his training period. He must not have a claim pending for or be drawing disability allowance, pension, or retired pay from the United States government. He must sign an agreement to serve for the required periods of active duty training.

Students interested in enrolling for the course of training should see Maj. B. W. McLean at the Naval armory on South Columbia street.

PRODUCING METALLIC TITANIUM FOR INDUSTRIAL EVALUATION

Du Pont group research developed a pilot plant with daily capacity of 100 pounds

Du Pont research has just made available to industry what may become one of America's key structural materials, titanium metal. Midway in density between aluminum and iron and with an especially high melting point, silvery-white titanium offers an extraordinary combination of strength, lightness, corrosion resistance and hardness.

Titanium is the ninth most common element. But it has been slow in coming into its own as a metal because of the difficulty of separating it in pure form from its ores.

Du Pont scientists first began to probe the possibilities of metallic titanium in the course of their long experience with the titanium oxide pigments. Their research was interrupted by World War II. Meanwhile, the U.S. Bureau of Mines laboratories succeeded in producing the metal for research purposes.

After the war, Du Pont scientists developed a process for the production of ductile titanium metal that can be scaled up to meet commercial demands. The research team that mastered the complex problem consisted of chemical engineers specializing in design and production, as well as chemists and a metallurgist. In September 1948, a pilot plant was opened with a daily capacity of 100 pounds. Titanium metal is now being produced in sponge and ingot form. Samples are available to industrial and college laboratories with research projects in related fields. Studies of methods for forming, machining and alloying are under way.

Exhaustive studies will be necessary before the many possibilities of titanium metal can be known. Because of its high ratio of strength to weight, early uses may be in airplane power plants and structural parts. Its hardness and rust-resistance recommend it for railroad transportation equipment, marine power plants and propellers, and food packaging equipment. Its high melting point suggests use in pistons, and its resistance to electric currents points to electronics. Titanium wire may be used for springs and titanium sheet for such highly stressed parts as microphone diaphragms.

Your Opportunity in Research

The commercial development of titanium metal is a typical example of Du Pont research in action. However, the Pigments Department, which worked out the process, is but one of the ten Du Pont manufacturing departments. Each conducts continuous research. Each is operated much like a separate company. Within these "companies"—whose interests range from heavy chemicals to plastics and textile fibers—college trained men and women work in congenial groups where they have every opportunity to display individual talent and capabilities. Who knows what their contributions will mean in the future to science and the world!

C. M. Olson, Ph.D.Phys.Ch., Chicago '36, and C. H. Winter, Jr., B.S.Ch.E., Virginia Polytechnic Institute '40, removing 100-lb. titanium ingot from furnace in heat-treating study.

R. C. Reidinger, B.S.Ch.E., Princeton '37, and T. D. McKinley, B.S.Ch., Worcester Polytechnic Institute '35, making a test of the hardness of ingots of Du Pont titanium metal.

SP Backs Lowenstein For Vice-President

Claybrook Triply Nominated For Yackety Yack Editorship

Candidate Is Director Of Fraternity Section

Bill Claybrook, rising senior from Reidsville, will run for the editorship of the Yackety Yack in the spring general elections as a triply-endorsed, SP-CP-UP, candidate, spokesmen of the three parties announced yesterday.

Bill Duncan, outgoing editor of the yearbook, in announcing the nomination for the University party, said, "Claybrook was the most efficient editor of any section in the Yack this year.

"He always had his work done on time and with complete thoroughness. I believe that he will be able to do the entire book in the same manner that he has done the fraternity section this year."

Claybrook has worked on the Yack staff for two years. His first year was spent in general layout and organization work. This year he was editor of the fraternity section.

A commerce major, Claybrook is a member of the Order of the Shieks and the Air ROTC in which he serves as a cadet captain. In high school he was business manager of the school's paper.

He is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The Alpha Tau chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, professional fraternity in commerce, has elected the following officers to serve for the coming year: president, Jim Cashion, Winston-Salem; vice-president, William Hester, Creedmoor; secretary, Arthur Xanthos, Wilmington; treasurer, William Moore, Greensboro; and master of rituals, Allen Spivey, Wilmington.

Twenty-seven new members were initiated into the fraternity at the initiation ceremony Sunday. They are as follows: Noel Baker, Rural Hall; Robert Cloyd, Charlotte; Ben Crawford, Greensboro; James Croom, Wilmington; James M. Dick, Guilford College.

Robert H. Evans, Shelby; Murry Ferguson, Jr., Mebane; Kenneth Griffin, Concord; James Guthrie, Chapel Hill; Wiley Hall, Durham; Ralph Hebb, Auburndale, Fla.; David E. Class Tickets

Class tickets for the spring quarter for pre-registered students may be picked up in Memorial hall on Tuesday, March 22, from 9 o'clock in the morning to 10 that night, and on Wednesday, from 6 to 8 o'clock in the morning, a report from the Registration office said yesterday.

Failure to get tickets at the prescribed dates and hours will result in a $5 fine and a cancelled registration.

Any student who failed to pre-register will register on Tuesday, March 22, from 9 o'clock to 4:30 in Venable X.

ARC Drive Nets $2,522 Of City Goal

All Contributions Not Yet Reported

Over $2,522 of the Chapel Hill $5,642 Red Cross quota for this year has already been collected, Mrs. R. M. Grumman, Red Cross voluntary services chairman, said yesterday.

Although only about half of the reports have been turned in, indications are that the full quota will be reached in the next week, the chairman said. The drive is scheduled to run through this month, but Mrs. Grumman expressed hope that it will close by March 15.

Business people have not reported, and only scattered reports from the campus have been turned in. Four sections in the residential districts have not reported, nor has the rural area made reports. Five out of the 24 sections in Colored town have turned in contributions, the chairman reported.

Most of the contributions from the residential sections have been made in the form of special gifts. Four of the residential sections have not made their reports, and only half of the 70 people listed on the special gift list have reported.

The Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, who were not listed on the books of the Red Cross, made a sizeable contribution, the chairman said. Campus solicitors, which include 39 students and 23 fraternity members, have not as yet reported.

Graduates Asked To Notify Laundry

Students who are leaving school at the end of this quarter are requested to go by the Laundry office at 106 West Franklin street to leave their address for mailing refund checks.

'Opera' Opens Two-Day Run This Evening

Edwards, Smith Get Top Billing

When Barbara Edwards of Troy, and Irvine Noble Smith of Cortland, N. Y. make their first entrances at 8:30 tonight in the two-day run of "The Beggar's Opera" at Memorial hall, they will be performing two of the most sought after roles of the 18th and 19th centuries.

Miss Edwards is the newest actress to tread the boards as Polly Peachum, daughter of a theif-taker 'Frederick Young) and his "chosen" wife (Catherine Covington). The role of Polly was originally played by Lavinia Fenton in London, 1728.

Miss Edwards, already well known for her lead role of Eleanor Dare in Paul Green's "Lost Colony" given yearly at Manteo, is also a well established singer. She has sung leading roles in nearly all of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "Cavellier Rusticana," "The Marriage of Figaro;" and has acted in such plays as "Dark of the Moon," Family Album," An Enemy of the People," and "Egypt Lan.'"

Smith, at one time director of the Cortland Community Players, Cortland, N. Y., plays the famous role of Macheath, originally played by Thomas Walker.

He has appeared in lead roles for two season in the Lost Colony, first as Governor White and then as Sir Walter Raleigh. On campus he was stage manager for "Peer Gynt" and for "The Bartered Bride."

Catherine Covington and Frederick Young are cast in the comedy roles of Mr. and Mrs. Peachum. John Brinegar is playing Filch; and the role of the jailor and his daughter Lucy are being played by John Shearin and Lee Noll.

With a cast of well over 50 and a complete orchestra under the direction of Dr. Jan Schinhan and David Samples, the production will play at 8:30 tonight and tomorrow night only, the first production of the Beggar's Opera to play in Chapel Hill. Tickets, general admission and reserved, will be available at the doors of memorial hall as well as at The Carolina Sport shop, the Y lobby and Hill hall.

Horton Leaves Race, Blasts At Legislature

THE ONLY TRAFFIC ON MAIN STREET in Missouri, Iowa, is by rowboat as the town lies under the flood waters of the Boyer river. The community was hit by the worst flood in its history as the water rose to ten feet. Some 1,200 persons were evacuated.

Was Candidate For Speaker On SP Ticket

Says Lowenstein Top Man for Job

By Charles McCorkle

Harry Horton, former Student party candidate for the vice-presidency of the student body, withdrew from the race yesterday because of his "dissatisfaction with student government in general and disgust with the legislature in particular."

Horton threw his support to Al Lowenstein, who was nominated unanimously by the Student party for the post yesterday.

"As a member of the Student legislature and as Student party floor leader," Horton charged, "I have seen poor legislation railroaded through; I have seen legislators making deals to gain personal prestige; I have seen deals made to keep people in the legislature who had no interest in that body and the same people make deals to oust people who had legitimate excuses for absence."

Horton was apparently commenting on procedure of the Rules committee of the legislature in evaluating absence excuses of legislators.

The former candidate continued, "I have seen members of the executive branch bulldoze the legislature into passing certain legislation, and a short time later changing their minds and reversing things, thereby making a plaything of the legislature and turning it to their own uses."

Horton said he was convinced of the need for sweeping changes in the legislative set-up which would require more time and effort than he could give.

"The consolation, however," Horton said, "lies in knowing that Al Lowenstein, who will replace me on the Student party ticket, is a man of outstanding capabilities and one who has an outstanding desire to return the Student legislature and student government to their rightful place of efficiency and esteem on the campus.

"I will vigorously support Al in this campaign," Horton concluded, "because I am certain that if he is so privileged as to be elected to the office of vice-president, he will preside fairly and honestly over the legislature and conscientiously exert all his vast knowledge of student government to the best advantage in bringing about the much-needed changes and improvements in that body."

Order Of Gold Bear Gives House Degree

By Sam Whitehall

A new honor has recently been bestowed upon Chancellor Robert B. House by Bear Polytechnic institute, an organization founded by the Order of the Golden Bear in order to present such degrees to an outstanding man in the state once a year.

The honor, a degree of bachelor of education and music was awarded to Chancellor House "because he has successfully chancelled the University . . . by and with the consent of the Daily Tar Heel."

The award was made at a dinner party at the Terrace View supper club on Saturday, at which Chancellor and Mrs. House were honored guests. Larry T. Queen, president of the Order of the Golden Bear, presided over the meeting.

John W. McReynolds, president of Polytechnic institute, made the award after delivering a speech in which he lauded the fine work of House in "chancelling" the University in spite of all opposition.

Other awards made by the organization included a sweater to John E. Taylor and a cup to John W. McReynolds for their outstanding work in the organization during the past two years.

The Order of the Golden Bears was founded in the fall of 1947 and the purpose of the organization to enhance social life and "poke fun at ourselves."

Duncan Elected To Speakership Of Phi Assembly

Bill "Bully" Duncan of Narberth, Pa., was elected speaker of the Philanthropic assembly in Phi hall Tuesday night.

As editor of the Yackety Yack Duncan turned in a complete year book for publication earlier than any of his predecessors. He is a member and past secretary of Kappa Sigma, and has served the Phi as speaker pro-tem. At the present time Duncan is vice-chairman of the University party.

Crime Never Pays

Trial Held For 1598 Crime

By Margaret Gaston

Confiscating the property of a deceased veteran did not pay off for Jonas Bodenham, an Englishman tried in a special Chancery court session in Saunders hall Monday.

The Englishman was on trial for an offence committed 350 years ago—and the decision reached by a jury of professors in the University English department was almost exactly the same as that handed down in the original trial in England in 1598.

Indictment brought by Thomas Drake, merchant, charged Bodenham with confiscating $400,000 in money plus valuable property acquired by Drake's deceased brother Francis in sea voyage to foreign ports in service of his country. The case was argued by Mrs. James Godfrey as attorney for the plaintiff and Robert Butman for the defendant.

Mrs. Godfrey contended Bodenham had received $400,000 in money, 21 chests, various barrels and hampers from Francis Drake and refused to turn the goods over to Thomas Drake after the death of his brother.

Butman declared that his client had already turned the property to Thomas Drake and that all the goods had been accounted for.

A jury composed of C. P. Lyons, Lyman Cotten, H. K. Russell, A. P. Hudson, and William Wells, all of the English department, returned a verdict of guilty, and Lord Chancellor R. B. House, sitting as judge, ordered a special committee to investigate the amount of goods confiscated by Bodenham and directed that the defendant return all the goods. In rendering its verdict the jury did not know the decision reached in the original trial.

Following the trial English professor Richmond P. Bond, performing as court bailiff, read the original decision to the participants in the mock trial. The document very nearly coincided with the written decision of the local jury.

Charles Sisson, visiting professor from the University college, London, originated the idea of the mock trial and served as director. The trial was carried through on the basis of the original document from the Public Record office, London.

Purpose of the mock proceedings was to show how documents in Chancery throw light on historical figures, Bond explained.

The Francis Drake referred to in the trial was Sir Francis Drake, the English seadog who defeated the Spanish armada.

Nominee Helped Write First UNC Constitution

Al Lowenstein, present member of the Student legislature and one of the original writers of the student constitution, was nominated by acclamation by the Student party yesterday afternoon to run for the vice-presidency of the student body.

The candidate was one of the outstanding members of the special committee which was formed in 1945 to write the constitution which the student body ratified in the spring of 1946 and under which campus government at the University now functions.

At the present time, Lowenstein is a member of the Elections committee of the legislature. He is serving his second term as a member of the assembly.

He served as a member of the Student council last year, and was a member of the special committee set up several years ago to set up the present block fee structure from which student government obtains its operating funds.

Lowenstein is opposing Ted Leonard and Banks Talley for the vice-president's job, the primary function of which is to sit as speaker of the legislature. Leonard is running on the University party ticket and Talley on the Campus party ticket.

An associate editor of the Daily Tar Heel, Lowenstein has been a University delegate to the State Student legislature three times, once serving as chairman of the UNC delegation. He has been the University delegate to the National Students association convention in Madison, Wisc., and has been the Student party floor leader in the local legislature. He has also been a member of the Men's Glee club, and the Hillel representative to the Council for Religion in Life.

Accepting the nomination yesterday, Lowenstein said, "I have always tried to do right and play square with all persons, in student government as elsewhere. If I win, I will try to translate these ideals into the vice-presidency and prove them 'practical.' Some people say they sound good but won't work. I will work to make them work.

"I will try to make student government more inviting to the non-politicians who constitute most of the campus and now have little contact or want little contact with their government. I tried in the constitution committee to safeguard the rights of all students permanently through the document and I have tried in my personal activities to respect these rights."

Lowenstein concluded, "Both the people I am running against are fine persons and I respect them. I am very sorry that Harry Horton, who would have made a wonderful vice-president, has seen fit to withdraw. I hope I can live up to some of the kind things he has said about me, if I should be elected."

The SP candidate has belonged to the Young Republicans club and the World Federalists, the latter in which he served as vice-chairman.

Deadline Set For Nominees By Chairman

Names Must Be In by March 24

Nominations for candidates to run in the spring elections will be due on March 24, Al Winn, chairman of the campus elections board announced yesterday.

Party chairmen or campaign managers must turn in their lists of candidates to Winn by 6 o'clock at 8 Steele dorm. Coed nominations are to be turned in to Eleanor DeGrange at 110 Smith dorm.

A compulsory mass meeting of all candidates, party chairmen, and campaign managers will be held in Hill hall March 29 at 7 o'clock. Final rules and regulations for the election battle will be discussed at this time.

All candidates will be introduced to the campus at large on March 31 in Memorial hall at 7 o'clock. The major candidates, for top offices in student government and publications will make short talks on their campaigns.

All expense accounts from candidates will be turned in on April 4 by 6 o'clock. Coeds accounts should be given to Miss DeGrange and the men's accounts should be turned in to Winn in Steele.

General campus balloting for the various posts will be held on Tuesday, April 5. In the event of necessary runoffs, expense accounts from the runoff will be turned in on April 11 under the same conditions of those turned in for the first primary. The runoff election will be held April 12.

Radio Quiz Show Scheduled Today

Wanna be on a quiz show? There's one on schedule this afternoon at Swain hall at 4:45, complete with music, questions, master of ceremonies and a studio audience.

The show is the brain child of Tommy Thomas, radio major, who decided to do something different for his term project. In this age of musical quizzes, variety shows, and anything goes radio, Tommy decided that if the networks could do it, why not have one here on campus? Today is the big day, and students who appear at Swain hall about 4:45 can get on the show.

The program promises to be a dilly. Thomas and Dick Johnson will act as masters-of-ceremonies while Producer Frank Wooten keeps things running on schedule. Featured on the show will be the popular Town Talk Trio from Graham Memorial, the keyboard stylings of Hank Beebe-Bud Early piano-organ combination, and a musical quiz with the inevitable prizes, donated by the sponsors, Liggett and Myers tobacco company.

The show will be held in studio A and the doors will be opened to the public at 4:30. There will be no admission charge and seats will go on a first-come first-served basis.

Legislature Does It Again

They said last year that it couldn't be done, but the Carolina Quarterly staff has shown its critics and others that they could do just what they said they were going to do.

When the Carolina Magazine was voted off campus last spring, a group of enterprising students decided that they could produce a quarterly in the "new literary capital of the South" that would be deserving of Carolina's reputation. They have done just that.

Now, however, they're in their first difficulties over the authorized underwrite which the Student legislature guaranteed them last spring. The Legislature authorized a $2000 underwrite for the Quarterly when it was needed. None of it was necessary for the first issue, but after the publication of the second recently, the staff asked for and was given authority to draw $500. The catch is that no one has the authority or power to sign for the money.

The blame for the mixup can be placed squarely on the shoulders of the legislature. Investigation shows that there is a definite question of constitutionality in their wording of the original underwrite. That is not the fault of the Quarterly. It is the fault of the Legislature.

The serious problem, though, remains that the Quarterly staff, acting in good faith on the Legislature's promise has gone ahead, counting on the underwrite. Now, when they must have part of it, it isn't available.

Steps should be taken immediately to correct the error and clarify the Quarterly's status. The staff has proven that they can do what they set out to accomplish and they have produced two issues which are a credit to the University. They should be allowed to continue.

The mixup in the Legislature is more evidence that its members know all too little about some of the bills they pass.

The Legislature made the mistake and the Quarterly should not be the one to suffer because of it.

Quitting Gains Nothing

The world, and the University of North Carolina in particular, is amazing. Yesterday afternoon, the Student party candidate for the vice-presidency officially withdrew from the race because "of a general dissatisfaction with the present student government in general and disgust with the student legislature in particular."

Harry Horton is a very capable leader and has shown great interest in our student government. His rise to leadership in the Student party and as a floor leader on the Legislature floor is accredited to the ability he has shown. His reasons for withdrawing from the race are confusing.

"I have seen poor legislation railroaded through. I have seen Legislators make deals for personal prestige. I have seen deals to keep people in the Legislature who have no interest in that body and the same people make deals to oust people who had legitimate excuses for absence." Horton stated in his written withdrawal statement.

Harry, these are serious charges, but those who are familiar with the actions of the Legislature know that they exist. The only hope for student government and the future of the legislature is to eliminate such people from its membership. You have not helped the situation by withdrawing.

The wise thing for you to have done would have been to remain in the fight. You should have gotten out, campaigned, and if you were elected, then made the changes which you feel are necessary. Nothing is ever gained by quitting.

Concert Success

UNC Symphony Now At Its Best

By "Wink" Locklair

The University Symphony orchestra, now at its best in five years according to those who should know, played Brahms' Fourth symphony, the Sibelius Violin concerto, and a suite "The Plow that Broke the Plains," by Virgil Thomson, at its second concert of the season Tuesday evening in Hill hall.

Earl Slocum was the conductor and Edgar Alden played the solo parts in the Sibelius concerto.

It was unfortunate that the Brahms' symphony was placed first on the program because this one, like his first three, is an ambitious undertaking, a work which requires every musician to be fully alert and emotionally prepared for the flowing, lyrical and somehow mysterious system of harmony and melody which pervades everything the composer ever put down on paper. The orchestra had to begin cold, and not until they reached the third movement, a frivolous scherzo, did the audience feel that the musicians were playing anything more than a lot of notes. The final movement, made up of thirty-one successive variations on a rather simple theme, was played with a great deal of warmth and feeling, and the gentlemen of the horn section deserve special mention for their contribution in the last two movements.

The remainder of the concert was contemporary: a concerto by the 68 year-old Scandinavian composer Jean Sibelius, and a suite from a documentary movie by the 53-year-old American Virgil Thomson.

Sibelius is most noted for his symphonies and the tone poem, Finlandia. The violin concerto in D minor is somewhat unconventional. Only the broad and melodic slow movement follows tradition. The opening movement is marked by numerous cadenzas for the solo instrument, and the final rondo is a wild, curious affair, ending in a sudden switch from D minor to D major. Mr. Alden last played this music in 1940 at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, of which he is a graduate. He proved in his Hill hall appearance that he is a musician of considerable talent and his technique seemed to be, with one exception in the first movement, almost flawless. He was warmly applauded at the completion of the concerto.

The program ended with a novelty: Thomson's incidental music for "The Plow that Broke the Plains," a film issued in 1936 by the U. S. Farm Security administration. Much of the music is reminiscent of Aaron Copland's "Billy the Kid," and "Rodeo." It is graphic, plaintive and highly descriptive.

I am living in constant fear that my mother will come to quit Washington and come home. She won't stand for me playing around with people who talk nasty.

There's been a terrible lot of loose talk in the capital lately. It must be halted.

No sooner do we get over being shocked at the President than along comes Republican National Chairman Hugh Scott Jr. And says that out loud a word I was always made to pronounce "hell." This awful Mr. Scott who had better not bring his name block unless he washes and clopped with my mother's broom handle labeled this time "No-can-do." Or rather, that said:

We're going to adopt Mr. Truman's tactics—we're going to pour it on—we're going to give 'em H-l.

Atoms in Perspective

'Present Imperative'

By David Bradley

[illegible] World Government [illegible]

An atomic bomb exploded under water is an entirely new weapon. Its effect is not as much blast and fire, as the permanence of radioactive particles contaminating the earth's [illegible]. It is therefore, as Admiral Blandy said, a "form [illegible] warfare," and the problem lasts for years.

Much unnecessary confusion about atomic weapons can be avoided if we are clear on one distinction. A bomb exploded in the air is, except for the instantaneous radiation given off, much like a [illegible] T. N. T. bomb. These were the bombs of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and Bikini Test Able. A bomb exploded underwater may affect the land and its people for an indefinite time. The record is clear from Bikini Test Baker.

There are of course a great many things about radioactivity which we do not know, and will not know for years. But certain cornerstones are solid. One of them is that radioactive materials gotten within the body can be dangerous in extremely small amounts. Methods of protection and removal will undoubtedly be perfected, but they will all have their limiting factors.

Another thing we know about radioactive contamination from an underwater bomb is that in the first few hours or days the intensity of radiation is lethal. This was demonstrated by the experimental animals at Bikini. Radioactivity dies away, but it cannot be washed away. Contaminated land might well be dangerous for years. At least we can point to the Bikini ships as evidence. Of those which were seriously contaminated, none, so far as I can tell, has ever been cleared for duty. Most of them have been sunk—unsafe even for scrap.

Atomic bombs have not changed our problems, except to make the solution more urgent. Mankind someday must find a legal system to replace the military one for the settlement of international disputes. As Dr. Urey says: "Our role in securing Peace is to give our consent to be governed." The atomic bomb has not changed that problem, merely the tense—from future perfect to present imperative.

Most Recent Experimentals Prove Varied Fare

By Jonathan Marshall

Three one-act plays were presented last night by the Carolina Playmakers for the 129th Bill of Experimental plays. They were: "Snow Falling," by John Ehre; "A Brighter Star," by Nancy Wallace; and "Jersey Birt'day," by Ralph Long.

The first play, "Snow Falling," was a moralistic drama which appeared to be striving for a Saroyan touch without too much success. The story takes place in a cheap restaurant where a boy robs a philosophical old hash-slinger.

A policeman enters during the robbery, but the old man tells him the boy has done nothing. After the officer has left, of course, the boy returns and gives the money back: the boy is saved from a life of crime, and the old man's faith in boys is restored.

Although the plot is old and rather obvious, and the dialogue spotty, the play did have some merit. Characters were real, and they were brought out swiftly. If the acting had been less forced, "Snow Falling" might have been more effective.

The second play, "A Brighter Star," was vastly superior in almost every respect. It is concerned with the adjustment of a Scots war bride to her mother-in-law and to America.

When the mother-in-law breaks a tea cup the tension with the mother reaches a climax; however, rather than risk the chance that her son will return to Scotland with the girl, the aristocratic mother finally accepts her as a "lower-class" bride.

Ruth Kirk, as Edna Phelps, the Scottish girl, not only gave a sensitive and understanding performance, but she also delivered her lines with a very realistic brogue. Lon Braxton, the husband, and Francis Sowers, as his mother, were also convincing in their parts.

"A Brighter Star" was a well-written play, with an enjoyable blending of humor and drama. Transitions seemed a little difficult at times; however, no serious weaknesses were apparent.

The third performance could best be characterized as a riproaring comedy. "Jersey Birt'day" was set in a cheap boarding house where an uneducated giant has thoroughly frightened a group of drunks.

The big laborer, a little like Lennie in "Of Mice and Men," has always gotten his way by beating up other people, but the landlady's daughter shows him that it is more fun winning without his fists.

The play's success depends more on the lines and characters than on plot, although the book is a very original one.

Acting and direction were both effective in "Jersey Birt'day"; there were occasional lapses of accent by several actors, which if anything, added to the show's humor rather than hurting it.

The first play was directed by Lib Stoney, "A Brighter Star" by Pat Peteler, and the finale by Suzanne Davis. Foster Fitz-Simons supervised the entire bill, and Ellen Smith designed the lighting for the three plays.

Write Away

Let Us Rally Behind Dr. Green!

Editor:

I do not want to create the impression that I am a "one-issue timer" on the campus, but during my eleven quarters at the University I have been able to see only one side of Carolina's so-called "liberalism." I submit that "radicalism" would more accurately describe the dominant element of the campus.

Whether it be speakers or campus publications, a preponderance of radicals is in evidence. On every side we are exposed to these radical elements—all operating under the guise of Carolina's so-called liberalism.

We hear constantly a great deal which is rather calculated to awake our passions than conduct us to the truth and to us our real interests.

The climax came in an editorial in the Daily Tar Heel with the degradation of one of our greatest statesmen, Samuel Green. The writer cannot conceive of [illegible] as an open question: any man who can bring [illegible] many contradictions and absurdities puts himself beyond the pale of reason.

So far from being evil, Dr. Green is the very essence of right: he stands as a symbol of the furtherment of humanity and Christianity: he is upheld by every true Southerner and by right thinking people the world over. Let us all realize that one of the greatest men of our time, Dr. Green is [illegible] truth, a proper subject for any people's pride.

Outlawing Reds Undemocratic

Editor:

Things that seeem natural and just to others are sometimes viewed by Communists as anachronisms. Many are prone to embrace the socialist vision of the future, and others are angry and cry out that the Communists come to us not peace but a sword. The Communists of our country, on the other hand, believe that they are groping towards a more generous social order, embracing all races and creeds, a common spirit of good will. Many think of the idealistic egalitarianism of the left as "loosing wild foxes with [illegible] brands to ravage the snug fields." Communists, however, see themselves as rebels against all outmoded customs and stupidities.

Granting a generous hearing to political speculation designed to discover a new basis for social organization, the [illegible] pitable and creative mind repudiates coercion of those who are trying to make over the world. It is the heart of the principle of toleration that governments are made by men and the principle is founded in the belief of the competence of the citizenry. Under this principle, freedom [illegible] is a fundamental right that lies beyond the jurisdiction of the state. Any law which seeks to establish a coercive sovereignty over the democratic rights of minorities is, under this view, manifestly unjust; and, it would seem to me, a matter of concern to all those who uphold the ideal of toleration. Such a bill of attainder, directed against individuals and a political party, rather than against a violation of law applying equally to all groups in American society, is now pending in the state legislature. What the courts have been unable to prove, namely that the sweet cup of liberty has rendered some of us wanton, a few of our statesmen in Raleigh are seeking to establish by legislative fiat.

Shoud this bill pass, it seems to me that all [illegible] fundamental democratic aspirations would be rendered [illegible].

Mermen Work For Nationals; Track Card Released

Tickets Available For NCAA Swimming Championships Here

By Larry Fox

Swimmers from 35 to 40 schools from about the nation are expected to be on hand with the Tar Heel student body when the new quarter starts, but the visiting mermen will be here to pick up medals rather than knowledge and to give some lessons in navigation at the NCAA swimming championships slated for Bowman Gray pool the first weekend of school.

Many good tickets are still available for the three-day attraction, which is being held in the South for the first time, and students are urged to purchase their ducats before they leave for the spring vacation. The tickets sell for $4.00 and are good for the seven sessions of the meet.

This was supposed to be the last event for the Tar Heels, but the local board of directors decided to skip the Eastern Intercollegiates in Princeton, N. J. next weekend in favor of the National AAU's in Daytona Beach, Fla. the week after the NCAA's here.

Many Top Teams

Local tank enthusiasts will have an opportunity to witness some distinguished individuals and teams in action; among them Michigan, last year's champion, Iowa, Michigan State, Stanford, and Yale, all of which finished way up in last year's tourney.

In addition, Carolina will have another chance at Ohio State, runner-up last year, and LaSalle, which was eighth.

The Tar Heels conquered LaSalle here this season, but lost to OSU in Columbus, 43-32. The Buckeyes, who hold the AAU title, only lost out to the Wolverines by [illegible] points.

Ohio State also has some of the strongest individual stars of the meet, headed by Olympic champions Bill Smith and Bruce Harlan.

Ris Olympic Champ

Third-place Iowa has an Olympic star in middle-distance man Wally Ris. Ris copped the 100-yard freestyle and came in second behind Smith in the 220 in the NCAA's.

The entire Tar Heel team, which finished in a tie for 14th last year at Michigan, will be entered in the attraction, with Jim Thomas, Dick Twining, Norm Speer, Gil Beam, Jack Wichard, Floyd Drew, and Steve Osborne expected to rack up whatever points Carolina collects.

The best effort for the locals in an NCAA tourney came in 1946 when they tied Army for sixth with 11 points. Carolina also made into the scoring column in 1942.

COED BADMINTON

Girls who have entered the badminton tournament should check the chart posted on the bulletin board in Woman's gym to find out whom they are to play. Girls should get in touch with their opponents and play the matches off by tomorrow.

Basketball Getting Faster, Says All-Tourney Kappler

By Wuff Newell

The rubber-soled poundings of basketballers racing down the court are increasing in tempo, says Hugo Kappler, blonde whiz kid of Tom Scott's current basketball quintet.

"Basketball is becoming faster, and the trend is toward defense rather than offense," he explained.

Kappler, who hails from Brooklyn, went on to say that northern fans see fancier and faster ball-handling than southern collegiate spectators witness in the south.

The quiet unassuming forward who was a mainstay in the Tar Heel line up all season received high honors recently when he was named to the Southern conference All-tourney team.

A high-scoring offensive player with a smooth defensive style, Kappler received widespread praise for his performance against Maryland in the opening round of the tournament.

Kappler doesn't remember the first time he handled a basketball but he does know that at the crisp age of eleven he was entertaining himself by playing the game with college boys. Basketball is still the sport he most likes to play.

"In fact," he said, "I'd be perfectly content if I could play it twelve months of the year. A player needs a break of a couple weeks between seasons, but I'd still like to see basketball a year round sport."

In Brooklyn he was a member of the Flatbush Church league and played on the league's All-star team. Because of a knee injury received in a football game, Kappler never played basketball in high school.

A rookie on the varsity this year, he quietly went about his duties and ended the season as third highest scorer. As a defensive player he was one of the best, and several times his fancy ball handling and hard playing kept the opposing team from racking up enough points to win.

Throughout the season he played consistently good ball and won the praise of usually-critical fans.

"Since playing here I've had to change my style of playing," he said, "This is because the north just plays a different brand of ball."

Although Kappler thinks that Duke's Indoor stadium has the best court he's ever played on, he doesn't like the glass backboards.

"You have to get used to them," he explained. "In fact, some of the boys who are usually good shots still can't get the hang of those backboards."

A true Brooklynite, Kappler is a follower of the Dodgers. When asked about Brooklyn's pennant chances, he laughed and said. "I think the Bums have a very good chance."

Big Four Schedule Released; Tar Heels Open With Deacons

DURHAM, N. C., March 9—A 26 game schedule for the Big Four baseball league was announced here yesterday by the league's statistical bureau.

The fast college circuit will open play on April 9 when Wake Forest college invades the stronghold of Duke university's Blue Devils. The University of North Carolina, defending champion, and North Carolina State are the other members of the four team league.

Each team will play thirteen games, one more than was played last year. Easter Monday games between Duke and North Carolina and between Wake Forest and N. C. State will be included in the schedule. Thus the Blue Devils and Tar Heels will meet five times as will the Wolfpack and Demon Deacons. The other series within the big four will be four games. Wake Forest and State met on Easter Monday last year, but the game was not included in the league standings.

Postponed games will be played on the following day if that day is not Sunday and if there is no schedule conflict.

Last year's batting champion was Charlie Teague, Wake Forest second baseman, with an average of .391. Teague will return to defend his title this season. Another Deacon, Vernon Mustian, was recognized as the league's top pitcher with three wins and no defeats. Mustian also returns to the Wake Forest camp.

To be eligible for the loop's batting title, a player must appear in at least ten of his team's 13 games.

The schedule follows:
April 9—Wake Forest at Duke; 12—Wake Forest at Carolina; 13—Duke at N. C. State; 18—Carolina at Duke, Wake Forest at N. C. State; 20—Carolina at Wake Forest; 23—Carolina at N. C. State, Duke at Wake Forest; 26—Duke at Carolina; 27—N. C. State at Wake Forest; 28—N. C. State at Carolina, Wake Forest at Duke; 30—Duke at N. C. State, Wake Forest at Carolina.
May 3—Carolina at Duke; 4—N.C. State at Wake Forest; 7—N. C. State at Duke; 11—Carolina at N.C. State, Duke at Wake Forest; 14—Wake Forest at N. C. State, Duke at Carolina; 16 — N. C. State at Carolina; 18 — Carolina at Wake Forest, N. C. State at Duke; 21—Wake Forest at N. C. State, Carolina at Duke.

Tracksters Card Stiff Schedule; Five Home Meets

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Coach Bob Fetzer, Carolina athletic director announced a nine-meet schedule for the 1949 Carolina outdoor tracksters.

Included in the very stiff schedule are three relay meets, five dual meets and the Southern conference meet. In addition a sixth dual meet will probably be added to fill in one of the two open dates now on the schedule.

The Tar Heel cinder-beaters will open their schedule on March 26 with the University of Florida relays at Gainesville. Some of the top teams from all over the South are expected to compete in this extravaganza.

The following week will find the Tar Heels hosts in the annual Carolina relays here on April 2. A large field of conference teams and non-conference entries are expected to take part.

Dual meets have been arranged with Princeton, Duke, State, Virginia and Virginia Tech. The first three will be home meets while the Tar Heels will run both of the Virginia teams in the Old Dominion state.

Coach Dale Ranson's crew will also compete in the big Penn Relays at the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival at Philadelphia on April 29-30. While some of the top Carolina performers are in Philly, the bulk of the team will stay home to entertain State on April 30.

A two-meet road trip has been arranged for May 13 and 14. The Tar Heel tracksters will run against the University of Virginia at Charlottesville on Friday and then will move over to Blacksburg to oppose Virginia Tech's squad on Saturday.

The annual Southern conference meet has again been scheduled for Fetzer field here. The conference games will be run off on May 20 and 21. Carolina's team is defending champion and is pre-season favorite to cop the

Merci, Managers

The Sports department of the Daily Tar Heel wishes to reflect credit upon varsity and freshman managers of winter sports who have assisted the department in the coverage of out-of-town events during the quarter.

The assistance of basketball's Bill Spiegel and wrestling's O. B. Smith together with the work of other managers has been an important factor in a complete coverage of all Tar Heel athletics.—BCIII

Golf Candidates Prepare to Face Toughest Season

With its heaviest schedule in years soon to be announced, Carolina's 1949 golf team is out on the fairways these days working into form for the coming season.

Coach Chuck Erickson greeted a total of 16 candidates at the first practice call, finding six veterans of former Tar Heel squads among them. Harvie Ward and Bob Cox led the list of returnees which included Harvey Oliver, Frank Brooks, Jack Brantley, and Roy McKenzie.

Another veteran, Dan Nyimicz, is expected to report now that basketball season is completed.

Oliver Sapp of Winston-Salem headed the group of newcomers along with Archie Meekins and Jim Cowan. Two other promising first timers were Decatur Cunningham and Bill Cox.

The entire group journeyed to Pinehurst Tuesday for 18 holes of qualifying over the famed No. 2 championship course of that locale.

The 16 will spend two more days at Pinehurst during the holidays. After that, the squad will be cut according to the results of these practice rounds.

Intra-Squad Game Highlights Baseball Practice for Locals

Carolina's baseball "brain trust" took good advantage of yesterday's balmy skies to send the 1949 edition of the Tar Heel baseball squad through its second intra-squad game of the budding season.

As is usual in the earlier parts of the year the batters were a bit ahead of the pitchers. The Carolina batsmen surprised a bevy of curious onlookers with their crisp hitting of the ball and several sluggers connected for long smashes.

It was evident, however, that the twirlers who are expected to carry the Tar Heels to a successful season and another Southern conference championship need more work before the season opener on March 18 at Gainsville, Florida with the University of Florida.

Lack of control, the old nemisis that tends to drive many baseball managers crazy during the course of a season, found many a friends in the Tar Heel hurling corps yesterday. All of the chuckers that worked demonstrated that they haven't yet mastered control of their pitches as bases on balls and wild pitches were numerous.

Mentor Rabb plans another intra-squad game before the season inaugurating jaunt southward begins next Wednesday. By this time the Carolina coaches hope to have a good line on their material and this will necessitate a cut of the squad to about 20 from the present 40 when the season opens.

Entries Open

The Intramural department yesterday requested that fraternities intending to enter the mural softball leagues in the spring quarter contact the mural office before the end of this quarter.

Fraternities may enter as many as three teams each in the softball leagues.

When Barbers Talk About Home Shaving—THAT'S NEWS

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Mar. 10—Remember when the barber treated you to the old fish-eye when you said you shaved at home? Not any more—our demon interviewer recently asked barbers what they recommended for shave-at-homes. 86% said "use a blade that's Hollow Ground like my razor." That means PAL Hollow Ground, the blade that's ground like a barber's razor, for keener, quicker "feather-touch" shaves. PAL still gives you 4 blades for 10¢, 10 for 25¢, 21 for 49¢ and 44 for 98¢—for Single and Double Edge razors. Try PAL—today. Your dealer stocks them.

Horse Annoyance Is Taken To Court

By J. L. Merritt

Unhousebroken horses galloping down the side of the Chapel Hill-Durham highway rode Dallas Williams, local riding academy operator, into the Chapel Hill Recorder's court Tuesday morning for a session with Judge Henry Whitfield.

Williams was charged by Mrs. John McFarley, near resident of the riding academy, with allowing horses from his riding school to trespass in the front yard of her home.

Mrs. McFarley told Judge Whitfield that the horses were a nuisance because of the droppings they deposited in her yard, and a constant danger to the small children at her home.

Williams testified he had received no notice of the damage the horses were doing to the McFarley property and that he would be glad to pay for any damages that had been incurred.

Mrs. McFarley admitted she had not given personal notice to Williams about his indiscreet horses. And after advising the defendant to keep his horses away from the McFarley home, Judge Whitfield pronounced a decision of prayer for judgment continued in the case.

Other cases heard were: James Horton Brewer, Negro, assault with a deadly weapon, prayer for judgment continued; Booker T. Maddox, Negro, defrauding taxi, $25 and costs; James L. Page, speeding, costs; Cam Burnett, Negro, drunkenness, costs; Clyde Stout, reckless driving, $50 and license suspended for 60 days.

Albert Washington and Hubert Watson, Negroes, affray, Watson pay $25 and three months road sentence suspended on condition of good behavior for two years. Washington, non suit; James Wright, Negro, failure to send child to school, prayer for judgment continued; Herbert H. Lyde, Negro, drunkenness and carrying concealed weapon, $50 and costs; James King, Negro, drunken driving, $100 and costs; and Arthur Green, Negro, drunkenness, costs.

Committee Set Up to Investigate Situation of Gravel Sidewalks

One of the oldest traditions of the University village may be on the way out.

In its residential areas Chapel Hill has always been content to get along with gravel sidewalks, and many residents say they prefer them to the cement or brick variety.

But the verdict is not unanimous—some citizens insist a vote would even produce a majority in favor of cement or brick—and so Mayor R. W. Madry, acting on a resolution adopted unanimously by the Board of Aldermen, has appointed a nine-member committee to make a special study of the situation and report back.

Members of the committee are Judge L. J. Phipps, chairman; Aldermen Obie Davis and Ed S. Lanier, Clyde Carter, J. T. Dobbins, Mrs. Roland McClamroch, Mrs. John Gillin, W. M. Cochrane, and Roy Strowd.

The commitee has been asked sentiment of the community on this question, to ascertain the cost, to suggest methods for absorbing the cost, and suggest what streets, if any, should be paved first.

GRAHAM APPOINTED TO U.S. SENATE

Two Coeds Are Selected By YWCA As Candidates For Cabinet Offices

KITTY ALTIZER

Chandler, Altizer Are Nominees for Posts

Anne Chandler, rising senior from Macon, Georgia and Kitty Altizer, rising senior from Christianburg, Virginia were nominated recently by the YWCA cabinet as candidates for president of the group during the coming year. The coed getting the second highest votes in the election will automatically become vice-president.

A YWCA coed get-together will be held in the Graham Memorial lounge Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock when the candidates will be presented. Further nominations from YW members will be made at that time for each office.

The actual election will be held on Wednesday night, March 30 at house meetings in the various coed dorms. Town girls will vote on Thursday in YWCA office.

Other candidates nominated by the cabinet are: Jean Serpell of Dayton Beach, Florida for secretary; Ruth Whalen of Wilson for treasurer; and Julia Compton, Fort Bragg and Sallie Osbourne of Jacksonville, Illinois for membership chairman. The candidate receiving the second highest vote in the chairmanship race will be program chairman.

Miss Chandler came to Chapel Hill last fall, after spending her first two years at Stephens College where she was a Senior sister, on the House Council, Standing Ideals committee, vice-president of the Junior class and on the Junior Steering committee. While at Carolina, she has been president of the Pi Beta Phi pledge class, on the Women's Honor council and chairman of dormitory vespers.

Miss Altizer attended Peace college in Raleigh before coming to Carolina. At Peace she was President of the student body, elected Miss Peace, on Peace Student Christian association Cabinet and vice-president of Phi Alpha Kappa. At Carolina, she has been Chaplain of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, active in the YW social service committee, Archeology club and the IRC.

TMA To Sponsor Candidate Talks In Gerrard Hall

Candidates for the top posts in student government from the Campus, Student and University parties will speak before a Town Mens' association-sponsored mass meeting of town students tonight at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall, TMA president Nelson Taylor said yesterday.

The three party nominees for president, vice president and secretary-treasurer of the student body will present the stands they will take in the forth-coming campaign at the meeting, Nelson explained.

"This meeting is not compulsory," he said, "but it will be the town students' only chance to meet the candidates and enable them to vote intelligently on election day.

"This is the first meeting of its kind," Taylor continued, "and is to be the precedent for a long line of such meetings during the spring elections each year.

"The turnout of this meeting will be the deciding factor whether there will be other meetings of its kind in the future. For the promotion of more intelligent voting I urge every town student to attend tonight," Taylor concluded.

Chapel Hill PTA To See Picture On School Plan

The Chapel Hill Parent-Teacher Association will meet on Tuesday, March 24th, at 7:45 in the auditorium of the elementary school. James W. Cobb of the Department of City Planning of the University, will be in charge of the program, the subject of which will be planning school buildings.

There will be a 20 minute sound-color movie entitled "Design for Learning," which will show the planning and building of a modern school. New methods of planning and construction will be illustrated and explained in detail, with emphasis on the reasons for using new departures, such as savings in costs, better teaching space, better lighting and greater flexibility to meet future needs.

The idea is also developed that planning a school is a community project which requires participation by many groups in the community.

Following the movie, a panel discussion on community planning for school buildings will be led by Gordon Blackwell. The panel will include W. F. Credle, State Supervisor of School Buildings and representatives of the Chapel Hill School Board, the University School of Education, and the Chapel Hill Planning Board.

Drama Group To Open Meet Here Today

38 Plays Planned For Presentation

The annual Carolina Dramatic association's Drama Festival opens this afternoon in the Playmakers Theater at 2 o'clock, John W. Parker, Executive secretary anounced this morning. He revealed that the Festival would continue Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning, afternoon and evening, and would show 38 plays involving over 300 students from all over North Carolina. Dr. Frank Graham will present the awards on Saturday night after the last production.

The purpose of the Association is to encourage dramatic art in the schools and communities of North Carolina; to meet the need of constructive recreation; to promote the production of plays, pageants, and festivals; and to stimulate interest in the making of native drama. Begun by the late "Proff" Koch, this is the 26th annual Festival at Chapel Hill. Mrs. Doris Holsworth, Atlantic Christian college, Wilson, is the president, Hubert Philpott, Central high school, Charlotte, is vice-president, and John W. Parker, U.N.C., Chapel Hill, is executive Secretary. Mark R. Sumner, graduate assistant at the university, is associate secretary.

Featured this afternoon at 2 in the Playmakers Theatre will be three productions by city high schools: "Escape By Moonlight," by Kenneth Crotty, The Curtain Callers, High Point High School; "Out of the Night," by Robert Broome, Hamlet High School Dramatic Club; and "The Forgotten Man," by Jewell Bothwell, The Golden Masquers, Broughton high school, Raleigh.

At 7:30 p.m. four senior colleges will present: "He Done Her Wrong, or, Wedded But No Wife," by Anita Bell, The Tower Players, High Point College, "The Spice of Life," by Nan Wilkerson, The Playlikers, W.C., Greensboro; "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," (3rd Act) by Rudolf Reiser, The Stage and Script, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson; and "Suppressed Desires," by Susan Glaspell, The Lenoir Rhyne Playmakers, Lenoir Rhyne College, Hickory.

Admission to each session of the festival will be 25 cents.

Nominations Due For Spring Race Tomorrow Night

Political party chairmen and campaign managers were warned yesterday that all nominations for candidates to run in the spring election must be turned in by 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

Al Winn, chairman of the campus election board, stated that lists of candidates must be turned in to him by 6 o'clock at 8 Steele dorm. Coed nominations are to be turned in to Eleanor DeGrange at 110 Smith dorm.

A compulsory mass meeting of all candidates, party chairmen, and campaign managers will be held in Hill hall next Tuesday night at 7 o'clock. Final rules and regulations for the election battle will be discussed at this time.

Students will be introduced to all candidates running for office on March 31 when the candidates will be presented at 7 o'clock. The major candidates for top offices in student government and publications will make short talks on their campaigns.

All expense accounts, Winn said, must be turned in on April 4, the day before the election to either the election chairman or Miss DeGrange. General campus balloting for the various posts will be held on Tuesday, April 5.

In the event of necessary runoffs, expense accounts for the runoff will be turned in on April 12 under the same condition of those turned in for the first primary. The runoff election will be held April 12.

DR. FRANK PORTER GRAHAM, president of the Greater University, was named last night by Governor W. Kerr Scott as the new United States Senator to succeed J. Melville Broughton, junior Senator who died in Washington of a heart attack March 6.

Pan Hellenic Council To Stage Gay Musical

"Sophisticated" melodrama will highlight the Pan Hellenic council's musical review-vaudeville show to be presented Friday and Monday nights in the Rendezvous room of Graham memorial. The show will be staged in an effort to raise money for the "adoption" of a European orphan through the Foster Parents' association.

The show will feature the melodrama, skits by the five campus sororities, and individual singing and dancing. Pete Strader will direct the melodrama entitled "East Lynne" or "Go Into the Roundhouse, Nellie, They Can't Corner You There," with Edie Knight serving as assistant director.

A semi-formal dance in Woollen gymnasium Saturday night will round out the weekend of social events. Sonny Couble and the State Men will play for the dance. Members of the council and their dates will form a figure during the intermission. The Pan Hel scholarship, won last quarter by the Chi Omega sorority, will be presented at this time also.

Marx Study Club To Meet Monday

A discussion of "The Marxist Concept of Freedom" will be led by Hans Freistadt, chairman of the newly organized Karl Marx Study Society, at a public meeting to be held on March 28th, Monday, at 7:30 in Roland Parker 2.

The discussion of March 28th will be the first public meeting held by the organization. Future meetings will consider such issues as the genetics controversy, the dictatorship of the proletariat and democracy, and the ethics of Communism.

Those interested are cordially invited to attend.

Students' Addresses Needed for Delivery

Those students newly enrolled in the University, and others, who are not living in dormitories, must leave their name and town address with the Daily Tar Heel circulation department before the Daily Tar Heel can be delivered to them, Circulation manager Shasta M. Bryant advised.

Scott Names Successor To Melville Broughton At Gardner Banquet

By Bill Buchan

Governor W. Kerr Scott last night named Frank Porter Graham, President of the Greater University to succeed J. Melville Broughton as United States Senator from North Carolina.

Scott made the surprise announcement at the conclusion of the first annual O. Max Gardner Award banquet which was held in Lenoir hall. "While I am on my feet," the Governor said, "I'd like to make a few more remarks. It has become necessary to name another United States Senator. I have had several suggestions. The legislature has urged me to act immediately to which I replied I was acting as fast as they were."

"I want to make the announcement here tonight," he continued, "that your next Senator, if your executive committee is willing, is Dr. Frank Graham."

The audience of faculty and administrative members were stunned into silence for a few seconds and then rose to their feet in a resounding ovation to the appointment.

Dr. Graham, in accepting the appointment told the capacity group, "I thought I could say no to this man, but he is a stubborn Scotch Presbyterian. It is the most difficult decision of my life and involved a great confidence to leave the place, the institutions, and the people, young and old, that have been such a happy part of myself for over forty years."

"With God helping me, I will do my best to continue serving them, my state and my country in this new post to which the Governor of the state has called me."

For more than 30 minutes after his acceptance, Dr. Graham held court in Lenoir hall, while perspiration rolled off his forehead. Everyone from University chancellors to dining hall waiters filed by to express mixed emotions of congratulations and regret.

Immediately after the banquet, an informal group of members of the Board of Trustees, who had attended the dinner, met in Dr. Graham's office. Governor Scott, who presided at the meeting, announced that he would call a meeting of the Executive committee of the Board for Saturday at which time plans for naming Graham's successor will be made.

The informal group recommended that a committee be appointed to consider interim arrangements until a new president can be appointed. They recommended also that another committee be appointed to consider the choice for a new president.

Governor Scott announced that Dr. Graham will continue as president of the University until he takes his oath of office which will probably be in two or three weeks, he said.

Graham will fill the Senate seat vacated by the sudden death of J. Melville Broughton, junior Senator, who was elected to the post last fall. His selection came as a complete surprise to state politicians who had been discussing some fifty persons as possible persons for the Washington post. Graham's name had not appeared in any of the discussions.

The new Senator, a short, friendly, energetic man has been president of the University since 1930. Called one of the outstanding citizens of the South, Graham was US representative on the Good Offices committee of the UN, which arranged a truce in Indonesia that lasted until December.

He was also a member of the War Labor board from 1942 to 1945 and served as vice-chairman of the Consumer Board of the

Gardner Fund Award Goes To 'Miss Alex'

Louise Alexander Is 'Great Teacher'

Miss Louise Brevard Alexander, for 14 years a teacher of government and political science in the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, was presented here tonight the first Oliver Max Gardner Award for "the greatset contribution to the welfare of the human race during the academic year" by a faculty member of the three campuses of the consolidated University.

The award was presented by Spencer Love of Greensboro, chairman of the Board of Trustees committee on the award which unanimously voted in favor of Miss Alexander following recommendations from all three institutions.

The late Governor Gardner, an alumnus of both State college and the University here, provided in his will for a $25,000 fund for the consolidated University, the income of which is to be used as the annual award.

The presentation ceremony took place at a dinner in Lenoir hall with a large number of faculty members and administrative officials from the three campuses in attendance.

Governor Kerr Scott, chairman of the board of trustees, presided, and Chancellor W. C. Jackson of the Woman's College and President Frank P. Graham of the consolidated University paid high tributes to the first recipient of the award.

Spencer Love in his citation said "'Miss Alex', as she is known to everyone who has come under her inspiring influence, is a 'born teacher' . . . She has devoted her life to teaching and she has de-

Coeds To Live In Beta House

Giduz To Direct 'French House' For Advanced Students In June

By Don Maynard

"Ah, mademoiselle, vous etes ravissante ce soir. . . "

Perhaps you have heard those words murmured to a dark-eyed miss in a dark-shadowed corner of some Parisian cafe.

Or this, "Jacques, passez le sucre, s'il vous plait. Merci. Et le lait . . . Desirez-vous encore du cafe, Marie? Non? Eh bien. . ."

The trip to France is long and expensive, why not join the students and teachers who will expose themselves to the melodic French accents at the University this summer. They will join the jointly sponsored Summer Session-Extension division "French House" program, to take place here June 9 through July 19 as part of the summer school program of study?

For the fifth successive year, the French House—founded in 1945 by Hugo Giduz, professor of French here and director of the "House" since its inception—will offer an excellent opportunity for students and teachers of French to improve their ability to speak and understand the language.

"The House has been located in several fraternity halls since its founding in 1945," Director Giduz said. "Each move was made to a larger hall, for the membership has increased annually. We began with 10 members in '45; this year we expect some 40. For that reason we chose the Beta house as the quarters of the French House this year."

Women students will live in the House proper, but men will be obliged to reside in rooms assigned them in a nearby dormitory. Both men and women are required to take their meals together and participate in all other activities of the House, Giduz said.

Unique in that French only is spoken among the members—at any time they are in the House, at the dinner table or while engaged in the varied activities—students soon acquire a fluency in the language. . . or starve to death! Included in the program will be evening lectures, motion pictures and entertainment of sundry types—plays, songs, games—all in French.

The French government has shown interest and confidence in the program, Mr. Giduz said, by granting an annual scholarship for one deserving member of the French House. Miss Ruth Shaver of the Woman's College in Greensboro has been given the 1949 scholarship award.

In addition to this full scholarship, the House will contribute two service scholarships of $50 each to students who show, upon application, need of help in meeting their expenses.

Mrs. Charlotte V. Huse, instructor at the French House since its beginning, will be assistant to Director Giduz. Rene Hardre, professor of French at

Coed Orientation Chairman Announces Student Advisers

Sally Osborne, Chairman of Orientation for women for 1949-1950, has announced that the committee to choose the Student advisers has completed its selection of girls who will guide the entering coeds during the orientation week next fall and throughout the year.

Each adviser has a group of not more than eight coeds for whom she is responsible. The advisers work in close cooperation with the Orientation Committee in carrying out the plans for Orientation week. Each adviser helps her advisees both individually and as a group to understand the honor system and Carolina's academic and social activities.

To accomplish this objective the honorary group of Student Advisers was selected for the following qualifications: A pleasant personality marked by friendliness, poise, sense of humor, and tact. Reliability, maturity of judgment, and a desire to assume the responsibilities of an adviser. An understanding of University life, traditions, curricular, and extra-curricular opportunities. Time to devote to a short training course in the spring as well as the actual work with the students.

Lists of highly recommended coeds were submitted to the committee to choose the Student Advisers by the dormitory hostesses, the assistant hostesses, and last year's dormitory adviser chairmen. The names of the girls chosen will be announced next week.

Members of the committee were: Sally Osborne, Chairman of Women's Orientation; Teenie Royall, Chairman of the 1948 Advisers; Helen Bouldin, Chairman of Orientation for 1948; Jean McKeithan, representative from the YWCA; Charleen Greer, representative from the Coed Senate; Miss Betsy Parker, Assistant Director of the Placement Service; Miss Gay Currie, Executive Director of the YWCA; Miss Audrey Branch, Personnel Adviser to Women and Miss Dot Smith, Assistant Adviser.

Where Are You Going?

Hey, Mac, slow down and think a minute.

What are you going to do with this education you're rushing off so fast to get? Planning to get a job and spend your life either making a million dollars or scrimping and saving so you can send your kids to college to get the same "advantages" you are having now—and then sit back and hope the kids make more of a "success" in life than their old man did? Well, if all you do in life is live for and through your children, you won't be the first one. Each generation depends on the next to do the things the generation before depended on it to do, and very few individuals in each generation accept the responsibility as their own instead of shoving it off on the next group.

What's your object in life anyway? If you can answer that one you can answer what's the purpose of education. Do you believe this world is God's little green apple or man's? From one viewpoint man's purpose is to make the world more like heaven; from the other view the purpose is to make the world a better place for man to live in. Either way the object seems to be to make this a better world.

In a couple of months or years you'll be graduating from this fair university. You'll be inheriting your share of the earth, which up until now has been held in trust for you. What are your plans for using that share? What are YOU going to do about making this a better world?

OKay, Mac. Rush on off and get that hunk of education.

Beware of Smear Campaigns

It's not hard to tell that this is the beginning of the spring quarter. Everything's blossoming out—trees, flowers and political posters. But mostly political posters.

All the big candidates have thrown their hats in the ring, while some of the political small fry are still to be announced in their races for legislature, class officers and other posts which are rather hard to see because of the glaring limelight on the candidates for president, vice-president and the other top offices. Election day is not very far off. In fact, for some of the candidates it's unbearably close. The date is April 5, less than two weeks away.

And for the next two and one-half weeks (including the run-off) every tree, wall, door, post, and oh yes, even bulletin boards will be plastered with placards and handbills crying out the worth of one candidate or another. Other political propaganda may be circulating, but it won't be posted on trees and bulletin boards. The ugly lies and malicious rumors carried by whispering campaigns never are out in the open for fair-minded students to listen and judge them. They creep along dormitory halls and fraternity house dinner tables, they slink into back-of-the-room classroom sessions and they slip into the bookex over a cup of coffee.

The candidates running for the top offices of the campus are almost all men of high caliber. They will not personally start any of the whispering campaigns. They may not even be aware of them when they start. But the people working for them, the back-room party-line boys, the ward heelers and the "professional" student politicians will be the ones responsible.

We ask now that they think carefully before they institute the sort of ugly whispering campaigns such as those which have blackened hte name of University campus politics in the past. We ask them to remember how such campaigns have backfired in the past and have often defeated the candidates they were supposed to help elect.

And if the back-room politicians and the ward heelers will not listen to this plea, will not even listen to their own consciences, then we ask the student body to be wary of the oil-tongued rumor-carriers who are only too anxious to let you in on the latest "inside tip." We ask the student body not only to recognize and denounce the whispering campaigns when and if they appear, but to fight them with the only weapon that can defeat them—the truth. And maybe, one of these days, one of these elections, the politicians will learn their lesson.

This 'n That

Green Stands For Thursday

By Bill Buchan

There's a new face on the campus—her name is Green Thursday, and if you ain't seen her yet, buddy, you ain't lived. Green Thursday is the successor to Southern Comfort. Not the whiskey mind you, but the station wagon (and I use the term loosely).

Southern Comfort was the proud possession of the Publications Board and was used mainly by the Daily Tar Heel staff for the delivery of copy between the offices in Graham Memorial and the print shop in Carrboro.

Now, there's nothing wrong with Southern Comfort. She's got a good heart and a good motor, her body is just plumb worn out. She gave everything she had to publications, especially the Daily Tar Heel. 'Course she wasn't any spring chicken when we got her, but she was ready and willing and dedicated to the University of North Carolina.

Cops chased Southern Comfort and more often than not, they caught her, but this didn't dampen her enthusiasm. She took all the tickets and let her drivers pay all the fines. But Southern Comfort (mercy on her soul) is a thing of the past and Green Thursday is very much the thing of the present.

Green Thursday, as far as actual description is concerned, is a green 1949 Chevrolet panel truck. While we didn't know what color she would be when she arrived, one look at her and the name Green Thursday was inevitable. For an explanation of the name, inquire of a DTH staff member. There are some things you can print in a newspaper, and there are somethings you can't.

Green Thursday has got all the personality that one green panel 1949 Chevrolet panel truck could have. She was on the campus only two days before she took off for a nearby city (some 60 miles) without permission. She had a driver, of course, but the blame was put on Thursday. Just like Southern Comfort (may she rest in peace), Thursday has that inevitable ability to take off for the faraway places that Margaret Whiting sings about.

Before her complete orientation program on Carolina life is complete, Green Thursday will have a fine lettered sign on both her sides and her rear end telling who and what she is.

While she isn't named Southern Comfort II, she will still be carrying on the life and loves of her predecessor. If your DTH's aren't delivered on time, put the blame on Thursday, boys, put the blame on Thursday.

Flipping Coins Is on the Cuff

By Charlie Gibson

How would Paul Baynard ever expect an entirely convincing "Welcome back" from roommate Wellborn Phillips on the weekend that he flew west to woo a W.C. alumna? Not wanting his parents to know of the trip, Paul left a $25,000 airplane accident insurance policy with Wellborn as beneficiary. Rocmmates are, too, that dispensable, aren't they, Mr. Wadsworth? . . . Edie Knight cannot decide which is worse—having to buy Cokes for everybody whom she matches or having to explain what she was doing snatching at Dortch Warriner's pants leg in the Y lobby. Practicing the costly art of coin flipping recently, Edie happened to land a dime in Dortch's trouser cuff. Quite a rumpus arose when Dortch first discovered Edie crawling around the floor after him. Then while she mercenarily dug into his leg, this shocked and highly sensitive soul hopped and hollered for help. No, there is absolutely no hope for coeds' ever becoming more subtle.

WASHINGTON — Antonio Bermudez, who is heading up the Mexican oil deal, was in Washington but had to leave abruptly.

As you know, the deal grants permission to Americans to drill for oil in Mexico for the first time since all foreign oil concessions were confiscated in the big expropriation of March 18, 1938. But Bermudez, director general of Petroleos Mexicanos, known as Pemex, could not remain in our midst to celebrate the great concord.

He had to hurry back to Mexico city to attend the big annual jamboree celebrating the anniversary of the oil expropriations.

Gad, what a cad! While Senator Olin D. Johnston, of South Carolina, was filibustering for the Southland, his tonsils got dry and he commanded a page boy to bring him a glass of orange juice.

The lubricant was delivered, but before Johnston could find an oratorical pause Republican Senator William Langer, of North Dakota, snuck up behind him and drank it.

Note to an unknown taxi driver: that white-haired man shivering without hat or coat you picked up about 4 a.m. in the vicinity of the capitol was not out of his mind — except, possibly, temporarily. He was the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Relations committee, Senator Tom Connally.

No, driver, the eminent senator had not run amok. On the coldest night of the winter he was the victim of a lockout.

The great Connally had grown weary as the filibuster went on into the night. So he stole quietly from the senate chamber to the lower floor suite of the Foreign Relations committee where he stretched himself out on a couch.

The filibuster adjourned at 2 a.m. The senate sergeant at arms and his myrmidons went around locking up. The statesman from Texas snored on.

He awoke about 4 a.m. and decided to go back upstairs and see how his colleagues were doing. Everything was dark.

Moreover, the cloakroom where his hat and coat were deposited was locked up too and he couldn't find anyone to unlock it.

That's why you saw his long blancmange tresses streaming in the wind, driver. And you can understand why he was muttering so ferociously.

Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, reports some interesting experiences in filibustering. As in athletics, he averred, the conditioned filibusterer gets a second wind.

I had a feeling I was back in my sports writing days as the lawmaker described his 12-hour and 21-minute ordeal. Mr. Ellender talked for all the world like an old bunion derbyist.

"I was almost dead beat at the end of the first two hours," he recounted, "but a short time thereafter I got my second wind. I was much less tired than after the first lap."

Oddly the senator said his feet did not become tired at all, but the calves of his legs ached. His biggest trouble, he added, was in preserving equilibrium.

"I sort of lost my sense of balance," he said. "I found myself swaying. Frequently I would have to grasp my desk to steady myself."

Senator Ellender said he felt no effects whatsoever the next morning, adding that he finished at 12:41 a.m., went home, got a sound night's sleep and was first to arrive for a meeting of the Agriculture committee at 10 the next morning. His only food after the talkathon was six pecans and an apple, although he hadn't had anything since breakfast, which consisted of a sliver of ham, two wheat cakes and a cup of tea.

"I trained for the filibuster," he said. "Two days before, I began dehydrating myself. Drank hardly any fluids. That gave me the staying power."

Senator Ellender said he consumed six aspirin coughdrops and six vitamin pills during his speech.

"They did something for me," he said. "At the finish I was positively jumping."

Shamrocks for every member of congress were flown here by the Irish government. Replete with roots and moss they were delivered in person by Sean Nunan, the Irish minister.

Mr. Nunan was mighty tired after lugging individual boxes of shamrocks to 96 senators, 435 representatives and 1 (one) vice president. But he attended two St. Patrick's dinners that night—the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick and the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

There's life in the Irish.

If any hopeful landlords think Congress is going to let rent control die by default, I would suggest they take a look at the new congressional directory.

Of 85 senators and 300 representatives listed as having Washington residences, 47 senators and 181 representatives live in apartment houses and hotels.

The rest live in houses, but, for the most part, they rent. Only a handful, with sublime faith in the continued devotion of their constituents, have been bold enough to buy. A member of Congress who owns his own home here is as rare as an actor who hates publicity.

The dope is that Congress will incorporate home rule in Washington means that authority reverts to Congress, because Congress runs this town. We don't have any mayor, even for wire-tapping purposes, nor city council, not even a Reeve or Burgess.

Can you picture our big hearted Congressmen voting to have their rent heisted? I can't.

PACIFIC BEACH, Cal.—Dr. R. W. Kerns has given up the classrooms in eastern colleges and gone into the motel business, so that he and his family can keep up with the high cost of living.

Kerns, a native of Ohio, is a Ph. D. in sociology and psychology and taught two years at Cornell University and ten years at Penn State.

But like so many other college professors with their modest salaries—far below those of some industrial workers—Kerns was unable to have what he wanted: a typical American family.

So after the war, in which he served as a major in the Marine Corps, he and his wife, Alberta, a graduate of the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, came to southern California. Together they designed, built, decorated and landscaped one of the most unusual and most modern motels on the west coast. They pooled their intelligence, and are now "making all ends" meet by operating their "Surf and Sand" motel, located right on the Pacific.

"It's hard to leave the teaching profession," Kerns said, "but unless we do we can't live in this period of high costs, and raise our three children in the standard that they deserve."

A college teaching position with probably a $3,500-a-year salary is all right in "depressions," according to Dr. Kerns, but it is tough in "times like these."

Dr. Kerns, who specialized of economics and psychology. Even now, he is practicing psychology to a certain degree.

To operate a motel, he believes, or a hotel, you've got to be something of a psychologist. His students, now, are his guests.

But Kerns says, as soon as he can afford it he'll be back at teaching and research.

Where The Zealots?

Editor:

Where are the campus zealots always ready to rise to defend loudly the rights of all the people to do anything at anytime anywhere? Can it be that the issue is too concrete and not abstract enough? Or can it be that there aren't enough students like myself who must fight selfishly for an education since I know where I stand in regard to financing my education? It appears that there are few students who feel that tuition? It appears that there are few students who feel that the increase in tuition will affect them. I don't have to wait until I receive a bill from the University before I am aware of my inability to pay the increase.

Since we're in the dark as to just who is going to be affected except for those of us who already borrow text books, and for grants in aid or borrow the amount of each quarter's bill (at 6%), I might as well throw out a few questions.

Will the increase actually fail to affect any student? Of course, no announcement has been made but if out-of-state tuition charges increase and the charge to the Veterans administration is based on out-of-state tuition, as is the case, for students under the G. I. Bill, does the University intend to bill each veteran for the excess over $500 or will the University be content with only $500. Does any student think his parents look forward to paying the increase in tuition?

The editorial of March 2 points up the issue. The only check on the board of trustees, and that only indirectly, is in the Legislature. The Legislature can, by appropriation, remove the need for the increase. Not only students but more important is it that parents of students and all interested and concerned persons in the state must bring pressure on the Legislature if the increase is to be blocked.

Don't write Governor Scott. In return for my two page typewritten letter, for the purpose of stating the case of persons of limited incomes, I received a mimeographed copy of the governor's 'Go Forward' message and an unsigned copy of Governor Scott's letter to Jess Dedmond. Concerned students should urge the people of their home communities to record their protest with the legislators themselves.

I appreciate having a chance at an education and the help Mr. E. S. Lanier and others have given me and I intend to fight the losing of that chance with all I have.

I think we see in operation in this matter the recurrence of a pattern in which the board of trustees regards the means of accomplishment more important than the purpose for which the board was established. The more power the board exercises the farther away from the needs and problems of all the people it proceeds.

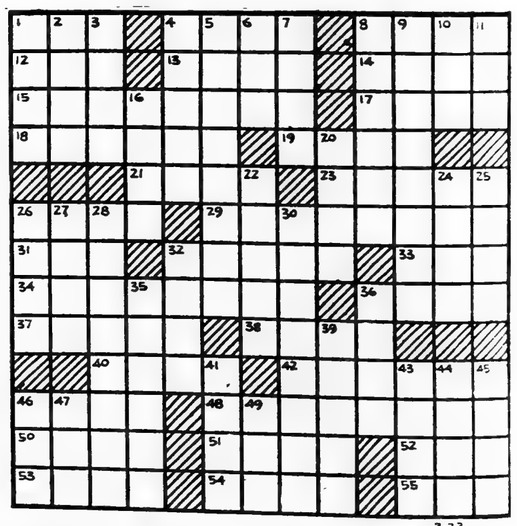
The One in a Million

Editor:



During the many years that I have been at Carolina I have managed to survive many, many editions of your DTH. By some twist of fate I even managed to live through the year that we had a woman editing the paper (that was when they were either too young or too old—I was a draft-dodger).

This year I must however, bread down my hard crust and admit that you are really putting out a fine newspaper. Especially on the first, second and fourth pages.

Maybe this good feeling that I am witnessing in myself is caused by the mellowing years that I am putting on, but with the exceptions of when my ulcers are bothering me its you that deserves a great deal of credit for a truly fine paper.

Tar Heel Mermen To Be Hosts For NCAA Tournament

Country's Top Teams Entered In Three-Day Swim Festival

By Buddy Vaden

Top-ranking national swimming stars from all over the United States were flocking into Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon and late last night for the 26th running of the National Collegiate Athletic association's swimming championships.

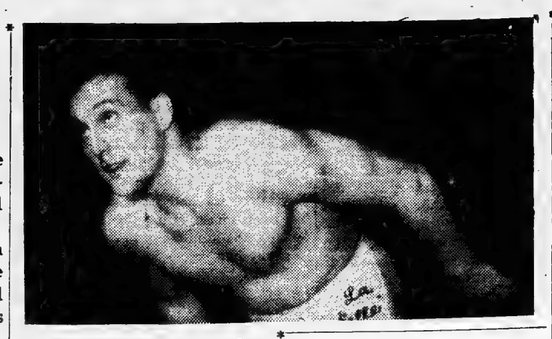
Over 300 stars, representing some 35 teams are entered in the three-day affair which begins Thursday evening with the running of the 1500-meter freestyle event. The meet will continue with morning, afternoon and evening sessions through Saturday evening.

Leading the parade of teams into Chapel Hill is the big aggregation from Ohio State. The Buckeyes, runners-up last year to Michigan at Ann Arbor, won the Western conference meet recently and are expected to give the Wolverines a good race.

Not less than four of the performers are Olympic title holders. Ohio Staters Bruce Harlan (Olympic low board champion) and Bill Smith (Olympic champion and NCAA 220 and 440 star) and LaSalle's Joe Verdeur (Olympic breaststroke title holder) and Wally Ris of Iowa (Olympic freestyler) all have Olympic experience and each one holds at least one NCAA title.

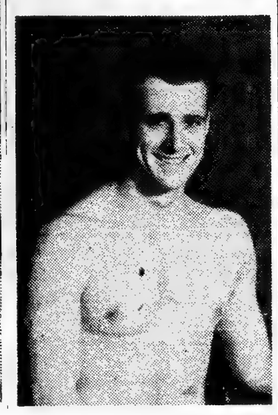
A Great Show

Described as the biggest and best swimming show ever put on by the NCAA, this 26th session boasts the greatest number of swimmers ever entered in an NCAA meet. It marks the first time the event has been held in the South. Previously it was always held in the Northeast or midwest, the center of national championship collegiate swimming teams.



Michigan, with a large team entered, will defend their title won last year. They have won the championship 13 times since the meet was inaugurater in 1924 and have been runners-up nine times.

Individual defending champions are Bill Heusner, Northwestern 1500-meter ace; Wally Ris, captain of the Iowa team and 100-yard freestyle champ; Bill Smith, Ohio State's 220 and 440 title holder; LaSalle's Joe Verdeur, sensational world-record holder in the 200-yard breaststroke; and Bruce Harlan, Ohio diving champion.



Tar Heels Strong

The University of North Carolina will enter the largest team from the Southern regions. Top entry among the Tar Heels is Captain Dick Twining, Southern Conference individual medly champion and best all-around swimmer on the Tar Heel squad.

Jimmy Thomas, Carolina 440-yard freestyler and Conference title holder, and Norm Sper, ace backstroker, are two more top-flighters entered by Tar Heel Coach Ralph Casey. Buddy Crone and Jesse Greenbaum both starred for Carolina during the dual meet season, but are ineligible to compete in the NCAA meet because the ruling is that no graduate students may compete.

JOE VERDEUR, above, LaSalle university tank star; Norm Sper, left local aquatic ace; and Keith Carter, below, captain of the Purdue university mermen; are three of the stars who will perform here March 24-26 in the annual NCAA swimming meet.

Carolina Golfers Set to Meet Top College Teams in Nation

A 12-match, two tournament schedule was announced for the 1949 Carolina golf team last week with such national powerhouses as Michigan and Purdue listed as opponents together with the fast Conference field of State, Wake Forest and Duke.

Hope Valley country club in neighboring Durham will again be the scene of all home matches played by the Tar Heels. The Conference tournament is to be played at the Old Town country club in Winston-Salem.

Harvie Ward will defend his North-South Amateur crown in mid-April at Pinehurst with the rest of local swingsters scheduled to try their hand at the big time links competition.

Besides Ward, Coach Chuck Erickson has six returning lettermen of past years. Bob Cox heads this group which includes Dan Nyimicz, Jack Brantley, Roy McKenzie, Frank Brooks, and Harvey Oliver.

The schedule:
March 30—State at Hope Valley (tentative); 31—Haverford at Hope Valley; April 5—Harvard at Hope Valley; 6—Williams at Hope Valley; 7—Michigan at Hope Valley; 12—Purdue at Hope Valley; 15—South Carolina at Hope Valley; 18-23—North-South Amateur at Pinehurst; 27—Wake Forest at Hope Valley; 29—Virginia at Hope Valley.
May 5—Wake Forest at Raleigh; 6—State at Hope Valley (tentative); 10—Duke at Hope Valley; 14—Southern Conference tournament at Winston-Salem.

Lacrosse Season Opens With Meet Next Thursday

Driven inside by the prevailing elements, the Carolina lacrosse team spent a good part of yesterday afternoon practicing for the coming season in the Tin Can.

Coach Bill Darden's stickers will open their season a week from Thursday with the University of Delaware at Fetzer field. This will be the first of a three-game series with the Delaware team.

Darden is now cutting his squad down from the 40 who originally reported to the first practice session back in February.

A ten-game schedule is being arranged for the first lacrosse team since the disbanding of the team during the war years. The last official lacrosse team to represent Carolina was the 1943 squad.

This year's team will be composed entirely of rookies to the sport of collegiate lacrosse and only five of the original 40 had ever played the sport before.

Local Net Team Books 24 Meets; One New Foe

The Carolina tennis team is booked for 24 dual meets and the Southern Conference championships, Coach John Kenfield disclosed recently in announcing the 1949 schedule.

Albright College is the only newcomer on the card which will open with matches against Michigan State here on March 26, inaugurating a stretch of 14 home engagements. The Tar Heels' annual northern tour opens on April 30 with Princeton. In addition to Princeton, other teams to be met on that trip are Williams, Harvard, Brown, Wesleyan and Yale.

Although high ranking and Southern Conference singles champion Vic Seixas, the team captain, is back along with number two man Clark Taylor, prospects are considered highly doubtful. Several stars expected to be back are missing and only three other lettermen, in addition to Seixas and Taylor, will be on the squad. They are: Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, and Duke Wilder.

The schedule:
March 26—Michigan State at Chapel Hill; 31, Haverford at Chapel Hill.
April 1—Haverford at Chapel Hill; 4, Harvard at Chapel Hill; 5, Harvard at Chapel Hill; 6, Yale at Chapel Hill; 7, Williams at Chapel Hill; 8, Williams at Chapel Hill; 11, Wake Forest at Chapel Hill; 12, Albright at Chapel Hill; 20, Duke at Chapel Hill; 22, Kalamazoo at Chapel Hill; 23, Virginia at Charlottesville; 25, N. C. State at Chapel Hill; 30, Princeton at Princeton.
May 2—Williams at Williamstown, Pa.; 3, Harvard at Cambridge, Mass.; 4, Brown at Providence, R.I.; 5, Wesleyan at Middletown, Conn.; 6, Yale at New Haven, Conn.; 7, open; 11, Davidson at Chapel Hill; 12-13-14, Southern Conference championships at Chapel Hill; 16, William and Mary at Chapel Hill.

Clark Taylor Wins Badminton Tourney

Carolina net star Clark Taylor won the men's singles championship and Doris Beasley, another Tar Heel, took the women's championship in the State-wide Badminton Tournament which ended last Saturday in Durham.

Taylor beat Linnie Shaw of Durham in the men's singles, 15-13, 15-11, after he had disposed of Ed Cloy of Raleigh, 15-3, 15-5, in the semifinals.

Miss Beasley beat Francis Burns, a third Tar Heel, in the finals of the women's division by 11-7 11-0. Miss Beasley defeated Elizabeth Hayes in the semifinals while Miss Burns disposed of Emery Latta.

Trackmen Work For Weekend Meet In Gainesville

The Carolina track team is scheduled to leave here Thursday morning for Gainesville, Fla. to participate in the annual University of Florida relay games on Saturday.

Coach Dale Ranson said Monday that he was still undecided as to who the actual participants in the meet would be, but that Carolina would definitely be well represented in the meet. Something a little more definite should be known along this line after today's workouts.

Big Jack Moody, winner of the high jump at Gainesville last year, will more than likely return to defend his title. However, he will face some very strong competition, much of it coming from team mates Bill Albans and Billy Joyner.

Woefully short on relay material, Ranson will have a busy day cut out for himself in deciding on the make-up of the various teams.

For the mile relay, Ranson will have Laddie Terrell, Clarence McLain, Stan White, Percy Flowers, Bill Crimmins and possibly Bob Black available. Black's status hinges on his eligibility this quarter.

For the distance relays the Tar Heels can depend on Sam Magill, Julian MacKenzie, Frank Hooper, Jerry Lewis and John Ross in picking a team. Crimmins, Marshall and Albans might be selected for the shorter dash relays.

Coach Joe Hilton will accompany the Tar Heels to the Sunshine state while Ranson will remain in Chapel Hill to make final arrangements for the Carolina relay meet here on April 2.

Ex-Giant Maglie Joins Ex-Cardinals in Battle

NEW YORK, March 22—(UP)—Organized baseball gained a one-day respite in its legal battle with Mexican league jumpers today, but during the lull ex-New York Giant Sal Maglie announced he will join the suit and Attorney John Flynn promised "still more will be added later on."

Flynn, who already is representing Max Lanier and Fred Martin, two former St. Louis Cardinal pitchers, in their $2,500,000 damage suit against baseball, said Maglie officially will be added to the list of plaintiffs tomorrow before Judge Edward A. Conger in federal court.

Carolina Baseball Nine Triumphs In Three of Four Florida Games

Carolina's touring baseballers were back in Chapel Hill today in time for classes following a successful four-game invasion of Florida during the spring holidays. The well-tanned Tar Heels appeared in fine shape and set to begin Southern conference and Big Four competition.

Carolina will return to action on Monday, March 28, by meeting Washington and Lee on Emerson field in a conference engagement. That game will inaugurate a 12-game home stand for the locals. The first five of those will be on consecutive days, so the Carolina students will have an abundance of sports entertainment next week.

In their four game tour of Florida, the Tar Heels of Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb, managed to win three of the starts. Carolina dropped the first game, 6-0, to Florida and as if this wasn't bad enough, the Florida pitcher, Bob Adams, turned in a no-hit performance.

Rebound

From this disappointing beginning, Carolina rebounded the following day to turn the tables on the Gators and score a 9-2 victory to even the series. Andy Tranavitch and Tommy Andrews pitched the victory, scattering five hits between them. Tranavitch was credited with the win after hurling no-run one-hit ball for five innings.

In a two-game series with the Jacksonville Naval Air Station nine, Carolina came out on top on both occasions. The Tar Heels pounded out 22 hits to score an easy 21-8 victory. Bill McGinn was the winning pitcher.

Cassell Is Winner

The second game with the Jacksonville outfit resulted in a 7-3 Tar Heel win. Dean Cassell limited the Fliers to four hits in posting his initial win of the season. Cassell struck out nine but issued ten bases on balls.

Outfielder Ed Lamb was the leader of the Tar Heels' attack in most of the games. Not including the first no-hit game, Lamb pounded out ten hits in 16 trips to the plate. Joe Brokshire also contributed some fancy hitting during the Florida 3 game excursion.

Following the Washington and Lee game Monday, the Tar Heels will meet Cornell, Michigan State (2), and Virginia Tech.

Golfers in G. G. O.

Three Tar Heel golfers are already in the field for the Greater Greensboro Open to be played in the Gate City this weekend, all exempt from qualifying because of championship status.

Harvie Ward will be one of the leading favorites among the amateurs as the result of being the 1949 Tournament of Golf Club Champions champ. Frank Brooks is another top choice as the reigning Sedgefield club champion while Tar Heel newcomer Decatuer Cunningham, Greensboro Country club titleholder, is also strongly considered.

Father Morrissey Dies On March 16

The Rev. Francis J. Morrissey, chaplain of Roman Catholic students here since 1935 died at his home early last Wednesday morning, March 16, of a heart attack. He was buried in the new Chapel Hill cemetery Saturday afternoon.

Father Morrissey is survived by four sisters and a brother, all residing in Ontario, Canada. He was 67 years old and he had been pastor of the Catholic congregation in Chapel Hill since 1940.

At the solemn high mass held in the Sacred Heart cathedral in Raleigh Saturday morning, Bishop Vincent Waters spoke of the pastor's intensive desire to be close to all he knew and said, "He hath labored well. . ."

Monsignor Lennox Federal said of Father Morrissey, "He was a priestly priest, one about whom many anecdotes will be told. He was cultured, learned, gently humorous . . . beloved by all."

Father Morrissey came to Chapel Hill in 1940 with his ancient Franklin, after living in Durham and serving as chaplain for both this University and Duke. He was born in Peel County, Ontario, in 1882. He attended school there, and received his Doctor of Divinity degree from the Gregorian university in Rome.

He held office in the arch-diocese of Toronto and served as vice-rector of the Catholic Seminary there before coming to North Carolina in 1931 for his health. He chose Chapel Hill as his home because he "liked the town." Before coming to this town he was pastor in Kinston and Raleigh between 1931 and 1935.

Present at the Pastor's burial in the new cemetery were President Frank Graham; Chancellor Robert B. House; Controller W. D. Carmichael; James A. Branch, Purchasing agent of the University; many of the Father's associates in the clergy; and members of the faculty and friends.

Chapel Hill dogs will come in to their own Sunday afternoon when the first scheduled dog show will be presented on Emerson Field, near Lenior Hall.

Sponsored by the local Humane society, the show is open to any dogs who are at least 6 months old and pure-bred, but not necessarily registered with the American Kennel club. The dogs owners must live in either Chapel Hill or Carrboro.

A $1 entry fee will be charged for each dog and small silver trophies will be awarded as first and second prizes for the two best dogs. Ribbons will be awarded in all classes.

There will be no admission charge for the show. Entry blanks may be obtained at Nathan's veterinary hospital, Carolina Sport shop, Huggins' hardware, Eubanks drug store, the Victory Village co-op and in Carrboro at Lloyd-Ray's hardware and Senter's drug store.

Judges for the show will be Cladius Jones and Dr. Kenneth Cuyler of Durham.

Shakespeare Set Given To Library

An entire collection of book materials relating to Shakespeare and his period, collected during the lifetime of Dr. Samuel A. Tannenbaum of New York City has been received by the University library, Librarian Charles E. Rush announced this week.

Dr. Tannenbaum was famous throughout the world as a prolific Elizabethan bibliographer and an authority on Shakespeare handwriting and Shakespeare forgeries. He was secretary of the Shakespeare Association of America and editor of its Bulletin for many years.

In extent, it titals more than 3,000 titles and covers a wide field, both literary and historical. It is rich in editions, works of biography, and criticism, facsimiles, photostats, and works of reference and bibliography.

Acquistion of the Tannenbaum collection was made possible by the aid of a group of New York alumni and their friends under the leadership of James L. Harrison. Alfred W. Haywood and William A. Whitaker.

Radio commentator Fulton Lewis attacked the educator when the Atomic Energy commission cleared his access to atomic secrets. The Commission ruled that although he had been associated with groups under communist influence, his loyalty and integrity had not suffered.

Lewis charged that the Commission had cleared Graham despite some objections from advisors on loyalty matters. Graham had been associated with the Southern Conference of Human Welfare which has been labeled as a subversive organization by congressional investigators. The attacks by Lewis and Representatives Hebert and Rankin in the House were based in part on this association.

Coed Deadline Set For Rooms

The deadline for coed room reservations for Summer school and Fall quarter is April 2, an announcement from the office of the Dean of Women said yesterday. Students' rooms will be held for them until that date.

After April 2, if no reservation has been made, it will be assumed that the student is not returning and her space in the dormitory will be considered available for assignment to some incoming student.

voted her teaching to life. Her influence extends beyond the classroom. She lives in the lives of her students and former students. And because she teaches government and political science with the idea of helping her students become citizens, she lives in the every day life of North Carolina, the South, and the nation.

"Fourteen years ago, Miss Alexander came to the Woman's College. She has been a masterful teacher. Scholarly, conscientious, thorough, dynamic, inspiring—she is a teacher in the noble sense of the word. She is the kind of teacher we need if this sad world is to be set aright. Louise Brevard Alexander has earned the title, 'Great Teacher', and as a great teacher she has earned the first Oliver Max Gardner Award."

Sure, America's going ahead...
if we all pull together!

● Let's compare yesterday with today . . . that will give us an idea of what tomorrow can be!

Machine Power: Since 1910 we have increased our supply of machine power 4½ times.

Production: Since 1910 we have more than doubled the output each of us produces for every hour we work.

Income: Since 1910 we have increased our annual income from less than $2400 per household to about $4000 (in dollars of the same purchasing power).

Work Hours: Yet, since 1910 we have cut 18 hours from our average workweek—equivalent to two present average workdays.

HOW have we achieved all this? Through the American kind of teamwork! And what is teamwork?

American teamwork is management that pays reasonable wages and takes fair profits—that provides the best machines, tools, materials and working conditions it possibly can—that seeks new methods, new markets, new ideas; that bargains freely and fairly with its employees.

Our teamwork is labor that produces as efficiently and as much as it can—that realizes its standard of living ultimately depends upon how much America produces—that expects better wages as it helps increase that production.

Teamwork is simply working together to turn out more goods in fewer man-hours—making things at lower costs and paying higher wages to the people who make them and selling them at lower prices to the people who use them.

What we've already accomplished is just a foretaste of what we can do. It's just a start toward a goal we are all striving to reach: better housing, clothing, food, health, education, with ever greater opportunities for individual development. Sure, our American System has its faults. We all know that. We still have sharp ups and downs in prices and jobs. We'll have to change that—and we will!

It will continue to take teamwork, but if we work together, there's no limit on what we can all share together of even greater things.

THE BETTER WE PRODUCE
THE BETTER WE LIVE
What we have already accomplished is just a foretaste of what we can do—if we continue to work together.

Bricker Demands Graham Investigation

SHOWN HERE IS THE GIANT $75,000 Zeiss instrument, consisting of an axis and two large projectors inset with 250 smaller projectors, which is now being installed in the planetarium section of the Morehead building. The complex instrument is capable of reproducing the intricate phenomena of the heavens—9,000 stars, the sun, moon and planets in their proper places for any instant of any year for any given terristial position. Tony Jenzano, chief technician, formerly with the Fels planetarium in Philadelphia and Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Morehead planetarium, formerly in chrage of the Fels planetarium, are here shown fitting a projector that will show the "milky way."

Planetarium Opening Scheduled For May 10

Final touches are now being made to the Morehead building in preparation for the public opening on May 10, Dr. Roy K. Marshall, University professor of astronomy, reported yesterday.

"The May opening of the Morehead building will be the most advantageous time to reveal the planetarium to the public," Dr. Marshall declared, "because graduating seniors and commencement guests will have a chance to see the planetarium before they leave."

However, contrary to popular terminology, the machine is the planetarium and the Morehead building is simply a housing unit for the planetarium machine.

The complicated planetarium machine has already been installed and is now being adjusted by technician Anthony F. Jenrano and his crew.

Over 9,000 feet of wire is being connected from the planetarium machine to the control console. Three different voltages, six volts, 30 volts, and 110 volts will be used to power the machine. Seven motors will be employed to turn the machine in various directions.

Baffles and specially treated paper are used in order to trap stray light from the machine and insure darkness in the planetarium chamber. The dome of the chamber is covered with perforated steel plates and a silhouette outline of Chapel Hill, complete with bell tower and library, runs around the lower part of the chamber.

The last of the 493 blue leatherette seats of the chamber were installed yesterday and wide spacing insures plenty of room for long-legged guests.

The planetarium machine was first put into use in May, 1930, in Germany, but is still considered the newest in the United States because of its limited use.

World Federalists Plan Meet Today

A meeting of the Student chapter of the United World Federalists will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Grail room, Graham Memorial, President Marie Wicker said yesterday.

The business to be discussed will include projects for the coming quarter, assignment of topics and speakers for the radio program on WDUK every Tuesday night, and the election of a new chairman for the Spring quarter.

Coeds Invited

The University club and the Monogram club will hold a joint open house for all coeds tonight from 9 to 10:30 in the Monogram club.

Officials of the two clubs said yesterday that the open house is being given for the purpose of entertaining the visiting swimmers taking part in the NCAA championships beginning here tonight.

Comedy Tryouts For Playmakers To Start Monday

Tryouts for the third original full-length play of the Carolina Playmakers' season, "Repple-Depple," a farce-comedy by Sam Hirsch, will be held Monday, in the Playmakers theater at 4 o'clock and 7:30.

There are parts for 14 men and women, announced W. P. Covington, III, the director, and scripts are on reserve in the library for all who wish to read the play prior to Monday's tryouts. Ex-GIs are particularly urged to try out, although army experience is not absolutely necessary.

Dealing with certain comic aspects of overseas life, "Repple-Depple" is the story of a replacement depot in France during the "late unpleasantness." It gets its name from the army slang abbreviation of Replacement Depot to Rep'l Depot, or "Repple-Depple."

Parking Lot Restrictions Begin Today

Ruling Affects Blue Stickers

Beginning today no campus parking lots are available for parking by blue sticker holders between 7 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Monday through Friday, Jim Williams, spokesman for the University Traffic committee, said yesterday.

Also, no parking is permitted on the west side of Hillsboro street from Franklin street to Raleigh road, or on the east side from Franklin street to the walkway north of Alderman dormitory. Police enforcement of these regulations begins today, Williams declared.

Faculty and staff members holding red stickers marked "A" are authorized to park in areas restricted to faculty and staff parking, and to other restricted campus parking areas. As soon as delivery can be made by the manufacturer a new permanent sticker will be issued to faculty and staff members.

The following restricted parking lots are reserved for faculty and staff parking and for physically handicapped students: (1) The parking lots adjacent to Steele dormitory, Carr dormitory, Bynum and Caldwell hall. (2) The parking area on the road leading from Cameron Avenue to Alumni building. (3) The parking lots adjacent to and between Phillips hall and the Buildings department.

Areas restricted to red sticker parking are: (1) The road leading from Cameron avenue to Emerson stadium, west side. (2) The small parking areas adjacent to and south of Lenoir hall and Venable hall. (3) The parking areas around Swain hall, Smith dormitory and Hill hall. (4) All developed parking lots behind the Library. (5) The parking area back of the YMCA and Memorial hall.

Appointee Intends To Seek Full Term In 1950 Election

Will Continue Present Stand On Civil Rights

By Margaret Gaston

As hundreds of telephone calls and telegrams of congratulations poured into Dr. Frank Porter Graham's office yesterday, the famous educator said he had decided that, after he fills the late Senator Broughton's unexpired term in the United States Senate, he will run for reinstatement to the post in 1950.

Governor Scott made the surprise announcement of President Graham's appointment to the Senate at the first annual O. Max Gardner Award banquet held Tuesday night in Lenoir hall. Dr. Graham will continue as president of the Greater University until he takes his oath of office which will probably be in two or three weeks, Scott continued.

Governor Scott said he will call a meeting of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees for next Saturday to consider plans for naming Graham's successor.

Dr. Graham said yesterday he will stand on his record of the past when he goes to Washington and will take any new position "only after studying it in the light of present situation." Graham, who was on the committee which drafted a report on President Truman's Civil Rights Commission, cited the record of the report when asked to state his present stand on civil rights.

"I am specifically now for equality of suffrage, both in general elections and primaries," he continued. The President said he was in favor of a "local-state-federal cooperative program against lynching by mobs in the South and by gangs in the North."

The president said he favored the abolishment of the poll tax, a more decent minimum wage,

(See REACTION, page 4)

FOLLOWING KERR SCOTT'S announcement of Dr. Frank P. Graham's appointment to the U. S. Senate, the Greater University president accepts the appointment before a surprised audience at the O. Max Gardner award dinner Tuesday night in Lenoir hall. Terming his decision to accept as the most difficult of his life, Graham said, "I will do my best to continue serving my state and my country in this post." Governor Scott is shown seated on Dr. Graham's right.

State Politicoes Offer Barrage Of Comments

RALEIGH, March 23—(UP)—Momentarily off guard and completely surprised last night, Tar Heel politicians rallied today with a barrage of comment and speculation on Dr. Frank Porter Graham as North Carolina's junior U.S. Senator.

But in Washington, senior Sen. Clyde R. Hoey said only that he would "prefer not to comment at this time."

State Democratic chairman Capus Waynick, one of the most prominently - mentioned candidates for the post, said: "I wish him well in a very important responsibility."

State Sen. L. H. Fountain of Tarboro: "I haven't always agreed with Dr. Graham, but I think Scott has appointed one of the most able men in the United States."

Rep. W. T. Hatch of Wake county: "A very wise choice. Frank Graham is well versed in state affairs, as well as in national and international affairs. I think he will very well represent the state."

State Treasurer Brandon Hodges: "It was a complete surprise. Dr. Graham is a great liberal who will represent new thought. From the political point of view, I don't know just what the governor had in mind."

McNutt Names Officer Trainers

Patsy McNutt, chairman of the Coed Leadership Training program, announced yesterday the members of the committee to train and install all new officers of coed organizations on campus.

Members of the committee include: Mary Glenn Slater, representing Pan Hell; Emily Baker, Coed Senate; Eloise Jacobi, CICA; Randy Hudson, W.A.A.; Carolyn Guthrie, Town Girls; Teeny Royal, YWCA; Sue Stokes, Interdorm Council; Anne Carlton, secretary and Bunnie Davis, publicity.

Free Performance

Dance Company Show Slated For Memorial Tuesday Night

The Student Entertainment committee will present Charles Weidman and his Theater Dance company in a Memorial Hall concert next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The performance by Weidman, important figure in American dancing, will be admission-free to all University students, it was announced yesterday by Scotty Venable, chairman of the Student Entertainment committee, which is annually appropriated funds by the Student Legislature to bring quality concert artists to the campus. Already this year this committee has presented such varied entertainers as Hazel Scott, Negro pianist, and the Trapp family singers, Austrian choral clan.

The doors of Memorial hall, Venable added, will be open Tuesday at 7 o'clock and the show will start promptly at 8 o'clock. I. D. cards will be the only admission requirement of students although faculty members, student wives, and all others interested may purchase tickets at the door for 75 cents each.

Weidman, who is widely acclaimed as both a choreographer and a soloist, has created more that 100 dance compositions. Many of these, though serious in theme, are humorous in treatment, since Weidman believes that the dance should "arouse, amuse, entertain, and astonish" audiences. His most famous and newest ballet is "Fables For Our Time," based on James Thurber's stories.

Charges Start Angry Debate Among Solons

Hoey Protests 'Insinuations'

WASHINGTON, March 23—(UP)—Sen. John Bricker (R.-O.), who called today for a Congressional investigation of Dr. Frank Porter Graham, replied, "No, no!" tonight when asked by a reporter if he thought Graham should be barred from his Senate seat pending the investigation.

He said he intended his criticism for the commission, not Graham.

Radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., said in a broadcast over the Mutual network that one of the "theories" being discussed at the Capitol was that "administration democrats" arranged Graham's appointment to the Senate to get Atomic Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal "off the hook."

He said Lilienthal was threatened with "embarrassing" disclosures because he installed Graham in a high atomic post.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—(UP)—A demand for a congressional investigation of Dr. Frank P. Graham, North Carolina university president named to the U. S. Senate, caused angry debate in the Senate today.

The demand came from Sen. John W. Bricker (R-O.) who charged that Graham was cleared for access to atomic secrets

In answer to Senator Bricker's charges on the floor of the Senate yesterday, Dr. Graham told the Daily Tar Heel last night that, "I stand on my open record before the American people."

last year despite objections by the Atomic Energy commission's security officer and Loyalty Review board.

Calling for an inquiry by the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy committee, Bricker said he was not challenging Graham's appointment but wanted to call attention to the "pertinent facts I believe need attention of the appropriate committee at this time."

Sen. Clyde R. Hoey (D-N.C.) promptly protested what he called "insinuations" against Graham's loyalty.

Hoey immediately arose and told the Senate he could "not be content to sit quietly while these implications and these insinuations are made."

He said Graham was "as loyal as any man who walks this earth" and was a "magnificent soldier" in World War I. He said the educator has a "facility for joining many organizations" with noble declarations of purpose, and has been a target for criticism because he was too lax in allowing his name to be used by such organizations.

Describing the educator as "a great American and one of the great educational statesmen of America," Hoey said he did not War Labor board, praised him as agree with much of Graham's philosophy but that no one can

with Charles McCorkle

Spring's Here—So Is Politics

As warm weather strolls into the campus, the politicians begin to show signs of life. They begin to put up their political posters and start handing out propaganda. They walk around with worried looks on their faces, not quite so confident of victory now that elections are less than two weeks away.

And with the advent of spring and politics, we have the advent of a new political survey—"On the Political Front." It intends to cover the campaign from top to bottom, and possibly even sideways. It will be here right up through the run-offs, and might stick around a while longer to mop up after the battle.

Unholy Alliance . . . or Did We Really See It?

The most startling sight on campus just about the time exams started at the end of last quarter was the meeting in a back booth of the Carolina Pharmacy of CP presidential candidate Charlie Long and SP vice-presidential candidate Al Lowenstein.

The subject of their talk was reportedly a discussion of just how the boys could get along in case they both were elected. Our informants say Mr. Lowenstein did most of the discussing and Mr. Long did mostly listening. The same informants said the only thing they couldn't figure out was which one of Long's ears the discussion was going in and which one it was exiting therefrom.

Here's Another Deal for the Books

This one concerns the efforts of a certain politician named Smith and several others who were trying to get Wayne Brenengan the UP presidential nomination. To appease a few other politicians and swing them around into line, the plan also called for the UP nomination of Herb Mitchell, chairman of the Carolina Forum, for vice-president.

The deal never came through for several reasons. One of the most notable was that vice-presidential prospect Mitchell was rather worried about running since it might hurt his chances when he runs for the presidency next year.

And don't let anybody tell you he's not going to run.

Leader of Men

It rained in Chapel Hill the night Governor Kerr Scott announced that President Frank Porter Graham was leaving the University to go to the United States Senate; but the next day, yesterday, the sun shown brighter and spring burst upon the University community with its ever-new feeling of joy and promise. The weather mirrored the conflicting emotions with which the University's people, its teachers and administrators and students—those who love Frank Graham best—received the news of his departure. The first reaction was one of sorrow for the University's loss; the second, one of happiness for the new honor to Dr. Graham and for the opportunity it offered him to try to give practical application to the theories he has so long advocated for the betterment of all human beings.

The loss to the University will be great. For 19 years Frank Graham has guided it along the path to greatness. He has fought for its appropriations, planned its expansion, directed its activities and set the pattern for its way of life. He took the position of university president and made of it the greatest office in the state. Under his direction the University's influence has spread through its extension dvisions and alumnae associations to all corners of North Carolina and to all levels of the State's people. Through his activities in national and international affairs, the reputation and influence of the University have grown in the nation and in the world. But it is through its former students that the influence of the University has most widely spread, and it is here that Frank Graham has had his greatest effect. As an educator, university builder, statesman, and most of all as an example, he has touched and affected the lives of thousands of students. Dr. Graham's departure will leave a hole in the University that will be hard to fill.

It is the students, of the present and of the future, who, probably without realizing their loss, will feel the absence of Dr. Graham most. Always he has kept uppermost in his mind the realization that the University is for the students, that all its activities should be in their interest. He, himself, has been the leading demonstration of this concept of education. When professors, advisors and deans have been too busy to see a student, the busiest man in the University has always had the time. No matter with whom he is conferring, if a student waiting to see him is in danger of missing a class, the president will excuse himself and speak to the student.

Asked what she considered Dr. Graham's greatest contribution to the University, a person who knows him well replied, "His greatest contribution has been himself." In that one sentence she gave the key to Frank Graham's greatness. His farsightedness in determining a right course of action, his enthusiasm in carrying it out, his fearlessness in championing causes he considers to be right—these are contributing factors, but the basic quality that has made him great is his unselfish giving of himself to and for others.

Frank Graham believes that a man is a man and deserves to be treated as such no matter what his station in life or the color of his skin. He believes that all men should have a free and fair chance to share in the good things of life. He believes that in a democracy the things that are true and right will survive. These beliefs are the components of his "liberalism", which has made him one of the most loved and one of the most feared and disliked men of his time. These are the beliefs which he will take with him to the Senate, and it is this that makes those who hate to see Graham leave the University glad to give him to the nation, for in the Senate he will have an opportunity to give wider range to these ideas in which he believes.

There is an ugly side to the speculations about Dr. Graham's appointment to the Senate. Some people wonder if he is being "kicked upstairs", if this is a convenient way of easing him out of the University. One year from now he will have to run for election in order to hold his seat, and many people do not believe he is enough of a politician to get elected. We believe these misgivings are unfounded. We thing Governor Scott was sincere in appointng Dr. Graham to the Senate, and we commend him for his wisdom and his courage in naming a true statesman to a body in which statesmen are so badly needed.

Regardless of the reason for it, however, the appointment will work for the benefit of the state, the nation and the world. The Christian ideals of peace and love are equally compelling wherever they are voiced. Frank Graham is a leader of men, and as he has led in the University of his home state, in national offices and in international conferences, so can and will he lead in the Senate of the United States.

Entertainment Hits New High

By Vestal C. Taylor

Raising the curtain on campus entertainment for the spring quarter is the Carolina Dramatic Association with its 26th annual festival, which began yesterday. Included in the program are 38 plays all of which will afford good entertainment at a nominal price. Curtain times are 9:30 and 2 o'clock and 7:30 daily.

*** *** ***

Following close on the heels of the festival are the Pan Hel's with their Burly-Q in the Rendevous Room Friday and Monday nights. The girls have also planned a dance for Saturday night, sandwiched between show dates to keep the campus males occupied for the weekend. For further details consult The Daily Tar Heel. Just bear in mind that these folks have planned a great series of entertainment for a great cause.

*** *** ***

Last but not least, on the week's agenda comes the tryouts for the Sound and Fury spring show, "Livin' Can Be Easy." Again, This column would like to urge all those who are interested in displaying their talents, in whatever field they feel qualified, to come down to Memorial Hall and show the directors what you can do.

*** *** ***

For the benefit of those who are vitally interested in and closely associated with "Apple Tree Farm", and who have seen fit to complain to this column for the asinity contained herein and the lack of publicity given the "Farm," it must be said that this space has felt that the "Farm" has had its share of publicity for the time being. It has become a well known fact that the powers connected with this show violated an agreement (or arrangement, as you like) with other members of the D. A. Department as to publicity coordination, and actually jeopardized space available to the department in the local news mediums by their selfishness. Furthermore, the time has not yet arrived for an avalanche of publicity concerning the "Farm." Curtain time is still some time off at this writing. Lastly, this column does not approve of the free and extensive use of Miss Lupino's name as a drawing card for an audience and talent, when it was absolutely uncertain that she would appear for this presentation of her work. As a matter of fact, when contacted, she did agree to appear, but when reminded of other pressing matters of business, she changed her mind and made no definite promise to visit Chapel Hill. At the time the great body of publicity was being given her appearance, no one would have been more surprised at Miss Lupino's arrival than those who had so highly advertised it. Smells like unfair publicity to us—it would have been so easy for them to have announced at the last minute that due to circumstances beyond her control, Miss Lupino would be unable to appear.

In all fairness to the backers of the "Farm," it must be said that a Hollywood columnist recently announced Ida would pay a visit to Chapel Hill, presumably to view her show. At this writing no communication has been received from Miss Lupino confirming such plans. This space would like very much to have her visit the campus, but in the meantime, let's have the facts as they actually are.

A good indication of the merit of the "Farm" may be found in the interest the New York script office of 20th Century Fox has shown in wanting a closer look at the book.

Thought for the day:

No wonder that hot weather turned up yesterday. With the beginning of the spring quarter, it was just all the hot air from the political candidates.

Odds used to be posted on a certain bulletin board, second floor Graham Memorial, on candidates for the coming spring elections. Yesterday the same bulletin board held a new set of odds—odds on candidates for the next president of the Greater University of North Carolina.

About 'Dr. Frank'

The Life Of A Great Leader

Following is a thumb-nail sketch of the life and work of Frank Porter Graham, eleventh President of the University of North Carolina, who was appointed to the United States Senate Wednesday night by Governor Kerr Scott.

Frank Porter Graham was born in Fayetteville, October 14, 1886, the son of Alexander and Katherine (Sloan) Graham. His father, a native of Fayetteville, who served in the Confederate Army during the Civil War, is called the father of the graded school system in North Carolina. He was the founder of the public schools of Fayetteville and was head of the schools at Charlotte from 1888 to 1913.

The son graduated from the Charlotte high school and from the University of North Carolina (A.B., 1909). He spent an additional year in the Law school of the University of North Carolina and received his license to practice from the State Supreme court in 1910. He taught in the Raleigh high school for two years, then returned to the University as secretary of its YMCA. Here in 1914, he was appointed instructor in history. In 1916 he took his master's degree at Columbia university.

When the United States entered the World War, Dr. Graham enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps and rose to the rank of first lieutenant before he was mustered out in July, 1919.

He returned to the University of North Carolina as Assistant professor of history and for one year held the position of Dean of Students. In 1921 he was made associate professor and the following year was spent in graduate study at the University of Chicago where he won the two-year Amhearst Memorial Fellowship. After a year in Washington, D. C., studying at Brookings Institute and the Library of Congress, he went abroad to pursue research at the British museum and the London School of Economics and to attend sessions of the League of Nations in Geneva. He returned to North Carolina in 1925, and two years later became a full professor. In June, 1930, he was elected President of the University.

The Pyramid Clubs

Wanna Make A Fortune

By John Stump

Want to join the Pyramid club?

You stand to make something for almost nothing—specifically 2.048 dollars for one—and everybody's doin' it.

Brought from the gullible North by returning out of state students, the idea is going like wildfire all over the campus. Even myself has his name on one sheet and is sitting back greedily waiting for the profits to roll in.

Word of the fabulous and now famous clubs has been filtering around the campus for weeks, but until the Yankee boys went home to take a look at it first hand, the craze had by-passed Carolina. Since eager club salesmen are giving out the rosy side of the story, however, it seems only fair to relay the seamy one.

As one Washington pyramider said after the pioneer there was placed gently behind bars, "You don't have to look far behind the bare possibilities to see a lot of naked facts," and as cynical refusals from several potential local pyramiders suggest, pure mathematics bring you to the nakedest fact.

That is that, no matter how hard or how furiously the "club" goes, somebody puts in every dollar that is paid out. From which comes the comfortless (for low number pyramiders) conclusion that sooner or later somebody loves one dollar worth of his shirt and a good bit more of his self-esteem for every dollar won. We figured that meant 2.048 losers per winner, and the math department assured us we were right.

Doubts about the legality and ethics of the thing worried this member soon after he joined the club, and after a little reflection there is no doubt that it is anything more or less than a variation of an old Army game known locally as 3 letter week.

There have been no tests of its legality yet although the Income Tax boys stand ready to get their share of whatever take might accumulate, and a few arrests have been made elsewhere.

Also there is the matter of the fate of Pyramid's parent, the chain letter, which was barred on the ground that it was using the mails to defraud. And there is Pyramid's long line of ancestors, the con games of this and other days, and its relatives the get-rich-quick schemes of here or anywhere else.

All in all it looks like what a lawyer might call a long shot gamble of doubtful legality.

Anybody want to join the Pyramid club?

A 'Trip' For Truman

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, March 23—Senator George W. Malone, of Nevada, spied a group of his Republican confreres in agitated discourse the other day. The irrepresible Nevadan thought he'd give them something more to be agitated about.

Rushing up to the G. O. P. stalwarts in pretended dismay, he gasped:

"This is serious! The President is going to stump the country!"

"Let him!" snapped Senator Eugene Millikin, of Colorado.

"Who cares?" snorted Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio.

"You don't say!" sneered Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire.

"Yes," deadpanned Mr. Malone. "He's going to ask for the 80th Congress back."

Around this town we pride ourselves on our suavity and circuitousness. We strive to avoid crass and embarrassing questions.

There is one gentleman, however, we haven't succeeded in polishing as yet, although he has been around here 16 years. I refer to the maladroit Mr. Plumley.

Charles Albert Plumley, who is Vermont's one and only Representative, has a magnificent record for putting his foot in it, but the other day he topped himself.

Secretary of the Army Royall was testifying before the House Appropriations subcommittee, reeling off reasons why the Army wanted money for this and that. The congressmen, including Mr. Plumley, were giving him respectful attention.

It is common gossip around town that Secretary Royall is shaky in his job on account of not kicking in enough dough for the glorious cause, but we do not come right out and mention this in his presence. We pussyfoot about the bush, asking diplomatic questions like: "We hear, Mr. Secretary, that you are extremely desirous of returning to private practice?"

But the maladroit Mr. Plumley just won't learn our sneaky ways. He caused Mr. Royall to choke and splutter in midsentence by suddenly exclaiming:

"Say, Mr. Secretary, what's this I hear about you getting fired?"

I never thought I would deem it necessary to use this space to decline personal invitations, but it seems imperative if I'm going to get any work done.

Listen, I bloody well want it understood that under no circumstances will I join a pyramid club!

Talk about filibusters holding up the business of government! It's incredible the way this idiotic craze has snarled it.

The capitol switchboard and those of governmental departments are tied up with calls of pyramiders. Offices of Congressmen give only busy signals.

Apparently no group is immune to the virus. I suppose something like this has occurred in every pyramid-struck city, but it actually happened at the home of one of our leading society hostesses the other night. The Pyramiders were handing over their dough when two uniformed cops barged in.

The hostess, with visions of riding in the piewagon, instead of her chauffeured limousine, tried to placate the gendarmes, explaining that it was just an innocent lark.

"Innocent lark, hell!" snarled one of the coppers. "Don't try to talk us out of this, lady. We came here to put in our dough!"

An Alaskan priest was testifying before the Senate Banking and Currency committee on housing needs in his territory. He warned the solons against attempting to force modern homes on the Eskimos, explaining that one Eskimo family had received a prefabricated house and set up a deerhide tent in the living room.

Senator John J. Sparkman, of Alabama, agreed enthusiastically with the witness, adding insinuatingly:

"You mean that people of a certain section should know their own needs best?"

"Look out, father," warned Senator Warren Magnuson, of Washington, "or you'll be drawn into this Southern filibuster!"

Oh, my gosh! what about all those other S.O.B. (sunning on beach) pictures before old Charlie suffered his brainwave?

Tournament Begins With 1500-Meter Freestyle Event

Michigan, Ohio State, Iowa Top Favorites to Take Title

By Larry Fox

The locale will be different, but most of the performers who starred in last year's National Collegiate Athletic association swimming championships are back again for the annual affair which opens in Bowman Gray pool tonight at 7:30 with the 1500-meter freestyle.

That will be the only event of the evening, but two or more sections of the 65 plus-lap marathon should prove quite enough for one night. Preliminaries and finals in six events are slated for tomorrow with the final five being run off Saturday. Time trials will take up the morning and afternoon sessions and the finals are to be held at night.

No trials are scheduled for the 1500, however, and the final winner will be decided on time.

The inaugural event features a wide array of tried talent for the first five finishers up at Michigan are back again. The scramble will probably be for the last four places, however, as Bill Heusner of Northwestern is a strong favorite to repeat.

Heusner won the event in 19: 28.2 last year, but since has turned in a time of 19:21. Matt Mann, III of Michigan, who finished second to Heusner last year, might pull an upset, but the same could be said of the other entries.

Wolverines Strong

Even if they don't take a first place, the Wolverines should pick up some points in the 1500 to aid in their race to retain the title they won last year on their home course. For in third place, behind Mann, was another Michigander, Gus Stager.

Roger Watts of Iowa State, the Big Seven champion, and Pacific Coast titleholder Ralph Sala of Stanford took the final two places at Ann Arbor and are also entered tonight.

Other men who might break into the scoring column are Carolina's Jimmy Thomas, Wallace Wolfe of Southern California and Eddie Gilbert of Texas.

Most, if not all, of these men will also be entered in the 440-yard freestyle, the finals of which take place Saturday night. Here, however, the long distance boys will face some different competition.

Smith Heavy Favorite

Bill Smith of Ohio State is the reigning champion and almost prohibitive favorite to add the 1949 title to his string. Smith, who is also the Olympic champion, turned in a 4:43.8 to finish ahead of Heusner and Stager, in that order.

Another Olympic champion will defend his 1948 crown Saturday night in the 100-yard freestyle. Wally Ris of Iowa won the title in 0:51.5 in Michigan and turned the trick again at London in the Olympics. Bob Nugent of Rutgers, outdoor AAU champion, is a strong threat in this event, which features a particularly good field. Smith will try for another win in the century along with Paul Girdes of Yale and George Hoogerhyde of Michigan State, a member of last year's victorious Spartan 400-yard relay team.

Baseball Briefs

By United Press

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 23—Pittsburgh's rampaging Pirates were the hottest team of the Grapefruit circuit today with a winning streak of six games.

The Buccanneers were playing in near mid-season form as they whipped the World Champion Cleveland Indians yesterday 2-1, in a game marked by top-notch pitching.

The Indians, on the other hand, now find themselves in a three-game losing streak.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 23—The Boston Braves' squad took on a stream-lined look today after Manager Billy Southworth dispatched eight players to various farm clubs.

Among them was pitcher Dave Cole, who was sent to Jackson, Miss.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 23—Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, who continue to get the best pitching in the entire state of Florida, were scheduled to meet the Brooklyn Dodgers, who occasionally have trouble getting any pitching at all, here today.

Right-hander Dick Fowler of the A's easily mastered the Baltimore Orioles 5-2, yesterday, yielding five hits in eight innings.

The Dodger regulars defeated the scrubs, 5-2, yesterday in an intra-squad game at Vero Beach. Carl Furillo's four hits paced the winners' attack.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 23—The New York Yankees scored an 11-inning 1-0 victory over Detroit yesterday but they were more enthusiastic over something else today — the progress of Joe DiMaggio.

The Yankee center-fielder, wearing a specially-constructed shoe for his injured heel, batted a full hour before yesterday's game and then drew a base on balls as a pinch-hitter against the Tigers in the 10th inning.

The Washington Senators, who beat Minneapolis, 8-7, yesterday, play the Yankees here today with Fred Sanford and Ed Lopat scheduled to pitch for the New Yorkers.

Carolina Netmen Stage Drills In Preparation for First Meet

With only two days remaining before the opening meet with Michigan State's touring netmen, the Tar Heel varsity tennis team went through another hard practice session yesterday afternoon.

Although Coach John Kenfield's netters dropped only one meet last season, this year's version will see several new faces on the courts, since only three of last year's starting six are returning to the squad.

Captain Vic Seixas, Southern conference singles champion, will be back to spearhead the team, while Clark Taylor, number two man, and Charlie Rice, third-ranking Tar Heel, will also be around. Only two other lettermen, Stan Gruner and Duke Wilder, will be on the 1949 squad.

Saturday's engagement with Michigan State will open a home stand of 14 straight meets for the Tar Heels. On April 23 the local netters leave the home courts for the first time and travel to Charlottesville to tangle with the University of Virginia.

The Southern conference championships will be held in Chapel Hill on May 12, 13, and 14.

WILDCATS LEAVE

NEW YORK, March 23—(UP)—The University of Kentucky cagers left here today for Seattle to meet the Oklahoma Aggies Saturday night for the national NCAA championship. The Wildcats won the Eastern title by defeating Illinois last night, 76-47.

Interest Revived In Fencing Here

Fencing, which was a minor sport at the University before the war, is again being talked on campus. A number of enthusiasts, led by Franz Ross, have been discussing the possibilities of reviving the sport here.

Ross is interested in sounding out student opinion on the possibility of re-instituting the sport, or, in the event that this is impractical, the chances of conducting classes in fencing, possibly as a part of the vast intramural program carried on by the University.

All persons interested in fencing are requested to contact Ross at 322 Phillips hall. If enough interest in the sport can be aroused on campus, its full potentialities will be exploited.

Chapel Hill to Have First Dog Show

Chapel Hill's first dog show will take place Sunday afternoon at Emerson field. Sponsored by citizens of Chapel Hill for the benefit of the Humane society and not by the society as was previously announced, the show will be open to all dogs at least six months old and pure-bred. The dogs' owners must be residents of either Chapel Hill or Carrboro.

A $1 entry fee will be charged for each dog. Small silver trophies will be awarded the two best dogs and ribbons will be awarded in all classes.

Entry blanks may be obtained at Nathan's veterinary hospital, Carolina Sport shop, Huggins' hardware, Eubanks drug store, the Victory Village co-op and in Carrboro at Lloyd-Ray's hardware and Senter's drug store.

Tar Heel Baseballers Take Day Off; Coaches Pleased With Showing

Having returned from a strenuous four-game road trip through Florida only yesterday morning, the Carolina baseball squad took a day of rest before starting preparations this afternoon for their first Southern conference game of the season here Monday with Washington and Lee.

The highly successful Southern excursion was "Very pleasing" according to Tar Heel Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb. The coaching staff was well-pleased with the excellent hitting of Ed Lamb, who collected ten hits on 18 trips to the plate. Of these ten hits, two were doubles and one a triple. Lamb was one of the jayvee stars last season and appears much improved this year.

The pitching staff showed up well in spots and the performance of Andy Tranavitch, a catcher last year, appeared to be a good omen despite the youthfulness of the season.

Joe Brookshire, a jayvee secondbaseman last year, was shifted to third base as an experiment and the results looked good. He collected five hits on nine chances to help spark the Carolina hitting attack.

The Tar Heels dropped only one of the four games played on the six day trip. That was a no-hit job by Florida's Bob Adams. But they came back the next day to take a 9-2 decision behind the pitching of Tranavitch and Tommy Andrew, one of the two returning moundsmen of last year's Conference Championship team.

Next week the Tar Heels will be facing a five game schedule, all of them at home on Emerson field. After W & L Cornell will move in on Tuesday and Michigan State will be here Wednesday and Thursday. Friday the Tar Heels will close out the week with Virginia Tech.

Phils Complain

23—(UP)—President Bob Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phils, incensed because the Boston Red Sox didn't use their stars in an exhibition game here, said today he would sponsor a major-league rule making it obligatory to use the regular lineup in exhibitions.

Baseball Practice Is Slated Today For Freshmen

Freshman baseball Coach Henry House announced yesterday that all boys interested in playing frosh ball this spring should report to him at Navy field at 2:30 this afternoon.

A number of batterymen have been drilling daily during the past few weeks, but today's workout will mark the first mass meeting of the Tar Baby hopefuls.

The Tar Heel juniors will face a rugged schedule this season including members of the Big Four and other Southern conference freshman outfits. Several prep schools, high schools, and service teams are also under consideration, and may be slated for action against the frosh baseballers at a later date. The completed schedule is expected to be released in the near future.

Today's drills will be light with the accent on limbering-up exercises and short batting drills.

SOFTBALL ENTRIES

Intramural softball entries are now open to both fraternity and dormitory teams. All managers or students interested in organizing independant teams should make their entries in room 311, Woollen gym, or phone F-3321.

New Ticket Plan

The Woollen gym ticket office has arranged for the purchasing of tickets to separate sessions of the NCAA Swimming championships as opposed to yesterday's statement that only season tickets could be bought, it was stated yesterday by Vernon Crook, ticket office head.

In explaining the system now being used, Mr. Crook said that all morning sessions will be open to all at no charge. There will be a one dollar fee for each afternoon session and the Thursday evening meet. Tickets for Friday and Saturday nights will be sold at two dollars.

Season tickets are still on sale at the ticket office for $4.00.

more equal job opportunities for all people, and federal aid to the states to provide for more equal educational opportunities for all children in all the states.

Dr. Graham said he expected to continue to support President Truman's program. He said he had supported from the beginning the Marshall Plan and the proposed United Nations plan for control of atomic power and inspection of its sources.

He said he had not studied the Atlantic Pact in detail yet, but would be "disposed to give it more sympathetic consideration." Graham also asserted he would continue to support a local-state-federal cooperative medical care program.

President Graham was unsuccessful in his attempts to resume his regular activities in his office in South, as he was flooded with visitors offering congratulations. The President took time out to have his picture made with students at the Old Well.

Excitement ran high yesterday as faculty, administration, and students discussed Dr. Graham's appointment. Chancellor House said he had lived with the idea of Graham as the successor to the late Senator Broughton two days before the announcement was made, and he asserted that he was still in a daze. "He's the greatest man for the president of the University, and he's the greatest man for the Senate. The smaller need must yield to the larger one," House continued.

"Dr. Graham will be fulfilling the greatest service to the greatest number," Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, commented. "He is a unique man, answering the call of mankind," she added. Miss Carmichael expressed the opinion of the administration when she said that "everybody was unhappy to see Dr. Graham leave the University," but that she is confident he will make an excellent senator.

Sen. Wayne Morse (R-Ore.), who served with Graham on the "one of the most Christlike men I've ever known."

Chairman Brien McMahon, (D.-Conn.), of the Joint Atomic committee, said he had agreed earlier to hold open hearings on Graham's Atomic Energy commission clearance at the request of one committee member, although he, as chairman, thought them unnecessary.

But he said the hearings have not begun, and predicted the member—whom he did not name—would not insist on them when he reads the complete record on the case.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Ia., ranking Republican on the committee, backed up McMahon. He said he had seen all the files and "I must say in fairness that I have no reason to think of Dr. Graham in any way other than a loyal American citizen."

He said Graham has associated with organizations "which do not have as their purpose the best interests of the United States," but added: "I have no reason to believe Dr. Graham is possessed of anything other than an exemplary character."

Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind.) tangled with McMahon. He said "no one questions that Dr. Graham is a good American citizen but it is common knowledge that he is just a little bit soft on Communist-front organizations."

Winn To Run For President Of Seniors As CP Candidate

Hugh Johnson Is Nominee For Vice President

Al Winn, rising Senior from St. Petersburg, Fla., will run for president of the senior class in the spring general elections on the Campus party ballot, Banks Talley, CP chairman said yesterday.

Winn is a member of the Dialectic Senate, the Student Legislature, Coalition Cabinet, Monogram club, and Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity. He has been chairman of the campus Elections Board for the past two years.

Other nominations for Senior class officers on the CP ticket are Hugh Johnson, who is seeking the vice presidency, Morris Knudsen, secretary; Harvey Johnson, treasurer; and Clyde Smithson, social chairman.

Johnson is a rising senior from Charlotte and a member of Lambda Chi Alpha. Winn and Johnson oppose Ed Tenney and Don VanNoppen, UP candidates for the two top offices in the senior class. The Student party has not yet made its nominations for senior class officers.

Morris Knudsen opposes Armecia Eure, UP, for the job as secretary. Knudsen is from Los Angeles and spent a year and a half at UCLA before coming to Chapel Hill. He is at the present time clerk of the Di Senate, secretary of Pi Kappa Sigma and secretary of the Young Republicans club.

Harvey Johnson, the CP candidate for senior class treasurer, is from Raleigh and is the IFC representative for Chi Psi.

CP's candidate for social chairman, Clyde Smithson, is a rising senior from Creswell, and a transfer from North Carolina State. He is a member of AROTC and of APO, scout service fraternity.

Pan Hel's 'Olio' Opens Tonight In Rendezvous

Pan Hell weekend, sponsored by the Pan Hellenic council to raise money for adopting a European war Orphan, will get under way tonight at 8 o'clock in the Rendezvous room with the first of a two-day run of a vaudeville-type show, called an olio. The program will mark the spring quarter opening of the Rendezvous.

Pan Hel will continue its first annual weekend of entertainment with a semi-formal dance tomorrow night in Woollen gymnasium and will conclude with the second olio presentation in the Rendezvous room Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Highlighting tonight's vaudeville-type entertainment of skits by the five sororities and individual singing and dancing, the "Pan Hellenic Haymakers," selected at tryouts several weeks ago, will enact a "sophistocated" melodrama, "East Lynne."

Sub-titles of Pan Hel's interpretation of the play, which was popular on Broadway and throughout the country in the late 1900's, are "Life with Fodder," "Get off the Rafters, Grandma, You're Too Old to be on the Beam," "The Corn is Clean," or "Go Into the Roundhouse, Nellie, They Can't Corner You There."

The "Haymakers" include Frances Sowers, Betsy Tom Lawrence, Ellen Smith, Lee Noll, Bunnie Davis, Nancy Curtis, Mary

Number of Meets Reduced to Two By Coed Senate

University coeds sliced off one of the three compulsory election meetings called for in the election bill of the Coed Senate during a special session of Coed Senate Wednesday afternoon.

The amendment to the election bill was passed upon at a session immediately preceeding the coed mass meeting in Gerrard hall. It stated that nominations will be made orally, eliminating the previous requirement of written petitions.

At the first of the two election meetings, nominations will be made and lists of candidates' qualifications will be submitted to the elections chairman of the Coed senate, the amendment stated. Copies of the qualifications will be distributed at the second mass meeting.

Five May Get Axe After Faculty Poll

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 24—(UP)—Five professors and instructors who flunked a campus-wide student popularity poll may be fired and 42 who won "A" ratings may receive raises, University of Michigan authorities said today.

The University passed out 50,000 questionnaires three months ago to students in the college of literature, science and arts asking that they rate their professors on 10 points.

About 11,000 students answered the survey, flunking five of their teachers and giving superior ratings to 42 out of the 410 professors and instructors in the college.

The results compared so favorably with what department heads think of their instructors that a similar survey will be conducted annually for the next five years as a partial basis for granting faculty pay increases and promotions, according to Lloyd S. Woodbourne, assistant dean of the college.

UP Calls Meeting Of Party Nominees

There will be a mass meeting of all University party candidates with the party campaign committee tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 2 of Graham Memorial. Party chairman Joe Leary said it was imperative that all candidates be there so that plans for the coming election may be discussed.

Y Will Handle Operation Of New Campus Calendar

Plans for a central campus calendar which have been under consideration since January, 1947, are now in operation, Fred Weaver, dean of students, said yesterday. The purpose of the central calendar, he said, is to render service to the students in that they may, at all times, know what events are taking place on campus.

Specifically, the calendar means that all department heads, heads of student activities, and heads of agencies sponsoring public occasions are requested to schedule events as far in advance as possible with the calendar coordinator, Miss Mary Godbee, in the YMCA office.

The function of the central calendar is the avoidance of minor conflicts in the scheduling of events and the development of a standard procedure for reserving University buildings, the dean continued.

Two calendars will be maintained, one in the YMCA office, and the other in the dean of students' office. The YMCA office will furnish all information to the dean of students' office, as all events will be scheduled through the YMCA calendar only.

Miss Godbee, secretary of the YMCA, will continue to schedule events on the campus calendar. Also that office will handle the assignment of Memorial hall, Gerrard hall, and, with the approval of the Music department, Hill hall. All other buildings will be assigned as at present, by the respective custodians. These custodians are requested to report their scheduling of events as soon as possible to Miss Godbee.

The campus calendar committee comprised of Fred Weaver, Bill Friday, Miss Katherine Carmichael, and Miss Godbee will serve as a directing committee for the calendar. Their job is to assure the elimination of conflicts wherever possible. The committee hopes to encourage prompt and systematic scheduling of events.

Council Rules Solon Support Is Obligatory

Quarterly Fund is Constitutional

The Student council ruled yesterday that the Student legislature is obligated to support the Carolina Quarterly to the maximum extent of $2,000, which the legislature stipulated as an underwriting fund last spring.

Emily Sewell, business manager of the Quarterly, brought the suit for the money before the Council after objections had been raised to paying the Quarterly $500 of the underwrite, which the Legislature authorized several weeks ago.

Both Billy Carmichael, president of the Publications board, and Dick Gordon, chairman of the Student Audit board declared they were unable to authorize the money for the Quarterly since it was unconstitutional.

The Council directed Bob Kirby, secretary-treasurer of the student body, to turn over to the Business manager of the Quarterly a check for $500 immediately, as approved by the Legislature.

The Council further directed Kirby to turn over to the Quarterly any of the remaining $1,500 that the Quarterly needs for expenses, as provided in the Legislature bill authorizing the $2,000 underwrite.

Gerns Asks TMA To Help in Drive For Campus Chest

Appearing before the Town Men's association yesterday afternoon in Graham Memorial, Pete Gerns, president of the Men's Inter-dormitory council, called for "whole hearted support" of the TMA in working toward the establishment of a Campus Chest.

Speaking in behalf of the Men's IDC, Gerns said that "We want to have a plan by which an organization, composed of presidents of groups that represent all phases of student life; can unify all drives into a single drive."

He said that the effort to establish a Campus Chest grow out of complaints by students that "too many drives to solicit money" are being carried on here on campus.

Two organizations, Gerns said, have already given official support to the Campus Chest plan. "Chairman of the Girls" Town Association and Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, have announced support.

McMahon Says Dr. Graham Is 'Decent, Fine'

No Investigation Planned by Group

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(UP)—Chairman Brien McMahon of the Congressional Atomic committee said today that Senator-designate Frank P. Graham is "a decent and fine man."

He said he had found no evidence to support any suspicion as to the North Carolina educator's loyalty.

The Connecticut Democrat voiced his views after a White house visit during which he called President Truman's attention to discussion of Dr. Graham in the Senate yesterday.

Sen. John W. Bricker, (R.-O.) had demanded that McMahon's committee investigate Graham's clearance for limited access to atomic information by the atoformer president of the University mic Energy commission. Graham, of North Carolina and head of the Oak Ridge institute of nuclear physics, has been associated with organizations said to be Communist fronts. The Commission, however, declared he was entirely loyal to the United States.

McMahon said after his call on Mr. Truman that from files available to him and on the basis of all other information he has about Graham, "I do not beleive there is the slighest scintilla of evidence that he is anything but a decent and fine man."

"Some of the organizations he belonged to, I wouldn't," McMahon said. "But maybe I belong to a couple he wouldn't belong to—I don't know."

Graham found himself a center of controversy in the Senate even before he arrived to take his seat.

But administration leaders were confident he would be seated without challenge.

Scholarship Fund Is Made Available

The national chapter of Delta Delta Delta has announced that their General Scholarship fund is again available to women students on campuses where a chapter of Tri Delta is located. Scholarships up to $200 will be awarded to well qualified students working toward degrees.

The Tri Delt committee of awards will be the judge of the applicants, and the succesful candidates will be notified by May 15, 1949. The scholarships will be sent to them at the time of enrollment in the next term of college.

Applications may be obtained from Miss Twig Branch, personnel adviser in the Office of the Dean of Women.

Carmichael Kills Presidency Talk

The man most frequently mentioned as the logical successor to Dr. Graham as president of the Greater University yesterday dropped the curtain on any proposal that would sponsor him for that position.

Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., declared in a statement that under no circumstances would he ever accept the important educational position of president of the consolidated University. "Since my name has been mentioned in the newspapers as a possible successor to President Graham, I want to make my position clear and irrevocable," Charmichael said.

The controller pointed out that the next president of the consolidated University should be an experienced educational administrator. "A university is an educational institution and its president must direct its educational affairs. In our consolidated University the chief job is the coordination of academic matters within and between our three institutions," the statement declared.

"It has been suggested that the consolidated University needs a business executive. It does, but not as president. It is the function of the controller to handle the business affairs, leaving the president free to devote his time and energies to the all important educational work.

"I hope to serve the University as controller for a few more years. I will do everything possible to assist Chancellors Jackson, Harrelson and House in their administration of our three institutions until a new president is named. I hope to continue as controller with the new president."

Paying tribute to President Graham, Controller Carmichael said "the University of North Carolina has lost its greatest president. Frank Graham has done more for State college, for the Woman's College, and for the University at Chapel Hill than any man who has ever worked for these institutions."

"Frank Graham has the ability—and I believe the adaptability—to be one of North Carolina's greatest senators."

Truman Terms Graham Ideal For New Job

Letter to Scott Says 'Well Done'

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, March 24—(UP)—Gov. Kerr Scott today released the text of a letter sent to him by President Truman describing Dr. Frank Porter Graham's appointment to the U. S. Senate as "ideal."

"I say to you:" Mr. Truman's letter said, "Well done. I feel that the nation will applaud your action." The president said he could not restrain the impulse to write "this note of appreciation."

WASHINGTON, March 24—(UP)—President Truman today gave his enthusiastic endorsement to the appointment of Dr. Frank P. Graham to the U. S. Senate.

He told his news conference he thought the naming of Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, was a wonderful appointment. He called the educator a great American and a great citizen, and predicted he would make a grand senator.

The full text of the chief executive's letter read:

"You have made an ideal choice in naming Dr. Graham to the seat in the Senate made vacant by the sudden and unexpected death of Senator Broughton. I cannot restrain the impulse to write this note of appreciation.

"In Senator Graham, North Carolina will be represented by a gentleman of the highest character and integrity who will take his place worthily in the long line of distinguished Southern statesmen . In him the national legislature will also have a leader, firm and strong in principle and ever zealous in safeguarding the public interest and the welfare of our nation as a whole.

"And so I say to you: Well done. I feel that the nation will applaud your action."

Hillel Will Hear Talk by Perlman

American Official Must Leave Poland

WARSAW, Poland, March 24.—(UP)—U. S. press attache Chester Opal, of Chicago, said today he planned to leave Poland within 10 days at the "request" of the Polish Government.

The government yesterday attacked the U. S. Information service here and reiterated its demand that Opal be withdrawn.

An official spokesman said the USIS "systematically trespassed Polish laws."

Scott Believes Newest Solon Is 'Best Man'

Governor to Go To Ceremonies

RALEIGH, March 24—(UP)—Gov. Kerr Scott said today that President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina would be sworn in as junior United States senator from North Carolina in Washington, D. C., at noon next Tuesday.

The governor said that he would accompany Dr. Graham to Washington for the ceremonies.

Scott also said today that his appointment of Dr. Graham to succeed the late Sen. J. Melville Broughton stemmed simply from his belief that Graham "was the best man for the job."

"I didn't ask him what his stand was going to be on civil rights or any issues," the governor said. "I didn't ask him anything about what he'd do except become senator."

Scott told a press conference that he felt the North Carolina university president's record, both as an educator and a statesman, spoke for itself.

In answer to a question, Scott said he had not discussed Graham as a possibility for the Senate seat with Sen. J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, Democratic national chairman, when McGrath was here for the late Sen. J. Melville Broughton's funeral.

However, the governor added, he learned in a telephone conversation yesterday with presidential assistant John R. Steelman that President Truman was "very pleased" with the appointment.

Steelman was due here today for a conference with the governor on development of North Carolina ports.

Scott said he had insisted that Graham resign from the University post to accept the senatorship.

"I told him to cut all ties," the governor said. "There will be a new man entirely."

Scott added that he had no idea who Graham's successor would be. The Greater University's Board of Trustees' executive committee is to meet with the governor tomorrow, to select a committee to search for the new president.

The governor said Graham kept the appointment issue up in the air for 11 days, and turned it down twice before he finally agreed to accept.

Housing Deadline Is Set for Coeds

The deadline for coed room reservations for Summer school and Fall quarter is April 2, and students' rooms will be held for them until that date, the office of the Dean of women announced yesterday. After April 2, if no reservation has been made, it will be assumed that the student is not returning and her space in the dormitory will be considered available for assignment to some incoming student.

Coeds expecting to return to the University should file an application with the office of the Dean of Women, after paying a $6 room reservation fee to the cashier in the basement of South building.

Students Must Give Addresses to DTH

All students who began school this quarter and are not living in University housing must leave their name and town address with the DTH circulation manager before the DTH can be delivered to them, circulation manager Shasta Bryant announced yesterday.

Three Presidential Candidates Present Their Views on Various Things at an Open Meeting Sponsored by the Town Men's Association

There weren't many people there Wednesday night, but a very interesting political forum was held in Gerrard hall at which the three candidates for president of the student body had a short say on the topic, "If I were president."

The speakers were, in order, Dick Gordon of the University party, Bill Mackie of the Student party, and Charlie Long of the Campus party. The audience was sparse—in fact, it was practically non-existent, but the candidates apparently ignored that and gave very creditable talks.

A few points all the candidates seemed to be agreed upon were:

1. The Greater University Student council is avery worthy organization and should be continued.

2. Cooperation between student government and University

Must Sell Stocks

Shutdown Seen for Co-Op Unless Capital Increases

The Victory Village Co-op, a long time saving method for its members in the purchase of groceries, faces a shutdown unless its present campaign to sell $1200 worth of stock succeeds, Bill Goulding, president of the Co-op said yesterday.

Faced with continued withdrawals of capital by members leaving school, the co-op board said that the $1200 must be sold to provide the store with an adequate working capital.

According to a spokesman for the board it is expected that more than $850 will be redeemed to members leaving at the end of the present quarter. He stated that although the financial condition of the store is good and a reasonable amount of profit is being made, withdrawal of stock has for some time exceeded sale, causing the working capital to shrink.

The board has appealed to residents of the village and the trailer court to make pledges by March 28 toward the required amount. Pledges will be payable April 1 and May 1, but no money will be called unless the entire amount is pledged. Up to this date pledges for 10 per cent of the $1200 have been obtained.

A $15 buy of stock per family would not only provide the store with ample working stock, but would also be enough to install a new line of "Co-op" brand merchandise, the board said.

The Accusing Finger

Discussion at an open hearing before the student council yesterday pointed an accusing finger at the slipshod way in which the student legislature handles the business of the campus.

The discussion brought out the following information:

Last spring after weeks of wrangling the legislature passed a bill setting up the Carolina Quarterly as an independent publication free to choose its own editor, solicit subscriptions from students and to run its own affairs entirely separate from any branch of student government. At the same time the legislature agreed to underwrite the Quarterly for a maximum of $2,000 for the first year of its publication only, said funds to become available only if the Quarterly found itself unable to operate upon its own revenue.

Last quarter the Quarterly made a request for $500 of the promised money, only to run into a stone wall. Under the wording of the legislature's bill not one student officer or organization could sign a check for the money without violating the constitution. After three weeks of futile requests the Quarterly took its troubles to the student council. The council declared the bill unconstitutional but ordered payment of the promised funds.

That satisfied the Quarterly, but is didn't satisfy all those present at the hearing.

The discussion opened more fundamental questions of constitutionality which need clarifying. In the first place, does the legislature have the authority to appropriate money from student fees to organizations which charge students for their products or services? In the second place, is the student constitution the complete law under which the legislature operates? It seems that some parts of the constitution are contingent upon agreements made with the board of trustees, and these agreements are nowhere publicly recorded. The council is meeting again this afternoon to consider these and other questions.

However, the Quarterly bill is not the only piece of legislation tossed out by the local law mill with accompanying doubts as to its legality, and it is not the only one which is liable to have embarrassing after effects. The legislature is rapidly killing what little respect it may have by such hap-hazzard legislation. It is probably too much to expect the members of that body to act intelligently as a group, but at least the legislative committees should take the trouble to examine bills carefully before reporting them to the floor.

Another Wilson

Dr. Frank Graham, in recent press interviews, has signified that his policies in the Senate will follow the liberal theo ies which he has advanced for many years. These policies place Frank Graham in a peculiar position somewhere between the extremists of the two parties. He stands almost alone on some issues, believing that moderation and a careful, considered approach is best. The civil rights attitude he has endorsed is an example of this.

This may him the opportunity to become one of the giants of our political history, for despite Southern reargard action, the time for compromise is approaching. Another Henry Clay will be needed in the very near future to protect the minority while satisfying the majority. Really vital issues will be before the lawmakers during this Congress, and the man who can weld them into legislation that is sufficient, yet, fair, is a man who will gain considerable respect and stature.

It may be that Frank Graham will have the opportunity to show what a scholar-statesman can do for the country, and there is little doubt that he has the ability, courage, and tenacity to accomplish this. In the months to come, as rent controls, European aid extensions, labor bills, social security changes, socialized medicine, and other vital legislation appears, North Carolina may learn that it has produced another Wilson. The step up from the Senate is not too far for a man of that caliber.

Hamburger To Pheasant

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, March 24—Michigan goes high-toned—or from hamburger to pheasant in one Congress:

The wives and other ladies of our Congressmen, such as daughters, sisters, cousins and Aunt Kates, collaborate each year on a culinary volume known as the congressional club cook book. It carries recipes for concoctions which have slid down the gullets of our distinguished legislators without fatal results.

One of the leading spirits in this gastronomical guide is Mrs. Lawrence H. Smith, wife of the congressman from Wisconsin. She, very kindly, keeps me posted on progress.

Last year, Mrs. Smith got me intrigued by Maryland beaten biscuits, which, according to the recipe, have to be beaten with an ax for a half hour. I was challenged on this by a number of fair readers, but it was there in black and white on page 51 of the old volume; recipe by the wife of Rep. Dudley G. Roe, of Maryland. Mr. Roe failed to get re-elected, but it wasn't because he was beaten with an ax for a half hour.

Mrs Smith also called my attention to "Vandenbergers," one of the dishes featured in last year's tome. The recipe, provided by Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of the great internationalist from Michigan, turned out to call for little more than glorified hamburgers.

But the 1949 volume is just hot off the presses and Michigan comes through with something much eleganter than hamburgers. The missus of the state's other senator, Homer Ferguson, puts on the lorgnette with her recipe for "Pheasant a la Ferguson."

So, if you have a preasant hanging around to experiment with, here's how you can eat like the Fergusons:

"Cut in pieces, roll in flour to which salt has been added. Brown in butter. Add warm milk and bake slowly about 3 hours in oven at 350 degrees. Baste while roasting. If electric or dutch oven is used, no basting is necessary. Chestnut dressing: blanch and peel ½ pound large chestnuts. Cut in quarters. Dry 1 loaf of bread until it crumbles nicely. Crumle fine. Mix with melted butter, salt, pepper and chestnuts."

I once knew a dame named Blanch, but she never peeled any chestnuts to stick in a pheasant.

How to baffle the constituents:

At a public hearing on the first deficiency appropriations bill, attended by numbers of the taxpaying citizenry, Mr. P. L. Smith, President of the National Association of Electric Companies, was on the stand. The testimony, supposedly, concerned the distribution of electric power, but this is the dialogue that ensued between Mr. Smith and Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana:

Smith: "Would you like all the businesses in the state of Louisiana to be run publicly?"

Ellender: "No."

Smith: "I will grant you, sir, that shoes could be produced more cheaply by a city government, a state government, or the federal government, if they do not pay their share of taxes."

Ellender: "In electricity everybody uses it; everybody does not use tubing."

Smith: "Why does not the federal government make shoes?"

Ellender: "A lot of people can do without shoes, and do."

Smith: "They do?"

Ellender: "Yes. We do without them down in our state. I might say that I ran barefooted myself until I was 15 years old."

Smith: "Of course, you live in Louisiana, and that is different."

Ellender: "That is right."

Smith: "I was born in Illinois."

Back To Physics, Mr. Freistadt

By Bill Buchan

Hans Freistadt, according to a news story in the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday morning is organizing a "Karl Marx Study Society" on campus and has called the first meeting for Monday night.

(Hans, in case the absence of letters to the DTH from him has caused him to slip from your memory is our newest communist friend who came here last fall from the University of Chicago.)

Now lookahere, Hans, there is just so much of your communist business that we nice conservative reactionaries can take. We haven't objected to the local party or to have the state chairman in our midst—well, we haven't objected too much, anyhow. We've been ridiculed and laughed at by the hometown folks and considered seriously by our families as budding young communists. We've even been mentioned several times as the potential subject of a Congressional investigation.

All that, the student body has taken pretty well and been pretty patient with you and your cohorts. Now, you're beginning to run the thing in the ground.

You've stated that the purpose of your new "Society" is to discuss the political, economic, and social aspects of Karl Marx's works, in relation to communism. Now, that's fine. You've also invited all persons interested in Karl, either critics or followers to attend and join the Society. That's real nice, too, Hans.

But why don't you do all this in the regular Communist party meetings? Why bring them into Graham Memorial? If you and the other comrades want to get into some hot arguments with any local fascists, invite them to a couple of the meetings. The lounges in Graham Memorial have other uses that are more important at the moment than you and Karl Marx.

In addition, there's a beautiful story going around that Dean of Students Fred Weaver refused to give official sanction to your new "Society" because you didn't have a faculty advisor. If that is so, you're out on a limb anyway. (Lives there a faculty member with heart so brave who would sponser Hans and his orphans?)

Now Hans, be a nice little boy and go back to studying your Physics. If you want to praise or libera'ize discuss Mr. Marx, do it in the confines of your room, decorated so prettily with the huge posters. Or do it in some of the homes of some of your fellow members. But don't barge in on our silly little campus political meetings, our IRC, our CPU or even our new Thomas Wolfe meetings. They're all just plain little organizations which we, as loyal Americans, are interested in and we like to feel that they are important.

If you bring such a thing as Karl and his theories and the ideas for world conquest that his followers have into our midst, we're liable to develop a terrific case of inferiority.

I don't know how you were received in Chicago, or what motivated your arrival here, but whatever you do or however long you stay, please remember that we're a liberal school and up to a couple days ago, we have a great liberal president. But there is a limit to liberalism. Some of us actually worry, Hans, that maybe we, the horrible reactionaries, are getting too far left ourselves.

So you see your ideas and your plans for us are out of place. Junius should have told you that when you first arrived, but evidently he overlooked it. Junius has made several appearances on campus to discuss communism and Mr. Marx and his reception was anything but cordial. Don't get us wrong, you're perfectly welcome, so long as Dean Weaver has given you permission, to hold your meeting and form your Society, but just for kicks and to prevent anymore adverse publicity, it'd be nice if you'd go back to Physics and the confines of your room and forget the whole thing.

Book Reviews

New Book On John Marshall

Among the early Americans who set the pattern of this country must be counted John Marshall, chief justice for 35 years in the formative years of the republic.

In "Chief Justice, John Marshall, and the Growth of the Republic" (Norton, $5) David Loth draws a complete picture of the famous jurist.

Marshall's adult life spanned the history of the republic from the Revolution to Jackson. He was a contemporary of Madison and Monroe. He sat at the feet of Washington and Hamilton, while Jefferson was the mentor of Madison and Monroe.

Marshall was the last of the Federalists as far as holding public office was concerned. He connected the Federalists and the latter day Whigs.

As chief justice appointed by Adams, the last of the Federalist presidents, Marshall more than any other man is responsible for legal foundations of the U. S. government. It was he who made fast the precedent that the supreme court is the sole interpreter of the constitutionality of laws, a power nowhere mentioned in the constitution. It was he who nailed down the theory that the judiciary is co-equal with the executive and legislative branches.

Loth, biographer of Hamilton and Wilson, traces Marshall's life from the backwoods of Virginia, where the Marshalls were not landed gentry as were the Washingtons and the Jeffersons.

All the way through the 382 pages of the biography Loth writes of Marshall's achievements largely in terms of the man himself, a colorful and interesting personality.

Will the "executive class" which Joseph Stalin has created to run the Soviet Union continue indefinitely to take orders from a dictator?

That is the question put by Paul McGuire, Australian political economist and historian, in "There's Freedom for the Brave" (Morrow, $4).

"Prophecies are rash and I am not a determinist," McGuire writes. Russian history and perhaps tempermament and culture lack much of what went to make the liberal triumphs of the middle classes of the West. The new regime, like the Czardom, could survive its centuries. One fact is plain, however: Russia today has a governing class increasingly practiced in the arts of political administration and of economic organization and development . . . . The more urgent question is whether the governing class will continue to accept a dictatorial authority or strive for institutions that really represent its interests."

But western democracies have no reason for confidence. The totalitarian state grew out of the collapse of moral laws in the West, McGuire believes. The people turned to the state for the security they once found in the church and other factors of their "moral community."

Moral decay in the West is a greater threat than another war, McGuire says. "Murder seems a trifle redundant if the potential victim may presently blow out his brains. Every convinced Marxist is waiting for the shot."

Lover Returns As Character

By Aline Mosby
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, March 24—(UP)—Ramon Novarro, who quit Hollywood 14 years ago because he was tired of playing passionate lovers, is back as a goateed character actor. He says that's what he wanted to be all the time.

Novarro, at 50, looks younger than many modern screen romeos, and has more hair. But he wouldn't bend over panting ladies with love in his burning brown eyes again for anything, he says.

"Ah! Playing lovers was worse than a prison," says the actor, still with burning brown eyes but with gray hairs salting his new daintily-clipped goattee.

"All they wanted was an Appollo. You turned your profile so, and your nose didn't move or it made a shadow.

"Now I can really act. I can wiggle my face and move my hands. No make-up, nobody cares whether every eyelash is separated," he adds in his soft-Spanish accent that used to flutter female hearts.

Director John Huston dug Ramon out of retirement to play a leader of a Cuban revolution in "Rough Sketch." The director had to send his offer via bicycle messenger from a gas station near Ramon's 40-acre ranch. He's been growing avocadoes and reading philosophy books there without benefit of electricty or telephone.

The role was only a bit for the heart-throb of epics like "Ben Hur," "Prisoner of Zeda" and "Mata Hari." He grabbed it, he says, because "at last I can express myself."

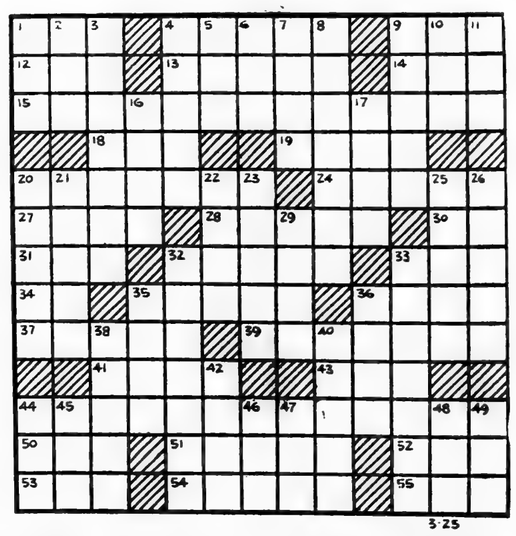
Then RKO lured him over to play a police inspector in "The Big Steal."

"Fortunately I didn't return to movies because I needed money," he adds. "I saved my money and still own much land."

Legend has it Novarro left the cameras in 1935 to practice Yogi exercises in his 17-room mansion that had living room curtains of steel, a full-sized theater and a swimming pool as his bathtub. Not true, says he. Neither is the tale he quit because his accent loused him up for talkies.

"I was tired of those romantic roles," he says. "The same lines, the same plot, only the leading ladies changed.

"MGM put me in 'Huddle' in 1936 with Madge Evans. I played a football hero at 16. Imagine! I was 36. They wouldn't let me grow up. I was tired of the world and tired of myself."



After that he made a French movie in Rome in 1940 and a Mexican picture in 1942.

Novarro's silent love scenes would raise eyebrows today, yet he's horrified at modern screen lovers. "Much too familiar with ladies," he says.

"Now they kick a woman, pull her hair. They are less of the gentleman. Our love-making was sexier, but it was subtle, a sentimental, courtly variety. There is more vulgarity in love scenes now."

Valentino, he says, was so subtle that after each torrid scene his leading lady, Alice Terry, would thank him graciously.

"But after she saw the rushes, she wouldn't speak to him for a week," Novarro says.

Six Events Set Today In NCAA Swimming Tournament

Morning, Afternoon Trials Slated With Evening Finals

With the 1500-meter freestyle out of the way, the battle for the team title in the National Athletic association championships begins in earnest today in Bowman Gray pool with preliminaries and finals scheduled to be run off in six events.

A full day of swimming is in prospect with trials in the 50-yard freestyle and one meter (low) diving beginning at 9:30 in the morning. Preliminaries will be resumed this afternoon at 2:30 and the finals are slated for 8:30 tonight.

A three-way battle for top team honors appears to be in prospect among Michigan, Ohio State, and Iowa; last year's top trio. The Wolverines edged out the Buckeyes by only three points at Ann Arbor last year with Iowa a pretty distant third. The Cornhuskers, however, paced by Olympic champion Wally Ris, sport strong entries in most of the events and should be stronger.

Ris, who is the defending champion in the 100-yard freestyle, will have to wait until tomorrow for his specialty, but will be favored to take a second in the 220. Ris finished in the number two spot last year and is expected to follow Bill Smith home once again.

Smith Defending Champ

Smith is the defending champion in both the 220 and 440 and also holds the Olympic titles in these events. The big Buckeye from Hawaii who has done the distance in 2:08.2 this season is a strong favorite to win over a field centaining, in addition to Ris, such notables as Paul Girdes of Yale, who won the Eastern Intercollegiate 220 title at Princeton, N. J. last week in a record tying 2:11.2; Matt Mann of Michigan, and George Hoogerhyde of Michigan State.

But Ris and Smith won't be the only Olympic champions competing today. Both Joe Verdeur, who'll perform in the 220-yard breaststroke, and diver Bruce Harlan brought gold medals home from London this summer.

The breaststroke event will mark the opening of a personal dual between Verdeur and Keith Carter, captain of the Purdue squad, which will continue tomorrow in the 150-yard individual medley.

Times Are Close

Both swimmers have turned in times slightly over 2:16 for the breaststroke and although Verdeur, who holds every record in this event, will be favored, it will only be by a slight margin. One item for Verdeur is that he turned in about his best time of the season, 2:16.1, right here in Bowman Gray when Carolina defeated LaSalle.

Also, Carter will be swimming in his second event of the day. The versatile Boilermaker is entered in the 50-yard freestyle, which opens the program tonight. Bob Nugent of Rutgers will be a slight favorite in the 50 even though there are men entered who have turned in better times than he.

Nugent, a sophomore from Brooklyn, N. Y., set a new record of 0:23.1 in the Easterns last weekend, and is given a slight edge over Carter and Bob Weinberg of Michigan. Carter has done 0:22.9 this season while Weinberg has a 0:22:8 to his credit, but neither has the consistency of Nugent.

Harlan Favored to Double

Harlan will be favored to win both diving titles easily. He copped low board crowns last year in both the NCAA's and the Olympics and came in second in the three-meter events to Miller Anderson, also of Ohio State. Anderson is no longer eligible,

(See SWIM, page 4)

Today's Schedule:

Here is the schedule of events for the second day's activity in the NCAA swimming meet currently being staged at Bowman Gray Memorial pool:

9:30 a.m.—One meter (low) diving and 50-yard freestyle preliminaries.

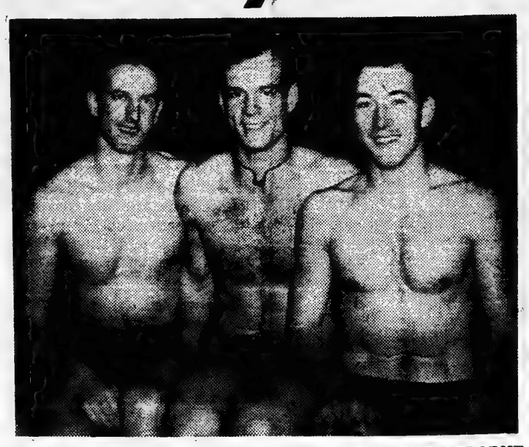
2:30 p.m.—50-yard freestyle semi-finals; time trials for 150-yard back stroke, 220-yard freestyle, 200-yard breaststroke, and 400-yard freestyle relay; exhibition low board diving.

8:30 p.m.—Finals in 50-yard freestyle, 150-yard backstroke, 220-yard freestyle, 200-yard breaststroke, one-meter diving, and 400-yard freestyle relay.

Baseballers Drill For Next Week's Diamond Schedule

After Wednesday's lull, activity on Emerson field returned to normal yesterday as Carolina's baseballers took advantage of the perfect baseball weather to get in some good practice licks in preparation for the five home games scheduled next week for the local nine.

The Tar Heels will open their home season with a three up and one down record after a successful road trip through Florida over the spring holidays. Slated for Monday afternoon is a clash with Washington and Lee which will also inaugurate the Southern conference competition for the Carolina diamond squad. Following W&L, the Tar Heels will play host to Cornell, Michigan State and VPI in continuous action that will last until Friday. These five contests promise to be a crucial test of the calibre of the 1949 edition of Carolina baseball as the competition will be rugged.



Coaches eHarn and Rabb are extremely hopeful of a good showing during this extended home stand as the Tar Heel mentors are prepared to throw a well-rested pitching staff against the invading nines together with a lineup of power as the hitters are starting to come into their own.

While the varsity was raising dust on the Emerson turf, the Tar Heel freshman baseball squad had their first formal workout on Navy field. Frosh coaches Henry House and Jim Hamilton were greeted with a welcome turnout of between 50 and 60 hopefuls.

Daily practices will continue for the yearlings so the squad can be reduced to a workable number before the Tar Babies launch their 16 game schedule on April 12 against Duke's frosh.

Seixas Featured

Sport magazine, in its April issue that is scheduled to hit the newsstands today, has devoted a full length feature story with pictures to Vic Seixas, Carolina's gift to big-time tennis and one of the athletic greats of the university. Previously Sport has had stories on other renowned Tar Heel athletes such as Charlie Justice, John Dillon and Bones McKinney.

Ward Leads Tar Heel Quintet In Greensboro Golf Tourney

GREENSBORO, March 24—A quartet of University of North Carolina stars will tee off here tomorrow with the best of the nation's top shotmakers in the opening round of the $10,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

The Tar Heel aggregation will be headed by Harvie Ward, the Tarboro ace who will be one of the leading choices to cop the amateur side of the Gate City trophy chest. His teammates, Decatuer Cunningham, Jack Brantley, and Roy McKenzie are expected to be among the other simon pure starters in the large pro-am field.

Ward has been playing the best golf of his career this season, having won the Tournament of Golf Club Champions at St. Augustine last month. He might be ready for a top effort in the 72-hole session ending Sunday.

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, of Memphis, the sharpshooting dentist who has been extracting high money from recent tuornaments, heads the list of professional stars entered for this 12th annual PGA meet. Middlecoff won the Jacksonville open in Florida last week.

Other top entrans were Bobby Locke, South African titlist entered here despite the PGA's decision to bar him from the PGA tournament in Richmond later; Lloyd Mangrum, last year's Greensboro winner; Sammy Snead, a two-time titlist; Vic Gheezi and scores of other money players from the winter circuit.

Charlie Farlow, home pro for the par-71 Starmount Forest Country club said the 6,630-yard course would be in excellent condition despite recent rains.

BADMINTON DEADLINE

All members of the Badminton club should stop by the Intramural office in Woollen gym sometime today to make their entry for the tournament according to an announcement made today by Coach Walter Raab.

Deadline for registration for the tournament is 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The tournament will begin next Friday.

Walcott, Ezzard To Fight in June

CHICAGO, March 24—(UP)—Jersey Joe Walcott and Ezzard Charles will meet in an outdoor bout here in June for the NBA version of the heavyweight boxing title, promoter Joe Louis announced today.

Louis, boxing director of the International Boxing club, refused to name the site of the bout. Chicago's outdoor arenas are Soldier field, Wrigley field, and Comiskey park. The retired heavyweight champion said his group would not reveal the site or date until a license is obtained from the Illinois Athletic commission.

Wildcat Woes

SEATTLE, March 24—(UP)—A "dead" University of Washington basketball court gave the Kentucky Wildcats a bit of trouble this afternoon as they put in their first workout for Saturday night's championship NCAA finals.

"We have trouble dribbling," Coach Adolph Rupp stated after watching his star-studded cage aggregation run through a 90-minute workout. "It's a dead court with this inlaid plywood floor."

Gainesville Relays To Attract South's Leading Trackmen

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 24—The University of Florida relay games scheduled here Saturday are expected to attract some of the South's top tracksters in addition to many outstanding cinder-beaters from north of the Mason-Dixon line.

Florida, Georgia Tech, Maryland and North Carolina are among the teams expected to win individual championships in Saturday's running. As in most relay meets, no team score will be kept.

Competition in certain events stacks up as the stiffest in many years. Among these are the high jump, the high hurdles, the dashes and the mile relay.

Carolina's Jack Moody will return to defend his high jump title, but will receive stiff competition from team mate Bill Albans, a 6' 5" jumper, and Sam Commander of the host team.

Buddy Fowlkes of Georgia Tech, Maryland's Karl Rubach and North Carolina's Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow will probably make the high hurdles one of the closest and most interesting of the events. Fowlkes, Georgia's Bradberry, Carolina's Albans and Maryland's Alexion will be the favorites in the 100-yard dash.

In the relay events Maryland's crack indoor team of McGowan, Salvanelli, Ostrye and Matthews will be favored in the mile. Carolina will enter a strong distance medley quartet of Magill, Hooper, McLain and MacKenzie. Tennessee and Georgia Tech will both have strong distance medley teams.

Tech's Harvin, Georgia's Erlich and Carolina's Seligman will be strong in the discus and the shot.

Bill Heusner Cracks Pool Record, Retains NCAA 1,500-Meter Crown

Sala, Norris, Escolet, Watts Place in Meet; Jim Thomas Sixth

Bill Heusner of Northwestern became the first champion to be crowned at the 26th annual National Collegiate Athletic association meet when he successfully defended his 1500-meter freestyle title last night in Bowman Gray pool.

Heusner was forced to the limit in his final section race against the clock and turned in the best time of his career, 19:04.8 to defeat Ralph Sala's bid for victory.

Sala did the 65 laps and 15 yadrs in 19:16.1, 12.1 seconds below Heusner's winning time in 1948, but the time was only good for second place.

Four sections were run in all and the final times showed all five place-winners were in the final two heats. Forbes Norris of Harvard, EIC champion was third in 19:35.6 with Emile Escolet of Yale fourth with a time of 19:46.6. Just behind Escolet was Roger Watts of Iowa State in 19:46.8.

Record Doesn't Count

Both Heusner's and Sala's times were below the American record of 19:18.2, but that mark was set on a long course and the AAU recognizes no distance records set on a 25-yard short course.

Heusner's time was a new pool record, however. The slim Wildcat easily lowered the time of 20:18.2 set by Carolina's Jim Thomas this year. Thomas placed sixth in the final tabulations last night, just out of the money, with a time of 19:57.4.

Swimming against no competation except the clock after the first two laps he finished strong to retain his title. Watts and Thomas both managed to stick

Jamerson Honored

Dick Jamerson, former head coach of the North Carolina swimming team, now on leave, was elected second vice-president of the College Swimming Coaches Association of America in an election held by that body yesterday afternoon in Woollen gym.

Jack Torney of the University of Washington was voted president of the association, while Matt Mann, II. University of Michigan, won out in the balloting for first vice-president. Tommy Tompkins was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the Coaches association.

Jamerson coached the Tar Heel mermen for several years prior to his request for leave last spring. He is now working on an advanced degree in physical education at Columbia university in New York and is expected to return here when his work there is completed.

Tar Heel Netmen Continue To Prep For Opening Meet

Tennis Coach John Kenfield sent his varsity netmen through a strenuous practice session yesterday afternoon in preparation for Saturday's opening meet with Michigan State's Spartins on the local courts.

Although ace Vic Seixas, who has been out of practice for over two weeks, was on hand for practice yesterday, Coach Kenfield still termed the season's prospects as "very doubtful." Seixas, colorful Southern conference singles champion and captain of the Carolina team, has been disabled with a badly sprained ankle.

The probable starting six for Saturday's meet with the Spartins—minus top-ranking Seixas, who probably won't play—is as follows: Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, Duke Wilder, Lasley Dameron, and Jim Winstead. All except Dameron and Winstead are lettermen from last year's strong squad.

In the Seixas-Wilder and Taylor-Rice combinations the Tar Heel netters have two potent doubles entries.

Saturday's meet will open a home stand of 14 straight engagements.

Senator Taft Proposes Cut In Recovery Funds

Two Others Hit Ohioan's Action

WASHINGTON, March 24—(UP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft, (R.-O.) today proposed a $1,150,000,000 cut in funds for the European Recovery program, and drew the berg, (R.-Mich.) and Tom Confire of Sens. Arthur H. Vandennally, (D.-Tex.).

The clash came shortly after the Senate began speed-up consideration of a $5,580,000,000 bill to continue the aid program until June 30, 1950. Current spending authority expires Aphil 3.

Democratic Leader Scott Lucas, Ill., said the Senate will be held in overtime session tomorrow night if necessary to get a final vote before recessing for the weekend. Approval of the bill is expected.

Taft, Senate Republican policy chairman, made the economy proposal after three other GOP senators had assailed British trade with Russia.

Taft pointed out that $1,150,000,000 of the funds are earmarked for spending between April 3, and the start of the 1950 fiscal year on July 1. He suggested that be eliminated on the ground that enough foreign aid goods already have been brought with previous funds, and are now awaiting shipment, to tide western Europe over until July.

Connally, chairman of the Foreign Relations committee, protested that Taft's proposal would cause a dangerous break in the "pipeline" of recovery shipments.

Vandenberg said he was forced to "disagree with Taft, my able friend from Ohio."

If spending were suspended for the next three months, he said, "at the end of that time the pipeline to Europe would be empty and it could not be renewed for another three months."

In prepared speeches to the Senate, both Vandenberg and Connally said the first year of the program has been a great sussess, but the "critical period" lies just ahead.

administration is a "must" if student government is to function as it should.

3. The battle to keep tuition low should not die down, even if the legislature does not prevent the pending tuition raise.

Other points brought out by the speakers were, in condensed form:

GORDON: Called for complete indoctrination of all officers in student government. Pointed out need for a recreation hall in the dormitory area, worthiness of proposed Community Chest for campus. Asked for a new set-up to grade instructors. Said the scuttlebutt was a dead issue, but that UVA clubhouse might be available for use as new succtlebutt-dorm recreation center sometime in future. Said the only way to get the administration to do anything was through cooperation, good will, and student sentiment.

MACKIE: Raised the question of whether coed government is part of student government or is an offshoot of the dean of women's office. Called the judicial branch of student government "only as good as the people in it." Said the present appeal system is better than no appeal at all. Said present appeal can be made to work and has worked better this year. He also asked for a constitutional amendment on summer student government which would clarify the governmental set-up during the two summer sessions.

LONG: Urged that the NSA purchase card system be set up in Chapel Hill to aid students who are having a hard time living on the meager incomes of the present. Called student government "ethereal," and said it has got to get down to rock bottom to make the students interested in it. "The best way to kill something is to ignore it," Long said, "and student government is being ignored by 50 per cent of the students every election day." Said there was campus parking space available which was not being used. Called for a constitutional amendment to set up a smooth-working, good appeal system.

Thomas Fourth in Section

Thomas gained second place after trailing Heusner and Watts for 13 laps, began to fade at about the 40-lap mark and soon relinquished his place to Watts. Escolet then made his bid and at the finish was in third position, inches behind aWtts. Thomas was fourth in his heat.

Rampaging Mississippi Hits Louisiana Town; 2,000 Flee

PORT ALLEN, La., March 24—(UP)—Another section of the Mississippi river's west levee started crumbling tonight near a 700-foot crevasse that had already flooded thousands of acres of sugar cane land and forced 2,000 persons into flight.

The state police radio reported that the surging river appeared ready to break through at a new point "any minute." Boats were ordered to hurry to the scene and pick up men working on the levee.

The new break threatened about 100 feet below the first crevasse. If the levee collapses at that point, it probably will merge with the first break and let the swollen Mississippi pour out through a hole more than 1,000 feet long.

Chocolate-brown water, rapidly spreading over the lowlands, moved steadily south toward Port Allen, a town of 2,500 population. Four hundred men working with bulldozers and sandbags had thrown up a mile-and-a-half emergency levee two miles north of Port Allen and extending west. Four emergency levees—three north of Port Allen, the other West—already have been washed out.

The new emergency levee was built on the bed for a new road. It was seven or eight feet high, sandbagged along the top, and was the last hope of Port Allen to escape being flooded.

National guardsmen stood by to evacuate Port Allen's 2,500 population, swollen by refugees. The navy had 30 disaster boats from New Orleans here to help out.

But the citizens refused to give up as the waters surged down on break.

so Harlan should have a pretty clear field.

Jack Calhoun, who was third in the high board competition last year to continue the OSU sweep and fourth in the one-meter diving, is a good bet to place high among the leaders. Duke's John Connor won the EIL one-meter title and will probably place tonight along with Dave Brockway of Iowa, and Chuck Chelick of Northwestern.

Carolina will make it's big bid in the second event of the evening, the 150-yard backstroke, where the Tar Heels have two Southern conference champions entered. Jim Thomas, who holds the Conference record, won the title in 1948 while Norm Sper is the present champ.

Stack Set Standard

Bob DeGroot, the Big Ten champ from Ohio State, is the favorite, however, to pick up the crown vacated by Allan Stack of Yale. Stack set a new record of 1:31.8 in winning and no one is expected to come close to that mark. Al Ratkiewich, EIL champ, is Yale's best bet to keep the title at New Haven.

Backstrokers seem to run in pairs, for in addition to Carolina's duo, Ohio State has another man fighting to place in Phil Knight while the Iowa banner will be carried by Duane Draves and Dick Maine.

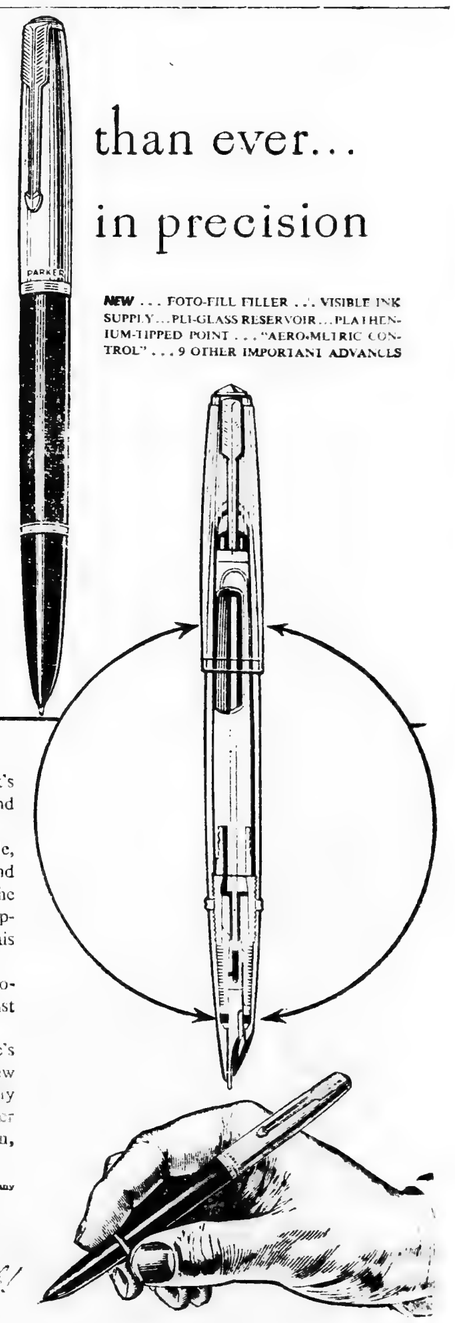
YOUR TELEPHONE must take hard knocks as they come—and go on working.

To make sure it can, we test samples of each day's production and put telephones through the equivalent of years of service in a few hours or days. For example: we drop handsets into their cradles 22,000 times—equal to 4 years' normal use. And not just once, but from 16 different positions, we drop sample telephones from desk-top height onto a hardwood surface. We even check their feet to be certain they won't scratch your table.



Here at Western Electric, we've been making Bell telephones since 1882. But telephones themselves are only about 6% of the equipment used in your service. The other 94% includes wire, cable, switchboards, trucks, poles, tools, office equipment. With the exception of buildings, we make or supply almost everything Bell telephone people use—and test it with utmost care.

Guarding the quality of things used in your Bell telephone service is one way that Western Electric helps to make it the world's best.

Rankin Introduces Milder Pension Bill

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(UP)—Rep. John E. Rankin (D-Miss.) today introduced a sharply scaled-down veterans pension bill, and a top Democratic leader immediately predicted it would "whiz through" the House.

Rankin, whose original multi-billion dollar pension proposal was buried by the House yesterday, said the new measure includes most of the changes house members had indicated they wanted.

"It probably will be put before the house in a short time," he said.

It would give $72 a month federal pensions to world war I veterans at age 65 if they were single and earned less than $2,000 a year, or if they had dependents and received less than $3,000. The veterans also would have to show an honorable discharge.

The original Rankin plan would have given automatic pensions of $90 a month to all veterans of both world wars I and II when they reached 65 whether they needed them or not.

Rankin's move surprised congressmen. He said yesterday the death of his original bill had killed all pension legislation for this session.

But today he said the American Legion got him to change his mind.

"I am introducing this bill at the request of one of the great veterans organizations, and also at the suggestion of many members of the House Veterans committee," he said.

He added that the changes from the original version would "greatly reduce" the cost, but he did not give any estimate.

Rep. John A. Carroll (D-Colo.) who was largely responsible for shunting the first bill back to the Veterans committee, said he would study the new plan. At first glance, he said, it appeared its benefits already are available to veterans.

But a top house leader, who didn't want his name used, predicted it would "whiz through."

Leahy Resigns Post; No Successor Named

WASHINGTON, March 25—(UP)—Fleet Adm. William D. Leahy, who played a unique role in World War II as the President's personal chief of staff, has resigned and no successor will be named "at present," the White House announced today.

Leahy's resignation was effective last month but was not made public until today when President Truman presented a service decoration to the 73-year-old, five-star admiral at a surprise ceremony.

He will remain technically on active duty with the Navy, a courtesy also granted to five-star Gen. of the Army George C. Marshall when he retired as Secretary of State recently.

Mr. Truman awarded him a gold star in lieu of a third distinguished service medal, and paid high tribute to the tall, erect, hard-bitten Naval o..cer for his 56 years of unbroken service as a seaman, statesman, diplomat and architect of global strategy.

Leahy was the only man ever to hold the post of "Chief of Staff to the Commander-in-Chief" which was created especially for him by the late President Roosevelt on Feb. 1, 1945.

The admiral continued to serve in that capacity under President Truman, but recently there have been persistent reports he would resign and would not be replaced.

Barker Elected New President Of Sound, Fury

Mark Barker was elected president of Sound and Fury Wednesday night to complete the unexpired term of Jerry Weiss, who stepped down because of his entrance into Graduate school at the beginning of the present quarter.

He has been a continuous and active member of Sound and Fury since his return to school in the fall of 1946, and has served as organization treasurer since last May. Barker's present term will expire the second week in May, when elections will be held.

Weiss, a native of Chase City, has long been active in campus entertainment circles, having served as president of Sound and Fury since the organizational election last May. He was recently awarded the distinction of being the most outstanding member of the Pi Lambda Phi fraternity for the past year.

Reds Blamed For Racial Rows

By Sam Whitehall

"It is largely the Communist party which is arousing race antagonisms between Negroes and whites in this country," said Dr. Edwin Stringham, noted composer, editor, and professor of music, who is making Chapel Hill his temporary home.

The movement is headed by a small group of which it is alleged that the Negro singer, Paul Robeson, is a prominent member, Stringham said. According to Dr. Stringham this group is interested in using the Negro as a front for their attempt to divide the North and South on the race issue. By spliting the country the Communists hope to step in and gain power as a result of the division, Stringham said.

Dr. Stringham said that he had lived for many years in New York where the race problem is very serious, but like many other people of the North, he had always thought that the South was persecuting the Negro. "I have found out since I have been down here that the situation is very different from what I had expected," he added.

In comparison with Negroes in other sections those in North Carolina are well treated, he said. They receive a good education; have good schools; teachers are paid salaries comparable to the white teachers', and they are being given the chance that Booker T. Washington and George Washington Carver wanted them to have, Dr. Stringham said.

To counterbalance this Communist propaganda, American universities should offer definitive courses in comparative ideologies so that students could learn the strong and weak points of democratic, Fascist, socialist, Communist, and other systems of governments in an attempt to understand exactly what the major ideologies are, Dr. Stringham said.

"If the American universities would do that the Communist party could not get the grip on the United States that it is trying to get now," Dr. Stringham said.

Dr. Stringham has traveled extensively in the United States and Europe. During the war he helped to establish the Army University at Biarritz, France, where he served a year as head of the music department. He later served as guest professor at the University of California and the University of Texas.

Dance Slated For April 1 In 'Tin Can'

Mountain Music, Games Programed

The "Tin Can," formerly the chief location of big Carolina dances, will again open its doors to campus festivities at 8:30 Friday, April 1, with a square dance sponsored by the Montreat Social commission.

Bud Reagan, junior from Asheville, will call the dance and employees of Woollen gym are to make up the band.

Bob Williams, chairman of the social committee, said that along with the square dancing the party would include a three-legged race and an April Fool race. Prizes will be awarded contest winners.

The party, an attempt to answer the demand for a place where students may become acquainted, is sponsored by a committee formed out of the Social Aspects of Campus Life commission held at the Y retreat last February.

"We would rather students came without dates since it is a 'get acquainted' party," Bob Williams said. Games as well as name tags will be used to further this idea.

Soft drinks will be sold during the dance.

Will Appoint Group to Act On New Head

Interim Set-Up Named Big Item

The fate of the man to be Dr. Frank Porter Graham's successor as president of the consolidated University hangs in balance today at 11 o'clock in Governor Scott's office in Raleigh.

At this time Governor Scott will meet with the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees to take formal action on Dr. Graham's resignation, and to set up a committee to provide for his successor.

Controller W. D. Carmichael said the most important item under consideraiton will be the machinery adopted for interim arrangements until a new president can be selected.

After Govrenor Scott's surprise announcement last Tuesday night of Dr. Graham's appointment as junior Senator, members of the Board met informally at Graham's office to discuss the situation. Dr. Graham suggested then that the procedure set up while he was in Indonesia be followed until a new president was appointed.

This would mean that a board composed of Chancellor House, Jackson and Harrelson, with Controller Carmichael at its head, would consttiute the governing committee of the consolidated University.

President Graham also suggested that a committee be selected to provide for the selection of the new president. Indications are that both of his suggestions will be adopted.

Dr. Grahm yesterday met with Harold Martin of the 'Saturday Evening Post" who is going to do a profile on the new senator. He will spend the next few days in Chapel Hill working on the article.

President Graham has not decided definitely when he will leave for Washington. He is to be sworn in as junior Senator at noon Tuesday on the floor of the Senate.

When asked about the possibility of getting seats in the gallery of the Senate for Tuesday's session. Dr. Graham replied that he "wasn't a Senator yet." "See Senator Hoey," the president said.

There are 100 seats available in the gallery, Senator Hoey said yesterday.

A Discussion of the Campus Party Platform, Which Is Split Into Three Sections, Concerning Governmental Problems, None-Governmental Problems and Publications

SOMETIME NEXT WEEK, WE'LL TAKE A LOOK at the platforms the University and Student parties are presenting to the campus, but today, since we've got the CP planks right at hand, we'll run over them. The Campus party splits its platform into three sections. The first pertains to non-governmental problems, the second to publications problems, and the last to problems of student government.

In the first category, the CP says it (1) condemns the raise in tuition and will fight until tuition is returned to its former low level. (2) The platform says every student who owns a car should have the right to park it on campus. "There is space enough," the CP says, "if it is utilized properly."

On the subject of publications, the CP says the Daily Tar Heel "should be primarily and predominately a campus newspaper and only secondarily a national newspaper." Regarding Tarnation, the next plank says, "A referendum should be held on whether purely a humor magazine or a variety magazine should be published." And the last plank in the section says the CP favors the continuation of the Carolina Quarterly and a conservative underwriting until it is established financially.

Under the sub-head of governmental problems, the CP platform first says the campus should be polled to find out what type of programs it wants under the Student Entertainment committee. On the question of appellate power, the Campus party says it has fought and will continue to fight any and all attempts to take away from the student body the power to appeal to the Student council if necessary. The CP also pledges to make sure that a student acquitted by a council shall not have the fact that

Communists Picket Churchill Dinner

Tribute to a Teacher

The announcement last Tuesday night of Dr. Frank Graham's appointment to the senate almost completely overshadowed another event which was taking place at the same time, and which was the real reason for the banquet at which the announcement was made. This was the presentation of the first Oliver Max Gardner award to Miss Louise Brevard Alexander, teacher of government and political science at the Woman's college of the University. In its way the announcement of the award was as great a surprise as the announcement of Dr. Graham's appointment.

The Gardner award was established to be given to the member of the faculty of the three branches of the University who had made "the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race during the academic year." Under this requirement it seemed almost certain that the award would go to a faculty member engaged in research, in authorship or in some sphere of action extending beyond the University. Instead it went to a teacher, and because it did, the award served to remind that the primary purpose of an educational institution is, after all, education, and that the true art of teaching is one of the greatest services that can be rendered to mankind.

Research is an important activity of a University, but the emphasis upon research in all fields of knowledge has been carried to the extent that it acts as a de-emphasis upon teaching. In sharpening their skill in searching for new knowledge too many of our teachers are allowing their ability to teach to go undeveloped. It must be remembered that new knowledge is of very little value if it is not transmitted to others so that they may put it to use.

Chancellor W. C. Jackson of Woman's college in speaking of Miss Alexander described her as "one who is simply a great teacher, one who from hour to hour, day by day, month by month, lives with students, kindling a fire in their hearts and minds . . . helping them to be good, to be wise, to be useful, to love their neighbors and to walk humbly but dutifully and graciously along the highway of life." Few greater contributions can be made than this, the teaching of men how to live with themselves and with others. The decision to give the Oliver Max Gardner award to a teacher was a very wise one.

Lull Before the Storm?

If the current calm on the political front is the well-known lull before the storm, we will not be worried about the outcome of the spring elections which are scheduled for Tuesday, April 5.

However, this time last year, the campus was ablaze with campaign literature and the politicos were hot-under-the-collar about their duties of politicing.

Wednesday night, the Town Men's association held an open meeting in Gerrard for all town men in order that they might meet the candidates for the top offices in student government. Everybody showed up but the town men.

The three presidential candidates spoke and outlined their respective programs but their meager audience was composed of strong party men who undoubtedly have had their minds made up for some time on who they're voting for on election day.

The campus election board is sponsoring another such open meeting for all students in Memorial hall a few days before the election. All candidates for every office on campus will be introduced and the leading ones in student government and publications will make short talks.

It is strictly up to the individual student that he gets out and attends this meeting in order that he can decide for himself who can do most for our student government during the coming year.

One of the many great achievements which Dr. Graham accomplished at Chapel Hill was the institution of student government. Since its beginning, the government has had its weak points, but it has also done a great deal of good.

If it is to continue, the active participation of more than fifty per cent of the student body will be necessary. If you are in doubt or if you don't know who the candidates are, get out and find out for yourself, then work, support and vote for the ones you think will do the most for you and student government.

White House Repairing Slow

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, March 25—President Truman had barely returned from Independence, following the Nov 2 triumph, when he moved out of the White House. He was told haste in vacating was necessary because the job of repairing the battered mansion should begin immediately.

That was four and a half months ago. Do you know how much repair work has been done since?

Not a single—s o l i t a r y—thing!

The Trumans moved out bag and baggage on Nov 7. The government-owned furniture and priceless relics were removed to the National Gallery of Art. About a week or so after the Trumans took up residence at Blair House, across the way the executive mansion was a hollow shell.

Like most other Washingtonians, I assumed the workmen were laboring away like mad, hammering, sawing, storing up, and generally restoring the falling-apart edifice. I figured that, by this time, they'd be well along with their chores.

So I strolled over to 1600 Pennsylvania with the idea of doing a piece on the job's progress. Having read too many whodunits, I also wanted to ask if any trapdoors, sliding panels, or secret passages had been uncovered.

I thought, in my adolescent way, the workmen might have stumbled upon a sliding bookcase, leading to a subterranean passage, which the sinister figures of the Harding administration might have used in their stealthy comings and goings.

I also wanted to see what had been done about the bathtub which Mr. Truman said he was afraid would fall through the floors one morning while he was taking a bath. So I contacted Lorenzo S. Winslow, architect of the White House, and asked if he'd be kind enough to take me on a guided tour of the repair work.

"What repair work?" he demanded. "Not a lick of work has been done yet."

You wanna know why it isn't started? Because Mr. Truman's beloved 81st Congress, successor to the old "do nothing" 80th, has consumed all its energies on oratory.

It has been too busy filibustering to appropriate a nickel of the $5,412,000 estimated for the job.

David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, has troubles too. He has to find a place to mount the bust of Henry Wallace.

The thing has been kicking around in a packing case ever since it was delivered long months ago. The Senate library subcommittee, which has charge of bust-placing tried its best to forget it.

But it can't be forgotten. The law commands that a bust in white marble be made of every ex-vice president and put on display in the Capitol.

The law was passed on Jan. 6, 1898, when a vice-president I never heard of before was in office. He was Garrett A. Hobart, who preceded Theodore Roosevelt, as V. P. to President McKinley. Mr. Hobart became eligible for perpetuation in marble sooner than anticipated. He died the next year.

The Library subcommittee has got to act without much more delay or be declared guilty of flouting the law of the land.

As with other busts with which he has been connected, Wallace picked a soulmate for the chiseling. The bust was perpetrated by Jo Davidson, the bearded sculptor, who has been cited dozens of times by the House Committee on un-American Activities for affiliations with communist fronts.

8 o'clock Class

The Student, Maugham, And Life

By Don Maynard

This is a state university. At this state university, men—and women of the proper quality—may obtain an education. They may study languages, math, m e d i c i n e, law, journalism, commerce . . . the list is long and tedious.

"They" in the above paragraph include all but a medium - sized, medium - looking, medium-sex, medium-colored medium-aged fellow named Joe. Joe is so mediumized that he might well be considered the average college student.

Joe woke up one morning. He tries to, every school-day morning. He showered, started to shave but quit, dressed and gaily tripped down his dormitory steps, enroute to a downtown restaurant and breakfast.

He ate. When the ten-minute bell for his eight o'clock rang, he lit a cigarette, sat back and watched it burn down to its usual half-inch. It was Lent, and he had given up inhaling.

Promptly at 8:10, Joe carromed into class. "My alarm (puff) didn't ring (puff) . . . Ran (puff, puff) all way . . . Sorry I'm (puff) late . . ."

He sat in his customary seat, opened a copy of Life, turned to a shadow picture of a nude, and sat back to enjoy his class. It was a course in the Novel. A novel course, Joe often thought.

The instructor was lecturing on a novel by W. Somerset Maugham. She went into the fine points of the novel, its structure, theme, plot, covered the subject very thoroughly.

"And there's one thing I want you students to remember, if you forget everything else I have gabbed about thus far this quarter . . ." Joe nodded complete agreement . . . ". . . It is important to note that Maugham wrote largely from his own experience, this novel is largely a fragment of the story of his life . . ." Joe nodded once more.

"If there is anything lacking on this campus," he was thinking, "it's a coed with a good profile for a nude portrait." Of course, this was an eight-o'clock class, and he was not expected to think clearly—he was naturally drowsy. The beer can in his jacket pocket illustrated the obvious.

What he had meant to say he explained later, was, "What this campus needs, is a coed with a good profile." But that is neither here nor there.

The real moral to this story is: Joe's attentive demeanor in class. Toward the end of the lecture period, the instructor had only finished speaking of Maugham's life reflected in his novels, Joe suddenly sat upright, flung his Life on the floor, stomped out his cigarette and raised his hand.

"Mr. Maugham, er, Mitherspoon, I have been listening to your discourse with the utmost attention. Throughout the period I have been reflecting and turning what you had said over in my mind. And I have come to the conclusion that this novel we are reading is primarily from Maugham's own experience; this novel is largely a fragment of the story of his life . . ."

As goes the youth of America, and UNC, so goes the world.

Odds and Ends

Barefoot Coed In the Rain

By Wuff Newell

A combination of spring and rain can be responsible for almost anything. For instance, a dripping wet coed was seen ambulating across campus at the height of the precipitation yesterday with her shoes, not on her feet, but in her hands.

Dick Gordon, whose political posters are adorning women's dorms can chalk one up for his campaign. One Spencer coed is going to cast her vote for him just because of his picture. She swears as she came downstairs the other day, the picture winked at her.

Some folks like the same old class routine and some like variety. In the second group is Rita Adams. In the first three days of the spring quarter, she has attended eight different classes and she's only taking 15 hours, too.

Dick Nunis contributed the bright remark of the day in Miss Hunter's far too over crowded radio 70 class. When helpful Miss Hunter asked if there were any questions, Dick asked in all seriousness, "Yes, are we going to get some more desks in here?" The situation was soon remedied with chairs purloined from another room.

Certain female members of the DTH staff have requested that males who wish to know the why of the name Green Thursday ask male members of the staff and females inquire of females. As was stated earlier this week in regard to the name, there are some things a paper just can't print, and there are some things a coed just can't tell a non-coed.

The latest club at Carolina is the Bear Hug club, whose total membership consists of Patsy McNut and Bill Buchan. The customs of the club, according to Buchan, are most entertaining. Patsy hasn't been consulted about her opinion of it. At any rate, if you see two people enjoying a mighty bear hug, don't be alarmed.

Question of the week: How do you avoid falling hair? Answer, contributed by the youngest sage of Hill Billy Hill, is "Get out of the way."

Most enterprising businessman in Chapel Hill this week is Jimmy Campbell, 12-year-old newsboy. Jimmy is such a good salesman, penniless Graham Memorialers dodge down the back steps to avoid his super sales talks. In spite of the lack of co-operation, Jimmy seems to get his papers sold.

Book Reviews

The Best Of Churchill

Nobody who heard Winston Churchill's speech in the House of Commons during the dark days of 1940 can ever forget the passage when he said:

"We shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing-ground, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills."

Few know, however, that Mr. Churchill added, under his breath:

"And beat the blankety-blanks over the head with bottles! That's all we've got."

That story is retold in "Maxims and Reflections, a collection of Churchill quotations compiled by Colin Coote and Denzil Batchelor (Houghton Mifflin, $2.75).

The very best of Churchill is contained in this slim volume. For example, his comment on the German army, in a broadcast on Hitler's invasion of Russia in June, 1941:

"The deadly, drilled, docile, brutish masses of the Hun soldiery plodding on like a swarm of crawling locusts."

This collection highlights Mr. Churchill's lightning wit, devastating invective, and unique mastery of the English language.

Write Away

Out-Of-State Men Only

Editor:

Now that the storm over the tuition raise has quieted down a bit, and we can do a little clear thinking over the problem, I would like to offer a suggestion as a solution. Why not bar all native North Carolinians from attendance and admit only out-of-state students? This would raise the desired funds much more quickly, since they will pay more tuition.

I realize that this would put a drain on the flow ordinarily going into Duke and other private schools, thus putting Carolina in competition with them; but it would only be until the present crisis is over.

'Ditchdigger' Apologizes

Editor:

My most humble apologies to J. Richard Moore. It seems that his irony slipped me undetected (along with a few others). I apologize those, and if J. Richard Moore will come by 214 Everett we will go to "Steve's" and have a cold pitcher of suds on me.

Adelaide Addle's Advice

All For Extra-activity

Dear Miss Addle:

I am enrolled for a course in poetry that completely nauseates me. Not only do I detest the course, but I also am not able to understand the poetry. I would drop the course but I am so weak in the knees from too much extracurricular activity that it would impair my health to stand in the drop and add line for eight continuous hours. What should I do, I'm at my wit's end?

Distraught.

Dear Distraught:

I suggest that you just drop out of school altogether and devote all of your time to your extra-curricular activity. That would solve both of your problems.

Addie Addle.

Dear Miss Addle,

I do not know what has gotten into my girl friend of late, but the effect is terrible. At one time she was a chic young thing, a page from Vogue. She was never very bright, but for looks, oh brother!

Now everything has changed. I never see her without a book, her hair, once so beautiful, now an unkempt mess, her clothes in need of pressing.

On the occasional date I can get, all she talks of is social responsibilities and a thousand other things of which I know nothing and care less.

What can I do about this?

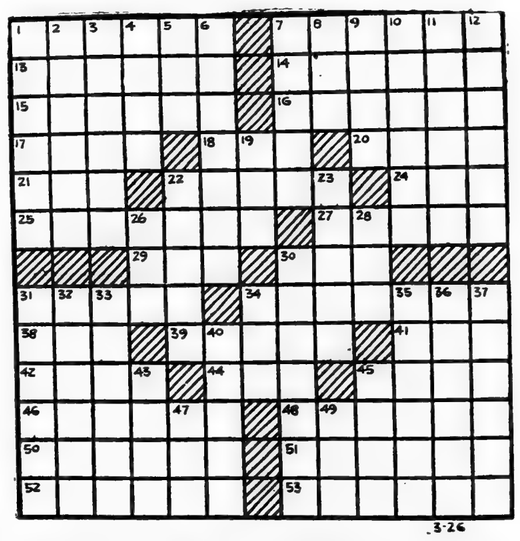
Heartsick

Dear Heartsick,

Your problem is indeed pitiful. When a woman puts intelligence before beauty, dowdiness is the inevitable result. (I know) I would suggest that you play along with her, put on an understanding air (it is not necessary that you really understand) and pretend sympathy. Gently work in the idea that a woman's first and only responsibility is to be beautiful. Then sit back and wait until the end of the quarter. Her professors are probably on your side. She will soon learn what intelligence is worth when compared to beauty.

Addie.

Dear Miss Addle,



Thursday night I asked my steady to take me to the movie, but he refused. When I got angry, he just looked at me and said "Don't you know today's Thursday?" I couldn't understand, but when I asked my roommate to go, she starred at me and said. "Todays Thursday, I can't be seen in your company, people might talk." Please, Miss Addle, whats up?

Confused

Dear Confused,

You, my dear, need a lecture on the ways of the world. You just don't date your steady boy friend on Thursday. Your roommate must be bashful.

Records Broken In Two Events; Meet Ends Today

Smith, Yale Quartet Set Marks; Thomas Second In Backstroke

By Larry Fox

Meet records were broken in two events as Ohio State moved into the lead in the National Collegiate Athletic association championships in Bowman Gray pool last night.

Bill Smith set the first of the new marks in the 220-yard freestyle while the Yale 400-yard freestyle relay quartet established the second new standard.

The Buckeyes took first places in three of the night's six events, which, added to their two other places gave OSU a total of 23 points. Michigan, last year's champion team talliel 18 points for second place with Yale's 16 close third. Iowa was right behind with 15 points for fourth.

The host University of North Carolina moved into the scoring column tonight when Jim Thomas came home second in the 150-yard backstroke in 1:34.2. Bob DeGroot of Ohio State was first in 1:34.0. Thomas led the qualifiers in the afternoon preliminaries with a time of 1:34.7.

First Record in 220

For the first of the brace of new records Smith slashed the mrak of 2:09 set by George Hoogerhyde of Michigan State last year to 2:08.5 to retain the title he won last year.

Hoogerhyde, set the old record in a preliminary in the 1948 tourney, finishing fourth in the final, but was sixth this time.

The battle for second place was a tight one with both Wallace Wolfe of Southern Cal and Michigan's Matt Mann turning in identical times, but the judges gave the nod to Wolfe.

The Yale relay team was an easy victor in the 400 where Bill Fransworth, Larry Munson, Ray Reid, and Paul Girdes lowered the record which they had set in the afternoon time trials.

Cut Time Twice

The Light Blue mermen lowered the original mark of 3:37.8, which was established by Michigan in 1942, to 3:27.4 in the afternoon and theni went on to slice four tenths of a second more off the time.

Michigan was second in the relay in what would have been a record-tying time while Iowa, mainly through the efforts of anchor-man Wally Ris, edged out Rutgers for third. The Iowa time was 3:29.2.

The most thrilling personal dual of the evening took place in the 200-yard breaststroke event where Kieth Carter of Purdue took the measure of defending champion Joe Verdeur with a time that was only one tenth of a second off the world standard set by Verdeur only last year at the NCAA meet.

Carter, was neck and neck with the Olympic champion, from LaSalle, for the first two laps, got Verdeur then pulled ahead and held a lead of about a yard, at the halfway point.

Close Finish

Carter cut that margin in half at the sixth lap and the two hit the bulkhead at the end of the seventh length at the same instant. The Purdue captain then exhibited a fine kick to touch out Verdeur by a bout a foot.

The 50-yard freestyle provided the judges with the most trouble of the evening for all six competitors were so tightly bunched at the finish that it was almost impossible to separate them.

Most of the controversy settled around the places behind first, for while Bob Weinberg's margin of victory wasn't exactly large, it was nevertheless evident. Weinberg took the championship in 0:23.1.

Two tenths of a second was all the difference between the first and last men with the finish judges giving second to Henry Paton of Michigan State.

Harlan Repeats

Favored Bruce Harlan of Ohio State did the expected in the low diving competition with a masterful exhibition of the skill which earned him the title last year and also the Olympic one meter crown.

Harlan collected 142.411 points to place ahead of Dave Brockway of Iowa, who had 133.97.

The Summary

50-yard freestyle— 1. Weinberg (Michigan) 0:23.1; 2. Paton (MCS) 0-23.3; 3. Reid (Yale) 0:23.3; 4. Busbey (Penn) 0:23.0; 5. Nugent (Rutgers) 0:23.2.

150-yard backstroke—1. Degroot (OSU) 1:34.0; 2. Thomas (UNC) 1:34.2; 3. Draves (Iowa) 1:35.2; 4. Knight (OSU) 1:36.0; 5. Kortan (MSC) 1:36.2.

220-yard freestyle—1. Smith (OSU) 2:08.5; 2. Wolfe (Sou. Cal.) 2:10.9; 3. Mann (Michigan) 2:10.9; 4. Gilbert (Texas) 2:11.9; 5. Blum (Yale) 2:12.0. (New meet record. Old record of 2:09.1 set by Hoogerhyde of Michigan State in 1948.)

Stranahan Takes Golf Lead; Ward Records Even Par 71

GREENSBORO, March 25—(UP)—Amateur Frank Stranahan, millionaire sparkplug heir, got red hot in a cool rain today for a sizzling 66 to lead the first round of the $10,000 greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

The Toledo, O., strong boy, playing 14 of the 18 holes in the rain, was five under par to equal the course record for the long 6,630-yard Starmount Forest course.

Harvie Ward, the youthful golfer from the University of North Carolina, carded a respectable even par card of 71 with nine hole scores of 37-34. Ward's aggregate gave him a tie for second place with former U. S. amateur champ, Skee Riegel, in the simonpure class with both swingers still having an excellent chance to remain amongst the leaders in the remaining 54 holes that are to be played today and tomorrow.

Stranahan, who is the British open champion, was runner up here in 1947. He sloshed through the morning showers today, jubilantly shooting fine golf, and was one of the earliest finishers.

The pros followed him in but could not match his score. The nearest were Johnny Bulla of Pittsburgh, defending champion Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago and Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., one stroke behind with 67's.

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the lean Memphis, Tenn., dentist who won the Jacksonville, Fla., open last week and has been cleaning up the winter circuit, turned in a 68. Grouped with him were Sammy Snead, the slammer from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, Va.

Bobby Locke of Johannesburg, South Africa, back in American competition, turn ed in a 69. Tied with him at two under par were Glenn Teal of Jacksonville, Fla., and Ted Kroll of Philmont, Pa.

Six golfers tied at 70, and the rest of the field of some 150 hit par or higher.

Other UNC students entered in the competition were Jack Brantley who had an 78 and Deactur Cunningham who slipped down to an 83.

Favored Kentucky, Oklahoma Aggies To Meet in NCAA

SEATTLE, Wash., March 25.—(UP)—Final workouts of the Kentucky Wildcats and the Oklahoma Aggies today stressed the fact that their clash in the NCAA basketball tournament finale tonight will be a test of two entirely different systems.

The Wildcats were obviously planning to stage a rapid-fire assault on the basket and roll up an impressive victory margin in defense of the crown they won last year.

The Aggies, on the other hand, were scheming to keep the score down, to control the ball, and settle for a victory of any sort—by one point if necessary.

In yesterday's workouts, the Aggies showed the greatest effects of their cross-country plane trips. Coach Hank Iba reported several of his players became airsick enroute.

The Kentuckians showed the flash and sparkle that carried them to their sixth consecutive Southeastern conference chapmionship this year. The Oklahomans, still feeling the effects of the plane trip, were slow and sluggish.

Cincinnati Owner Cautions Baseball

Tampa, Fla., March 25.—(UP)—Powell Crosley, Jr., who was actually more instrumental than any other man in bringing night baseball into the majors, predicted today that the National and American leagues have reached the saturation point in the number of after dark contests.

"They have roughly scheduled a third of their total number of games at night for the coming season and I believe that is all the traffic can bear," Crosley said.

He added, however, that some clubs will probably have to continue to schedule as many night contests as possible "in order to get people out to the ball parks."

But so far as his Cincinnati Reds are concerned, there will be no more than 14 regularly scheduled night games per season at Crosley field.

"If we had more than that the novelty would wear off," he explained.

Lou Little Cries, A. Rupp Sighs Sez UP Writer

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, March 25—(UP)—Lou Little of Columbia is rehearsing his weak, foggy voice on an old tune, 'I've got a right to sing the blues."

Nobody in the football coaching profession has a better right. . . . Lou lost his entire starting eleven by graduation and half the squadmen turning out for opening of spring practice were freshmen who won't be eligible. . . . and last year's team was just barely good enough to win four of nine games.

The Sugar bowl would like to have Pete Newell's San Francisco outfit in its year-end basketball tournament at New Orleans but Pete can't get out of a committment at Madison Square garden that week. . . . He offered the Garden two other dates but no soap.

Looks like Branch Rickey is readying pitcher Hank Behrman for a quick sale. . . . Hank is one of Rickey's reconversion efforts. . .. . Branch had him working as a groundkeeper at Ebbets field this winter at 90 cents an hour and when the right-hander quit unexpectedly Rickey gave up on him forever. . . . When Hank showed well in a Florida relief job Rickey began to praise him as a great pitcher—but probably not a great Dodger pitcher.

Kentucky's Adolph Rupp is said to have a seven foot, one inch freshman basketballer who scored 26 points against the Wildcat varsity in a parctice game last week. . . Ouch!

Jack Kerris, adept Loyola (Chicago) basketball center, was named on both all-opponent teams picked by St. John's of Brooklyn and City College of New York. He topped 20 points against each one.

Lem Lubber is back again. He's the cartoon character circulated by the Outboard Boating Club of America showing waterfront maniacs how not to drive their putt-putts. The OBA figures Lem is their best weapon in its campaign for increased water safety.

Tar Heel Netmen Open Slate Today Against Spartans

Carolina's 1949 tennis team, possibly minus the services of injured Captain Vic Seixas, will make its season debut this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the local courts against Michigan State's touring Spartans.

Last night it was still doubtful as to whether Seixas would be able to take the court this afternoon, or whether his badly sprained ankle, which he injured over two weeks ago while demonstrating a baseball player's swing, would keep him from seeing any action against the Spartans. The pride and joy of Coach John Kenfield's netters may be held in reserve until the doubles matches.

The Michigan State netters were slated to open their season yesterday afternoon at Duke, but rain forced a postponement of the matches, and the Spartans arrived in Chapel Hill last night.

In the event that Seixas does not take part in the singles matches, the starting six are expected to be as follows: Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, Duke Wilder, Lasley Dameron, and Jim Winstead, ranking in that order.

If the Carolina ace enters the doubles competition, the Tar Heels will have two strong entries in the Seixas-Wilder and Taylor-Rice combinations. In case Seixas is unable to enter the doubles, Coach Kenfield will probably enter Wilder, Taylor, and Rice in separate matches, teamed with Gruner Dameron, or Winstead, in order to give each of the three pairs the needed experience.

Today's meet is the first of 14 straight home engagements for the Tar Heels. The Carolina netmen will take on the Haverford team her Thursday in their next meet.

Frosh Tracksters Slate Six Meets

The Carolina Freshman track squad will compete in six meets during the 1949 season, it was announced this week by Coach aDle Ranson. Of these six, five of them are dual meets and the other is the Carolina relays next week end.

Two of the dual meets will be with the Duke Blue Imps, one being run on Fetzer field and the other in Durham. Like last year, the Tar Baby tracksters will be hosts to Durham high school. The other two dual meets will be with N. C. State freshmen on a home-and-home basis.

Other freshmen meets may be arranged to fill the open dates, Ranson announced.

The complete card: April 2—Carolina relaps; 13—N. C. State at Chapel Hill; 22—Duke at Durham; May 7—Duke at Chapel Hill; 11—Durham high school; 16—N. C. State at Raleigh.

SOCCER RESUMED

The Intramural office has announced that the intramural soccer league started last quarter will get underway again with a full schedule Monday afternoon.

Final Five Events Scheduled As 26th Tourney Ends Today

With the halfway mark of the National Collegiate Athletic association championships come and gone, the annual meet heads into its final day of activity with the team winner still undecided.

Five events are scheduled today as the three-day meet draws to a close with morning and afternoon trials and evening finals once again. Three-meter (high) diving preliminaries will take up the entire morning session with the remainder of the trials beginning at 2:30 in the afternoon. Finals in all events open at 8:30 tonight.

The high diving competition will feature much the same personnel as the one-meter event yesterday with Bruce Harlan of Ohio State favored to take his second title of the tourney. Harlan was runner-up last year in the high diving and also took second place in the Olympics in London this summer. Miller Anderson, who held the two three-meter crowns is not competing this year.

Another Ohio State first place is in prospect in the 440-yard freestyle where Bill Smith will perform. Smith, who is the defending champion, won the 220 yesterday evening and will face much the same opposition in the quarter mile.

Smith holds both the American and world records for this event, in which he also won the Olympic championship. Bill Heusner, who successfully defended his 1500-meter title the first night of the meet came in second to Smith last year. In fact, almost all of the boys who competed in the 1500 and who are sufficiently recovered from the marathon will be entered in the comparatively short event.

Besides Heusner, the field of final qualifiers will probably include Ralph Sala of Stanford, second-place man in the 1500 and Roger Watts of Iowa State, who finished fifth.

The 440 will also serve as a gathering place for contestants in the 220 like Paul Girdes of Yale and George Hoogerhyde of Michigan State.

Indoor Tennis

NEW YORK, March 25—(UP) — Top-seeded Richard (Pancho) Gonzales and defending champion Billy Talbert, seeded second, were rated strong choices today in their semi-final singles matches in the National Indoor tennis tournament.

In tests at the Seventh Regiment armory tonight, Gonzales faces fourth-seeded Don McNeill of Glen Oaks, N. Y., while Talbert goes against seventh-seeded Fred Kovaleski, the tournament dark-horse from Hamtramck, Mich.

Kovaleski, 20, is a student at William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va.

Best Acting 'Oscars' Given Wyman, Olivier

HOLLYWOOD, March 25 — (UP) — Jane Wyman, who switched from fast-talking chorine roles to play a mute farm girl in "Johnny Belinda," and Sir Laurence Olivier, whose brilliant "Hamlet" made Shakespeare popular with millions, last night were named the best actress and actor of the year at the 21st annual academy award ceremonies.

"For once I get an award for keeping my mouth shut," she gasped. "So now I'll keep my mouth shut, too."

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., accepted the "Oscar" for Olivier, now in London. Loretta Young, last year's "Best Actress," made the presentation.

Technically, Olivier snagged two $100 golf statuse. His "Hamlet" won another award as the "best picture of the year."

Walter Huston, who threw away his false teeth to play a grizzled prospector in "Treasure of Sierra Madre," won the "best supporting" award.

Claire Trevor was named "best supporting actress" of the year.

Minutes later Huston's son himself strode down the aisle to claim his "Oscar" as the "best director of the year," making this the first time a father-and-son team has snagged gold statues in the same evening.

Koenig Returns From Board Meet In New York City

Allan R. Koenig, the University's representative to the annual college board of Bates Fabrics, Inc., has returned to Chapel Hill after a week-long visit in New York city.

A senior from Brooklyn, Koenig was selected for the 1949 college board for the second time because of his collegiate activities and interests. He is majoring in economics and is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity AR-OTC, and the Carolina Quarterly business staff.

Along with 11 other college students from coast to coast, Koenig actively participated in a week's whirl of activities, a Bates Fabric dispatch stated.

Breweries, Public, Acclaim Five Cent Beer in New York

SAM'S BAR & GRILL, Lower Manhattan, N. Y., March 25.—(UP)—

Listen, my children and you shall hear,

Of the famous fight for nickel beer

Not since the revolution of '76

Has bar business been in such a fix.

Sam Atkins, retired fireman, won the battle today to sell a seven-ounce glass of beer to the working man for five cents instead of a dime.

Six breweries were begging Atkins to sell their beer when he quit answering the telephone.

Only trouble was, the working men stopped working as far away as the Bronx and came trooping down to Sam's half-basement, 10-chair place on St. Mark's street to sample his beer.

Three were waiting when the doors opened at 8 o'clock in the morning, three-deep around the bar at noon.

"It's good beer," said James Barry, who was once a Bronx druggist. "This was bound to happen some time. It just took a brave man to start it."

Atkins cut the price of beer from 10 cents to a nickel on the first day of spring. But he didn't take into account the reaction of brewers. Two brewers gave him the run-around when he sought to replenish his fast-deplenished stocks. A third hiked the price for an emergency delivery to wipe out two-thirds of Atkins' calculated profits.

But the price cut brought him so much business and publicity the other brewers rushed in. A big-time lawyer called up and offered his services to uphold Sam's contention that free men had a right to nickel beer.

Helen Johnson, his barmaid, was so rushed that she kept forgetting the price cut. She kept charging 30 cents for three nickel beers.

The idea came to Sam, the patriotic pub keeper, with the approach of warm weather. Ninety per cent of his customers were hard liquor drinkers, who slack off in the summer time.

So Sam opened the spigot, and in poured the beer drinkers.

he stood trial and was acquitted as a blot upon his permanent University record. On coed government, the CP says it will work with the coeds to see that coed government is firmly and clearly established in its rightful place as a part of student government.

The best item in the Campus party platform is the one concerning the CP project to set up the NSA purchase card system in Chapel Hill and Durham. Under that system, a student pays a dollar for an NSA purchase card and then may buy at a 10 to 30 per cent discount from stores belonging to the plan. And it looks pretty certain that the local merchants will fall into line.

The final two items in the CP platform call for a constitutional convention to clear up the weak points in the present student constitution, and support the continuation of the present Greater University Student council, which is composed of delegates from the University, WC and State college.

Trustee Committee To Pick New President

Special Group Named To Fill Graham's Post

RALEIGH, March 26—(UP)—The Greater University of North Carolina Board of Trustees executive committee today asked Gov. Kerr Scott to appoint a committee of nine members of the board to make recommendations on a successor to Dr. Frank Porter Graham as president of the Greater University.

The trustees invested temporary executive powers in the chancellors of the three schools—Robert B. House of the University at Chapel Hill, Dr. W. C. Jackson of Woman's College in Greensboro and Col John W. Harrelson of State college in Raleigh—with University Controller William D. Carmichael, Jr., acting as chairman with the powers of president.

The executive committee asked Dr. Jackson, who had planned to retire, to hold office for another year.

At least six of the committee members to be appointed by Governor Scott, the trustees said, will be two alumni each from the three branches of the University system, and three others will come from the state at large.

The executive committee voted to accept the resignation of Dr. Graham as president of the Greater University effective when he takes the oath of office as United States senator at noon Tuesday in Washington. The 62-year-old educator has been president for 19 years.

In answer to a question, Dr. Graham said his leaving office as head of the University would automatically terminate his post as head of the Institute for Nuclear Studies, a group of Southern schools working with the atomic plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and with other scholastic associations.

Governor Scott is ex-officio chairman of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees. Other members are Arch T. Allen, secretary, John Sprunt Hill, Edwin Pate, John J. Parker, Mrs. Laura W. Cone, Victor S. Bryant, Mrs. May L. Tomlinson, Clarence Poe, Clyde K. Council, Thomas J. Pearsall, John W. Umstead, Jr., John W. Clark and former Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus.

Poster Rules Are Released By IDC Head

Parties Approve New Regulations

Pete Gerns, president of the Men's Interdormitory council, yesterday announced rules concerning the posting of campaign literature in the forthcoming Spring elections.

The regulations as listed below were approved by the heads of the CP, SP, and UP. All candidates are urged to comply with the rules during the elections.

Bulletin boards only will be used for campaign literature and posters tacked to any other part of dormitories will be removed.

Permission for displays other than leaflets, such as banners, must be received from both the chairman of the respective party and the chairman of the IDC.

Each candidate is urged to post only one handbill per bulletin board to insure sufficient space for the literature of all candidates.

All dormitory residents are requested not to remove campaign literature from bulletin boards. Destruction of campaign literature constitutes an offense of the Campus code.

Craft Exhibition Scheduled Today

An exhibition of arts and crafts by former art students of Mrs. John Foushee and other amateur craftsmen of Durham and Chapel Hill opened in Person hall yesterday and will be open from 2 until 5 this afternoon.

Delicately simple woodcarvings by Dr. James Billitt, retired Medical school professor, highlight the exhibition. His pieces were fashioned with a pocketknife alone.

Displays of beaten copper by graduate student Mark Burnham are exhibited along with examples of tooled leather, ceramics, weaving and etching.

'Life' Stages Roundtable On Religion

Student Opinions Poll Takers Want

Orthodox religions came in for a thorough round of criticism yesterday morning in a round table discussion of religion in Graham Memorial sponsored by Life magazine.

The religious discussion grew out of a recent survey of religion among college students by Life magazine.

As a continuation of the first religious articles, Life magazine is taking a poll of student religious opinion in five colleges, Yale, Harvard, Michigan, University of California, and the University. However, pictures illustrating the religious article which will appear soon in Life will all be from the University.

Students taking part in the discussion generally agreed that religion is slowly disintergrating and that the churches are not fulfilling their religious duties.

Participants in the discussion include Emily Ogburn, Bill Miller, Gene Frances Caraher, Jim McAllister, Bill Brown, Jane Gower, Gladys David, Tom Donnely, Al Lowenstein, Julia Compton, and Gran Childress.

Nominations Set To Close Monday

Coeds will have a last chance to make nominations for YWCA officers for next year at a coed get-together to be held tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Butch Daniel, YW president, said today that there will also be a special program presented at the meeting.

Candidates who have already been nominated will be presented at the meeting. The slate, as selected by the nominating committee and approved by the Y cabinet, reads as follows: president, Anne Chandler and Kitty Altizer; vice-president, runner-up for president; secretary, Jean Serpell; treasurer, Ruth Whalen; and membership chairman, Julia Compton and Sally Osborne, the runner-up becoming program chairman.

Elections will take place on Wednesday night at house meetings in the various dorms and sorority houses. Town girls will vote Thursday in the YWCA office.

Dr. Graham Presents Playmakers Awards

Awards were presented last night following the last presentation of an intensive bill of 38 plays produced on the Carolina Playmaker stage this week at the 26th annual State Drama Festival.

President Frank P. Graham, who is to be sworn in as United States Senator Tuesday, presented the awards to the various individuals and drama groups in playwriting and play production and to winners of the Parkway Playhouse scholarships, the Betty Smith Awards in playwriting, and to winners in the theater arts, such as costumes, make-up, stage models, scrap books and posters.

The competition, which opened Wednesday and continued through the final productions last night, drew some 300 participants from high schools, colleges and little theater groups throughout the state.

The Betty Smith awards were made to J. Braxton Harris, Lenoir Rhyne college, for his play, "Jawin';" Louis Marks, Lee Edwards high, Asheveille, for "Little Miss," and Miss Elizabeth Welch, Salem college faculty, for "Christmas Came Eearly."

These three playwrights were also presented authors Awards as well as Jim Playter, Lenoir Rhyne college; Betty Hawkins, Rocky Mount high school, and Mrs. Naomi Cunningham, Cunningham School of Speech, Gastonia.

At a business session yesterday morning, Hubert Philpott, director of dramatics in the Central high School, Charlotte, was elected president of the association. Other officers elected were Mrs. Howard Mims, Greenville high school faculty, vice-president, and John W. Parker, Playmakers business manager, re-elected executive secretary.

Last 'At-Home' At Grahams' To Be Today

Traditional Affair To Be Held at 4

The regular Sunday open house that has been characteristic of Dr. Frank Graham for a number of years will today give students a chance ot bid him "bon voyage" on his trip to the United States Senate.

Dr. Graham, President of the University and recently appointed to the Senate by Governor Scott, has changed the time of the open house from the usual 8 o'clock to 4 o'clock. It will last until 6 o'clock.

"I hope that all students will find an opportunity to go by Dr. Graham's home during the open house," Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, said yesterday. He went on to say that it was understood by South building officials that it is the wish of Dr. Graham that this be his last appearance before leaving.

Graham Memorial Reception by SP Set for Tonight

The Student party will introduce its candidates to the campus at a reception in the Main lounge of Graham Memorial from 8 until 10 o'clock tonight.

Bill Mackie, SP nomine for the presidency, Al Lowenstein, vice presidential candidate, and Treasurer-nominate John Saunders will discuss their views with the voters.

Childress said that SP candidates for the Student legislature and the various other campus offices will be present to answer any questions concerning the campaign.

According to Childress tonight's reception is being held "in the hope of giving the voters a chance to get an honest appraisal of the SP nominees."

Refreshments will be under the auspices of Bob Watson.

CPU Will Feature Closed Meet Today

The Carolina Political union will hold a closed meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the Grail room of Graham Memorial, Herb Alexander, chairman, announced yesterday.

Alexander said that the union would consider plans for the Spring quarter, changes in the charter of the organization, and a party.

Verdeur Breaks Medley Record

A new record was set in the 150-yard individual medley by Joe Verdeur of LaSalle, Iowa's Wally Ris was named swimmer of the year, and Ohio State won the team title of the National Collegiate Athletic association swimming championships last night with a total of 49 points.

The Buckeyes collected five first places, two each by Olympic champions Bruce Harlan and Bill Smith, to account for the bulk of their points. Iowa was second with 35 points, three more than runner-up Michigan, last year's champions.

Ohio State clinched the title after the high diving competition in which the Buckeyes collected a first, a second, and a fourth for 12 points. The team trophy was presented to OSU Coach Mike Peppe by Ed Fitzgerald, chairman of the NCAA Swimming Rules committee, at the finish of the meet.

A special committee of the coaches association picked Ris, winner of the 100-yard freestyle last night and Olympic champion in that event, as the nation's outstanding swimmer and Karl Michael of Dartmouth made the presentation at the close of the diving competition. Joe Verdeur, the only record-breaker of the evening, was the recipient of the award last year.

U. S. Only Recognized

The individual medley is not recognized as an event by any nation outside of the United States so Verdeur's new mark can not be completely termed a world's record. His performance did, however, shatter all existing marks for the event.

It was Verdeur's turn to best Carter last night, but the Olympic champion had to set a new world record to do it. Verdeur and Carter staged an even closer duplication of their neck and neck breaststroke battle Friday night.

The victory went to Carter in the breaststroke as the Purdue captain came within one tenth of a second of Verdeur's world record, but last night the judges awarded the title, which had been vacant for 19 years, to Verdeur. Indicative of the closeness of the finish was the fact that Carter's time was faster than Verdeur's. Carter turned in a 1:30.7 as compared to Verdeur's 1:30.8.

First Broken in Trials

Verdeur had lowered the record in the afternoon preliminaries to 1:32.8 and then slashed some more seconds off his own mark in the finals.

Smith led all the way except for the first lap to defend successfully his second title of the tournament in 4:42.6. Smith triumphed easily in this event, slowly increasing his lead until he was several yards in front of second place man Bill Heusner at the finish.

Heusner, who triumphed in the 1500-meter freestyle to open the meet Thursday night, repeated in his runner-up position of last year with a time of 4:44.4.

It was the battle for the third position that really excited the crowd and at the finish Thomas was a finger's-length ahead of Wallace Wolfe of Southern Cal.

Tryouts Called During Week By Glee Club

May Get Chance For Trip to NYC

Tryouts for campus singers interested in making an appearance with the University Glee clubs in Carnegie hall next November will be held in 207 Hill hall Monday and Tuesday afetrnoons from 3 until 4:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by Director Paul Young.

The Carnegie hall concert will be presented on Friday, Nov. 11, the night before the Carolina-Notre Dame football game in Yankee stadium.

The director emphasized that next week's tryouts are being held for those people now in school who are interested in becoming glee club members. Next fall's tryouts will be limited to new students. Both men and women singers are needed and trained voices are not necessary.

The regular rehearsal of the Men's Glee club for Monday afternoon has been cancelled. The men will meet on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock for a special rehearsal with the Women's Glee club.

Tenor Recital Is In Hill Tonight

John H. Brinegar, tenor, will be presented in recital this evening at 8:30 in Hill hall. A graduate of the University with an A.B. in music, Brinegar wlil become a candidate for the B. M. degree after this recital.

The program will open with a group of Italian songs, two of which are by Mozart; and five numbers by Brahms will comprise the second group From the operatic repertorie, Brinegar has chosen a romance from "Mignon," by Thomas; a cavatina from "Il Trovatore," by Verdi; and an aria from Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

Following this will be selections of French music by Fauer and Chausson. Selections from "Twelfth Night" ("Clown Song," Schumann, from "Three Shakespeare Songs" ("O Mistress Mine," Quilter) and three other songs by modern English and American composers make up the closing numbers.

Nurse Gives $30,000

Mary Dunn's Life Revealed As Gift Mystery Clears Up

Of the hundreds of gifts that have been received by the University, none were acquired under such unusual circumstances as the $30,000 gift of Mary Olivia "Birdie" Dunn.

The first news of the gift came in Septmeber, 1946, when Harold Weaver, cashier of the Student Loan fund, received a check for $46.66 from an insurance company. This money was designated for the "Olivia Dunn Student Loan Fund." Weaver had never heard of the donor, Miss Dunn, or of the "Olivia Dunn Student Loan Fund."

Investigation revealed that the donor was an amazing woman known as "Birdie," retired public health nurse who died at Black Mountain on July 28, 1946. She left her entire estate, except for a few minor bequests to friends and relatives, to the University. The will, written on a sheet of scrap paper, asked that the money be set up into a loan fund in memory of her mother, Oliver Godwin Dunn.

Dr. George Marion Cooper, assistant state health officer and former employer of Miss Dunn, said she was one of the most efficient persons he has ever known. She traveled throughout the state to set up clinics and enlist the aid of local doctors in her work.

Two questions that appear most frequently are how "Birdie" accumulated over $30,000 on the pay of a public health nurse, and why she left the majority of her estate to the University, since she never attended school here.

People who knew her explain that she was a thrifty woman, and that she shrewdly invested her money. With the exception of Dr. Cooper, whose modesty prevents him from agreeing with the opinions of other people, it is believed that "Birdie" made such a will because of the recognition the University gave Dr. Cooper in bestowing an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon him in 1942.

Unlike most gifts to the Student Loan Fund, "Birdie" did not put any limitations on the use of the money. Her will reads that it "is to be used as a loan fund for worthy students."

Ballet Director

Dancer Has 'Agile' Background

By Charles Gibson

Charles Weidman, whose theater dance company the Student Entertainment committee will present in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, has become one of the foremost American concert figurants through a naturally agile background.

From his seventh to his twelfth birthdays, young Weidman spent alternate years in Panama, where his father was chief of all the fire departments while the canal was being built, and in Lincoln, Nebraska, where his mother was roller skating champion of the middle west.

Their son took to dancing. In addition to appearing with the Philadelphia orchestra, the New York Philharmonic symphony, and the Cleveland symphony, besides staging ballets for such

CHARLES WEIDMAN

Broadway successes as "Americana," "As Thousands Cheer," "I'd Rather Be Right," and "Sing Out Sweet Land," Weidman has attracted dance students from all parts of the country to his New York studio operated between tours since 1928.

The Weidman originality, evident in his 100 novel ballets that are generally credited with introducing a completely new satirical style among male dancers, is also rampant in the scenery and costumes for his touring company. Among the costume creations which he has furnished for the men and women in the company was a headdress fashioned from tin cans, hammered and cut.

His troup's most frequently used scenery devise consists of a unit set of boxes, steps, and platforms, which is arranged differently for each number in the repertoire.

Dr. Guthe to Talk Here Monday Night

Dr. Carl E. Guthe, director of the New York State museum, will speak on "American Archaeology and the Social Sciences" in Room 407 Alumni building at 8 o'clock Monday night, it was announced yesterday by Joffre L. Coe, director of the laboratory of anthropology and archaeology.

The Institute for Research in Social Science and the laboratory are co-sponsors of Dr. Guthe's lecture.

You Can Meet the SP Candidates Tonight

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO MEET THE CANDIDATES running on the Student party ticket in spring elections, why don't you drop down to the main lounge of Graham Memorial about 8 o'clock this evening and say howdy to the boys and girls. The Politicoes say refreshments will be served.

On Tuesday night, by the way, there is a mass meeting of all candidates in the spring battle. Disqualification is the penalty for absence. . . . . And on Thursday evening next, all the big candidates will speak at an open meeting for the student body. . . . Time and places will be announced in the Daily Tar Heel.

Odds and Ends of Incidental Infomation

THE BIG QUESTION WANDERING AROUND IN THE MINDS of a number of people about the end of the week was this: Why is there no party affiliation listed on the posters of Dick Gordon and Ted Leonard, University party candidates for president and vice-prexy, respectively? . . . . And by the way, according to the University party's mimeographed list of candidates, the UP is running Gordon for "President fo the University of North Carolina." To succeed Frank Graham?

Bill Mackie, the Student party presidential candidate, said the other day that one of his opponents, CP standard-bearer Charlie Long, was getting worried about a couple of whispering campaigns making the rounds. Charlie said somebody in the SP camp was directing one at Long, and that someone in his own camp was aiming one at Al Lowenstein, SP vice-presidental candidate. Both Charlie and Bill are working to scotch the rumors.

End of a Tradition

Visitors in Chapel Hill between four and six this afternoon may wonder at the sight of so many students walking in and out of the large, rambling old house at 402 East Franklin street, but to those familiar with Chapel Hill traditions the activity there will be easily explainable. Hundreds of University students will be saying farewell to President and Mrs. Frank Graham at the last of the famous Sunday "open house" occasions held at the president's home.

This afternoon will mark the end of a tradition that began in 1930 when Graham became president of the University and that has been carefully observed ever since. When the president was in town, no matter what other matters might be demanding his attention, Sunday night was always set aside to receive the visits of his friends—and his friends included anyone who wanted to call. Although hte open house were started and remained primarily for students so that they might become better aquainted with the president of their university, attendence was not limited to students alone. Faculty members, townspeople and visitors from outside were often present.

Thousands of former students will rember the gracious atmosphere of these Sunday night visits. They will remember sitting around the big living room, and the long informal conversations ranging over any topic that might be mentioned. They will remember the friendly, unassuming little man sitting in one of the big easy chairs, whose force of thought and personality radiated through the conversation. They will rember the charm of Mrs. Graham who could make a perfect stranger feel immediately at home and who knew exactly the right thing to say to everybody.

Dr. and Mrs. Graham will rember those Sunday evenings, too. One of the things Dr. Graham said the night he was appointed to the senate was, "Sunday nights will be lonesome in Washington. I don't know how Mrs. Graham and I are going to stand it."

Tonight Dr. Graham will leave for Washington in preparation for being sworn into the senate Tuesday. It is peculiarly appropriate that the traditional open house this afternoon will be one of his last activities as president of the University.

Drop-Add Needs Attention

Several hundred students will verify the students that the drop and add lines at Venable X this quarter were a bit drawn out and monotonous. Matter of fact, the situation became quite a campus joke after numerous students swore they had been in line for two or three days.

For the second straight year, the registration department attempted a new system of registering students for the winter and spring quarters by having them pre-register in the fall. When the system was inaugerated, it was looked upon as a great time-saving device.

In the passing of two quarters, however, students seem inclined to change their minds about courses or to fail some courses, throwing the spring registration completely out of order. As a result, the terrifically long lines.

It is agreed that there were quite a number of students who did not have to sweat out the drop-add line, but from the number who were in line, it would seem that an equal number were forced to change their schedules. Perhaps it would be best to revert to the former system of pre-registering for just one quarter in advance.

This system might take a little more time from the students and more from the advisors, but under the new system, the students inevitably go back to their advisors for permission to change their courses, so the time supposedly eliminated is used anyway.

Unless some addition to the present system can be arranged to eliminate the tedious drop-add lines, ti would seem advisable to go back to the single quarter pre-registration.

Thanks to a Veteran

Olin Teague, Texas Democrat and World War II veteran, acted in the interest of the country this week when he spearheaded the attack in the House of Representatives that shelved John Rankin's bill for veterans' pensions. The bill was nothing but pork barrel legislation on a large scale. It is significant to note that off the record the representatives were strong against the measure but many changed their minds when it came to a roll call vote. It seems that the courage of conviction does not run strong in most politicians.

Spring Again Even in D.C.

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, March 27—In the spring a senator's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of guff:

Senator Donnell, of Missouri: "Will the senator yield?"

Senator Morse, of Oregon: "I am very happy to yield."

Donnell: "I should like to say it has been my privilege to know the Senator (Mr. Morse) since very shortly after the two of us met in Washington in 1945. It has been my observation that while on many subjects he and I have differed, he has shown fine, outstanding courage and integrity; and not only that a tremendously strong ability. . . . . I merely wanted to take the opportunity to say these few words with respect to my warm, intimate personal friend, the Senator from Oregon."

Morse: Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri is very kind, but I am afraid he stands in the status of a biased friend. I appreciate his bias. After all, it is the biases of friendship that I think so frequently make friendships beautiful, and I think we do have a beautiful friendship between us."

Drink to me, darling with thine biased eyes.

Nearly everywhere I go out-of-town these days people ask me about our no. 1 party-thrower, Mrs. Perle Mesta. Almost invariably they say:

"You kid her in the paper a lot. What is she really like?"

It is true I have ribbed Mrs. Mesta quite a lot, but it was always done in good part and accepted in same. I esteem the lady highly.

I consider Mrs. Mesta a big woman, and I am not talking about heft. She can take any amount of kidding, provided it is without malice, and it takes a big woman to do that.

She has a most genuine sense of humor. She tells jokes on herself with relish. Her guests lists may make her parties sound stuffy, but there isn't a dime's worth of stuffiness in her.

People that go to her place have fun. If they don't it's because they are playing hookey from the taxidermist.

The only time I ever knew her to beef about any riding in print was recently when a news magazine gave what purported to be a sketch of her life. It was a nasty piece, viewed from any angle.

Mrs. Mesta did not make any loud complaints, but she was pretty hurt. The thing was malicious; filled with inaccuracies, half-truths and slick innuendo. You could almost see where a lawyer had gone over the nastiest parts, substituting weasel words for outright charges, to avoid libel.

The piece had a reverse effect here in Washington. It made even her critics rally to her defense. As one of her sharpest-tongued society rivals observed:

"We know Perle isn't anything like that magazine sketch pictured her. We can give her the needle ourselves, but don't let any strangers try doing it!"

I expect to continue ribbing Mrs Mesta myself, but don't try to read anything into it but the friendliest kidding. I like the lady.

Senator Sheridan Downey, of California, has introduced a bill for the relief of James G. Smyth. Well, who is this Mr. Smyth, and why does he need relief?

He needs relief, poor fellow, because some dope dropped $143,000 worth of his wine stamps down the incinerator.

Mr. Smyth is collector of internal revenue at Santa Rosa, Calif. He looked for his wine stamps one morning and learned they had been heaved down the incinerator with a batch of wastepaper.

The Future Of The Party

By Bill Crisp

In giving a definition of the Democratic party, the late Josephus Daniels once drew this picture: the Democratic party, is a "peculiar animal," made up of laborers, Southerners, Catholics, Jews, Negroes, small businessmen, poor farmers, and intellectual liberals. This is, indeed, a "peculiar animal." Time, of course, has altered this picture in some respects, but the Democratic party is still composed largely of these contradictory elements.

And this is precisely why the Democratic administration in Washington is in such continual turmoil. It is simply impossible to serve the interests of each of these groups without inflicting some measure of injury to several of the others.

For, whatever may be the tradition of the American social system, we have tended more and more to become a community of extreme class distinctions. It is still true, of course, that at the ballot box—where it is most important—we are all on an equal footing. But in our daily existence we have divided into four economic classes which are rather sharply defined: Laborers, businessmen, farmers and the white-collar workers. And socially, particularly on the race issue, we are still divided though progressive education, a total war and a higher standard of living have made the divisions less acute.

When, therefore, one considers the curious mixture which goes to make up the Democratic party, it is only natural to expect that party to be torn by contiual conflict once it is seated in power. Thus, those who, in behalf of the Negro and Jew, propose civil rights legislation, and those who would protect the South's social traditions, cannot hope to derive equal satisfaction from the party's stand on the race question. And this is because the beliefs and interests of these two groups, are, for the time being, at least, directly opposed. Nor is this the only example of the forces which contend desperately for satisfaction through the party's endeavors. Southern businessmen and organized labor are both fighting each other within the ranks of the same administration.

This, of course, cannot continue to be. Neither the Democratic party nor any other party can long withstand the internal conflict which these varying elements make inevitable. The election last November reflected this fact. The present struggle in Washington proves it. And President Truman, however superb may be his popular appeal, need not hope that he can reconcile the contentious factions in his party. So long as any vestige of the capitalist ideal remains on this continent labor and management will contend with one another. And for many decades to come, the South cannot and should not be forced to accept a civil rights program which the Negro neither wants nor is prepared for. One is tempted to regard this situation as a problem which concerns merely the future status of the Democratic party. But when one yields to this temptation, he is sadly beguiled. For this is a problem which threatens the two-party system, the essential political structure under which we have thus far known freedom and enjoyed abundance.

The two-party system has contributed as much to American democracy as the United States Constitution. For while the latter has preserved the fundalmental concept of representative government, the former has furnished the stability and strength without which no government can act in positive terms.

One has only to look at the French Republic to see how paralytic government becomes once it is subjected to a multiple party system. There are some eight or nine different political parties in France today. Not for over twenty years has any single party claimed a majority of popular support. And the result, as history so tragically records, has been an endless series of cabinets too divided to take positive action, even during a war. The communists, incidentally have exploited this situation by applying the Hitlerian policy: "divide and conquer."

One, therefore, cannot view the present conflict in the Democratic party without feeling a grave concern for the future of American politics. For when the upheaval in the Democratic party finally comes—and it shall come—we shall have to decide whether our two traditional parties can reasonably satisfy the political aspirations of all Americans, or whether new and additional parties shall be conceived in the collision, and born in the dissent, of American's class groups.

And this, of course, is a decision which awaits the future inclinations of individual thought. Presumably the Democratic and Republican parties will adjust themselves to any change in American perspective which remains true to constitutional government.

'Good Show, But Too Long'

By Sam Whitehall

If you missed the Pan Hellenic variety show in the Rendezvous room Friday evening you missed a very enjoyable show, but if you stayed through the entire performacne you probably got slightly bored. In other words, what they did was good. . . . they just did too much of it.

We might as well say here and now, that we had a hard time following the plot of "East Lynne," which was the main production of the evening. In fact, the plot completely escaped us, especially since the continuity of the story was broken between each act by some very amusing musical skits put on by the campus sororities.

The best acting honors for the evening went to Miss Nancy Curtis, who gave a wonderful performance as an old maid, or somebody's mother, or something like that. For comedy, the biggest scene-stealer was Mary Ann Tabor as an upstairs maid. At any rate, she was a maid.

Pete Strader, who authored, directed and emceed the evening's entertainment, did a good job as the only man in the show. "East Lynne" itself apparently concerned a murder, some extracurricular activity on the part of someone's husband, and either some bigamy or some incest or something like that—as we said, the plot was impossible to follow, to say the least.

In between the acts, the audience enjoyed old-time skits such as Ferne Hughes singing "More to Be Pitied Than Censured;" the Tri-Delts doing "The Fireman's Bride" with vocals by Candy Jonas, who's just as sweet as her name implies; the Pi Phis singing "Behind the Swinging Doors" and reviving "Spearmint on the Bedpost," which the Sigma Nus did at the Valkyrie Sing a couple years ago; the Chi O's with "Anti-Saloon Sally;" and the Alpha Gams doing a clown-and-pirouet routine with some beautiful dancing by Eleanor LaGrange. The ADPi's seemed to have forgotten that the show was going on.

About all the rest we remember about the main part of the show was Edie Knight horsing around in a horse blanket, Frances Sowers and Faith Adams crouching over a couple of misplaced cigars, and Bunnie Davis wandering around looking like a bride who was stood up at the altar. (We think she was supposed to be a bride stood up somewhere, but we never could quite figure out where or what.)

Write Away

The Other Viewpoint

Editor:

Mr. Buchan did and adequate job of presenting the "Karl Marx Study Society" from one point of view. It seems only logical, however, that the public can draw its own conclusions more accurately after hearing the case presented with a different bias (that of a charter member).

It is axiomatic that there is no point in having an organization unless it has a purpose, and admittedly there are diverse views within the Society (a euphemism for the full title) regarding its purpose. Some members feel that any ideology which rather directly affects the life of roughly a quarter of the earth's population is worthy of serious study regardless of its actual content. Some feel that although Communism is dangerous, the attempt to suppress it constitutes the greatest danger. And at least one member frankly hopes to win supporters to the Communist cause. This may alarm some, but at least a few of us still cling to the quaint notion that college students should be able to distinguish truth from error and need no longer be shielded from insidious philosophies.

Should the organization fail to supply any new information or alter any opinions or attitudes, it may still fulfill a purpose. It may disclose that Communists are incapable of discussing Communism objectively, in which case their ideology could hardly appear more attractive. On the other hand there are at least two parties in every discussion.

Kent E. Erickson

'Childish, Dangerous'

Editor:

I find Bill Buchan's column entitled "Back to Physics, Mr. Friestadt Childish and stupidly dangerous in its implications to American democracy and American democratic ideas of freedom of speech and of assembly.

Mr. Buchan' speaks like an infant when he tells Mr. Friestadt to "Go back to Physics and the confines of his room and forget the whole thing." The whole thing being a public discussion of the political, economic, and social aspect of Karl Marx's works in relation to Communism.

What's the matter? Is Mr. Buchan too afraid or too stupid to answer Mr. Friestadt's facts, arguments and theories with facts, arguments and theories of his own? Evidently so, for he takes the childish and illogical way out of refusing to give Mr. Friestadt the right to express his opinions in open discussion in Graham Memorial. Instead he tells him to go home and shut up.

This is a policy of suppression and suppression is dangerous. Suppression of one group leads to suppression of another. In Germany, Hitler came to power in this way.

Furthermore, the subject which Mr. Friedstadt proposes to discuss is not one at which to poke fun or is it "out of place." It is an intensely serious one with a definite bearing on our age and our lives. Millions of people live by and believe in the precepts of Karl Marx and even in the departments of Political Science and economics of the University of North Carolina some "slight mention" of Marxian concepts is found. But Mr. Buchan, would deny any discussion in Graham memorial of these concepts by those who really believe in them. He would have us bury Mr. Friestadt's head in the sand like an ostrich and gag free speech.

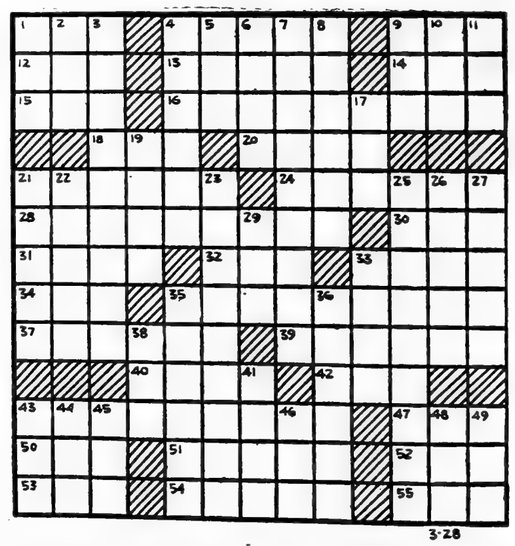
A Sandwich Wagon, Please



Editor:

Upon seeing the current lines at Venable X, one is led to believe that Mr. Lanier's "Lottery," as the registration system is affectionately known, is in serious danger of breaking down. Admittedly, it is very convenient to be able to register for courses two quarters in advance; this convenience, however, fades during the interminable wait for the Drop-Add routine.

It had been suggested by various persons that pre-registration be limited to the next succeeding quarter in order to alleviate the confusing situation caused by last-minute faculty or course changes and by changes of the "repeaters" who like the same courses so well that they take them again.

Certainly these lines can be shortened somewhat. If that is impossible, may I suggest that the authorities provide a Coke & Sandwich wagon to patrol the area between Venable X and Emerson Stadium? With this added source of revenue at the beginning of each quarter, perhaps the proposed tuition raise will be unnecessary.

Albans Paces Trackmen In Florida; Netters Win, 9-0

rolina Star Sets ree Records; rk Takes Javelin

AINESVILLE, FLA., March 26 (UP)—Record fell like clay ons today in the annual Flor- relays as cinder stars from rth Carolina, Minnesota and orgia dominated the smashing 12 records.

Minnesota's Bryl Thompson ped the top honor of the day when he won the Kearney-Rayburn trophy for the most outstanding athlete.

Thompson set a new Relays discus mark by eclipsing the old record held by Fortune Gordien, also of Minnesota. Thompson also smashed a record in the shot.

Bill Albans, North Carolina sensation, gave Thompson the keenest competition for the cup. The Chapel Hill Olympic veteran swept the 120-yard high hurdles, high jump and broad jump and set new records in all three.

Albans tied for first place in the high jump with teammate Bill Joyner, both clearing 6'4". Then the tall New Jersey lad returned to the cinders to run the hurdles in the outstanding time of 0:14.4. A leap of more than 23 feet copped the broad jump and completed Albans' triple victory.

Another Tar Heel, Bob Kirk, took the only other Carolina first place when he annexed the javelin with a toss of almost 191 feet. It was an outstanding performance for Kirk, and provided an easy win for the North Carolinian.

The summary:

Shot Put—Won by Thompson (Minn.), 49'4"; 2. Seligman (UNC), 47' 2¼"; 3. O'Leary (Duke). (New Relays record).

Two-Mile relay—Won by Minnesota; 2. Tennessee; 3. Florida; 4. Duke. Winning time 7.55.3. (New Relays record).

120—Yd. High hurdles—Won by Albans (UNC); 2. Grass (Minn.); 3. Pennington (Auburn). Winning time: 14.4 (New Relays record).

100-Yd. dash—Won by Rice (Minn.); 2. Fowlkes (Georgia Tech); 3. Mason (Minn.). Winning time: 9.8.

Javelin—Won by Kirk (UNC); 2. Beauchamp (Alabama); 3. Brnilovskie Auburn). Winning time: 190'8¼".

Baseball Team Opens Home Stand With Washington & Lee Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock the University of North Carolina Tar Heel baseball team will start a defense of its Southern conference title won last year. Besides being loop champs, the "Gas House Gang" is defending Big Four champs, and Eastern NCAA finalists. The opposition will be furnished by the Generals of Washington and Lee.

To date the Carolinians, minus ten of last year's top-notchers, have a record of three wins (one over Florida and two over the Jacksonville Naval Air Base) and one no-hit defeat (to Florida).

Pitching Chores

Pitching chores for the opener will go to either Ray "Bub" Blair or Andy Tranavitch with veteran Sid Varney or Charlie Gurganus behind the plate. Both Blair and Tranavitch showed up well on the Florida "spring training" cruise, with "Train" pitching a one-hitter for five innings.

The rest of the starting lineup, although still indefinite, will probably see Joe Brookshire at third, Zero Allen or Ed Austin out in centerfield, Stan Goodman or Numie Cranford at second, Willard Hobbs at first, Ed Lamb at rightfield, Rip Ryan at short, and Don Ward or Couch in left.

About the Guests

Washington and Lee, with the power hitting of husky first baseman Brian Bell, Jr., defeated Springfield last Friday, 5-1. According to Tar Heel Coaches Bunn Hern and Walt Rabb, the Generals have a good team and will give Carolina a stiff fight.

Although nothing definite can be said of the caliber of the defending Tar Heel team, it can be assured that the Carolina club will "play 'em nine innings and not take anything for granted," declared Rabb and Hearn yesterday. It was last season that the Tar Heel crew gained statewide fame for having the scrappiest and fightenist team in the Southern regions.

After the Monday engagement, the Tar Heels will finish the week out with games against Carnell Tuesday, Michigan State Wednesday and Thursday, and Virginia Tech Friday.

Vic Seixas Wins As Locals Blank Michigan State

By Joe Cherry

Carolina tennis team opened its season with a bang yesterday afternoon on the local courts by sweeping to a 9-0 victory over the Spartans of Michigan State college.

A good-sized crowd braved one of the hottest days of the young spring season to watch Coach John Kenfield's netmen whitewash the visitors by winning every singles and doubles match of the aftrencon.

Surprise Starter

Captain Vic Seixas, the Tar Heel's injured star, was the surprise starter of the meet. Seixas, the nation's seventh-ranking amateur who hails from Philadelphia, Pa., was not expceted to see any action against the Spartans because of a badly sprained ankle; but Coach Kenfield started him in the number one spot at the last minute and the Carolina ace promptly disposed of Bob Malaga in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3.

Charlie Rice, playing in the number three singles position, was the only Tar Heel to drop a set to the visitors. Tom Martin of Michigan State took the first set, 6-2, but Rice came roaring back with plenty of fight to annex the next two sets, both by a score of six games to two.

Plenty of Action

The first set of the doubles matches between Clark Taylor and Rice of Carolina and Malaga and Fieschmann of Michigan State provided the spectators with plenty of action. The Tar Heel netters were forced to come from behind in that first set before winning, 6-4. Taylor and Rice then went on to take the match by shading the Spartans, 6-1, in the next set.

Duke Wilder and Jim Winstead of Carolina were forced to the limit in defeating Mike Yatchman and Ken Kimble, 7-5, 9-7, in the number three doubles match.

The next matches on tap for the Tar Heel netmen are with Haverford here Thursday and Friday.

The summary:

Singles: Seixas (C) defeated Malaga, 6-3, 6-3; Taylor (C) defeated Fieschmann, 6-3, 6-1; Rice (C) defeated Martin, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2; Gruner (C) defeated Yatchman, 6-3, 6-4; Wilder (C) defeated Perillo, 6-2, 6-0; Dameron (C) defeated Kimble, 6-1, 6-3.

Doubles: Taylor and Rice (C) defeated Malaga and Fieschmann, 6-4, 6-1; Dameron and Gruner (C) defeated Periollo and Brevitz, 6-1, 6-2; Wilder and Winstead (C) defeated Yatchman and Kimble, 7-5, 9-7.

Stranahan Nabs Halfway Lead; Ward Falters With 75 to 146

GREENSBORO, March 26—(UP)—Frank Stranahan, muscular Toledo, O., amateur, slid back to 69 today after his sensational 66 on a rain-soggy course yesterday, but his two-day card of 135 kept him one stroke in the lead in the $10,000 Greensboro open golf tournament.

Defending champion Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago and Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, Va., were tied for second with 136. Mangrum tooled a 69 today to stay on Stranahan's heels, and Metz carded a 68 to match his first-round score.

Third place was a three-way time at 137. PGA tournament director George Schneiter of Ogden, Utah, shared that spot with Bobby Locke of Johannesburg, South Africa, playing his first American tournament of the year, and veteran Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Snead has won this tournament twice.

North Carolina's Harvie Ward shot a 75 which added to his yesterday's round of 71 gives the Tarboro lad a 146 total at the halfway mark. Though Strahahan is far out in front among the simon pures, Ward is now grouped in second position with several other leading amateurs.

Two other Tar Heels fell from the ranks of those who qualified for tomorrow's 36-hole final. Decatur Cunningham turned in his second 83 for a 166 total, while Jack Brantley soared to 88 for a two day score of 167.

Versatile Jimmy Thomas Is Top Tar Heel Swimmer

By Buddy Vaden

The numbers racket, though seemingly unknown to Chapel Hill police authorities, functions openly in Bowman Gray pool. And thus far Jimmy Thomas, Tar Heel aquabat, seems to be playing most of the numbers. The "name-it-I'll-swim-it-coach" is currently sporting numbers that go up into the thousands—2,225 to be exact.

That number, to the uninitiated, is the exact total of yards that the Carolina Champion has swum in official National Collegiate Swimming championship competition during the past three days—which amounts to more than any single swimmer on any of the 44 teams entered has swum in championship races.

That number, identifiable in the pool as the little blue plastic thing he always carries, has the distinction of being the first Tar Heel to reach a second place finish in NCAA swimming championship competition. He accomplished this feat in the 150-yard backstroke. On top of that he missed one of the top five places in the 1500 meter freestyle by less than his little blue fish. To top it all off, he cliamaxed Saturday night's program by placing third in the finals of the 440-yard freestyle.

Described by Coach Ralph Casey, Thomas is "the best collegiate sophomore swimming prospect in the country." What is better news to Tar Heel swimming enthusiasts is that Thomas has two more years of eligibility. By his senior year he ought to be a real champion say the men who know.

He started his swimming career in a Baltimore prep school and swam for the Tar Heels last year. In trying out for the Olympic team of 1948, he missed the backstroking squad by one-tenth of a second. Had he not been quite so excited—for it was his first really big meet in his life—he would have been on his way to London last summer.

It's gentlemen like Thomas, (and Norm Sper and Dick Twining, to mention only two more Tar Heel toppers) that have brought the Carolina swimming team national recognition.

Badminton Event To Begin Friday

Tickets are on sale at the CAA ticket office for the Southern badminton championships which will be held in Woollen gym April 1, 2, and 3.

Carolina's representatives in the meet will be Doris Beasley and Clark Taylor, winners of the state tournament at Durham last week. Both entries were sponsored by the Badminton club of the Intramural department.

Included in the Southern tournament will be women's doubles, mixed doubles, veterans men's doubles and veterans women's doubles.

Badminton enthusiastics from throughout the state are expected to be here to attend the spectacle, which will draw the finest badminton players from all over North Carolina.

Walter Rabb, University intramural director, is in charge of arrangements for the meet, which will draw between 85 and 95 contestants.

Pan Hellenic Dance Continues Weekend

The Pan Hellenic council-sponsored week-end, which began Friday night with the first of a two-day run of a vaudeville-type presentation, continued last night with a semi-formal dance in Woollen gymnasium from 9 until 12 o'clock.

With music furnished by Sonny Couble and the State Men, the Pan Hel annual dance featured the introduction of new Pan Hellenic council members by the outgoing president Ferne Hughes. At intermission, the annual scholarship cup was presented to the Chi Omega sorority whose members had the highest scholastic record this year.

The in-coming president of the Pan Hellenic council is Lucille Rieley, an Alpha Gamma Delta sorority member from Washington, D. C. Other newly elected council members are secretary Polly Rudolph, Chi Omega from Clarksville, Tenn., scholastic chairman Jean Hines, a Delta Delta Delta from Greenwood, S. C.

Jody Armstrong of Winchester, Va., in-coming president of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, Peggy Neal, of Lockport, N. Y. rush chairman of the Alpha Gams, Barbara Payne of Beckley, W. Va., in-coming president of the Delta Delta Delta sorority, and Patty Ann Frizell of Bristol, Tenn., rush chairman of the Tri Delts.

Others are Armecia Eure of Raleigh, in-coming president of the Chi Omega sorority, and Anne Lewallen of Winston-Salem, rush chairman of the Chi O's. The Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Delta Pi sororities have not elected Pan Hellenic representatives yet, and next year's vice president and treasurer of the council have not been chosen.

The Pan Hel week-end will close with the second performance of the Olio presentation Monday night in the Rendezvous room at 8 o'clock. Money raised by the two vaudeville-type shows will be used for the adopting of a European war orphan. Sent through the Foster Parents' association, the money will supply the orphan with food, clothing, and medicine for one year.

Sexy Gowns Banned By Catholic Leader

MILWAUKEE, March 26.—(UP)—The "Demure look" will be the vogue among Milwaukee's Catholic high school girls at spring proms this year.

The Most Rev. Moses E. Kiley, archbishop of Milwaukee, issued a directive that banned the wearing of strapless evening gowns, or any style of dress that bares the shoulders, at parochial high school dances.

Sigma Phi Epsilon Pledge Class Honored With Dinner, Dance

Sigma Phi Epsilon pledges and their dates were entertained last night at a formal dinner and dance at the Carolina inn by their fraternity brothers.

In a setting of purple and red, traditional Sig Ep colors, the dinner was held at 6 o'clock in the banquet hall with Charlie Linville as master of ceremonies. The dance followed, using the theme "Dear Old Fraternity," with Bynum Weathera and his Orchestra furnishing the music.

Impressive in their dinner jackets and black ties, the pledges with their dates formed a large Sig Ep heart in the center of the dance floor with Pledge Class President Jim Merrit and his date, Be Be Davidson, standing in the middle. When the figure was formed, the active members sang their fraternity song, "Dear Old Fraternity." A no-break dance for the pledges and their dates followed.

Honored guests were Dr. and Mrs. Cathy, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weaver, Mr. and Mrs Damond Turner, and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Henderson.

Jasper Attends Pan Hel Show

By Don Maynard

"May I use the adjectives 'excrutiatingly ridiculous' to describe the Pan Hel weekend-opening show, "East Lynne," and the sundry sorority shows presented between the five acts of Lynne?" asked Jasper Tutes of his girl, Orphelia.

"Well, I think it was one of the funniest shows I have seen in a long time," replied Orphy. "Everyone present at the Rendezvous room opening night, some 250 strong, seemed to enjoy the show. Even those in back on the leather couches. I think it's grand that the money gained from the shows will go toward the support of a war orphan."

"Yes, and the weekend isn't over, either," put in Jasper. "Folks will have another chance to see the 'Olio' Monday night in the Rendezvous. I'm telling everyone I know to see it."

"Who were those people talking to you at the bar, Jasper?" asked Orphy.

"Just some folks commenting on the show. Harry Pendergraft thought the 'Olio' was 'scintillatingly scintillating. . . . . Not even Umbriago should miss it!" Kay Shannon, of the Citadel, said. 'The parts between the acts of 'East Lynne' were best.' His orchid was to the four sororities who presented the between the acts skits.

"Julia McHenry and Sandy McEachern both thought it 'grand. . . real funny,' but Sandy went on and exploded with: 'The Olio went off and wound up with a bang!'"

The Rendezvous setting was in the style of the 1900's. Barmaids and placards decorated the nooks and crannies of the Room. Signs such as: "Only one egg to a beer;" "You watch your wife, we'll watch your hat" and "Please pray when served" dangled from pillar and coke bar.

"Some familiar faces I saw present among the barmaids were Peanut Baine, Betty Shumate, Peggy McKinley, Ann Huske, Clara Burroughs and Joe Romano. . . . I wonder if Joe was really serving, or just helping himself," Jasper mused.

DR. RAY C. PETRY, professor of church history in the Duke University Divinity School, who will speak before the Wesley Foundation at the University Methodist Church at Chapel Hill Sunday night, March 27, at 6 o'clock.

Dr. Petry to Address Church Group Tonight

Dr. Ray C. Petry, professor of church history in the Duke University Divinity school, will speak on "The Contemplative and the Active Life" before the Wesley Foundation at the University Methodist Church here tonight at 6 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Brooks Patten, director of the Foundation announced yesterday.

He taught history at Manchester and McPherson colleges before going to Duke university in 1939. Recently he has taught during summer sessions at the U[illegible] Theological Seminary of Columbia university.

"Best-loved memories were given by [illegible] Noll and Nancy Curtis. A close second was taken by Edye Kahler," Jasper critic's.

"And here's a moral, extracted from the Alpha Gam portion of the 'Olio': Men, if you want to snare THE girl for sure, 'sprinkle her. . . ahem, briarp. . . . french fries with Morton's pure.'"

Churches To Give Supper Meetings

Brandis Appointed Law School Dean

ROBERT H. WETTACH

HENRY L. BRANDIS

Prof. Robert H. Wettach, dean of the University Law school since 1941, has retired effective in June, and will be succeeded by Prof. Henry L. Brandis, a member of the Law school faculty since 1940, Chancellor R. B. House announced yesterday. The retirement and appointment were approved by the executive committee of the board of trustes in Raleigh Saturday.

Dean Wettach, who is to continue teaching in the Law school, came to the University in 1921. He is a native of Pittsburgh and received his undergraduate and professional training at the University of Pittsburgh and the degree of S.J.D. at Harvard Law school. He has served as a visiting professor in the law schools of the University of Pittsburgh, University of Kansas, University of Minnesota, and Northwestern.

During 1938-39 he was granted a leave of absence from the University to serve as assistant attorney general for the State. Professor Wettach served for three years on the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen. During World War I he was an ensign in Naval aviation in France.

Professor Brandis, a graduate of the University, accompanied Dr. Frank P. Graham as an adviser when the Senator-elect went to Indonesia in 1947 as one of the three-man UN Security Council commission to arbitrate the dispute between Indonesia and the Netherlands.

A native of Salisbury, Professor Brandis practised law in New York for two and a half years after receiving his LL.B. degree from Columbia university in 1931. Returning to North Carolina, he became an associate director of the Institute of Government. Professor Brandis joined the faculty here in 1940 as an assistant professor and served as an associate professor from 1941 to 1947 when he was made a full professor.

Prominent American dancers included in the reels to be shown are Doris Humphrey, Hanya Holm, Jose Limon, Valerie Bettis, and Charles Weidman.

The dance group, organized last fall, is under the direction of Foster Fitz-Simons who was associated with Ted Shawn for a number of years before joining the staff of the Paymakers.

Final plans for the spring dance festival, to be presented in Memorial hall on May 12, will be made at the conclusion of today's meeting.

There is no admission charge and all interested students and town people are cordially invited to attend the showing of the films.

Four Candidates Named by UP For Publications

The UP announced its party nominations for members of the Publications board yesterday, listing Billy Carmichael III for member-at-large, Tom Wharton and Bill Benjamin as senior members, and Dick Jenrette as junior member.

Carmichael, present sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, has served on the board for two years and was chairman last year. He served as sports editor of the Yackety-Yack during 1947-48 and has been a Tarnation staff member for two years. A commerce major, Carmichael is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and a Chapel Hill native.

Senior candidates Wharton and Benjamin are both Tarnation staffers; Wharton serving as co-editor of the humor magazine.

Wharton, a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity, served as an orientation counselor last fall. He is from Winston-Salem.

Benjamin has served in the Student legislature. He is a member of Zeta Beta Tau fraternity and is from Salisbury, Md.

Jenrette, present triply-endorsed candidate for editor of the Daily Tar Heel, served as assistant sports editor of the newspaper this year. At high school in Raleigh, he was sports editor of the school annual and newspaper and editor of the school handbok. He is rushing chairman of Chi Psi fraternity and pubbicity director of the University party.

Tryouts for the Sound and Fury spring show, "Livin' Can Be Easy," will be held in Memorial Hall tomorrow, from 4-6 and 7-10 o'clock, according to an announcement by President Mark Barker.

Compulsory Meet Set for Politicos

A compulsory meeting of all candidates, party chairmen, and campaign managers will be held at 7 o'clock tonight in Hill hall, Al Winn, chairman of the election board announced today.

Winn said, "The penalty for not attending this meeting is disqualification of any candidate unless an adequate excuse is presented within 48 hours" He added that final rules and regulations as set forth in the election laws would be read and discussed at the meeting.

At 7 o'clock Thursday night students will be introduced to all candidates at a rally in Memorial hall. Major candidates for top offices in student government and publication will make short talks on their campaigns at this time.

Kerr, Buchan, Wharton, Gibson On CP Slate

Banks Talley, chairman of the Campus Party, anounced yesterday that CP nominations for the Publications board were Bill Buchan for member-at-large, Tom Wharton and Charlie Gibson as senior members, and Tom Kerr, junior member.

Buchan took a discharge from the Army to edit an 8-page Army newspaper in the Bremen enclave from January, 1946, to January, 1947. He returned to Chapel Hill as a journalism major in 1947 and has served on the Daily Tar Heel for two years. During the last summer session he served as managing editor and is now the associate editor of the DTH.

Dr. Graham Will Be Sworn In Today As North Carolina's New Senator

Leader Gets Big Sendoff Here Sunday

Audience Hears Heartfelt Talk

By Sam Whitehall

"In accepting this call to Washington," the little man with the white hair said, "I know that I have your understanding and that your prayers are going with me."

Dr. Frank Porter Graham fought hard to keep the tears back.

"The most difficult decision of my life was the one to leave the place, the people and the institution which have been such a happy part of my life for over 40 years. For Mrs. Graham and myself, I thank you from the bottom of my heart for coming to our home to say goodbye to us today."

And Frank Graham looked unhappy as he said the last words he would ever utter in public as the president of the Greater University of North Carolina—the school which has become the liberal stronghold of education in in the South under his leadership.

More than 1,500 students, faculty, adminisration members and just plain friends of the 62-year-old educator had filed into the big white house on East Franklin street to say bon voyage to Dr. Graham. At 5:45 Sunday afternoon they stood on his porch, on his lawn and overflowed onto the sidewalk to hear his last goodbye before he left for Washington to take the oath of office as a member of the United States Senate. It had been less than a week before—last Tuesday night—when Gov. Kerr Scott had dropped the political bombshell which rocked not only the state but a great deal of the country as well, when Governor Scott had said calmly, "While I'm on my feet. . . . I want to make the announcement that your next senator, if your executive committee is willing, is Dr. Graham."

On Sunday open houses, as the University band played "Hark the Sound" on his lawn, as student body President Jess Dedmond said, "1950—we're hoping. . . ." and as hundreds of his students and friends stood close around Dr. Frank, a mixed feel-

Satirical Dance Program Will Be Featured Tonight

Weidman Group Will Give Show In Memorial Hall

By Charlie Gibson

A program of comic and satirical dance interpretations will be offered free to University students tonight at 8 o'clock when Charles Weidman brings his widely-celebrated theater dance company to Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

Weidman, recognized by many dance critics as the foremost American male choreographer and soloist today, heads the dance concert group that will be the fourth presentation in the Student Entertainment series this year, following such earlier noted artists as Hazel Scott, Negro pianist, and the Trapp family singers from Austria.

The SEC is annually appropriated funds by the Student Legislature to bring high quality entertainment to the campus, all its presentations being admission-free to the student body. Consequently, I.D. cards will be the only entrance requirement for students tonight when the Memorial hall doors open at 7 o'clock. At that time faculty members, student wives, and townspeople will be allowed to buy tickets for 75 cents each, it has been announced by Scotty Venable, SEC chairman.

THE THREE SYLPHS shown above are enticing a barefoot, carefree clown in one of the satircal dance sequences to be presented tonight at 8 o'clock when Charles Weidman's theater dance group appears in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee.

The program beginning promptly at 8 o'clock will consist of five sequences danced by Weidman and nine members of his company, including Peter Hamilton, Betty Osgood, Betts Lee, Felisa Conde, Carl Morris, Sherry Parker, Paula Caputo, Nick Vanoff, and Jack Ferris. All these are now-experienced ex-students of Weidman's New York dance studio conducted between tours since 1928.

Before the first intermission the company will perform Peter Hamilton's original "Dance for Five" and Weidman's popular "Fables for Our Time" based on Because at that time, on the floor of the United States Senate, he will be sworn in as new junior senator from the state of North Carolina.

Graham arrived here this morning to prepare to take the oath of office. This evening, hundreds of Tar Heels, many of them University students, arrived to view the ceremonies tomorrow.

It was only a few weeks ago that Sen. J. Melville Broughton died here of a heart attack and left the vacancy which Dr. Graham will fill. It was only one week ago that Gov. Kerr Scott, who is also in town for the ceremonies, announced Broughton's successor.

The new senator from North Carolina will be holding the first political post of his long and varied career as an educator. As he completes his oath of office, he will automatically terminate a 19-year term as president of the University of North Carolina.

In the past few years, Dr. Graham has helped draw up President Truman's civil rights program, has represented the United States in arranging a peace in Indonesia, and has helped settle an oil industry dispute, at the request of Mr. Truman.

Under the administration of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, Graham was named vice-chairman of the NRA Consumers board, chairman of the National Advisory Council to the Cabinet Committee on Economic Security, member of the President's Committee on Education, vice-chairman of the National Defense Mediation board and member of the War Labor board, on which he served until 1945.

Dr. Graham has been serving as head of the Oak Ridge Institute for Nuclear Studies, a post which he automatically resigns along with his University presidency when he is sworn in tomorrow.

CP Head Releases List of Nominees

Campus party chairman Banks Talley yesterday released the names of three dormitory women, one town woman and seven town men as CP candidats for student legislature in spring election.

They are Marilyn Meeks and Jean Minshew (6 month), women's dormitory district 1; Kitty St. John, women's dormitory district 2; Jody Armstrong, town women district 1; Vestal C. Taylor and Jack Street, town district 1; Allen Tate, Dick Proctor and Marvin Koonce, town district 2; Ralph Hebb, town district 3 and Bill Buchan, town district 4.

All candidates are competing for 12-month terms, with the exception of Jean Minshew, who is running for a six-month seat.

Laski Is Scheduled to Speak On Campus Thursday Night

Dr. Harold J. Laski, member of the executive committee of the British Labor party and a professor at the University of London, will speak here at 8:30 Thursday night in Hill hall on "The Structure and Function of the Labor Union in America," Dr. C. B. Robson, head of the political science department, said yesterday.

The 55-year-old Briton arrived in this country aboard the liner, ueen Elizabeth, last week and was immediately barred from making two lecture appearances at the University of California in Los Angeles. However, Harvard university which was not included on his tour invited him to speak on April 26 at its law school forum.

The New York Times has quoted Professor Laski as saying, "I have done nothing to make the University of California mad at me." Laski was further quoted as saying that he suspected two factors brought about the cancellation. One was "revenge for his activity in the Labor party. The second was that Dr. Clarence Dykstra, Los Angeles provost of the university and a close friend of the British social scientist, had recently invited to the campus two professors who were released by the University of Washington for alleged Communist connections, and that the Regents were retaliating.

Los Angeles provost of the University of California later said that the cancellation was due to the university's rule that all lectures before its Institute of Industrial Relations must be delivered both at Los Angeles and at Berkeley. Dr. Laski has since been asked to appear on any dates between April 8 and 18 by University of California officials.

Federalists Name Williams Leader

Nat Williams was chosen to head the slate of officers for the United World Federalists student chapter for the coming quarter. John Lineweaver was elected secretary-treasurer and Bill McLendon vice-president of the organization.

Williams is a member of the staff of the Daily Tar Heel, a member of the Student Legislature, where he serves on the Ways and Means Committee, and a member of the Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

A meeting will be held next Thursday at 5 o'clock in the Grail room to make plans for a series of study discussions for the coming quarter and to appoint a chairman to head the Radio committee. This meeting is important and all members are urged to attend.

Dr. Allport Plans Address Here Today

Dr. Gordon Allport, head of the psychology department at Harvard university, will speak here at 1 o'clock today at a Faculty club luncheon in the Carolina inn, President Walter Spearman said yesterday.

Dr. Allport will talk on "Academic Objectivity and Having Convictions." He will be introduced by Dr. Arnold Nash of the department of religion.

On Thursday, the psychologist will be the featured speaker at the first spring educational colloquium which will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Peabody hall.

Teacher's Meeting Slated Wednesday

An important meeting of students in the education department who have completed, or who will complete certificate requirements before September 1949 will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 in room 201, Peabody building, Dean Guy B. Phillips announced yesterday.

The purpose of this meeting, he said, is to discuss with these senior students the question of certification and to distribute blanks to be filled in as part of the placement program.

YMCA Releases Nominations For Top Offices Next Year

A nominating committee of the YMCA Cabinet yesterday nominated Sam Magill for president, Charlie Gibson and Ed McLeod for vice-president, Charles Bartlett for secretary, and A. C. Mangum for treasurer. This slate of candidates for the YMCA election will be presented to the general membership at a meeting on Monday, at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The Y Cabinet stated today that all members of the YMCA will be eligible to participate in the election at the meeting, and that additional nominations may be submitted from the floor.

Magill, the presidential nominee, served as vice-president of the Y Cabinet and as president of the Southern Area Student council of the YMCA. Magill is also chairman of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, a member of the Student council, and a member of the Monogram club.

Gibson is a member of the Y Cabinet and is a recently elected delegate to the Southern Area Student council of the YMCA.

The other vice-presidential candidate, McLeod, has served as chairman of the social committee of the Y and a member of the executive committee. He also was a delegate to the SAS council and has been adviser to the Chapel Hill Hi-Y.

Bartlett, who received the nomination for secretary, served on the Y cabinet during the past year. Mangum, nominee for treasurer, has served on the cabinet for the past two years.

Prestige Returns

Square Dance, Party Calls For Cleaning of 'Tin Can'

In 1938 Woollen gymnasium was completed and the Tin Can, which had been the scene of all Carolina dances, took second place to the new building both in the way of sports activities and campus parties.

The Tin Can, which is still being used for physical education classes, is receiving a special cleaning and decorating job this week however, in preparation for a square dance to be held Friday night at 8:30 under the sponsorship of the Montreat Social commission.

Since the dance is primarily a "get acquainted" party, students are urged to come without dates.

A large rectangular building located some 75 feet west of Woollen, the Tin Can was built in 1924 and served as the University gymnasium until 1938.

The Germans, Grail and all other campus dances were held in the Tin Can with the band usually on a stand in the center of the building. Most of the decorating for the "big-name band" dances was done with fire proof crepe paper.

Dr. O. K. Cornwell, head of the physical education department, said that as far as he knew the dance Friday is the first square dance to be held in the 25-year-old building.

All's Quiet (Reasonably) on the Political Front

MAYBE THE CAMPAIGN'S JUST STAYING underground, but it sure is quiet on the political front these days. In fact, the intense quiet has a lot of our local politicoes slightly worried. They're beginning to wonder what's going to pop. From this corner, it looks like just about everyone is banking on getting into the run-offs, and they are just saving their energy for the final week of campaigning which will mean everything. . . . . but if anybody's worried about winning the first round of the fight, they'd better get on the ball. . . . . Election day comes exactly one week from now.

The Student party threw a nice reception for its candidates Sunday evening in Graham Memorial. A number of people dropped in to say hello to the SP standard-bearers. . . . . By the way, has anybody seen these SP questionaires they've been passing around? Apparently just trying to get general student sentiment, the Student partyers have asked a number of questions on publications, the appeal system, imports, the parking problem, and what have you. . . . . Typical question: "Do you think that Tarnation is as good a humor magazine as a college student body should publish?" . . . . Come on, boys, ask us a hard one. . . . .

Our Prayers Go With Him

Today at noon, Dr. Frank Porter Graham will be formally sworn in as a United States Senator from North Carolina. As evidenced by the huge crowd of students and friends who attended his final open house Sunday afternoon, the prayers and best wishes of the University community will be with him.

We readily realize that our loss is the nation's gain and we are truly thankful that a man as great and as humble as Dr. Graham has been chosen to represent us in Washington.

The people of North Carolina and the people of the nation will be expecting great things from his presence in our Senate. We are confident that we will not be disappointed.

And while we are aware of the great loss to the University through his departure, we are confident too, of the progress that the University will continue to make under the guidance of Controller Carmichael and the three chancellors.

When Dr. Graham was called to duty last year by President Truman to go to Indonesia, Mr. Carmichael, along with Chancellor House, Jackson and Harrellson took over the reins temporarily during his absence.

Now that they have been called back to that same duty again, we need have no fears about the future status of any integral part of our Greater University of North Carolina, for it is in good and capable hands.

Two Kinds of Politics

Campus politics will come to a head during the week just preceding spring election. All the plans and deals which have been laid during the past months will be hauled out before the public view and the student body will be buffeted by the criss-crossing winds of political bombast. No one will be able to ignore the proceedings and fifty percent of us will even vote.

As the heat of the race increases, the issues, real and imaginary, which have been drummed up may be forgotten and become replaced by a test of personalities. This is only natural in a highly localized community such as ours.

The trouble is that when personalities are closely involved, so are reputations and human feelings. There are two ways to run a campaign of this nature. One is to point out the better qualities of one's own candidate. The other is to disparage the opposing candidate. The exercise of the latter method can make an otherwise innocent affair a sordid whispering campaign which can hurt an individual for life.

No one ever knows where whisper campaigns originate or at least no one ever seems to know. There is nothing more cowardly or reprehensible than to hide behind the mask of "I heard" to strike at a man's reputation.

The individual student ought to consider it a direct insult to his intelligence when he is told some back-room filth about a political candidate. The simple question "Where did you get your information?" will embarrass the political panderer into silence.

They are the worst sort of thieves, these gossips, for they steal what cannot enrich themselves but which cannot be replaced to the owner—one's good name.

There is nothing as pretty as sod on which no one has trod.

In Chapel Hill, there are two kinds of sod: the downtrodden kind that never quite had a chance; and then there's the fine, young, upstanding grass that leaves most lawns green with envy.

The choice is simple. And so is the moral to this story: Don't walk on the grass, for remember you wouldn't do it in your own living room.

Gertrude Stein would say that a cup is a cup is a cup. But after all, how much respect could you expect a fine, upstanding stein to have for a poor lowly cup.

Which brings to mind the thought that there are also those who being in their cups or drinking from them, seem to have little respect where they throw them.

The moral to this story is that there is many a slip after the cup reaches the lip, and these slips are showing all over the campus.

Adelaide

To Play Ball Or Plow Mule?

Dear Miss Addle:

I am a high school football player and will graduate soon. I weigh 215 and play tackle and was elected All-League tackle this year. Seven different colleges and universities want me to play for them next year.

My problem is whether to stay on the farm where I am happy or come up to some college and be a football star. One coach offered me room, board, tuition, a car, and money for "expenses." Another coach offered money and a guarantee that I'd pass all my courses. All of the offers are good.

My big brother played college football and now he's punchy and can't even drive a mule. Is this college education stuff really worthwhile, or are they pulling my size 14 foot.

Wladislav

Dear Wladislav:

A college education is the ideal of every 100% American youth. In college you can learn all types of interesting information such as astrology, paleontology, neurology, and Greek. You also learn the great traditions of our country. Of course I never played football myself and don't know whether it is a bruising game or not—it may also be very educational. From what I hear football players are very popular and have many girl friends.

You must decide where you will be happiest, on the farm with your mule, or at college with intelligent girls and boys. Perhaps an extra year in high school might give you time to decide.

Dear Auntie Addie:

I am about to have my second date with a boy; maybe he will want to kiss me. Should I let him, or take a chance on losing him? What is good etiquette?

Keenan Cutie

Dear Keenan Cutie:

Send for my free booklet, "A Kiss In The Dark Isn't Always a Lark." Manners vary in every country; in fact in some places a girl is not kissed until married, but we, in this nation, are not quite so formal.

If you have been properly introduced, like the boy, think he is serious, and are certain he does not have trenchmouth, you might take a chance on about the sixth or seventh date.

Dear Dr. Addle:

My son is a genius, but he has one bad trait left from his childhood—he still throws spitballs. Recently he was flunked out of UNC despite his brilliance. Do you think this is fair?

We come from an excellent family dating back to the Mayflower and this failure is a bitter blow to us. My son wants to write a novel exposing the evils of UNC, but I think he should swallow his pride and apply for readmission. Who is right?

Mother

Dear Mother:

Spitballs are very unsanitary and I have no sympathy with you; just because your family goes back to the Mayflower does not entitle you to throw spitballs, and neither does genius. I find this highly disgusting and believe the young man needs a good spanking—that's what was done in my day.

Wshington, March 28—Everybody wants to get into the act, or where there's a wind there's a way:

Our House of Representatives allots certain days for the passage of "unanimous consent" bills, usually meaning bills so inocuous and unimportant that no one has sufficient interest to oppose them.

The other day a particularly trivial measure, having to do with certain procedure in the house judiciary committee, came up for unanimous consent. Motion was made for its passage, and Speaker Sam Rayburn banged the gavel, declaring it was duly passed.

But the gavel-echoes had barely subsided when Rep. Wright Patman, of Texas, leaped to his feet.

"Mr. Speaker," he protested, "you promised me I could speak on that measure!"

"So I did! so I did!" admitted Speaker Sam. He banged the gavel again, declaring he had rescinded his action in passing the bill.

Mr. Patman then proceeded to speak for an hour. Four other members, thus granted an unforeseen opportunity to spout, followed him with buckets of words.

All, it developed were for the bill. When they had concluded, the Speaker banged the gavel once more—and the bill passed again by unanimous consent.

I have a feeling that the Republican Party is going to be haunted by that rent control thing. The only opposition in the senate to continuing rent controls came from the G. O. P.

Of 78 senators voting, only 10 cast their votes against extension. Three other Republicans opposing the bill were paired with pro-bill Democrats.

The 13, who are due to hear themselves blasted as tools of the landlords and the real estate lobby for a long time to come, are Republicans Bricker, of Ohio; Butler, of Nebraska; Cordon, of Oregon; Ecton, of Montana; Gurney, of South Dakota; Kem, of Missouri; Mundt, of South Dakota; Wherry, of Nebraska; Williams, of Deleware; Young, of North Dakota; Carehart, of Indiana; Jenner, of Indiana, and Cain, of Washington.

That's going to be great fodder for the Democrats when they go to the polls again. Wanta bet they won't make the most of it?

Mr. Joey Adams, the comedian who tours the country with singer Mark Plant and ex-lightweight champ Tony Canzoneri, reports from Las Vegas, Nevada, where, he says, apparently everything and anything goes.

Mr. Adams asserts that the Mayor of Las Vegas, rallying to the defense of his community, told him it has no juvenile delinquency.

"Are you kidding?" Mr. Adams quotes himself as retorting to hizzoner. "There's nothing to be deliquent about. Everything is legal."

A lady of my acquaintance apparently didn't read any newspapers during last November.

A vote that threatened to be painfully close was coming up in the Senate. Republican and Democratic whips were scurrying around the capitol like mad trying to round up all the Senators on their side they could muster.

Senators were being practically pushed into the chamber as Vice President Barkley called for the vote. It was one of the biggest turnouts of the 81st Congress.

This lady I mentioned, Mrs. Lucille Loimert, of Hollywood, showed a seemingly intelligent interest in the proceedings. She nodded sagely when I explained that the Republicans sat on one side of the center aisle and the Democrats on the other.

She surveyed the packed chamber long and hard, counting under her breath, finally, in great surprise, she said:

"Why, there seem to be more Democrats than Republicans?"

The spring music season had an auspicious beginning Sunday evening when John Brinegar, tenor, gave a recital of Italian, German, French, and English songs in Hill hall.

The audience was not particularly large, but those who had remembered Mr. Brinegar's compelling rendition of "If With All Your Hearts," in "Elijah" last January, and, more recently his work as "Filch" in "The Beggar's Opera," were on hand for this recital which makes him eligible for a Bachelor of Music degree.

Music of the 17th century, including two Mozart songs, made up the first group. But Mr. Brinegar did his best singing of the evening in the second section, which was devoted to five songs by Johannes Brahms. As a composer of lieder, Brahms stands beside Schumann, Franz and Wolf. The rang of his songs in mood and style from humor to great solemnity and depth—all demonstrated in the ones Mr. Brinegar gave—exhibit fully the fertility of Brahms' genius. The voice parts are invariably simple, singable and fluently melodious. The accompaniment, which was admirably played and modestly acknowledged by Barbara Tritt, progresses from the most elementary chords to virtuoso-like passages. There was especially pleasing contrast between the second and third of these songs: "Der Schmied" (The Blacksmith) and "Sonntag" (Sunday). Two operatic arias, one from Verdi' "Il Trovatore," the other from "Don Giovanni," completed the first half of the recital.

Gabriel Faure, the very gifted Frenchman who died in 1924,wrote three of the four songs Mr. Brinegar sang after intermission. The remainder of the program was English: Ralph Vaughan Williams, Walter Morse Rummel, Randall Thompson, and "The Clown's Song" by Robert Schumann. It was also good, in this final group, to hear a song by the Englishman Roger Quilter, who is noted for his songs in Shakespearan settings. Mr. Brinegar sang Quilter's "O Mistress Mine."

At the end, the young artist was called back to sing an encore. It was the famous "Old Mother Hubbard, in the style of Handel."

Mr. Brinegar does not have a really powerful voice, nor is he always able to keep it under perfect control. But he does have excellent tone, particularly in the middle register, better than average enunciation, and a great gift for handling himself on the stage. It is almost possible to believe that he would be a pleasure to watch, though he didn't sing a note!

The Right To Speak Freely

By Jonathan Marshall

The World Peace Conference certainly upset New York's usual outward calm last week. It wasn't only the pickets around the Waldorf, but also the principles involved, and everyone was talking about it.

A taxi driver told this columnist that "the whole bunch should be put on a boat and then atomic bombed;" other people were not so violent in their emotions but everyone had an opinion. Maybe that in itself, the fact that people thought for a change, was enough justification for the Scientific and Cultural conference.

The main point of argument was whether a communist dominated group should be allowed to meet and perhaps spread propaganda. The opposition, or at least the intelligent members, claimed that the conference was not free, it was planned in advance, and it was being run from Moscow.

Of course there were the noisy groups who picketed. They, in effect, said "it's a plot to overthrow the American way of life," which is a rather stupid approach. Cardinal Spellman, the great upholder of Americanism who ranted against a group of pickets a few weeks ago, did not oppose the Catholic War Veterans picketing the staid Waldorf Astoria where the conference was held.

Regardless of what the World Peace Conference finally come out with, it is a very dangerous thing in a democratic country to condemn a meeting before it is even held. It is denying the Constitutional guarantee of free speech and assembly, and it is also depriving a group of the legal concept that a man is innocent until proven guilty.

Who are Cardinal Spellman, Sidney Hook, and the Legion to oppose the meeting. It is true that a great number of the sponsors were Communists, perhaps the majority; however, there were many non-commies represented also. Men such as Albert Einstein, Norman Cousins, Rex Tugwell, Louis Untermeyer, and Thomas Mann are among the greatest minds of our time, and they were at the conference of sponsors.

The National Association of Manufacturers rarely takes an intelligent liberal stand on international affairs, but one can't help but thinking that their invitation to the Russian delegates was the most intelligent proposal made.

The NAM offered to take the Russians on a tour of America. This is good for two reasons, first it shows that we are willing to be friendly and that our country is not afraid to let Russian leaders see it, and secondly through the opportunity of seeing free people working together and prosperous some ideas might permeate through the iron curtain.

America has nothing to gain by adopting Communist tactics of preventing free speech; we can only lose. People tend to think that freedom only applies to those who agree with them, but that's the quickest method of strengthening fascism in this country. The best weapon against Communism is showing the world we are democratic in deed as well as in word.

Wrong Slant On Story

Editor:

The statement by your reporter that the Life panel on religion resulted in a "thorough round of criticism of religion" and that "students taking part in the discussion generally agreed that religion is slowly disintergrating and that churches are not fulfilling their religious duties" could not have been further from the truth.

WhWile a full report will soon be released in Life magazine, we the undersigned, who participated in the panel, believe the general conclusion reached was that there was evidence in our society of a much needed religious revival. While the present approach by the churches was subjected to criticism and suggestion for improvement was made, it was generally concluded that such a change could best be made through the church organizations.

Tar Heel Baseballers Face Cornell At Emerson Today

Ray Blair Scheduled to Start On Mound for Local Team

After yesterday's baseball game with Washington and Lee's Generals was rained out, Coach Bunn Hearn's Tar Heels will try it again this afternoon at 4 o'clock with Cornell the opponent.

Ray Blair, veteran right-hander, is slated to get the mound assignment in today's tussle with the Big Red. Blair was scheduled to go yesterday, but when the rains came his assignment was shifted to today. Charlie Gurganus will take care of the receiving.

The rest of the lineup will run as follows: Lester Couch, Zero Allen and Ed Lamb in the outfield, Willard Hobbs at first, Stan Goodman at second, Rip Ryan at short, and Joe Brookshire at third.

No definite plans have been made for rescheduling of the rained out game. It was scheduled to start at 4 o'clock, but the coaches of the two teams waited until 4:40 before officially calling the game off. At that time the rain was slight, but the field was muddy and dangerous to play on according to Tar Heel Coach Walt Rabb.

After today's game, the Tar Heels will finish out the week's schedule with a two game series against Michigan State on Wednesday and Thursday and a single contest with Virginia Tech—the first Southern Conference contest for Carolina—on Friday.

Last year the Carolina club made a clean sweep of all championship titles in this area, winning the Conference crown, the Big Four title, and the NCAA District championships. In the NCAA Eastern Championships, the Tar Heels went to the semi-finals where they were tripped up by Yale, which went on to take the finals in the East.

Cornell will introduce the 1949 home game schedule that will see an invasion of three Northern teams—Michigan State, Cornell, and Yale — Michigan State and Yale both playing a two game series.

The first Big Four game on the Carolina schedule is not until April 12 — which gives the Tar Heels plenty of time to get into shape for the defense of their loop crown. With all teams in the circuit apparently much improved, the Chapel Hill nine will have its roughest Big Four schedule in several seasons.

Lacrosse Squad Drills Intensively For Initial Game

Coach Bill Darden has been drilling his lacrosse squad intensively for the past few days in preparation for the stickmen's first game of the season this Thursday against Delaware. The contest will be played on Navy field where special bleachers have been set up for spectators.

In practice this week Darden is placing emphasis on offensive and defensive plays. He has been especially pleased with the defense which is shaping up to his liking.

Considering that the majority of his charges have never played lacrosse before and that many of them have never even seen an official game, the Carolina mentor believes that the 40 members of the squad have picked up the game fast. He doesn't expect to cut the team but will carry this number throughout the season.

Two more games have been added to the schedule which originally listed six home matches. One contest is slated for April 5, against the Norfolk Division of William and Mary at Norfolk, and the other tilt will be played in Lexington on May 7, with V.M.I. furnishing the opposition.

The freshman squad will also see action in four games with the Duke freshmen.

Spring Drills Begin

With 85 candidates answering head Coach Carl Snavely's opening call, Carolina's spring football drills got underway in rainy weather afternoon on Navy field.

This spring's preparations for the fall gridiron wars is expected to last about four weeks and will terminate with the annual Blue-White intrasquad game in Kenan stadium.

Allen Wants Men For Soccer Drills

Coach Marvin Allen announced yesterday that spring soccer practice which started yesterday would continue through May 14.

Allen urged all men with or without experience in soccer to come out and try for the team. Drills will be held on Mondays through Thursdays on the Intramural field.

At the conclusion of the spring drills, a coaches and officials clinic will be held. Coach Allen will probably bring down several nationally rated officials to demonstrate rules and techniques to coaches and officials in this area.

Although the 1949 schedule has not been completed. Allen announced that N. C. State, Pennsylvania State, Maryland and Richmond Professional institute have been added to the card.

Netters Meet Today

Carolina's varsity tennis squad will be out for its second victory in a row over Michigan State when the Tar Heel netters take on the Spartans on the local courts this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The meet was not scheduled until yesterday when the Spartans requested a return match after a conflict in their original schedule was discovered. The Tar Heels whitewashed the visitors, 9-0, Saturday.

Zetas, Graduates Tops In Murals; Program Praised

By Lew Chapman

It is generally agreed that the Winter quarter intramural program was one of the most successful that the hard-working mural department has ever conducted. But it remained for a statistical resume of the quarter's activities to bear out these assumptions and the final tabulations are indeed a source of encouragement to the mural bigwigs.

A total of 1808 students participated in 1949 Winter quarter mural athletics, 613 of whom were newcomers to the overall program. The greatest increase of participants, of course, took place in the basketball leagues with boxing and handball also showing a decided increase in enthusiasm.

Spring Lineup

Coach Walter Rabb and his aides are now launching their spring lineup of athletics and with such popular warm-weather sports as soccer, softball, track, tennis, archery, horseshoes and swimming, the participation and enthusiasm has a definite chance to surpass the high-water mark set this winter.

In the annual battle in the fraternity and dormitory divisions for the highest number of points, Zeta Psi of the frats and Town of the dorms have commanding leads at the present.

The Zetas have a total of 734 points for the two quarters, a 15 point margin over the second place Sigma Chi. Phi Gam, Phi Delt and Chi Psi round out the top five fraternities with all having a good chance at the coveted cup presented at the end of the school year to the leading intramural fraternity, providing one of the five pieces together a productive spring program.

Zetas Maintain

Zeta maintained the lead that it assumed at the close of the fall quarter with ranking boxing and basketball teams while Phi Gam, winner of the boxing program, and Sigma Chi picked up a multitude of credits in the pugilistic field. Chi Psi climbed in the standings by winning the handball championship and producing a semi-finalist in the cage tourney.

In the Dorm division, Town is far and away the leading group by compiling 734 points, safely ahead of the runnerup outfit of Emerson. Emerson has earned 576 markers while the third place Med School has 533.

Snead Scores Two-Under Par Win Over Mangrum in GGO

GREENSBORO, March 28—(UP)—Durable Sam Snead, who won the first Greensboro open golf tournament in 1938, sloshed through the rain today to win the 12th tournament's playoff with a 69, two under par and two ahead of Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago.

He became the first man to win the tournament three times.

Slammin' Sammy, veteran pro from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., thus won first money of $2,000 and cut Mangrum's share back to $1,400 and a cut of the gate receipts.

Snead apparently had the tournament in the bag yesterday with 276 after the regulation 72 holes. He had left the course when Mangrum birdied the last hole to tie him.

Snead's two-stroke win today did more than add $600 to his purse. It squared accounts for the Tam O'Shanter tournament last year in Chicago, when Mangrum beat Snead in a similar playoff.

Putting Weak

Snead's putting is often his weakest point. But today, in a rain that was a drizzle at the start and a downpour at the end, Sammy tapped them in when they counted.

Several thousand dripping fans followed the pair around the 6,630 - yard Starmount Forest course to the 18th hole. There Snead's ball stopped well on the green, 20 feet from the cup. Mangrum's shot was short, and his second rolled to within three feet of the pin.

But Snead's putt stopped only inches from the lip. With a broad grin, Mangrum picked up Snead's ball and conceded.

Two Strokes Behind

Lew Worsham of Oakmont, Pa., and amateur Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., had finished two strokes behind the leaders yesterday with 278's. Stranahan, who set the pace in the first two rounds, dropped behind in the third when he shot a 73. Worsham had the best final round, a sizzling four-under-par 67.

Bobby Locke of South Africa, making his first 1949 appearance in America, shot a 279 to deadlock Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, Va. Locke was under par in each of the first three rounds but faded to a three-over-par 73 on the last 18.

Cary Middlecoff, who had dominated the PGA tournament circuit since mid-February, proved the biggest disappointment to the spectators. The Memphis dentist finished in a tie for 13th place with a 284. He had won three of the last five tournaments and finished second in the other two.

Carolina's Harvie Ward finished far behind the winners with a 12-hole total of 292. In the last round of play he had scores of 75 and 72.

Carolina Relays Set for Saturday

Preparations are now being made this week for the Fourth annual running of the Carolina relays set for Fetzer field Saturday afternoon.

The entry list this year is sure to exceed that of last year when seven teams entered the meet. In addition to some of the top Southern conference cinder squads, Princeton and Tennessee are definite entries Saturday.

Although no score is kept at a relay meet, Maryland was considered champion last year after capturing seven first places. The Terps will be back strong this year, but the Tar Heels will be favored to capture several events in which the Maryland team excelled in '48.

Mermen Leave For AAU's Tonight

By Larry Fox

A nine-man crew of Tar Heel swimmers embark on the final lap of the seasen tonight when, accompanied by Coaches Ralph Casey, Mike Morrow, and Don Draper, the Carolina contingent entrains for Daytona Beach, Fla., and the National Amateur Athletic union championships.

The Tar Heels will join many of the other teams which competed in the NCAA tournament held here this past weekend for the annual AAU event and with the addition of two men, Buddy Crone and Jesse Greenbaum, who were ineligible for the NCAA meet, should be strengthened for their season finale.

Paced by sophomore Jim Thomas, who tallied all seven of Carolina's points, the Tar Heels finished in ninth place in the 26th running of the NCAA championships.

Thomas, who came in second in the backstroke and third in the 440-yard freestyle, established three new Southern conference records over the weekend as a league rule provides that record-breaking times turned in by members of the Conference in a meet which is open to loop members go down in the SC books.

His time of 19:57.4 in the 1500-meter freestyle, which was good for sixth place, easily broke the loop mark of 21:45.4 established by Carolina's Bob Hutton in the Southern conference meet this year. The next two marks lowered by the Baltimore star were his own. Thomas' backstroke time of 1:34.2 was 2.4 seconds under his record time of last year while his 4:46.2 in the 440 was a tremendous improvement over both his Conference mark of 4:57.6 and his pool record of 4:54.0.

Greenbaum and Crone return for their last collegiate fling in the AAU's with Crone being entered in the high and low diving and Greenbaum in the sprints and 400-yard freestyle relay.

Norm Sper, Captain Dick Twining and Steve Osborne will comprise the medley relay team, which will perform at Daytona Beach. There is a possibility that a second relay team of Thomas, who will also be in the 220, 440, and/or individual medley; Dan Breeden, and Ike Norwood will be entered.

Norwood, Twining, Osborne, and Floyd Drew will make up the freestyle relay quartet.

Dick Jamerson, manager of the the NCAA meet and head coach of the Tar Heels now on leave, had to depart immediately after the close of the championships, but requested that thanks be left for all those who helped out in various official capacities during the meet . . . Of champion Ohio State's 49 points, 21 were collected in the diving events. Two men, Bill Smith and Bruce Harlan tallied 12 each for the Buckeyes in recording double wins.

Some 1,000 spectators turned out at Emerson stadium Sunday afternoon to witness the Chapel Hill Dog Show sponsored by town citizens for the benefit of the local Humane society. "Terry's Christopher Kringle," a black Cocker Spaniel owned by Kelly Mote, won first prize—an engraved silver trivet. Second prize, an engraved silver ash tray, went to William Alexander for his "Col. Blackberry Cobbler III," a Dalmatian.

Fifty-three of the 100 entries in the show were Cocker Spaniels. Dr. Kenneth Cuyler and Claudius Jones, both of Durham, were the judges.

Dr. L. L. Rogers, Dr. S. A. Nathan and Dr. L. L. Vine, all of Chapel Hill, were the show superintendent. The show was under the direction of the following committee: Mrs. S. A. Stoudemire, chairman; Mrs. L. L. Vine, vice-chairman and Mrs. George Demas, secretary and treasurer.

The committee said, "we especially want to thank Wentworth and Sloan for engraving the prizes, Orville Campbell for printing the entry blanks. Ted Danziger for furnishing the refreshing drinks. (The drinks were not sold, but the spectators contributed $28). Our hearty thanks go to Dorgan L. Jennings who has been our announcer.

Getsinger to Speak To Pi Delta Alpha

'Apple Tree Farm' Premier To Play Here on April 4-8

Tickets for "Apple Tree Farm," the Ida Lupino-William MacIlwinen musical comedy which will be premiered here April 4-8, are now one sale at the Playmakers business office in Swain hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard's. Admission will be $1. Mail and phone orders will be filled at the Swain hall office.

MacIlwinen learned in a long distance conversation with Miss Lupino Tuesday that she will be unable to attend the premiere of her show as she had at first intended. She is engaged in producing a movie, to be titled "Not Wanted," which will not be completed for several weeks after "Apple Tree Farm" is given here. The movie, the first one Miss Lupino says she ever backed, is being done by "a talented bunch of unknowns."

Miss Lupino, when informed that 20th Century Fox had written the Carolina Playmakers for the script of "Apple Tree Farm," said she would meet with the movie company this week.

Freshmen To Poll Class Members On Dance Plans

Freshman representatives will call soon at every room in the freshman dormitories to see how many members of the class would like to have dates brought over from WCUNC for the freshman dance on April 9, Dalton Ruffin, class president, announced today.

Ruffin stated that permission would be obtained and transportation provided for either blind dates or for regular girl friends from the Woman's college.

For those freshmen missed in the survey, Ruffin said that a representative would be in the Y lobby from 10 to 4 o'clock today to take their names and make the arrangements. Any further information about the date service can be obtained in the Y lobby during that time.

Invitation Orders Taken During Week

The Order of the Grail will begin taking orders in the Y today for invitations to the June graduation. Orders may be placed any morning this week, from 9 o'clock to 12 noon, for delivery early in May.

The invitations are available in Dutch folds at a cost of 15 cents each, and booklets, at 30 and 50 cents each. Graduating seniors are urged to place their orders this week because of the very limited supply expected to be available at a later date.

Congress Passes Compromise Bill For Rent Control

WASHINGTON, March 29.—(UP)—Congress today passed and sent to the White House a compromise 15-month rent control extension bill which tenant spokesmen called too weak and landlords called too harsh.

President Truman is expected to sign it before present ceilings lapse at midnight Thursday, although it falls short of his request that controls be "strengthened" and continued for 24 months.

The bill contains new provisions designed to guarantee landlords a fair income from their property, and to permit states and cities to get out from under federal controls whenever they wish.

The CIO, AFL and other tenant representatives have charged that these "loopholes" weaken the bill. But the National Association of Real Estate Boards asserted it will not give the landlords justice and warned President Truman that he may bring on a depression if he signs it.

State Leaders See Senator Take Oath

Former Head Remembers University; Says He's 'Dr. Frank' to Students

By Chuck Hauser

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Dr. Frank Porter Graham ended a 19-year term as President of the Greater University of North Carolina today when he was sworn in as the new Tar Heel junior United States Senator.

The little white-haired educator said, "I do," at 20 minutes past 11 o'clock this morning in answer to Vice-President Alben Barkley, who administered the oath of office.

The Senate convened at 11 o'clock. After the roll call, Sen. Clyde R. Hoey (D.-N.C.) obtained the floor. "Mr. President, Gov. Kerr Scott of North Carolina has designated Mr. Frank Porter Graham to take the place of the late Sen. J. M. Broughton in the Senate."

As Barkley read Governor Scott's appointment of Dr. Graham, the Governor listened from a seat on the Senate floor beside the University president.

Senator Hoey took Dr. Graham's arm, escorted him around the rear of the Senate hall, down the center aisle toward the Vice-President, and around to Barkley's left. The Senator-designate climbed the few steps to the Vice-President's desk and raised his right hand to receive the oath.

Senator Graham made slow progress returning to his seat, as he grasped the out-stretched hands that lined his way back across the Democratic side of the Senate floor.

As the new senator, Dr. Graham showed little change. In his office a short time after he was sworn in, he refused to let a student call him "Senator Graham," and laughingly insisted that "Dr. Frank," the name most University students know him by, was still fine.

"Send the students all my love," Dr. Graham said. "And of course, tell them I'll never be very far away and that I'll always be thinking of them."

Sen. John W. Bricker (R-Ohio), who last Wednesday demanded a Congressional investigation of Dr. Graham's clearance for access to atomic secrets by the Atomic Energy Commission, ignored Senator Graham on the floor today.

Bricker remarked this afternoon that the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy committee apparently was not going to make an investigation. He said he called for it because he merely wanted all the facts on Dr. Graham's clearance aired in public.

Distinguished persons sitting in the Senate galleries for the ceremony included Under Secretary of State James E. Webb, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, Editor Jonathan Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer, and U. S. Controller-General Lindsay Warren.

Chancellor Robert B. House, Dean of Students Fred Weaver, and Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday were present to head a delegation from the University at Chapel Hill, which included more than a score of students who had driven up to see their beloved President become the new Senator.

Senator Hoey's office estimated that over 300 persons, the great majority of whom traveled to Washington from North Carolina for the ceremony, were given passes to the Senate galleries to watch the proceedings.

Mrs. Frank Graham, much more nervous than her smiling, genial husband, sat in the senate gallery throughout the ceremony. Also looking on from a gallery seat was Hubert Robinson, Dr. Graham's Negro chauffeur from Chapel Hill.

Senator Graham today occupied Senate desk number 65 beside Senator Hoey—one which belongs to Sen. Russell Long (D.-La.). However, as the "youngest" Senator in seniority in the

A Discussion of the University Party Platform, Which Is Neatly Broken Down Into 10 Concise Points to Benefit University Students

HERE IS THE SECOND IN OUR SERIES of discussions of the platforms the three campus political parties are presenting to the student body for the spring elections of 1949. This one is on the University party's platform . . . . we will discuss the Student party planks in Friday's column, according to the present timetable.

The first plank in the UP platform says the University party will strive for a recreation center for dormitory men. We understand that there is a possibility that the Vets' Clubhouse will be available for such a purpose sometime in the future. Plank number says the UP will work for the advancement of the Greater University Student council, the organization made up of delegates from here, WC and State.

The University party next promises to "provide a better system of parking at the University and fight any measure that would restrict student cars." Plank four pledges the UP to "maintain the court system as it is today." Which means the boys and girls in the UP camp are satisfied with the present appeal system and the way it works.

The UP says it will "demand" the grading of instructors by students, and pledges to "establish a Campus Chest with quarterly solicitations." Which means that the campus would no longer be bothered with a new drive for funds every time it turns around. The Campus Chest, as its name implies, would be modeled after the national Community Chest, and would take in all the minor organizations which ordinarily would conduct their own private drives for funds.

Plank seven says the UP will establish a planning commission for a new student union, certainly a desperate need with today's large student body. Next, the University party men pledge "in-

Finds Tuba Too Hard

Opera Star's Son Likes Jazz

By Betsy Brunk

Besides having one of the swellest guys in the world for a father, Larry Peerce thinks the next best advantage to being the son of Jan Peerce, the famous Metropolitan Opera star, is having the opportunity for extensive travel. Larry, who entered the freshman class at the University last fall, has toured with his father and mother in just about every state in the union and a few which aren't.

Travel is, among other things to Larry, "interesting and educational." It was also immediately helpful to him last summer when he met Vincent Price, the stage and screen actor, on a trip with his father to Hawaii.

"I met Mr. Price on the boat going over," Larry said. "He found I was going into theater work and was most encouraging."

Larry will make his stage debut at Carolina next week as the mysterious businessman, Mr. Cuddy, in "Apple Tree Farm." Up to this time his acting experience has been limited to University radio programs and, before this, to high school dramatics in New Rochelle, N. Y. Although an excellent comedian (both on and off the stage), he says he prefers "straight dramatic roles."

Asked about his musical inclinations Larry gave a terse account of his career in that field.

"Played the piano for eight years. Still can't play the piano. Tried the clarinet for five months; after that it was either the clarinet or me. Next came the tuba. That lasted two days."

In spite of his difficulties with applied music Larry is a great lover of the art, "especially opera," he says. "I like jazz fine, too, all except Bebop."

Larry admits he won't be able to follow his father in a musical career but he sincerely hopes he may someday be as successful in the dramatic field. He will have five nights to get warmed up to that career next Monday through Friday in the Playmakers theater.

A Welcome Change

Perhaps the spring election won't be such a flop after all. If it is, it certainly will not be the fault of the political parties who have gone all out to introduce their programs and their candidates to the campus.

Two of the newest additions to the campaigns are the series of huge pictures in the YMCA building, sponsored by one party, and the open reception held in Graham Memorial Sunday night by another.

The reception, complete with refreshments, was attended by some 150 students. One party member estimated that 50 per cent of those there were politicians and 50 per cent were "just plain voters." This percentage, though it is alarmingly small, is nevertheless an increase over the usual participation in such similar events.

The pictures in the "Y" are the source of constant attention to all those who enter the popular building. Undoubtedly, they will cause a great deal of discussion and will help persuade the "just plain voters" to investigate the worthiness of all the various candidates.

The new projects are different and they're a welcome change to the usual poster-distributing campaigning of the candidates. If more such methods can be introduced, more students will take an interest in the elections and will consequently turn out on election day and vote.

Name Your President

The Board of Trustees of the University once again have the extremely difficult job of selecting a new president for the University. Many names have already been mentioned as possible successors to Dr. Graham and many more people have prominent men in and out of North Carolina who they would like to see as the new University president.

The Daily Tar Heel feels that the students, who are likely to be affected the most by the final choice, should have some say in the selection of the new head. With that thought in mind, we are encouraging students to write to the Write Away column and give any suggestions they might have on who the new president should be or what qualifications should be considered.

We would request, however, that before any names are submitted that the writers of the letters ascertain definitely that they themselves think their candidates are qualified to head the threefold University.

The man who is finally selected will be accepting a tremendous responsibility. While his office will be one of the most respected in the state, the task which he will have to perform will be the most difficult.

The first suggestion as a possible candidate for the position is on this page today. We sincerely hope more will follow.

Get Out And Walk

Three full blooming cherry trees just outside the Daily Tar Heel offices in Graham Memorial erase any doubts that spring has arrived in Chapel Hill.

Besides the numerous blooming trees and shrubs on campus, evidence of spring is noted as the increasing political activity churns into a climax before the election Tuesday and in the "warm weather" clothing that has appeared in classrooms and in the "Y" court.

Indicative of spring also was the flock of convertibles zooming out to Hogan's Lake last Saturday afternoon. The return of the golf players outside Battle-Vance-Pettigrew can also be added as another conclusive piece of evidence.

Aside from temporary cases of spring fever, this is the ideal time of year for enterprising students and faculty members to get out of doors and see Chapel Hill at its finest. The doors are open and the exercising groups are increasing, won't you join us?

Return Of Music Planned Again

By John Stump

Music Under the Stars, which before the war was a mighty popular institution at Carolina, looks like it may be on the way back.

For the benefit of those students who have arrived on campus since its suspension, Music Under the Stars was held at Kenan stadium where, on specified nights, the loudspeaker was set up to play music for anyone who cared to listen.

Under the new plan, the Forest theater will be used for this; although Kenan is still under consideration. Main trouble at the Forest theater is the difficulty in getting proper lighting connections while the opposition to use of the stadium is furnished by groundkeepers down there who fear for the carefully preserved turf if the plan is used.

However, it is an excellent idea, and should be in operation again before the spring quarter is over.

Non-fraternity men who don't care to pay a cover charge or swill beer in order to have a place to take a date may soon have somewhere other than the Rendezvous room to take her, according to Student leader Dick Gordon.

Gordon has been discussing with administration officials the possibility of turning the University Veterans association clubhouse over to the campus at large. UVA, which has been a large and thriving organization here, no longer needs exclusive use of its headquarters, and it is expected that the group will have even less use for it as the campus veteran population continues to decrease.

Admissions director Roy Armstrong says that the veteran population will be substantially reduced next year, and other administration leaders have told Gordon there is a good chance that the clubhouse will be available at the end of this quarter.

Although some other campus organizations are interested in appropriating the building to their exclusive use, we agree with Gordon's comment that "Other organizations have financial resources which, unfortunately, are not available to the campus as a whole. In view of that and the fact that the clubhouse could thereby be of more value to many more people, I am wholeheartedly in favor of making it available to all of the students as a supplement to the Rendezvous."

Little groups of signpainters were seen Monday morning touring the campus and leaving in their wake No Parking or Restricted signs on almost every foot of available space in the central campus area.

According to Chairman Steve Millikin of the Safety Committee, this was the least painful of two alternatives. Because of the highly congested conditions there, it is impossible to continue to permit unrestricted parking. According to Millikin, until such time as more parking space can be found or constructed, his committee has been forced to either limit student ownership of cars or restrict parking areas, and it has chosen the lesser of two evils.

Millikin promised that he will fight any attempt to limit student ownership of cars unless it becomes absolutely necessary. However, the parking problem remains as one of the campus' reddest sore thumbs.

In an attempt to let the campus know what is being done to solve it and of just what the problem consists of, this column is currently engaged in going over the whole situation and will publish the story in the near future. In the meantime, Millikin says that the Safety group urges anyone with some constructive suggestion to get in touch with him, any member of his committee, or the Daily Tar Heel.

Congresswomen Hide Age

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, March 29—Coy Congresswomen: of the nine distinguished gentlewomen in the 81st Congress only three reveal their ages in their Congressional Directory biographies.

The three age-tellers are Reps. Helen Gahagan Douglas, of California, 48; Cecil M. Harden, of Indiana, 54; Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, 68.

The six who exercise woman's ancient prerogative of having no birthdays are Senator Margaret Chase Smith, of Maine, and Reps. Reva Beck Bosone, of Utah; Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, of Connecticut; Katherine St. George, of New York; Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio; and Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey.

Judging by current events it might seem advisable for a Congresswoman to give her age, particularly if she is beyond flightly youth. She never can tell when it might come in handy as an assurance of respectability if she is named as the other woman in a marital dispute.

Among the many perquisites of Congressmen are free trunks. Each legislator gets a good sized trunk on taking office, gift of the taxpayers.

Most Congressmen choose to send the gift trunk back home to be used by their families. But a great many are averse to paying the freight.

So they have worked out a gimmick. They place a copy of the Congressional Record in the trunk, which makes it government busines, and use their congressional rank to mail the trunk home free.

We have a very young man in Congress who used sports to get himself known to his constituents.

Twenty-seven-year-old Hugo Sims, Jr., of South Carolina didn't participate in athletic contests. He just broadcast them.

For a year and a half before he announced his candidacy he attended every game in his district—football, baseball, basketball, boxing, in a truck with sound equipment. He described the game to the spectators over his amplifying system, always taking care to mention that it was coming to them courtesy of Hugo Sims, Jr.

By the time election came around his was probably the most oft repeated name in the section.

Young Mr. Sims is a lawyer but he has never had time to practice law. He went into the army as a private in the paratroopers and emerged a captain after participating in D-Day on the Normandy beachhead. He finished law school after discharge and promptly ran for Congress.

He's our yougest Congressman, being six months younger than his nearest contemporary, Rep. Lloyd M. Bentsen, Jr., of Texas.

Rep Sims says he is going to use his campaign tactics to keep him in solid with his constituents. He's going to go back home to Orangeburg, S. C. this summer, get out the sound truck and drive around to see all his voters.

He says he's going to drive up in front of every farm house and invite the farmer by loud speaker to come out and tell him his problems.

If one spends enough time listening to our erudite Senators he will learn a little about everything, as witness this zoological exposition that Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, tossed into the midst of a racial equality debate:

"Mr. President. I read an article last week about the abused ostrich. The ostrich, as Senators know, has the reputation of sticking his head in the sand when danger approaches and trying to hide his eyes so he cannot see the danger, and therefore feel that he is safe.

"The article says the ostrich is a very unhappily and unfairly treated bird; that as a matter of fact, he is shrewd and possesses a lot of tricks. He will always leave his eyes up enough so he can see, while he has so arranged his feathers as to make his body take on the appearance of a bush.

"Now I was thinking of the ostrich a little bit more in the way that is generally thought of this unhappy bird. I was going to say that I am afraid that our friends on the other side of the aisle are behaving a little like the ostrich is supposed to act."

I contend that Senator Pepper is too harsh with the G.O.P. I know a lot of Republicans who can make themselves look like a bush.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, of Wisconsin, was quite pleased with himself for a short time last week. He could envision the front pages of the local papers emblazoned with his words.

The Senate District of Columbia committee was holding a meeting and Mr. McCarthy was having considerable to say. The reporters were industriously taking notes.

Just as the Solon concluded his remarks, the scribes leaped up and raced for the door. Mr. McCarthy could envision them dashing to the telephones and pantingly repeating his words of wisdom to the rewrite men.

Not until later did he learn the disillusioning truth. The reporters had made their frenzied exit because they had just learned that a man had shot himself to death in a corridor of the senate wing.

Book of Month Club Choice Is Reviewed

The Book of the Month Club calls its March selection "one of the most readable novels presented to the American public in many years." The book is "Double Muscadinee," by Frances Gaithehr (Macmillan. $3).

The scene of the story is a courtroom in sleepy Athens, Miss., where a mulatto slave girl from New Orleans is on trial for her life charged with poisoning the son of her new owner.

Testimony at the trial and flashbacks skillfully woven into the main story disclose the half-hidden, half-suspected scandals in the life of the slave girl's purchaser, tall, handsome, easy-going Kirk McLean, the disillusionment of his child fime Martha and the martyrdom of his first wife's sister, Sis Hat.

A southerner herself, Miss Gaither captures the spirit, the language and the drama of a remote Mississippi town in the days of slavery. The Book of the Month Club chose well.

Flying Balls

For The Golfers

By Sam Whitehall

The golfers are back out on the lawn in front of BVP. Long ago I gave up any hope of their quitting the game a moment when some innocent stranger was walking by, but now I have a new suggestion for them.

The men who are doing something in front of the Planetarium (I say something 'cause there's all sorts of speculation as to just what they are doing) have erected a beautiful fence all around the area in which they are working, thus forcing pedestrians to seek other fields.

The simple solution of the flying ball in the BVP area is to simply erect a similar fence over there and send all traffic around the Methodist church or down in front of Graham Memorial. Above all else, we must allow the golf players to play in the middle of the campus because there's no other place down around the gym, or else it's too far to walk.

Write Away

Pierson For President

Since the selection of a new President for the University of North Carolina is a matter of such crucial importance we would like, at the expense of stating the obvious, to suggest a man who we feel is eminently qualified for the office.

This man is Dean W. W. Pierson, who is a towering scholar of impeccable intellectual integrity, would be a worthy successor to Dr. Graham. Dean Pierson is well-known and respected in academic circles, and his selection would doubtless be applauded by the educational world as continuing evidence of the greatness of the University of North Carolina.

It is our hope that the Board of Trustees will give careful consideration to this distinguished "scholar and gentleman."

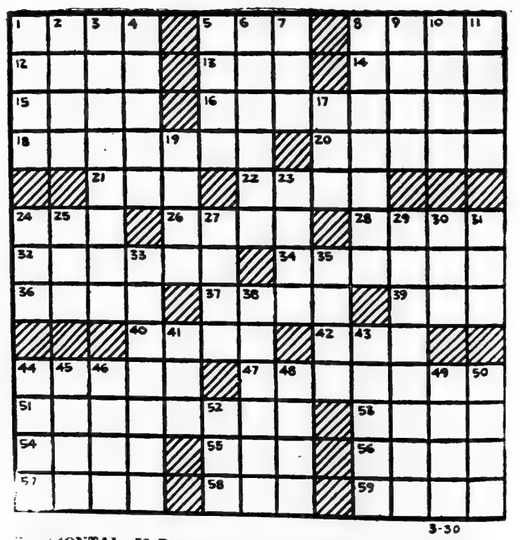
Where Is My Wondering Mail?

By Wink Locklair



A letter by David B. Ball and an editorial in The Daily Tar Heel last Sunday morning commenting on the vicissitudes of Drop-Add and several possible solutions to that problem brought forcefully to our attention some interesting trouble we've been having with the University Business Office.

When we moved from North street into Lewis dormitory last January, no bill or statement of room rent was immediately forthcoming. However, after checking with the people on North street a few weeks later, it was discovered that our bill for dormitory rent was being sent down there! Why we should be dunned at a private home when we were obviously enjoying the bedlam and congenial frivolity which characterizes life on third floor, Lewis, struck us as somewhat mysterious.

But a more perplexing state of affairs confronted us about our spring quarter rent. During the recent holiday, we visited Belmont Abbey one afternoon, our old Alma Mater. During some conversation with one of the good Fathers, we were told that a large, official-looking envelope addressed to us from the University of North Carolina, had arrived a few days previous. Since we had graduated from Abbey last September, the Reverend Rector had returned the letter to the sender.

On our return to Chapel Hill, we began investigating. Nothing for us in the mail. Later, our roommates received their statements from the University business office: Room rent spring quarter, $22.75. No such bill for us, though. However, as was inevitable, it was found out by our ex-North street roommate, that the business office was determined to prove that we were still living down there. At any rate that is where, for the second straight time, our statement was located. Inside was a tart letter, stating that "all bills for room rent are due and payable not later than March 23, 1949." The postmark on the envelope was March 17, and after sending the thing to Belmont, North Carolina, having the Abbey return it to the sender, who, in turn, shipped it down to North street, it was several days past the deadline.

Well, we paid our bill the other day and said nothing about it's circuitous route. It just seems doubtful if we'll ever receive a bill in our box for living in Lewis, that's all. Be we ARE down there, damned if we aren't!

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

A Washington Senator

A SPORTS PAGE reference to the Washington Senators usually refers to the group of uninspired baseball players which each year play in the American league for the purpose of having an even number of teams. But this is all about one of another group of Senators in Washington who also spend most of their time attempting to play with each other.

Now, this group of Senators plays the majority of its contests at home in an arena called the Senate. Yesterday in that oratorical arena, there appeared a rookie. His name was Frank Porter Graham. Which brings us to the question of what is Dr. Graham doing on the sports page in the first place.

Well, the thought came to mind that during the past days while everyone was yelling "Great Scott" in reply to Senator Graham's appointment, the newsmen of the state had written features about "Graham, the Educator," "Graham, the Peace Maker," "Graham, the Liberalist," etc., but no one even made mention of one of his greatest roles, "Graham, the Sportsman."

Graham, the Sportsman

IT'S NOT HARD to visualize and realize the extents of "Graham, the Sportsman." No such lover of mankind could not in turn fail to find a great devotion to athletics, man's self-devised test of his own mental and physical abilities. Senator Graham is Gus Phan himself. He rarely missed an athletic contest that was played within any radius of his current position and there was no more frequent visitor to the Tar Heel practice fields than the beloved Dr. Frank.

He's probably missing his regular spring baseball workouts about now. He liked to go down to Emerson, take off his coat, roll up his sleeves, and start throwing the ball around with the rest of the players. There was no loss of academic dignity, for here was a man who took the Presidency out to the students instead of keeping it cooped up in an office big enough to take infield practice in.

In this element, Dr. Frank was just one of the boys. Just another lover of a home run, a touchdown pass, or a winning goal. His ideas of freedom and equality fitted easily into the athletic point of view where a man is judged primarily on performance and not position or press clippings.

The Spirit Moved

HE REALIZED THAT the spirit of man was personified in the spirit of the game. Dr. Frank was never a great college athlete, but early in life he used his vocal ability to stir crowds in the role of University cheerleader. The generation up ahead can recall for you the day some many years ago that Frank Graham jumped from the stands one Saturday afternoon and cried, "We haven't lost this game yet. We can still win it if we've got the spirit."

Carolina was trailing Virginia 66-0 at that point and there were little more than two minutes remaining in the game. Yet, the Carolina stands rose as a man, and stood cheering hoarsely for the final moments of the game, firmly convinced that a Tar Heel victory might still be forth coming.

The Tar Heels lost 66-0 that day, or so they say, but the spirit of the school, which isn't measured in wins and losses, continued to thrive under such leadership as shown by Frank P. Graham. His term of office as President of the University began a Golden Era of athletics at Carolina that created All-Americans with names like Barclay, Bershak, Severin, Justice, Glamack, Jordan, Dillon, Seixas, Stirnweiss and many others.

Dr. Frank knew well each one of these great stars. He took an interest not only in their athletic endeavours, but in their backgrounds and personalities. He wanted to know them as he did all of his students.

The Bases Loaded

THERE WERE TIMES when all did not go well between the athletic men and the President. The ideologist, Dr. Graham fought the realistic idea of athletic subsidy on the grounds that it would contaminate both fields of athletics and academics in the University. Today, both sides have reached a successful compromise that allows for the greatest in athletics without the lowering of necessary standards.

Dr. Frank has gone, but to the athlete and the sports fan, it is easily explainable as simply a move from the minors to the majors. You can't keep the great players of life from moving up to where the competition is the thickest and the great stars turn in their greatest performances.

Frank Graham is a rookie again now. He'll have to make a name for himself in the legislative league as he did in the educational field. Among sportsmen, Mike Jacobs might say he favors his left too much to be a champion, while Branch Rickey might argue that he can't go to his right, but that's mere speculation.

Whatever the outcome, the "we can still win" spirit of Frank Graham will always remain with the University and its athletes. And the latter, in turn, will be rooting for pinch hitter Graham, who goes to Washington with the bases loaded.

Three Run Rally In Final Inning Nets Blair Victory

By Buddy Vaden

The Carolina baseball team opened the 1949 home season with an 8-6 win over the Big Red of Cornell. The Tar Heels piled up a three run lead in the sixth inning, only to go behind in the first half of the eighth. But a successful three-run rally in the last of the eighth put Carolina in the lead again and the game was called on account of darkness before the next inning could get under way.

This afternoon the Carolinians will face Michigan State in the first game of a two-game series. Game time is 4 o'clock.

Two Run Lead

Cornell grabbed a two-run lead in the second on hits by Murphy, Rider and Haley. But a beautifully-placed triple down the third base line and a wild pitch by Cornell pitcher Kenny Battles allowed Tar Heel catcher Charlie Gurganus to score, putting the Tar Heels within one run of a new ball game.

In the third frame Right fielder Ed Lamb slammed out a long double to score Zero Allen and Stan Goodman who got on by walks. Brookshire opened the inning with a pop-up to right and Allen and Goodman walked. Hobbs flied out to short. Then came Lamb's lengthy double. Gurganus finished the inning with a fly ball to shortstop Bob Haley. After three, Carolina had a one-run margin.

Two more runs were added to the Carolina score in the sixth when Rip Ryan, Tar Heel shortstop doubled and Lester Couch sent a long low fly down the first base line into deep right field just out of reach of Cornell's Jeff Fleischman, good for three bases. Couch scored when Lamb sent a high bounder out over second. On the play, Brookshire, who had walked, was put out on a fielder's choice.

Cornell Rallies

Cornell put a scare into Tar Heel hearts with a four-run, five-hit rally in the eighth. Fleischman opened with a single to center. Bob Murphy singled to left, putting Fleischman on third. Bob Rider, Cornell second-baseman, layed one right down the third base line for a double to score Rider and Fleischman. With Rider on second, Ed Winnick singled to center to drive in Rider. After Tesnow and Haley struck out, Dick Teel singled to score the final run for the Red Raiders.

The Tar Heels came from bebehind as darkness was closing in and tallied three quick runs to ice the ball game. Veteran catcher Sid Varney came in to open the eighth with a long triple that rolled to a stop against the right field fence, 361 feet away from home plate. Joe Eldridge ran for Varney on third and the next batter, Joe Brookshire, watched the third strike go by.

Zero Allen poled a low line drive out between second and first to score Eldridge. Stan Goodman singled to send Allen to third and first baseman Willard Hobbs cleaned the bases with a timely double into deep left. Lamb popped out to center and Gurganus struck out to end the ball game.

Game Called

Blair went all the way, allowing 10 hits, walking two and striking out nine. He was taken out at the end of eight and replaced by Andy Tranavitch. But the game was called before "The Train" could pitch to the first batter.

Joe Brockshire, the first Tar Heel batter to face starting pitcher Battles, was the victim of poor umpiring as he was pitched four balls and the plate umpire mixed up the count. In the end Brookshire flied out to right field.

Tar Heels Score Over Spartans As Seixas Stars

By Joe Cherry

Carolina's varsity tennis team made it two wins in a row over the Spartans of Michigan State with an 8-1 victory yesterday afternoon on the home courts.

Saturday afternoon the Tar Heel netmen made their season debut against the touring Spartans by whitewashing the visitors, 9-0. Yesterday, however, with Carolina's number one man pitted against Michigan State's second ranking netter, and the Spartan's top ranking netter playing the Tar Heel number two man, the Spartans were able to avert a shutout.

Victor Seixas, still limping from his sprained ankle, opened the meet by topping Fleischmann, Michigan State number two man, 6-3, 6-3.

Bob Malaga, top Michigan netter, provided the only Spartan win of the day when he came from behind after dropping the first set to beat Clark Taylor, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2. Charlie Rice put the Tar Heels back in the win column in the next match by defeating Yachtman, 7-5, 6-0.

Community Group Airs Views On Zoning Plan

The new Chapel Hill zoning ordinance was the topic of discussion Monday night at the quarterly meeting of the Chapel Hill Community council in Town hall. L. J. Phipps, member of the Town Planning board, explained the provisions of the zoning ordinance and showed how the new zones would arrange the town.

The zoning ordinance will divide the town roughly into five areas and will replace the old ordinance which has been in effect for over 25 years. Specific regulations for the width of lots and buildings, and minimum requirements for side, front, and rear yards are also provided by the ordinance.

John Parker, Town Planning board committee member, gave a report of the work done in a survey of land uses and pointed out how land uses will tie in with the zoning ordinance and the plan for acquiring street beds, recreation areas, and school areas for the expansion of the town.

A nominating committee was elected to select officers and present them at the annual meeting which will be held in May.

The last plank in the University party platform concerns scholarships. It is to "fight for the establishment of more scholarships for student aid."

WHEN 22-MONTH-OLD Joseph Blount Chesire, V, of Raleigh, youngest caller on Dr. and Mrs. Graham Sunday, was presented in arms to the U. S. Senator, he indicated a dislike at being hoisted up head high, so Dr. Frank pormptly agreed to meet him on his own level—the floor. Here, young Joseph scrambles over to greet the Senator, who seems as delighted as anyone. Joseph is the great-grandson of the late Bishop Joseph B. Chesire of the Episcopal church. Dr. Allport Says Teachers Must Use Own Convictions

The need for having convictions as well as exercising academic objectivity was stressed at the regular luncheon meeting of the University Faculty club yesterday at the Carolina inn by Dr. Gordon Allport, head of the psychology department at Harvard university.

Dr. Allport is spending several days at the University, delivering lectures under the auspices of the Hazen Foundation. He was introduced by Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the Department of Religion.

"I believe that participation in your own destiny is an essential part of the definition of democracy," said Dr. Allport. "Any conception of democracy must have both elements but I cannot give the proper ratio.

"We must commit ourselves to the convictions in which we believe, and we must make value judgments. I do not think we have been forced to face this issue in America as teachers have in Europe, but we are being forced now and political events may put us all on the spot."

President Walter Spearman announced that Lewis Mumford will be the speaker for the April 12 meeting of the Faculty club and Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Morehead planetarium, for the meeting on April 26.

RALEIGH, N. C., March 29—(UP)—State Labor Commissioner Forest H. Shuford charged today that "defenseless" North Carolina workers are being paid wages more in keeping with 1933 than 1949, "while Congress debates the merits of raising the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour."

Drive for UJA Opens Today For One Week

Cohen Is Chairman; $1,600 Goal Set

The seven-day 1949 campus drive for the United Jewish Appeal will open here tomorrow with a goal set at $1,600, drive chairman Larry Cohen announced yesterday.

Funds raised by the UJA support the program of the Joint Distribution committee for the relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction of Jewish communities in Europe and North Africa.

Other branches of the UJA include the work of the United Palestine Appeal, which carries on the immigration, settlement and economic development projects in the State of Israel and the activities of the United Service for New Americans, which offers reception, placement and adjustment services to all newcomers to this country.

During the past ten years the United Jewish Appeal raised and spent more than $503,000,000, a record sum for any voluntary agency, to speed its relief, rehabilitation and resettlement programs.

In announcing the opening day of the drive, Cohen said, "Displaced persons camps in Europe, a legacy of 12 years of Nazi oppression, can be completely emptied of Jewish refugees this year if the American Jewish community goes over the top in the drive of the UJA for refugees, overseas needs and settlement in Israel."

He continued, "The campus goal has been set at $1,600. This is a small quota for such a big job. Persons who wish to contribute and who have not been contacted by workers may make their contributoins at the Hillel office, second floor of the YMCA building."

Carolina Delegation Sees Webb, Acheson

By Chuck Hauser

WASHINGTON, March 30—The five-man student delegation that journeyed to this city to witness the senatorial installation ceremonies of Dr. Graham yesterday, spent 20 minutes in the office of James E. Webb and five minutes with Dean Acheson following the ceremonies on the floor of the Senate.

Jess Dedmond, who headed the delegation, Bill Miller, Wayne Brenengan, Gus Johnston and Ray Jefferies were ushered into Webb's office at exactly 2:55 yesterday afternoon for a "five minute" conference which turned out to last 20 minutes.

Dedmond said he called Webb's office after the ceremony for an appointment and was informed that the under-secretary of state would have a "busy afternoon."

But the group was lucky. A later call proved successful and they were told that they would be allowed five minutes beginning at 2:55.

According to Dedmond, "We were ushered in at 3 o'clock and engaged in a most pleasant conversation for a total of 20 minutes. We talked mostly about Dr. Frank during the meeting. The delegation was delighted with Mr. Webb's apparent ability and pleasant personality and especially his interest in the University."

Webb escorted the group into Secretary of State Acheson's office and introduced them. Dedmond said, "Acheson was very suave and looked like a diplomat. Our major impression of him came from his interest in Dr. Graham. Both were high in their praise of the new Senator."

By Herb Nachman

A campus-wide mass political rally, complete with band and torchlight parade, will get underway tonight at 6:30 in front of Memorial hall, Student Body President Jess Dedmond announced yesterday.

students will have to meet, hear and see the people they will be voting for," Dedmond said.

Ike Rolader, president of the University club which is sponsoring the pre-rally parade, said that the torches will be available at Memorial hall and urged political parties to bring banners and placards along for the parade.

The University band will lead the parade from Memorial hall to Columbia street, up Columbia to Franklin, down Franklin to Raleigh street, down Raleigh to the stoplight at Cameron and back to Memorial hall.

Dedmond said yesterday, "This is a called mass meeting of the student body. It will begin promptly at 7 o'clock in Memorial hall." Elections board chairman Al Winn will preside over the meeting. Winn said that all candidates are expected to be present.

Rolader said that Stormy Weathers and his band are expected to be on hand during the mass meeting and will play between the candidates' short speeches. He said that there will be at least 20 minutes of music during the program.

Speakers will include the three presidential candidates, Charlie Long, Dick Gordon and Bill Mackie who will be allowed three minutes each. All other speakers will be allowed two minutes only, Winn said.

Other candidates who will speak include those for vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the student body and candidates for the top publications posts such as the Yack, Tarnation and DTH.

Following the short speeches, all candidates on the spring ballot will be introduced to the students. For this reason, Winn yesterday urged that all office seekers attend the meeting.

The Communications Center is now planning to make a movie on student government here and it is expected that the first shots for the movie will be made during the parade and during the mass meeting in Memorial hall.

'Can Play Anything'

Chatham Ramblers to Furnish Music for Square Dance Here

The Chatham Ramblers, a string band which was organized before the war and can "play anything," will furnish music for the square dance being held in the Tin Can tomorrow night at 8:30.

"Before the war we had 13 boys who played in the Tin Can three or four times a week," leader A. G. Wilson, employee of Woollen gymn said. "'Fish' Wirley, who lived in Graham Memorial, would call the dances over a loud speaker and 300 or 400 students would turn out and have a big time.

"The boys don't have any favorite songs. We can play anything and sometimes (before the war) we'd play as many as 15 pieces in one set," Mr. Wilson said and leaned back on his broom with a big smile.

The band, which still has 15 members, reorganized six months ago and four members play for square dances at the American Legion hut every Saturday night.

All employes of the University gymnasium, the band members are led by A. G. Wilson violinist. Other members who will play for Friday's square dance are Harris and Seaborn Mitchen who play guitars, and Hyden Clarke whose instrument is the banjo.

A Discussion of the Student Party Platform Which Favors Some Things and Will Strive to Improve Others.

TODAY WINDS UP OUR SERIES of discussions concerning the platforms of the three campus political parties which they all pledge to execute faithfully, if placed in power by the student body next Tuesday. The Student party platform is a trifle long to be discussed in full. The major points we will take up. The rest may be read on any of the bright red and black posters hanging around campus.

The SP will oppose abolishment of the appelate power and will strive to provide facilities formerly rendered by the scuttlebut. They favor a single community chest on campus, favor the Traffic committee's program but are against limitation of student cars.

Other planks favor the underwrite of $1,000 to the Carolina quarterly from the unappropriated reserve, improvement of infirmary library, instructor evaluation system and recreation rooms in men's dormitories.

The final plank on the SP pledge calls for a committee of student leaders to work with the Student Legislature toward the "satisfactory solution of student problems."

Debaters Take Seats

Phi Group Installs Officers; Duncan Wins Speaker's Chair

The Philanthropic assembly installed seven new officers for the spring quarter in Phi hall Tuesday night.

Bill Duncan, political science senior from Narberth, Pa., replaced Dave Sharpe of Chapel Hill in the speaker's chair.

The oath of office was then administered to Speaker pro-tempore Emily Baker of Asheville; Parliamenterian Peter Gerns of Canton, Ohio; Treasurer Hugh Griffin of Reidsville; Clerk Douglas Carter of Winston-Salem; Sergeant-at-arms Bill Dawkins of Carey, and Critic Graham Jones of Winston-Salem.

Following Duncan's inaugural address all members assumed the rostrum to deliver short readings, which ranged from a dissertation on "Bock beer" by Dave Sharpe and a recipe for "puppies" by Bob Brooks to a passage from "Hamlet" by Peter Gerns and "The Charge of the Light Brigade" read by Bill Dawkins.

A motion by the Ways and Means committee to consider a bill banning Communists from UNC was voted down, and a debate on the Taft-Hartley bill was scheduled for next Tuesday's session.

Always One In The Crowd

An unsigned postal card to the Daily Tar Heel today reports a theft of a textbook from Lenoir Hall during the meal hours there. Because the card is unsigned, it cannot be printed in the Write Away column, but it is of sufficient importance, that we are reprinting it in the editorial column:

"I have just been the victim of a book stealing thief in Lenoir Hall. I am sure that there is little that I can do now to locate my stolen book, but I would appreciate any comment in the DTH which might help other students prevent such a misfortune happening to them. It is a heavy draw on a student's pocketbook to have to pay $3.79 for a new book when the only way he could have prevented the loss would have been by carrying the book through a long line with books in one hand a tray in the other part of the way."

While the majority of the students at Carolina respect and support our honor system, there is always someone in the crowd who muffs the deal. Such a person is the thief who stole the book in Lenoir Hall. Unfortunately, the victim is all too right when he says there is little that can be done about the situation, since hundreds of students leave their books outside the dining room while they eat.

It is our sincere hope that the supposedly stolen book was taken by mistake and that the person who took it has, or will, return it. The only way that further instances of this sort can be prevented is through an appeal to anyone who might consider stealing a book to leave it alone. Only through honesty to ourselves and our fellow students can the honor system continue to survive and grow on our campus.

Wolfe on Carolina Politics

Thomas Wolfe, the genius of Carolina, who has been called our "greatest alumnus" was editor of the Tar Heel during his years at the University during the first World War. Though he did not take a particularly active part in campus politics, he watched them closely and was often envious of those who were successful in the game.

In his first novel, "Look Homeward, Angel," Wolfe wrote of his years here and about the political scene during his time. Some of the things he mentioned haven't changed a great deal in the three decades since he graduated:

"The campus had its candidates, its managers, its bosses, its machines, as had the State. A youngster developed in college the political craft he was later to exert in Party affairs. The son of a politician was schooled by his crafty sire before the down was of his cheeks: at sixteen, his life had been plotted ahead to the governorship, or to the proud dignities of a Congressman. The boy came deliberately to the University to bait and set his first traps; deliberately he made those friendships that were most likely to benefit him later. By his junior year, if he was successful, he had a political manager, who engineered his campus ambitions; he moved with circumspection, and spoke with a trace of pomp nicely weighed with cordiality:

"Ah, there, gentlemen," "Gentlemen, how are you?" "A nice day, gentlemen."

"The vast champaign of the world stretched out its limitless wonder, but few were seduced away from the fortress of the State, few ever heard the distant reverberation of an idea. They could get no greater glory for themselvs than a seat in the Senate, and the way to glory—the way to all power, highness, and distinction whatsoever—was through the law, a string tie and a hat. Hence, politics, law schools, debating societies and speechmaking. The applause of listening senates to command.

"The yokels, of course, were in the saddle—they composed nine-tenths of the student body; the proud titles were in their gift, and they took good care that their world should be kept safe for yokelry and the homespun virtues. Usually these dignities, the presidencies of student bodies, classes, YMCA's, and the managerships of athletic teams — were given to some honest serf who had established his greatness behind the plough before working in the college commons, or to some industrious hack who had shown a satisfactory mediocrity in all directions. Such an industrious hack was called an "all-around man." He was safe, sound and reliable. He would never get notions. He was the fine flower of university training. He was a football scrub, and a respectable scholar in all subjects. He was a universal Two man. He always got Two on everything, except Moral Character, where he shone with a superlative Oneness. If he did not go into the law or the ministry, he was appointed a Rhodes Scholar."

Washington Scene

Mr. Hunter Has Troubles

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, March 30—Anybody want a hunk of White House floor, or maybe a strip of plaster, as a keepsake? The Public Buildings administration, no kidding, has been toying with the idea of selling the building's interior—chunk by chunk—to souvenir fiends.

The P. B. administration thinks Americans are so souvenir-crazy they would gladly buy enough fragments to pay the $5,412,000 estimated to repair the battered mansion.

Maybe, if you get in before the best pieces have been picked over, you can get yourself a nice backwater valve or vent cap for the mantle. By outbidding other souvenir nuts you might even acquire the plug out of Mr. Truman's private bathtub.

Not only would you have a hunk of building with which to bore the living billy-bedamned out of your friends, but you would be contributing to the repair of your chief executive's boarding house, You would be saving money for the other taxpayers.

Like most other disclosures in Washington, the P. B. A's idea was revealed in a roundabout way. It came out while assistant Commissioner Harry G. Hunter was testifying before the Senate Appropriations committee.

I have more than a suspicion that Mr. Hunter is sorry he opened his trap because a number of Senators jumped on him harder than a ton of the bricks he wishes to peddle, Senator Kenneth McKellar, Chairman, snarled, in effect that he would just like to see the P. B. A. try selling the White House's innards.

The witness had a bad time all the way through. He was asked how the $5,412,000 repair contract was going to be awarded, and returned the unhappy reply that "if legislation does not exempt us" it will be open to competitive bidding.

Senator Stiles Bridges, of New Hampshire, sneered and said: "Would you be surprised that I could write on a slip of paper which I would put into an envelope, two names and that one of them would be the general contractor who would get the job?"

The witness replied, miserably, that he would not be surprised at anything.

He brightened momentarily when Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, asked how much he estimated would be realized from the sale of salvage.

"That is something, that is very, very, interesting," beamed Mr. Hunter. "Everybody in the United States wants something out of that building. We have had requests for one square foot of floor which is under the President's chair."

The thought of selling a foot from under the president apparently stung Chairman McKellar. He caused the witness to squir mby snapping:

"You would have no possible authority to dispose of that. You talk about disposing of mementos in the White House. You have not a thing to do with that, and I want to tell you right now you had better not do it. You will get into trouble if you do!"

The witness (humbly); "Yes sir."

Gene Fowler, one of the writing men I admire most, has topped even his own great past performances with his new book, "Beau James," the story of Mayor James J. Walker.

Gene brings the fabulous Jimmy Walker back to life on every page. To one who knew New York's "night" Mayor, it is triply engrossing.

Jimmy Walker was no editor, but he had a great effect upon me in a business way. About the time I was starting this column he volunteered a few words of advice I have never forgotten.

University Party

UP Platform Reviewed

By Rita Adams

When University party members get together nowadays, their faces light up over the prospects of new things to come under the sponsorship of the party platform.

After concentrated effort on the project, UP people have made public the planks which their candidates will endorse-planks which are designed to help students as individuals. The main features of this platform, with something of the existing situation, are as follows:

1. To strive for a recreation center for dormitory men. This greatly needed facility will be in the form of a building something like the veterans' club now in use. The latter, however, will by no means be used for this purpose. The building is to be located in a place that will be accessible to the largest possible number of men living in dormitories.

2. To work for and to advance the student council of the Greater University. By developing closer cooperation among the three divisions they hope to improve each branch individually and to strengthen them as a whole.

3. To provide a better system of parking at the University and fight any measure that would restrict student cars. They plan to do this by conducting a survey to determine the parking capacity within three blocks of the center of the campus and the number of cars owned by students.

4. To maintain the court system as it is today. That is, they intend to continue giving students the right of appeal.

5. To demand grading of instructors by the students. Again working with a system already set up, they intend to develop its possibilities by making this grading compulsory and adding a better method of constructive criticism to professors.

6. To establish a Campus Chest with quarterly solicitations. The realization of this plan would eliminate constant solicitations for money among the students. In their place would be one concentrated drive for contributions to such worthy causes as the Red Cross, the polio fund, and the W. S. S. F.

7. To establish a planning commission for a new student union. The main purpose behind this plank is to start the ball rolling toward the building up of a fund for the new project. By doing this, they hope to stimulate a realization of the need for such a building.

8. To Indoctrinate all campus officers upon their election or appointment to their positions. This will constitute something of a formal training program that will give office-holders a clear conception of their duties and train them accordingly. One of the ramifications of the plan will include joint meetings of all newly elected officers in order for them to understand each other's duties.

9. To recommend that all University owned utilities be sold to private concerns. They hope, in doing this, to improve the present telephone situation and to lower electricity rates.

10. To fight for the establishment of more scholarships for student aid. At the present time there are less than 200 scholarships—far too few to counteract the proposed raise in tuition. By the increase in number, they hope to make it possible for a student to obtain financial help of some kind if he needs it.

Purchase Cards Explained

By Jim Southerland

The Campus Party murals hanging in the Y are raising a number of questions about the Purchase Card System and the National Students Association. Any CP Candidate can tell you about it but just in case here is a general outline.

The NSA is the major student's organization in this country. It represents one million students in colleges over the country and was organized to aid in solving the problems college students have in common.

The Purchase Card System is one of the plans the NSA has devised to help students financially. Under the system purchase cards are sold to students for one dollar. Arrangements are made with various merchants to give students holding the cards price cuts ranging from 10 to 30 percent. The merchants get good advertising and a competitive advantage while the students save on the things they buy.

The Purchase Card System is in effect in about 50 college towns and cities on the eastern seaboard and has proven successful. The card a student buys at Carolina will be good not only locally but, in any city where the system is in effect.

The natural question that comes to mind is will the Chapel Hill merchants cooperate with the plan. It is well known that competition is rather restricted here but it is equally well known that Durham and Raleigh merchants are eager for the Chapel Hill business. If the Chapel Hill merchants refuse to cooperate the students will be even more willing to take their business elsewhere in order to get price cuts. The latest indications are that the Chapel Hill merchants are worried about the possibility and will fall in line with the plan. The Campus Party has found that a majority of the students want the Purchase Card System instituted and the CP has the men who will do it. Student Government will not be a farcial plaything if students go to the polls and vote for the party that will work for government of, by and FOR the students.

A good deal of comment has been raised about the CP murals hanging in the 'Y'. There have been a few rumors that the pictures cost too much money. The murals not only did not require over spending but they cost only a minor part of amount legally allowed.

In order that the students may see that the CP isn't trying to buy the election, here is the story on the cost of the murals.

The election law specifically provides that the cost of the original prints of picture do not have to be charged to a candidates expense account. Work done by students with student owned equipment is also specifically excepted. The only expense chargable to a candidate's account for the murals is therefore the cost of the materials used for the reproduction. The paper for the murals cost 25 cents a running foot. Add to this the cost of chemicals, cardboard for mounting, nails, glue and etc. and the total cost amounts to about two dollars per mural.

Student Party

SP: Integrity, Desire To Work

By Helen Highwater

We of the Student Party feel that we, much more than any other political group on the campus, have nominated all of our candidates for their qualifications, integrity, and their desire to work for a better student government. Some think that we may lose many of the important offices because we have nominated persons who are not "too well known." We do not go along with those thinking people. We are confident of victory in the elections next Tuesday, but it is a sincere confidence; a confidence with appreciation and well-meaning.

We can see no worth-while reason for winning an election with candidates whose only intentions are to have their name glorified in the hometown newspaper. Our principles have not been compromised. We are supporting the best qualified people, discounting how their name is spelled, discounting how many socials they attend each night. We do not believe in expediency for the sake of expediency. This practice has injured student government in the past and will continue to do so as long as it is in practice.

The Student Party has always founght for, and will continue to fight for, a student government free and independent. One free of the faculty; one free of insincerity.

This election is a definite test of whether or not a man, in order to run for a political office, must necessarily be a "hot-rod" or a smooth-talking politican. In other words, is it completely necessary to nominate a so-called "practical" person?

Our platform, in word form, is not and cannot be a great deal different from those of the other political groups. It is very easy for a political party to place in its platform anything that will gain votes. On a whole, we are basing our platform on the character of the people we are supporting and on the foundation of the things we have achieved in the past. We are supporting the NSA and its policies as we did when it was not so expedient to do so. To clarify this point all you need to do is glance back over some old editions of the DTH and see who were the first people on the campus to come out for and support the policies of the NSA.

The only thing that we can fairly ask of you is when you are at the polls next Tuesday that you cast your vote for the candidates whom you think will benefit student government most; that you cast your vote for those you are sure are sincere in their desire to work for a better, and more representative student government.

U.S. Ignores Europe's DPs

By Jonathan Marshall

The ways of men are often rather devious and hard to understand, and the American people are perhaps the strangest in the world.

Before the war we were rightiously horrified by the deeds of Hitler and the smaller dictators, during the war we were horrified by the plight of people in war torn countries and in concentration camps, and after the war we still talked a lot about these people, but we have done almost nothing.

There are still about 800,000 displaced, homeless people in Western Germany and Austria, and yet they have been almost forgotten. 800,000 people with no homes; some of them are afraid to return to Communist countries, others have been so badly hurt in their native lands that they don't dare return, and some are children who don't even know where home is.

Our European policy the last few years has been erratic to say the least. ECA money has made it possible for European economies to begin to recover; politically we have weeded out many Nazi's although we have put many of them back in official positions, but we have done almost nothing for those who suffered the most.

It is unfair to say we have done nothing, for we have helped to maintain these people in prison-like camps, and under the Displaced Persons Act of 1948 we have taken in 4,500 refugees in seven and a half months.

England has taken in 80,000 DPs, and South America has taken many of them in, but not the richest country in the world.

The 1948 law contained so many restrictions and compromises that it has proven a complete failure. For some reason our Congress has the idea that it must maintain some mythical racial characteristic in our country, although their restrictions would have kept many of our greatest citizens out if applied in the past.

HR 1344 introduced by Rep. Celler would raise the quota of DPs to 400,000 and remove the restrictions, as would a similar Senate bill, but like the Stratton Bill in the last Congress they must still weather political pressures.

In order to give these people a chance to live decently in America the old bill should be superceded, and the DPs placed under normal immigration conditions with no restrictions as to race, religion, or national origin. For a nation of "half-breeds" we are awfully finicky about new members.

Incidently, the papers had an item recently disclosing that Fritz Kuhn, pre-war leader of the German American Bund was pardoned by a de-nazification board after serving a short sentence, and was then freed.

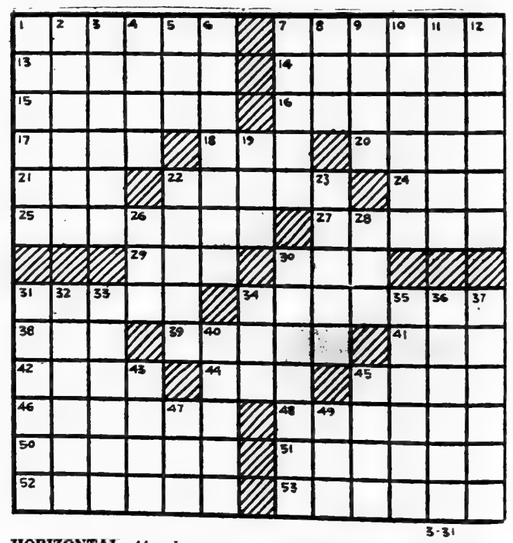
This great American is now applying for a reversal of the deportation sentence and is trying to re-enter the U. S. It won't be surprising if we welcome this fascist traitor back into our midst. The DPs will probably have to wait for many years though.

Hollywood Parade

Cowboys Have It Rough

By Aline Mosby

Hollywood, March 29—(UP)—Real cowboys wear faded blue jeans and beat-up boots, but it costs more to dress a Hollywood cowboy these days than a glamour queen.

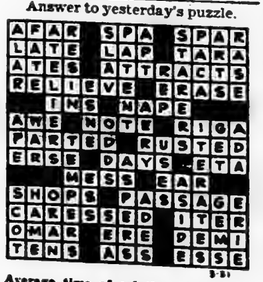


At least it does at the workshop of Marge Riley, who custom-makes glamorous giddyap clothes for western stars. And after she tallies a bill for Roy Rogers, he might as well have bought a number for his wife at Adrian's.

"Western clothes shouldn't be those same old plain things," says Miss Riley, who's a western gal herself, from a Wyoming ranch.

"They have to be of good material, as they take hard wear. When you add the workmanship, well, they just cost more than other clothes."

Thus Mr. Rogers, that symbol of the wide, open spaces, rides the movie range in a $75 shirt of biege wool shot with threads of 14 karat gold. The collar is a simple thing of gold kid. Under this shirt Roy wears $50 gabardine pants. His boots are liable to set him back $200 and his hat $50. The silver buckle on his belt can cost up to $100.



To a western circus star Miss Riley sells bright green and orange shirts trimmed with sequins, causing Buffalo Bill to turn over in his grave.

Linksmen Meet Haverford Six At Hope Valley

Carolina's 1949 golf team reaches the first hole in the course of a long links season ahead this afternoon, when the Tar Heel swingsters take on visiting Haverford college of Pennsylvania at neighboring Hope Valley country club. The first foursome departs at 1:30.

The locals will feature just about the same array of talent in their opening match that held down the clubs for Coach Chuck Erickson last year. Leading the list of returners will be the perennial star of the Tar Heels, Tarboro's Harvie Ward.

Ward has been playing some of his best golf during the earlier part of the year, having won the Tournament of Golf Club champions last month in St. Augustine, Fla. Last week in the Greater Greensboro open, the Tar Heel ace just couldn't make the putts drop and finished rather far behind the leaders.

After Ward, there will come Bob Cox, the old football extra point man, who is endowed with a lot of accuracy on the golf course, too. Cox will probably carry the brunt of the best ball in the second foursome.

Teamed with Ward in the front four looks to be Roy McKenzie, another rangy veteran of the Tar Heels who been a lot of rounds together. McKenzie's game seems improved over last season.

Jack Brantley will be a fourth veteran starter and should be the one to fill out the second foursome. Newcomer Oliver Sapp from Winston Salem will break into the lineup in the back quartet. Sapp is the most promising of the new candidates for the squad.

The sixth starter post is still in doubt. A trio composed of Harvey Oliver, Frank Broks, and Decatur Cunningham are tying for the position with the choice practically a toss-up.

Little is known of the visiting Haverfords as this is also their first match of the season.

From latest reports the 6,700 yard Hope Valley will be in fair god shape for the match after last week's rains.

Choo-Choo Made All-American Off the Field

Charlie Justice has received another honor. The All-American Choo-Choo will be cited tomorrow by Ted Malone, famed Westinghouse roving reporter, on his ABC coast-to-coast program as a "Good American."

Malone, whose program is heard over 221 stations at 11:30 a.m. EST Monday through Friday, names one man or woman each day for this special award. His selection is based on a record of good works for the community and fellow people of the nation.

Justice, according to Malone, is an All-American not only on the football field but also away from it, for he has accepted the responsibility of being what the kids who idolize him want him to be.

A little boy in Winston-Salem broke his leg playing sand-lot football and was broken-hearted because he thought he would never be able to play football again. So he wrote to his idol—Charlie Justice. Choo-Choo didn't sit down and write a reply. He got a friend to drive him the 80 miles from Chapel Hill, visited the boy in the hospital, and gave him the thrill of his life. This is just one example of the fine things Charlie Justice does off the football field.

In honor of the selection, the Choo-Choo will receive a "Good American" award certificate suitable for framing.

Lacrosse Team Faces Delaware In Opening Tilt

By Morton Glasser

After a lapse of several years lacrosse will make its reappearance on the Carolina athletic scene this afternoon when the Tar Heel stickmen meet Delaware in the first game of a three-game series. The contest will get underway at 3 o'clock on Navy field.

Coach Bill Darden has held practice sessions with his squad since February 22, and during the last two weeks the Carolina mentor has been drilling his charges on plays.

Darden has released a tentative lineup of Sommer, Taylor, and Bolgiano at attack; Poisson, Manning, and Murchison at midfield; Winius, Durham, and Timberlake at defense; and Vest at goal. Of these ten starters only Sommer, Bolgiano, Murchison, and Vest have had previous experience in the game. Some 20 to 30 reserves will be available for action.

Delaware Scrimmage Hopkins

Little is known about the Delaware team since the game today will also be their first meet of the season. The visiting stickmen however, have held scrimmage sessions this year with two of the lacrosse powerhouses of the nation, the National Intercollegiate champions, Johns Hopkins, and the National Open titleholders, Mt. Washington.

The Delaware team, which is spending most of its spring vacation as guests of the Tar Heels, will remain in Chapel Hill throughout the weekend. The two teams will meet again on Friday and Saturday for the second and third games of the series.

Brief Description

Since today's game will mark the appearance of an entirely new sport for many students, a brief description of the game might be in order.

Lacrosse is played by two teams of ten players each. The purpose of each team is to score by causing the ball to enter the goal of its opponent and to prevent the other team from securing the ball the scoring. The ball may not be touched by the hands except by the goal keeper when in the act of endeavoring to prevent the scoring of a goal.

The ball is kept in play by being carried, thrown, or batted with the crosse (stick), rolled or kicked in any direction subject to the restrictions laid down in the rules.

Umpires' Meeting

There will be a meeting at 2 o'clock in 302 Woollen gym of all men who are interested in umpiring softball games this quarter. A quiz covering softball rules will be given.

INTRAMURAL ROUNDUP

Soccer Results

2 Chi Psi 1	ATO 1
3 Sig Nu 1	Zeta 1 1
2 Zeta 3	Sig Chi 2 1

Soccer Schedule

5:00—Field 1, Chi Psi 1 vs Phi Gam 4; 2, Sig Nu 1 vs Zeta 3; 3, Med School vs Mangum.

Division championship game will be played on Monday.

Manager's Meeting

There will be an important meeting of all intramural managers tonight at 7:45 o'clock in room 304 in Woollen gym. The intramural department urges that all managers attend as the success of the spring program depends on the cooperation of the student managers.

Tonight will also be the deadline for all entries for the softball leagues.

Cox, Hayworth Among Entries In Bird Event

Bob Cox, star University football end, and Jim Hayworth, 1948 Tar Heel baseball co-captain, will be two of the competitors in the eighth annual Southern Badminton association championships here Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The field also includes a player with only one leg, Donald Kerr, president of the New Orleans, La., badminton club, who toured hospitals and gave exhibitions during the war.

There will be such old-timers as Dwight L. Hollowell and Jim Taylor of Atlanta and fine young players such as Allan Hardin of Atlanta, an 18-year-old who previously ranked three nationally in the junior division.

And such old-timers among the ladies as Julia Pickens of Charlotte, who won the championship as far back as 1941.

In fact, there are divisions for both men and lady players who admit to 40 years. Seven divisions, in all, with play starting Friday night and the grand finals Sunday afternoon.

For beauty as well as skill there will be such easy-to-look-upon competitors as Frances Burns and Doris Beasley of Chapel Hill.

There will be stars from distance states—Louisiana, Alabama, etc., and plenty of fine home talent. Ed Cloyd of Raleigh and L. S. Shaw of Durham are two of the outstanding North Carolina men players.

It will be a versatile and cosmopolitan field and the show will be both sporting and social.

Out For Third Win, Racqueteers Play Host to Haverford

Coach John Kenfield's varsity netmen, fresh from two victories over Michigan State, open a two-game series with Haverford college here this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Although the Tar Heels opened their season by trouncing the Spartians, 9-0, 8-1, in two meets, much stronger opposition is expected from the visiting Pennsylvanians today and tomorrow. The Haverford aggregation is headed by Diehl Mateer, seventh ranking amateur netter in the Middle Atlantic states, and Bob and Dick Betson, both outstanding collegiate players.

Starting Singles

Coach Kenfield's starting six for the singles matches will probably see Captain Vic Seixas in the number one spot, and Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Stan Grunder, Duke Wilder, and Jim Winstead, playing in that order.

Taylor, who is the second ranking Carolina netter, was the only Tar Heel to taste defeat in the meets with Micigan State. In the first meet he easily disposed of the Spartan number two man, but in the second contest he faced Bob Malaga, Michigan's top netman, and lost, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Doubles Strong

In the doubles matches, Taylor-Rice, Seixas-Wilder, and Dameron-Gruner combined successfully against Michigan and can be expected to take the courts again this afternoon.

The lack of reserve strength on the squad has been on of the biggest headaches to Coach Kenfield this season.

The Tar Heels will meet the Haverford netmen again tomorrow afternoon on the local courts, and Monday they entertain Harvard here.

AAU Swim Starts

Tar Heel Nine Ties Spartans, 5-5; Darkness Halts Contest In Ninth

Triple by Ballou Sets up Tying Tally In Final Frame; Play Again Today at 4

By Larry Fox

Rallies and extra-base hits were the rule yesterday afternoon at Emerson field with the Tar Heel nine catching up with the Michigan State outfit in the final ining of the first game of a two-game series, as darkness moved in and the two hour and 15 minute contest was called a 5-5 draw.

Tuesday the local team defeated Cornell, 8-6, for Carolina's fourth win of the season and today at 4 o'clock the Spartans furnish the opposition once again. And this time both teams will be out for a decision.

Tommy Andrew went all the way for Carolina, which was forced to come from behind twice to tie the Spartans. In fact it was a ninth inning rally that enabled Carolina to score its fifth run of the game.

MSC Scores First

Michigan State scored first, saw its lead destroyed as Carolina went ahead by one run, and then, in the top of the ninth, slammed two runs across the plate on two hits, one the second of Ed Sobczak's pair of triples, and a brace of bases on balls

Jim Ballou, pinch hitting for centerfielder Jim Austin put Carolina back in the running, however, when he smashed relief hurler Neil Ricketts' first pitch of the inning into deep right center field for three bases. Ballou tripped going into third and was replaced by Joe Eldridge, who scored the tying run one out later on Will Hobbs' hard single over second.

Ed Lamb followed Hobbs with another one-baser that spelled the end of Ricketts, but Charles Bowers came in to put out the fire, and Sid Varney and Stan Goodman.

Two Triples

The first score of the game came in the second inning when Sobczak smacked the first of his booming triples with one away and scored on Ted Maupin's grounder to deep short.

Wallace Beggs, who started on the mound for Michigan State, continued the assault in the next inning with a ground single between second and short and was advanced to the keystone sack by Wendell Lawrence's sacrifice. Dan Urbanik singled to deep short and Beggs moved on to third when Rip Ryan's peg sailed over Hobbs' head. Beggs tallied on George Tutenbar's scoring fly to right field and Joe Bechard's single to right left men on first and third.

Double Steal

John Kobs, Spartan coach, then called for a double steal, which worked to perfection mainly because of some weak throws by the Tar Heel defensive men. Frank Bagdon ended the inning by being credited with a base hit when Bechard got in the way of Bagdon's bounder in the shortstop area.

Carolina broke the shutout in the bottom of the third when Numie (Doc) Cranford, who performed at second base yesterday, reached first on an error charged to MSC firstbaseman, Maupin, who failed to cover the bag prop-

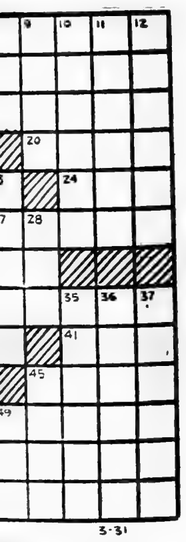
More Teams Enter Relays



Last minute entries have upped the number of participating teams in the Carolina relays Saturday to ten.

Seven Southern conference teams head the list of entries. Maryland, Duke, State, Davidson, Virginia Tech, and Richmond will be entered in addition to host team Carolina. The University of Pennsylvania, Princeton and Tennesssee are the non-conference entries.

Coach Dale Ranson has requested that all men running in the meet Saturday report to Fetzer field today for practice in baton exchanging.

Carolina is expected to enter a strong shuttle hurdle team and strong sprint and distance medley squads in the meet Saturday. In addition the Tar Heels will have several strong men entered in the individual track events.

There will be no team score kept at the meet Saturday, but Carolina and Maryland will be favored to fight it out for the most individual titles.

Doors Of 'Tin Can' Open For Friday-Night Dance

The "Tin Can" will open its doors at 8:30 tomorrow night to university students who will attend the first square dance and party held there in many years.

The affair, sponsored by the Montreat Social commission, grew out of plans studied by the Social Aspects of Campus Life commission meeting held last February at the Y Retreat in Montreat.

The party is designed to meet demands for a place where students may get acquainted. Bob Williams, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, said, "We would rather students came without dates since it is primarily a 'get acquainted' party."

Twenty hostesses will be on hand to direct contests which will include a three-legged race, an April fool's race (so called because rules of the game are a secret), and a coed walking race. Prizes will be awarded by the Chesterfield and Phillip Morris cigarette companies and by Chapel Hill merchants.

The "Tin Can" has just undergone a thorough cleaning and decorating job in preparation for the dance. Work was done under the direction of the Montreat Social committee.

Dr. O. K. Cornwall, head of the University's physical education department, said that as far as he knew the dance tomorrow night would be the first square dance ever held in the 25-year-old building.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Chatham Ramblers, a hillbilly band composed of four men who work in Woollen Gymnasium. They are A. G. Wilson, Hyden Clarke, Seaborn Mitchum, and Harris Mitchum.

Services, Socials Given By Churches

The Methodist church Mid-Week Vesper service, to be conducted by Ed Buckner, will be held tonight at 7:15 and will be followed by a business meeting for the nomination of next year's officers. The services will be continued Sunday morning when the Rev. Mr. Warren Ashby's topic will be Passion Week.

The church will sponsor an April Fool's day party at Sparrow's Meadow tomorrow night for members and their guests, who will leave the Methodist church at 5:00 o'clock. Supper which will cost fifty cents, will precede the evening's entertainment.

Lenten services at the Episcopal church will continue this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon at 5:15 and the student Bible class will meet Sunday morning at 9:30.

Communion will be served at the Catholic church to the Aquinas Club as a group at the 10:00 Mass Sunday. Regular Communion services will be tomorrow and Sunday morning at 8:00 and 10:00 o'clock.

The Friday night discussion group at the Presbyterian church, meeting there at 8:00 o'clock, will have as its topic the Old Testament prophets Amos and Hosea. After his lecture, Dr. Bernard Anderson of the University religion department will lead the discussion.

A Presbyterian sponsored western style square dance will be held in the lodge room of the church Saturday night. There will be instruction for those who have not yet mastered the technique of square dancing and slow dancing for "relaxation."

Marshall Heads Duke Power Co.

NEW YORK, March 30—(UP)—Directors of Duke Power Co. today announced promotion of E.C. Marshall of Charlotte, N. C., as president of the big electric and transit combine.

Marshall succeeds George G. Allen of New York, who moves up to a newly-created post as chairman of the board.

Activities List Pinnings, Parties

Spring quarter begins with pinnings and weddings on the campus. Ruby White Arnold, an Alpha Gam, was married during the spring quarter to Ed Darnell, a Pi Kappa Alpha at the University. The wedding took place in the Pukuay Baptist church in Pukuay Springs.

Among recent pinnings on the campus is that of Billy Carmichael, Delta Kappa Epsilon, to Emily Ogburn, a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority. Others are Patsy McNutt, an Alpha Gam to Charlie Adams, a PiKa, and Harriet Williamson, a Pi Beta Phi, to Louise Thorp a Zeta Psi. Randy Hudson, a Pi Phi, is now wearing the Phi Delta Theta pin of Hal Morrow.

The sorority-fraternity social events of spring quarter began last night when the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority gave an April Fool's day party for members of the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity. Sorority members, to carry out the theme of the party, turned pictures upside down, and had the furniture placed backwards.

Recently elected officers of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority were installed Monday night when Jody Armstrong of Winchester, Va., became the president of the sorority. Other officers are: Sally Osborne and Eleanor deGrange, first and second vice-presidents, respectively; Pat Chandler and Eleanor Hope Newell, corresponding and recording secretaries, respectively; Sandra Sisk, treasurer.

Peggy Neal, rush chairman; Aileen Warren, house manager; Barbara Crawford, social chairman; Nancy Curtis, chapter editor and scribe; Lucille Riley, representative to the Woman's Athletic association; Libbie Ann Koontz, magazine agency chairman; Kitty St. John, activities chairman; Svea Ogg, altruistic work chairman; Brownie Powers, librarian; Kitty Altizer, chaplain; Bura Mitchell, guard.

Sorority Group Sponsors Sale For Children

April showers will bring the bluebird of happiness to spastic children all over the nation, if the showers are of dollars and cents to be used for the children's benefit.

Tomorrow will mark the first day of these showers, as the Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae chapter of Chapel Hill sponsors a cake sale for the relief of spastic children.

From 9 o'clock in the morning to 1 in the afternoon, the sorority alumnae will hold a sale of pies, cakes, and candies at the A & P bakery in Chapel Hill.

The chapter's goal is $35, a sum set as their share of the national fund. This is the first year of operation for the alumnae chapter. It was organized in September, 1948, but the undergraduates of Alpha Gam sorority have been active for the past several years on the project.

Operating in conjunction with the North Carolina League for Cripple Children, and composed of some 17 members at present, the chapter of student's wives and graduate students is part of a project which extends throughout the United States and Canada. Except for several townswomen who act as patronesses and are, in effect, honorary members of the chapter, membership is restricted to former members of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

The relief of spastic children's distress is of utmost importance.

Sig Ep Award Won by Hennis As Best Pledge

Sigma Phi Epsilon at its annual banquet honoring the pledges last Saturday night awarded the plaque for its outstanding pledge of the year to R. Sterling Hennis, Jr., of Winston Salem.

Hennis, who has maintained a "B" average for his work at Carolina, has served on the Yackety Yack staff and has distinguished himself in intramurals and other fraternity activities.

The plaque was awarded by Pledgemaster Charles R. Linville also of Winston Salem.

Hobbs sent Cranford all the way home with a triple that hit the left-center field wall on its first bounce. The big Tar Heel first sacker was thrown out at the plate on Ed Lamb's grounder to third and that ended the threat until the bottom of sixth when Carolina mowed into the lead with three big runs on John "Sleepy" Senter's home run.

The frame opened innocently enough with Lamb popping up to second, but successive singles by Varney and Joe Brookshire were followed by Senter's four-master into leftcenter field.

Churchill Named New UNC President

Student Government Is Abolished By Board Proclamation

Order Curbs Free Action At University

Scott, Churchill Also Sign Decree

By Nachman Green

Graham Memorial was quiet yesterday.

Students went to class without speaking. The sunny skies of Chapel Hill shone down on a bewildered student body. A subordinated student body. A student body with no student government.

On every available tree, a bulletin board and vacant wall was hung a solemn notice. Few students paused to read the startling news. Most of them had spent the night over beer discussing in hushed tones the action of the Board of Trustees in Raleigh Wednesday night.

The posters read:

"PROCLAMATION! In keeping with the conservative policy of our new greater University president, all rights of University students to govern their own affairs is hereby abolished. Infractions or attempts at reprisal will be dealt with severely. By order of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina."

The proclamation is also signed by Governor Kerr Scott and Winston Churchill, newly appointed Greater University president.

Student reaction was positive when the posters hit campus. Many groups were already beginning to go underground yesterday. Junius Scales of the local Communist party said that his henchmen would take the lead in the underground movement.

Meanwhile, reports from Raleigh indicated that student publications, the only voice of the students, would soon be abolished in an executive order. Churchill promised to allow them to finish out the year since the students had already paid.

In their place, officials said, would be set-up a weekly newspaper controlled by a committee appointed by the English department. Tarnation must go and the Carolina Magazine be re-instated in its place. The Yackety Yack will be cut down to less than 20 pages.

Student Government offices were quiet. Di hall, the meeting place for the Student Legislature will be turned into a woman's faculty rest room. Sign painters were busy in GM until the early hours of the morning.

Window panes on doors will read, "Faculty Honor council," "Roland Parker faculty rooms," etc. Harry Kear, the man who has long been responsible for the student activities fund, was closing down his books. A bus ticket on his desk read "Dix Hill."

Student Body President Jess Dedmond, in his last official statement before transferring to Davidson, said, "I'm really sorry this had to happen. Liberalism here is dead. There will of course be no more campus elections, no

University Cafe Is Scene Of Daring Daylight Theft

By Buchan Green

A daring daylight robbery, staged in the center of Chapel Hill late yesterday afternoon, proved unsuccessful for the two would be bandits when Daily Tar Heel staff photographer James Mills took a sneak picture of them in action.

The two bandits, with handkerchiefs over their faces, walked into the University Restaurant at 5:30 and forced Mrs. Eleanor Mitas, wife of owner Max Mitas to hand them all the bills in the cash register at the doorway of the establishment.

Mills, maintaining a remarkable self-control, was some twenty feet inside the restaurant when the two gangsters arrived. On his wrist he was wearing a secret wrist camera and without the bandits knowledge, took their picture. The camera, a top-secret invention, produced in three minutes the finished photograph that appears on this page.

The gangsters, identified through the photograph, were captured at a cafe in Carrboro where they had stopped to celebrate the success of their mission. Mills was instrumental in their capture by rushing hysterically to the local police station where he ordered the cops to send out a five-state-alarm.

Mitas reported that the bandits took most of the day's receipts, $800 in cash and $2,000 in signed table checks. All the money was recovered except for fifty cents spent for beer.

The bandits, identified as Clifton Monroe Wilson and Donald Scott are wanted in numerous North Carolina towns. They had been hiding out in C dormitory for the past six months. "Wanted" posters with both their pictures were posted conspicuously throughout the police station but the local officers had failed to recognize them.

When apprehended by the law, Wilson said, "I didn't finish my beer."

Planetarium Was Misplaced; Buildings Will Be Rearranged

By Pahkuh Green

"It was a mistake anyone could have made," Controller W. D. Carmichael said yesterday as the full report on the Morehead planetarium site mistake came to light.

The mistake was revealed yesterday morning when "Bugger" Brown, a Negro bricklayer on the building, discovered after a quick glance at the plans of the structure that it was supposed to have been built facing Franklin street on the site of the Alpha Gam sorority house.

A quick meeting of the building committee, composed of Controller Carmichael, grounds director Bennett, and business manager Claude Teague, with architects and contractors confirmed the worker's discovery and made immediate plans to alleviate the perplexing situation.

"A few simple rearrangements will make the planetarium visible on Franklin street without having to go to the expense of moving it," stated Carmichael.

The rearrangement plan will be put into operation immediately. It will include:

1. Moving Spencer dormitory into the arboretum, and the Alumni building to the Y court.

2. Tear down the Alpha Gam house, and move the adjacent Episcopal church, bar and all, to Fraternity court.

3. Move Graham Memorial to the Old Well site thereby making it necessary to convert the Well into an underground Schlitz spring.

The plan will make the planetarium visible along the entire stretch of the street from BVD to the corner of Franklin and Raleigh.

Comments on the mistake and the rearrangement plan came quickly from all those concerned.

Said discoverer "Bugger"

Magazines Plan To Join Forces

By Greesy Green

Tarnation and the Carolina Quarterly will combine next year it was announced yesterday by Tom Wharton and Bob Smith, editors of Tarnation, and Roy "Bull" Moose editor of the Quarterly.

The two staffs agreed that a bigger and better publication can be produced by combining Carolina's two leading publications. The new magazine will be called "Quarnation."

"Quarnation" will combine the ideas of the two magazines and will contain dirty jokes, poetry, variety, serious articles, and pictures of nude women. A special effort will be made to print material that will appeal to female faculty members.

The Student Legislature has given tentative approval to the scheme, and final action us considered assured. The magazine will have 93 pages and will appear 17 times during the school year. The cost of "Quarnation" will be negligible; it will only necessitate an increase of $17 per student per year in the block fee, and will raise the budget from $100,000 to $146,321.08 for next year.

Rumor has it that the new publication will try to rival Life Magazine, Business Week, and Famous Funnies.

Commission Asks Even Higher Hike

By Dudley Green

RALEIGH, March 32.—The Advisory Budget commission today recommended that tuition at the three branches of the greater University be trebled instead of merely raised, according to Edward Pate, chairman of the commission.

Tuition at the University is now $81 per year for residents of North Carolina with out-of-state students paying $288. The Advisory Budget commission had recommended earlier that tuition be raised from $81 per year to "at least $150."

Since that recommendation was made by the commission, Chairman Edward Pate said that opinion has changed and now the tuition will be upped to at least $240 per year for resident of North Carolina with additional increases for out-of-state students.

Pate said that the new increase was decided upon after an editorial had appeared in The Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper, accusing the commission of attempting to make the University "a rich man's school." That editorial excited members of the commission, Pate said, and some suggested that the University should be made such a school. This would eliminate annual appropriations in support of the University, Pate said, and make education in North Carolina a paying proposition.

Student Body President Jess Dedmond and his cabinet called on Chancellor R. B. House for advice last night only to be rebuffed. "I am certainly for the increase," House snarled. "As Chancellor of this University, I am sick and tired of constantly having to scrimp to make ends meet," House said. "If the tuition raise goes through, all of us in the administration and on the faculty are due for raises and we certainly need them," he shouted.

President Dedmond and his cabinet sent a wire to Senator Graham in Washington last night enclosing the remarks made by Chancellor House. Two hours later Dedmond brought an answer to the Daily Tar Heel offices which read in part: "Dear Students, Agree wholeheartedly with Pate and House stop Why do you think I got Governor Scott to appoint me to this job stop House is right about needing that salary increase stop Am laughing myself silly can't stop."

Alumni Hear Leader Talk In New York

Baruch Reveals Story at Dinner

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

By Maynard Green

NEW YORK, March 31—The United States senior statesman, Bernard Baruch, tonight revealed the appointment of former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill to the Presidency of the Greater University of North Carolina.

The announcement was made before 1,500 tuxedo-clad diners, alumni of the University, present at a "Graham Again in 1950" Day dinner held in the Dark Room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria here.

The aged statesman rose before the hushed crowd after they had consumed a $50 blueplate dinner, and made his unexpected revelation.

"As long as I have risen," he said, "I wish to represent Governor W. Kerr Scott of North Carolina in making an announcement that may interest you. The student bodies of the Greater University willing, their next President will be . . ." here he gestured toward a side entrance to the room. Mr. Churchill appeared and walked to the speaker's table . . . "the Honorable Winston S. Churchill."

A silence broken only by the crash of an overturned table and an exclamation—"God save the University!"—by Henry Wallace, who was invited to the dinner by Baruch, followed this dramatic moment.

President Harry S. Truman leaped to his feet, vaulted the speakers' table and was the first to congratulate the new President.

"At last," Truman said, "you'll be with us permanently, Winnie."

At that moment, the guests broke into thunderous applause in expression of their complete accord with the decision.

"Thank you, thank you," Churchill hesitated. He brushed a tear from his eye, so much was he overcome by the ovation.

Governor Scott said in a telegram to the Britisher, "My decision was filled with mixed emotions, but I am sure everything will work out for the best. We are all with you, may your work be blessed."

Present British Prime Minister Ernest Bevin was contacted by trans-Atlantic telephone a few minutes after the announcement. When the circumstances had been explained, Bevin chuckled. "We're damn glad to get rid of him," he tersely stated.

Senator Frank Porter Graham, was reached at his office in Washington shortly after that. "I wish to welcome Mr. Churchill to the University," Senator Frank said. "I am certain that he will serve in this capacity well and wisely. His liberal ideas and policy will certainly be within the tradition of the University. I congratulate Mr. Churchill on his appointment."

It is understood that Henry Luce, editor of Time and Life, was instrumental in persuading Churchill to take the position. "And I said again and again: No! But Mr. Luce persisted and I finally accepted Governor Scott's kind offer," Churchill said in his acceptance speech.

Churchill's inauguration is scheduled for this Sunday in Kenan stadium. Stands are now being erected to accomodate the entire student body and some 2,000 guests. The ceremony will take place in the morning. Time of the swearing in of President Churchill will be available tomorrow, Controller W. D. Carmichael said.

Sorority Court Willed $78,000

By Gaston Green

The will of the late Adelaide Addle, local marriage counselor who died from shock Wednesday, yesterday revealed that she bequeathed $78,000 for a University sorority court. The will stipulated that all sorority girls live in the five houses which will be completed by May 15. An active member of Alpha Beta Chi sorority, Miss Addle said the campus had long suffered from need of a sorority court.

South building officials, headed by Controller Carmichael, said they would do everything within reason to see that the spirit and letter of the will was carried out.

Carmichael did suggest that one stipulation in the will might cause a delay in the completion of the project. The will stated that the court occupy the space now occupied by the Morehead Planetarium. Mr. Morehead suggested that his building could be placed in rollers and shifted to the present site of the Arboretum. Carmichael asserted that this action would be adopted, although it might take two days to carry it out and away.

Plans call for sky-scraper homes for the sorority girls to be placed one foot apart because of limited space. As Miss Addle owned half interest in the Pittsboro Plate Glass corporation, the upper seven stories will be constructed of glass. Elevators will be placed in each of the sorority houses, and it is believed that Schoo's will be employed as elevator girls.

Coroner Green's report revealed that Miss Addle's sudden death was the direct result of an unexpected marriage proposal. The shock caused by the proposal was too much for the marriage counselor, he said.

The 78-year-old bleached-haired flapper has been a member of the Lonely Hearts club since she learned to read and scribble at the age of 41. She came to her fortune in 1936 when she inherited $1,000,000 from Bachelor Green. At that time Miss Addle was in the employment of Mr. Green. It is believed she was his secretary.

The remains of Miss Addle will be placed in the sorority house with the greatest number of pinned girls.

Night Raiders Blitz McIver; One Culprit Caught in Dorm

By McGee Green

The coed dorm raiding fad hit the university's campus early this morning as a simulated gorilla band of men students blitzed McIver dormitory, dousing women in bathtubs, turning their beds over, and stealing their gin.

One angry junior forgot rules and regulations and screamed at Chancellor R. B. House who was there investigating in nightshirt and golf cap. "The fools stole my gin," she yelled as tears of misery streamed down her cheeks.

Billy Carmichael, III, found unconscious in a bathtub, was the only intruder captured.

The alarm was turned in shortly after 2 o'clock this morning by Mrs. Florence Cooke, McIver hostess who tore loose from her bonds after being bound and gagged for about 30 minutes She said the "raiders" jimmied a window to gain entrance, warned her to keep quiet, and then tied her up. She was uninjured.

What appeared like an army of uniformed women in green nightgowns and pajamas swarmed out doors and windows while others thought the affair was "simply" a continuation of their Thursday night "green" party and stayed in the building.

House, barefooted and scantily garbed, called immediately for Controller Carmichael, Jr., to "come and claim your son (Billy III)" who was found drenching wet in a second story bathtub. He slipped and fell while trying to douse a coed, observers said. A bottle of gin found in his back pocket confiscated and placed in a fund for local librarians.

Long, Gordon, Mackie Given Road Sentences

By Merritt Green

One pair of field glasses and a strategic position put Charles Long, Dick Gordon, and Bill Mackie, University students in an embarassing situation Tuesday morning in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

The trio of students was arrested last Monday night by Police Officer Blackwood Robert following complaints by Alderman coeds that a disturbance was being created at the back of the dorm.

All three students pleaded guilty to charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct, and peeking into a girls' dormitory. Mackie, who presented the trio's side of the story, told Judge Whitfield Henry that the fight began when a certain coed began disrobing before her open dorm window and Long refused to let Gordon have the field glasses.

He caid Long and Gordon began fighting and fell out of the tree where they had been watching the coeds, and that they continued fighting until Officer Robert arrived and broke up the "peek" party.

He sentenced each of the students to 30 days on the roads and warned them to each have a pair of field glasses the next time they went "peeking."

The defendants accepted the sentence calmly, but as Long was escorted from the courtroom he muttered, "By God, it was still worth it."

Other cases heard were: Emily Baker, drunkenness, sixth time, $50 and costs; Julia McHenry, playing in arboretum, $5 and costs; Dick Bilger, Andrew Lavin, Jeep McFadden, and Dick Covington, gambling, costs; Charles Justice, refusing to accept presidency of University, $25 and costs; Daisy Belle Anderson and Betty Arnold, affray, six months on roads; Caroline Bruner, drunken driving, license revoked for 90 days; Stuart Sechriest, no license for selling hair grower, $50 and costs.

Give It To The Cows

We've been looking out of the Daily Tar Heel windows for nearly fifteen years now, trying to get enough hours to graduate and leave this place. From time to time, editorials have appeared about the birth of day through those windows, about the squirrels who play on a tree outside or the three cherry trees.

But one thought which has occurred constantly in our thoughts is the beautiful green grass outside Graham Memorial and all over other parts of the campus. This grass is going to waste. Students don't walk on it, ailing dogs don't eat it, it does nothing but grow.

This grass should be utilized. The ideal way, naturally, is to turn a herd of cows loose every day during daylight hours. They could be left free to wander over the beautiful lawns quietly munching the tender shoots of grass. And when they are filled, they could stand and chew their cud.

What an inspiring picture they would make. Cows! The most delightful thought of all is that we would finally be in competition with State College and could be called Cow College too. There might even be a slight possibility that we could train a team of milkers to defeat their top men. Then, even though the farmers do beat us in football every year, we'd have two up on them because we could have the top team in both basketball and milking. Think of it! We'd finally be ahead of those po' white trash for once.

The Daily Tar Heel demands that the administration purchase a herd of cows immediately. If they don't, we're going to stand in the corner and hold our breath and pout until they do.

Movement To Greensboro

The five million dollars left by Miss Adelaide Addle, coupled with the funds given by Mr. Morehead, seems more than enough to accomplish a longtime ambition of Dr. Frank Porter Graham, former University president.

Senator Graham, for a number of years, has advocated the moving of Carolina from Chapel Hill to Greensboro in order that his men students might be closer to some real red-blooded North Carolina girls. With Miss Addle's marvelous contribution, this move can now be accomplished.

One complication is that she specified that the money be used to build a sorority court in Chapel Hill for the "Coeds." Quite frankly, we see no reason why they should receive this money. They certainly haven't earned it.

It is well known that the supposedly "Carolina" coeds are not interested in men students here and that they date no one but Duke students. When the men are moved to Greensboro, they could take over the fraternity court and have their wild parties there.

If the administration should suggest that the coeds accompany the men on the move, the Daily Tar Heel will lead a movement to blow up South building.

Another very excellent reason for leaving this dinky little town is because it is a dink little town. The local townspeople are horrible and the merchants show no interest in gaining our trade. We have allowed them to run over us for too long. The time for action is now.

The advantages of moving to Greensboro are obvious. In the first place, as mentioned before, we'll be near the only good looking women in the state. In the second place, Greensboro is about to install Alpha Beta Chi stores. In the third place, Greensboro needs a good rousing crew of up and coming young men to add a little life to the town, especially after the liquor stores are installed. In the fourth place, we'll be away from Chapel Hill, State college and Duke university.

Rally behind the cause. The move to Greensboro is on.

Cherry, Cherry, Cherry

Today's Daily Tar Heel carries the first news of the "J. R. Cherry for President in '52" club. The Daily Tar Heel is heartily in favor of this organization.

We have observed Mr. Cherry's work both as a regular writer for this newspaper and in his active work in student government and student activities.

He is a healthy, conscientious and able man who can do much for the United States. Mr. Cherry has not made a public statement on the matter, but rumors have led us to believe that he will make his close friend and advisor, Hans Friestadt, Secretary of State if he is elected. This is even more reason for good Americans to support this great man.

Spencer Coeds Make Him Mad

Editor:

I want you to know that I am damned tired of being kicked off the third floor of Spencer Dormitory. Damn tired, I tell you. Everytime I get to the top of the stairs they push me down again. All the way down to the bottom they shove me; then Emily Sewell, Connie Penn, and Jo Ann Carpenter kick me, bite me, and pull my hair. Last time they threw me in the street, but the girls on the second floor rescued me.

Wants A Job, Says The Jerk

I would like to know how to apply for a job as paper-sticker on the University grounds squad. I believe this would really be a job I could stick to and would allow me to continue in school since I was dismissed from the Lenior hall staff for gross negligence of duty. I am 23 years old, married to the former Mayvis Green of Gross Point, N. Y.

I have noticed that most of the men assigned to the grounds cleaning job are old men who seemed to have been stuck with an undesirable chore, but this would be a job I could really put my talents to good use in.

There were no lights and how on earth was I to tell that just where I put my foot there was nothing? Why weren't there any lights? Why wasn't there a cover for that manhole? I think it was all your fault and the fault of that fascist news staff you have.

If you don't do something about it, I'm going to pay my student fees for the Duke Cronicle and then where would you be?

Why don't the "neckers" in the arboretum hang out red lanterns? When I walk through the "garden" at night during my hours of meditation, I usually step on fleshy, outstretched arms. With all this here talk about elections and stuff on campus, I'd like to ask what people are being elected to? Why they are being eletced? And who in the devil is running for office?

I never heard of any of these people whose names have been put in this lousy paper recently, so I don't think they really exist. I'll bet this Gordon character is really Hans Freistadt. Hans Freistadt is really Tookie Hodgson, and he is Chancellor House in disguise.

Phooy to you guys, I think the whole constitution should be scrapped and we should have anarchy instead. As the great American patriot Benedict Arnold once said, "Give me anarchy or give me death."

When student government is abolished, I think all these thousands of dollars the University and Legislature robs from us should be divided among the students otherwise one giant beer party should be thrown for about one glorious non-stop week.

Hunting Grounds Wanted

Editor:

I like the DTH: in fact, I think it is the best paper in the country, except for the Daily Worker, but I wish you would undertake a campaign to rip up the Arboretum and turn it into a hunting preserve.

Many of us boys from the hills have hunted all our lives; now we come to Chapel Hill and there is no place nearby to have a friendly little feud or shoot a few bear. Why, I am getting a complex from it. Also, the present situation is very dangerous, for when I get back to the hills I will be out of practice, and someone may shoot me first.

At least have the arboretum turned into a bunch of hot houses, because it would be a lot of fun to shoot out all the glass windows.

Congratulations

Editor:

As president of the stupid body I would like to express my appreciation and congratulations to the members of the stupid body for their excellent attendance at the political rally held last night. I strongly feel that this is an indication of renewing interest in stupid politics. The thought has long been in my mind that such a renewal is drastically needed at this institution.

It has also occurred to me that some form of public approbation should be extended to those students who in a large measure contributed to the success of the rally by taking the initiative in the ceremony of running Charlie Long out of town on a rail. If such a demonstration can be considered a fair indication of the interests that students in general are taking in the operation of their campus affairs, I feel it is safe to say that stupid government in its highest manifestation will continue in the future.

I'll tell you what I'm gonna do. If they don't sell me beer for five cents, I'm gonna join the Alcoholics Anonymous (never could spell that word), then I'm going join the Methodist temperance union, then I gonna go around and tear all their card houses down.

Reorganization Of Campus

By Buchan Green

The thought comes to me every once in a while that the University would be a wonderful place if we didn't have any faculty members. Think of all the things we could do without them, including the minor issue of no classes

My theory of education would be to allow the "students" to educate themselves through personal experience. Everyone will have their own list of people they'd rather see go, but I've got the column rights here, so I'll list mine first in the sincere hope that they will get up and go soon, if not sooner.

Heading the list is Dr. Herbert Reichert, then follows Dr. Mary C. Engstrom, Dean Katherine Carmichael, J. R. Caldwell, Gordon Cleveland, Bill Thomas, Dean C. P. Spruill, Dean Fred Weaver, Albert Braneau, Marie Wicker, Walter Spearman and George Bryan. There's no need to list anyone in the Math department. We'll just herd them all in Phillips hall and dynamite the dern building.

However, when we get rid of the nuisances, we've got to have something to do on campus. My plans go like this: the former library will be campus recreational headquarters. It will be equipped with hundreds of comfortable leather couches and no lights. Green slip covers will be available so that they can be used on Thursdays.

In South building, we'll have the organization headquarters, with the first, second and third floors devoted to the running of beer parlors, night clubs and girlie shows respectively. The basement will be turned into the most exclusive elaborate boys and girls room in the United States

Sanders hall will be turned into a three story beer parlor with automatic elevators running between the floors. Any former professors who are spared from the hangman's noose will be employed as waiters.

Murphy hall will be divided into two sections, with one section being devoted to an open turkish bath and the other a combined barber-shop-beauty parlor.

Bingam Hall will compare with Sanders, except that it will be a night club, selling only 100 proof bourbon. It will open at five in the afternoon and will close at nine every morning.

Peabody and Alumni will be the scene of a steady girlie show with new girls and new shows every two hours. Any qualifying women faculty members may be considered for positions here.

A magnificent 18-hole golf course will be constructed from Franklin street to Raleigh road. When the golfer reaches South building, he will knock the ball through the front door and out the back. He will also be forced to hit the ball over the library.

Bynum will be torn [illegible] to aid travel between Swain and Caldwell. Caldwell [illegible] used as an exclusive club for Chapel Hill high school [illegible] and members of the Monogram club. It will be the only building selling both beer and liquor by the key.

New West and East will be turned into dormitories to handle the expected increase of students. Temporary buildings will be turned down and stacked for fire wood and used for fires in general.

The measures, while [illegible] may seem slightly unusual, a few, can be enforced in a period of 48 hours. My personal friend and comrade Hans Friestadt has agreed to take care of the problems of termination insofar as faculty and adminstration members are concerned.

Bill Mackie, campus dictator, has taken the responsibility of setting up night clubs and Don Shropshire will be in charge of the installation of beer parlors. Pete Burks is making a special trip to New York to hire girls for the shows. Burks, an old experienced hand at picking women has assured us he'll get the pick of the crop.

Any students who have some particular faculty members that they wish to see meet a tortured death are asked to send in their names immediately to us.

Comes the revolution!

Stuff And Muff About Nothing

Ah, spring is here, and indeed it is a lovely time of the year. Spring is probably the nicest time of all the seasons.

Yes, spring appeals to everyone. The bird fanciers can sit outside in the fork of a tree and watch all the birds flying up North. never could figure out why they wanted to go there though, and see the little fledglings breaking out of their shells and flying around.

Horticulturists can watch the flowers flower and can putter in the gardens. And fresh air fiends can sit out in the sun on the front of BYD.

Of course, for college students, there is always the joyful anticipation of their forthcoming graduation, if they are seniors, and if they can pass all their courses—an impossible task.

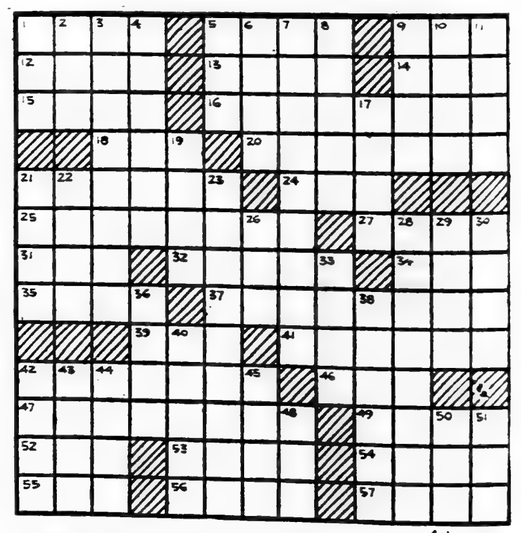
Pausing to more important and more serious ideas, this columnist would like to discuss the recent amalgamation between the PAC and the NAM, which are the CIO's Political Action Committee and the National Association of Manufacturers.

The CIO is also known in labor circles as the Committee for Industrial Agnostics, and the NAM is also known among manufacturers as the Nimrods Association of Mellowmen.



Recently these two great organizations decided that their memberships had much in common, and they united to support Phinneus Q. (Q for Quiet) Flozzlehoffle for President of the U. S. in 1952. The two organizations have decided that a good middle-of-the-road candidate would be hard to beat and is what the doctor ordered.

This program has much to merit its support, and all intelligent people should think about it. Recognizing the need for strong action, strong leadership, strong words, and strength, these two organizations have united for the good of the Free Enterprise System, the American Way of Life, the Workingmen of America, and all loyal housewives.

The new political coalition should be difficult to beat in 1952, and many Senators, Representatives, and Governors, as well as private citizens are rallying around the glorious purple banner depicting a squash floating on an ocean wave, which is the party's symbol. It is symbolic.

Phinneus Q. Flozzlehoffle has a long and distinguished career in government. He began as janitor in the Library of Congress, moved up to ticket taker at the Smithsonian Institute, then became a duster at the National Archives, was a PFC in the recent war, and is now head of the governments Division of Rare and Out of Date Documents of the Bureau of Entimological Research in the Baffin Bay District of Antarctica. Flozzlehoffle appears to be eminently qualified to be President of the United States.

Carolina's first bowling on the green team posted its first victory of the season yesterday, Green Thursday, by defeating Greensboro fourt(gr)een to four.

The game was played on the green grass of Greenan stadium and Carolina's players were resplendant in their new green uniforms.

"I was quite pleased with the victory," said Coach Paul Green. "As this is the first time we have had a bowling on the green team at Carolina, all the boys were a little green. However, when the game ended with the score at 14-4, the Greensboro players turned green with envy. I guess our boys will have the green light from here on out."

Hero of yesterday's game was Jess Greenbaum, who left the blue green water of Bowman Green pool long enough to score 10 points for the local team.

After yesterday's victory Green released the complete schedule for his bowling on the green team.

Baseball, Tennis, Golf Teams Score Wins; Lacrossemen Lose

Carolina defeated Michigan State yesterday, 4-2, behind flashy six-hit pitching of righthander Andy Tranavitch. The game was a pitching duel all the way, with Tar Heels Joe Eldridge, Rip Ryan, Will Hobbs and Ed Lamb hitting MSC Pitcher Bowers for extra bases.

Tar Heel runs came in the first, third, and seventh innings. After six innings of even play, the Tar Heels went ahead to win their fourth game of the season.

Led by Victor Seixas and Clark Taylor, the unbeaten Tar Heel netters romped to their third win in less than a week by stopping the visiting Haverford racqueteers, 8-0, yesterday afternoon on the home courts. The final doubles match was called off because of darkness.

A more experienced Delaware lacross team handed the Carolina stickmen a defeat on Navy field yesterday by the score of 12-2. Gutheridge and Adams of the victors were high scorers with three points each, while Poisson and Taylor drove in goals for the Tar Heels.

Carolina's golf team won the opening match of the 1949 season yesterday at Hope Valley, defeating Haverford college, 25-7. Harvie Ward led the way for the Tar Heels with a one-under-par 69.

Friedstad Signs With Cincy Reds

By The Green Hornet

Red Grange appeared in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon to the delight of some 30-odd pigeon and a like number of sunbathers who were attempting to enjoy the benefits of the sun without receiving the benefits of the pigeons.

Mr. Grange was not available for comment, but off the record told a gathering of two reporters that "as far as I know, Charlie Justice plays the numbers."

Justice's arrest was immediate. It was the first time anyone had caught the Asheville Choo Choo since the Duke game in 1946.

On reaching the local Bastille, Justice was confronted by two other Tar Heels, Harvie Ward and Vic Seixas, who had been declared pro for endorsing Hadacal.

"I've had a liver's liver since I start using Hadacal," said Seixas. The assembled crowd broke into tremendous applause while the three culprits made a sudden break for the door.

Hans Friedstad was not available for comment. "I'm a Red, but will not be read," said the usually contradictory Mr. French Fries.

Carolina track coach Dale Ranson vainly seeking a way to increase attendance at home track meets, announced yesterday that pari-mutual betting would be introduced at the Carolina relays here Saturday afternoon.

Laud Deum et Mitt Munitionum Says Ex-Tar Head Staff Member

By Jake Waden

Jake Wade, notorious University of North Carolina sports publicist and former member of the Greenland Olympic skittles squad, will take over Grantland Rice's job of picking all-Americans next year it was announced today by Greenie Madry, new Tar Heel sports publicity director and former mayor of Chapel Hill.

Wade, who is known in local baseball circles as the inventor of the "Jake Wade double" will assume his new duties immediately. It was reported that he left early this morning for New York in his green Chevrolet, equipped with rear window wiper and automatic baby burper. His new office in the Metropolis will be on the penthouse roof of the Waldorf-Astoria.

And to You, Too! !

With the announcement of Wade's promotion came a statement from the stately Carolina Sports Parader. Said Wade, "I think it fit that in my new position I shall inaugurate the "Truck of the Week" and, of course Green Thursday, child prodigy of the Daily Tar Head, will be the winner the first week. And whether you like it or not, am abend tonte aus dem Apparat eine andere Stimme. Die Dame liesz sich die Haare schneiden!"

Wade's promotion climaxes a glorious career of newspaper and sports work that started on the Charlotte Disturber where he worked as a copy boy for 16 years. After his exciting work with the Disturber, Wade came to Chapel Hill where he set to work writing intramural news for the Tar Head and also was given the trustworthy position of firing the final gun at basketball games.

Don't Miss Last Paragraph!

But his great talent was soon discovered and he was put to work writing sports publicity releases for the University. During his first year here he introduced Charlie Justice to Coach Snavely and showed the "Green Fox" press clippings proving that C. J. had something on the ball. Snavely, mindful of the fact that Ole Jake can really pick 'em, immediately gave Justice a starting berth. That started Wade on the woad to what.

Wade will be missed by Tar Heel friends and associates, but the citizens of this great town know that he can do more for the world in the big city.

And so ends an era that started when, as a student, Wade was initiated in the "Green Fleas," campus honorary society, and went on through graduation to this final step.

Miss Branch Wed to Henderson In Court Ceremony Yesterday

By Burner Green

Before an alter decorated with various assortments of the long leaf pine and sneaking ivy, Twig Branch, woman here and Archibald Henderson, former man here, became man and wife in the Y court yesterday.

The groom, who was given away by a son-in-law, was dressed in yellow with red suspenders and a visible veil which fell. His train came on the alter's rail just ten minutes late. The woman wore clothes.

Man out-of-honor, whom the groom chased to the alter was Freddie Weaver, dressed in green. He carried a man's handbook, decked with Twig, and reached the alter shortly before the groom. Others whom the groom paid attention to were Frank Klingberg, George Taylor, and Stuart Sechriest.

The maids in the wedding swept up the aisle and reached the alter in due time. They wore clothes, too. Little Kitty Carmichael acted like a flower girl, while Bill Wells held up the rear with the ring.

Skipper O. J. Coffin married the couple, who left the church. A long reception was held in Kenan stadium where Carl Snavely kicked over the table.

The couple will have a honeymoon in the Arboretum.

Out-of-town guests were the kinda hororable Governor Kerr Scott and a wife with Raleigh; Mrs. Arnold Nash, who left her husband and town to pursue courtship and marriage; and other people.

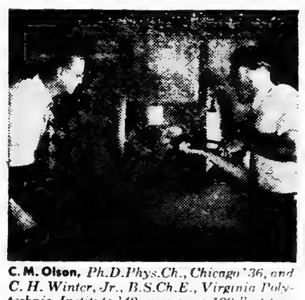
PRODUCING METALLIC TITANIUM FOR INDUSTRIAL EVALUATION

Du Pont group research developed a pilot plant with daily capacity of 100 pounds

Du Pont research has just made available to industry what may become one of America's key structural materials, titanium metal. Midway in density between aluminum and iron and with an especially high melting point, silvery-white titanium offers an extraordinary combination of strength, lightness, corrosion resistance and hardness.

Titanium is the ninth most common element. But it has been slow in coming into its own as a metal because of the difficulty of separating it in pure form from its ores.



Du Pont scientists first began to probe the possibilities of metallic titanium in the course of their long experience with the titanium oxide pigments. Their research was interrupted by World War II. Meanwhile, the U.S. Bureau of Mines laboratories succeeded in producing the metal for research purposes.

After the war, Du Pont scientists developed a process for the production of ductile titanium metal that can be scaled up to meet commercial demands. The research team that mastered the complex problem consisted of chemical engineers specializing in design and production, as well as chemists and a metallurgist. In September 1948, a pilot plant was opened with a daily capacity of 100 pounds. Titanium metal is now being produced in sponge and ingot form. Samples are available to industrial and college laboratories with research projects in related fields. Studies of methods for forming, machining and alloying are under way.

Exhaustive studies will be necessary before the many possibilities of titanium metal can be known. Because of its high ratio of strength to weight, early uses may be in airplane power plants and structural parts. Its hardness and rust-resistance recommend it for railroad transportation equipment, marine power plants and propellers, and food packaging equipment. Its high melting point suggests use in pistons, and its resistance to electric currents points to electronics. Titanium wire may be used for springs and titanium sheet for such highly stressed parts as microphone diaphragms.

Your Opportunity in Research

The commercial development of titanium metal is a typical example of Du Pont research in action. However, the Pigments Department, which worked out the process, is but one of the ten Du Pont manufacturing departments. Each conducts continuous research. Each is operated much like a separate company. Within these "companies"—whose interests range from heavy chemicals to plastics and textile fibers—college trained men and women work in congenial groups where they have every opportunity to display individual talent and capabilities. Who knows what their contributions will mean in the future to science and the world!

C. M. Olsen, Ph.D.Phys.Ch., Chicago '36, and C. H. Winter, Jr., B.S.Ch.E., Virginia Polytechnic Institute '40, removing 100-lb. titanium ingot from furnace in heat-treating study.

R. C. Reidinger, B.S.Ch.E., Princeton '47, and T. D. McKinley, B.S.Ch., Worcester Polytechnic Institute '35, making a test of the hardness of ingots of Du Pont titanium metal.

Three-Party Rally Draws Big Crowd

Band Leads Large Group in Parade; Top Candidates Speak at Meeting

By Charles McCorkle

A lethargic campus showed some signs of life Thursday evening in the form of a good, old-fashioned, knock-down and drag-out political rally and torchlight parade attended by some 500 students.

The audience in Memorial hall heard short speeches by the candidates for president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer and Tarnation editor, highlighted by Campus party vice-presidenital candidate Banks Talley, who branded the present Student legislature as "the most damnable, do-nothing legislature that we have ever had."

The rally was begun by a torchlight parade complete with the University band, arranged by the University club. The parade took the usual fall pep rally route, hitting its peak as it came down Franklin street in the business district. The marchers were led by many political posters and banners carried for parties and individual candidates.

NAT SWANN, above, is a candidate of the Student party for treasurer of the Senior class. He is a native of Pelham, North Carolina.

Elections board chairman Al Winn presided over the meeting. Winn introduced the candidates in order of the importance of their positions and alphabetically in those categories.

The first speaker of the evening was University party presidential candidate Dick Gordon, who said that interest in student government was at a low ebb. Gordon pointed out two important problems which affect students: (1) Registration, with its long lines and hours of drop-add waiting, and (2) The University Veterans' clubhouse, which may be available in the future as a dormitory recreation center.

Campus party presidential candidate Charlie Long said the CP was finding out what students thought of student government, and what they think should be done. He pointed out that the CP's primary aim is "government not only by and of the students, but government for the students."

The Student party standard-bearer, Bill Mackie, spoke mostly on the organization and principles of the SP. He said the SP believes that student government is "part of the educational life of students. We believe the party must stand for long-range principles and goals," Mackie added. On the question of appellate power, the candidate said, "The SP majority on the Student council has worked to make the appeal work. We don't believe that the court system is set up to throw people out of school. But the appeal should not mean a chance for a person to have two different trials."

Ted Leonard, University party candidate for vice-president, described the legislature as "the cornerstone of student government," while CP candidate Talley made his remark about "the most damnable, do-nothing legislature." SP vice-presidential candidate Al Lowenstein said that if office-holders paid more attention to student government and less to being politicians, there would be

Solons Rush Legislation Through Mill

By Sam Whitehall

The Student legislature wasted little time Thursday night in running through a couple of bills and revising a constitutional amendment which it had passed at its last session.

The amendment in question was one setting up the Greater University Student council as a constitutional body. The amendment passed previously and scheduled to be thrown up to the student body for ratification next Tuesday carefully named the members of the council who would serve for the University.

Legislator Tom Kerr, who introduced the original amendment, moved Thursday night to reconsider the constitutional change, and then introduced an amendment to it which stated that the Student legislature would have the power to name the delegates on the council for the University.

The legislature, after passing the new amendment, passed a bill which named the council members. The bill is to go into effect if the amendment is ratified.

The bill said the University delegation to the council would consist of the president of the student body, the vice-president, the attorney-general, the chairman of the orientation committee, the chairman of the Student council, the chairman of the Men's council, the chairman of the Women's council and three students at large to be chosen by the president, one of which would be a member of the Student legislature.

The solons also passed two bills pertaining to the by-laws of the legislature. One made all committee meetings compulsory and the other provided for the appointing of assistant chairmen for all standing committees.

The life of the special committee to investigate coed government was extended one week. The final action of the legislative session was a motion to present a gavel to Vice-President and Speaker Jim Godwin for his work in the legislature in the past year.

Co-Op Stock Subscribed; Nets $1,200

Store to Continue In Victory Village

The Victory Village Co-op has met its pledged goal of $1,200 in stock subscriptions and will continue in operation, Frank Kottke, member of the board of directors, said yesterday.

It was announced last month that the store faced a possible close down next year if additional stock was not sold to offset a deficiency of funds resulting from withdrawals by students leaving Chapel Hill.

Kottke asked some 125 persons who pledged to purchase stock this month to do so during the next 10 days at the store.

The store is operating now on $4,177 worth of stock outstanding, but the board estimated that student withdrawals would have made it impossible to continue profitably the operation of the store.

Kottke explained yesterday that 10 per cent of the co-op's profits must be placed in surplus and two per cent must be used to distribute information on how the store operates. He added that the remaining profits are used to pay a five per cent dividend on stock and to pay rebates to customers.

The co-op was formed when veterans living in Victory Village joined together in order that they might get grocery materials at the cheapest prices available. The stock holders have found it an easy way to save money which would otherwise have been spent.

Change Needed, Laski Tells Group At Local Speech

"As slavery gave way to feudalism, as feudalism gave way to capitalism, so must capitalism give way to a new order," said Dr. Harold J. Laski, professor of economics and political science in the University of London, in a public lecture in Hill hall.

Since the end of the First World War, Laski said, the status of the trade-unions has been changing, usually for the better. In the United States this improvement in the status of labor unions has been most notable since the elections of 1932, he said. "The elections of 1932 saw the end of laissez faire in America, and its replacement by something better," Laski said.

Speaking on "The Structure and Function of Trade-unionism in America," Laski said that the unions have a definite function in relation to education of members to participate in civil government. "The trade-unions must also realize that they have to be technical and scientific minded in the sense that they must carry on research," he asserted.

"The way to root out communism in trade-unions," he continued, "is to attend meetings of your unions. If you aren't willing to give this service to the organizations you have created then you deserve to have Communist take over. I am in favor of majority rule.

"We have got to stop 'witch hunting.' Witch hunting makes us incapable of reasoning and when we lose the power to reason we become the image of the witch of which we are afraid," he concluded.

Education Graduates Will Ease Shortage

The School of Education announced today that if the surging upswing in education majors continues the acute teacher shortage will be alleviated. In 1947 there were only 70 University graduates who had prepared themselves for public school teaching. In 1948 the number had increased to an even 100 and this year there are almost 150 graduates who will go into the teaching field.

Dr. George S. Lane

Dr. Donald P. Costello

Lane, Costello Named Kenan Profs By Board

Dr. George Sherman Lane and Dr. Donald Paul Costello have been appointed Kenan professors by the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees on recommendations of Chancellor R. B. House, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Lane was named Kenan professor of Germanic and Comparative Linguistics; and Dr. Costello, Kenan professor of Zoology.

Dr. Lane received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Iowa and his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. He taught four years at the University of Chicago and three years at Catholic university in Washington before coming to the University in 1938.

Head of the Zoology department since 1947, Dr. Costello received his B.A. degree from the College of Detroit and his Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. After teaching there for five years, Dr. Costello came to the University in 1935.

Each summer since 1939, Dr. Costello has done distinguished work as instructor at the Woods Hole laboratories in Massachusetts.

Kenan professorships are awarded for distinguished service over a period of years and carry with them an increase in salary. The Kenan professorships and Endowment and Reserve fund, which makes such appointments possible, was established at the University in 1917 by the will of the late Mrs. Mary Lily Kenan Bingham.

Coy Carson, Ryan Nominated By CP As CAA Officers

Coy Carson and Rip Ryan will seek the presidency and vice-presidency of the Carolina Athletic association on the Campus party ticket, Banks Talley, CP chairman, announced yesterday.

Carson, a junior from Asheville, received honorable mention for the All-American basketball team this year. He is All-Southern and Southern conference high scorer as well as Big Five and All-Tournament high scorer.

A Navy veteran majoring in personnel management, Carson is active in the Monogram club, the Western North Carolina club and the YMCA.

Ryan, a rising senior from Trenton, N. J., is co-captain of the baseball team and a member of the basketball team. He is majoring in physical education.

Nyimicz, Ward Are Candidates For CAA Office

The University party announced yesterday that Dan Nyimicz and Harvie Ward will seek the presidency and vice-presidency respectively of the Carolina Athlectic association in next Tuesday's general election.

Nyimicz, a rising senior from Rahway, N. J., is a Sigma Chi and was secretary-treasurer of the Monogram club last year. He was captain of the basketball team this past season by unanimous choice of the team members.

Harvie Ward from Tarboro is one of the leading amateur golfers in the country. He won the Tournament of Golf Club champions in St. Augustine, Fla., this spring and won the North-South amateur championship at Pinehurst last year.

On the Subject of Misplaced Posters

EVEN THE POLITICIANS GET MIXED UP sometimes. if you wander through the halls of the upper quad dorms you can probably spot the posters put up there by the University candidates for legislature from the town district! And down in Alexander dorm, a certain enterprising candidate named Hugh Johnson, running on the CP ticket, has his posters up for vice-president of the senior class. It seems that Hugh didn't realize that Alexander is a freshman dormitory.

Here's the latest word on two rumors running around, both of them favorable to CP presidential candidate Charlie Long. One of 'em says that Ernie House, University alumnus now living in Marion, is supporting Long in his race. House, as most of us should know, is a highly-respected man around campus. He served a term as vice-president of the University party and spent a couple of years doing a splendid job on the legislature Finance committee. The other rumor, which seems pretty definite, is that Wayne Brenengan, who was almost an independent candidate for president this year, is supporting Long.

And on the Subject of the Triply Club

Spring elections this year see several new members to the Triply club, an exclusive little group of people who have had the honor of being triply-endorsed in their politicaal races by all three campus political parties. The four members running at present are Dick Jenrette, for editor of the Daily Tar Heel; Norm Sper, re-election as head cheerleader; Bill Claybrook, for editor of the Yackety Yack; and Tom Wharton, for senior member to the Publications board.

Past members of the Triply club are Ed Joyner, present editor of the Daily Tar Heel; Bill Moffitt, who was elected editor of the Yackety Yack and then had to withdraw for academic reasons; and Chuck Hauser, who was running for Daily Tar Heel editor, and ran into some of Moffitt's trouble.

Movement Underway For Drafting Marshall As President Of UNC

Rep. Umstead Turns Thumbs Down on Idea

Declares Trustees Would Not Approve

John W. Umstead yesterday turned thumbs down on the movement to draft George C. Marshall as president of the consolidated University, declaring that "it is a bunch of foolishness."

Umstead, a member of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees, declared that Marshall "would get it over my protest." He then said that he thought he knew the Board well enough to say that none of them would consider Marshall as president to succeed Senator Graham.

Umstead, who represents Chapel Hill in the House of Representatives, declared that the University needs a "young man with vision who is a real educator." "Just because a man has made a success in one field doesn't mean that he will succeed in another," he said. He pointed out that it was not good business to call a man off one job in which he is succeeding and put him on another.

Umstead also suggested that General Marshall was too old for the position as president of the Greater University. The retirement age is 70, he said, and only with the unanimous consent of the Board is a man allowed to continue work after that age.

When questioned about other Washington officials, Umstead said that the Board would not consider them. He again stressed the advisability of selecting a young man, who could be trained and who would be in the service of the University for a long time.

Governor Scott said he will not appoint the trustee's committee to select the next University president until the legislature elects new members of the board to succeed those whose terms are now expiring. The legislature is expected to elect new members next week.

Umstead said that some people who were being considered by Scott as members of the special committee to appoint a new president were not now members of the Board.

DEAN FRED H. WEAVER

School Gives Dean Weaver Study Leave

Will Begin Work At Yale in Fall

Fred Weaver, dean of students, will be burning the midnight oil along with other college students beginning next year. On the recommendation of Chancellor House, Weaver was granted a study leave of absence for work at Yale university graduate school by the Board of Trustees in a recent meeting.

Bill Friday, assistant dean of students, will be in charge of all business that pertains to the dean of students' office in Weaver's absence, House said. Weaver will return to the University as Dean of students after he completes his one-year graduate work at Yale.

Chancellor House's recommendation stated that the work is to give the dean further study in the field of counselling and guiding students. The leave will begin in September, 1949, and will continue through the academic year.

Weaver replaced E. L. Mackie as dean of students last September. Mackie is now dean of student awards and distinctions. Before last September, Weaver was dean of men, and also has served as director of Graham Memorial.

At the time Weaver became dean of students, Bill Friday was appointed his assistant. Friday's chief concern has ben student organizations and student government.

Musical Fantasy To Open Monday

"Apple Tree Farm," the Ida Lupino-Bill MacIlwinen (graduate student in D.A.) musical fantasy to be premiered here Monday night at 8:30 in the Playmakers theater, was the subject of a CBS coast-to-coast broadcast last week.

The show, beamed from Hollywood, included an interview by George Fischer with the authoress. Mention was made of the University of North Carolina and of the fine work the Carolina Playmakers are doing here.

All tickets for the show's five-night run—Monday through Friday — are reserved and are on sale at the Playmakers' Swain hall business office and downtown at Ledbetter-Pickard's. The price is $1. All proceeds will go to the Koch Memorial fund.

GM Will Memeograph Political Material

Bob Watson, director of Graham Memorial, announced yesterday that political mimegraphing will be accepted by the GM office. He emphasized, though, that all non-political work will take priority over the political.

Circulation Of Petitions Begins Here

Move Said 'Hasty' By Jess Dedmond

A movement to draft Gen. George C. Marshall as president of the Greater University to succeed Senator Frank P. Graham was termed by student body president Jess Dedmond yesterday as "hasty" after he learned of the impetus the move had gained.

A number of petitions have been circulated by three University students, Banks Shepherd, senior from Laurinburg; Jerry Pence, junior from Wagram and Tom Mayfield, freshman from New Orleans, La.

Dedmond's statement condemned the movement which has snowballed throughout the campus. He said, "I do not feel at this time that it is desirable for students to concentrate on individuals. I believe it is more important that we consider the qualities that we as students would like to see in our new president.

Dedmond went on to say that several student government leaders are now formulating a list of desirable candidates for the presidency, and that the list will be released as soon as it is fully compiled.

The petitions first appeared yesterday morning in the lobby of the Y, where nearly 400 signatures were secured by noon. Several hundred additional names were obtained by students circulating petitions throughout the campus, Shepherd said.

"We intend to collect 1,000 or more names," Shepherd continued, "but we won't stop at that number if we can get more." It is intended to present the completed petitions to the committee Governor Scott will appoint to consider a new president. Shepherd said he is trying to have the University Veteran's association endorse the Marshall movement.

Final Sale Set On Invitations

Invitations for graduation exercises in June will be on sale for the last time next week in the "Y", Bob Kirkland, chairman of the senior invitation committee, said today.

Seniors who wish to order their invitations must pay for them now and pick them up sometime next month. They have a selection of three types—a white leather -bound booklet containing the commencement program, officers of the administration, and pictures of the campus. A booklet-form of the same type is offered in a paper cover. The third variety is a conventional, folder invitation, engraved in black.

A member of the invitations committee will be on duty in the "Y" from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon Monday through Friday to take orders from seniors. Those who do not put their order in now will not be able to obtain the invitations.

Going to the Dogs

The perennial complaint of student politics was voiced again at the Memorial hall political rally Thursday night. Speaking to an audience distinguished only by its absence, each of the candidates for top campus offices took his turn at deploring the lack of interest in student government. The complaint of which they spoke was demonstrated by the size of an audience made up almost entirely of candidates for office and a few handfuls of party wheelhorses. The lack of interest apparently extended even into the ranks of the office seekers, for when the roll of candidates was called a good one-third of them were absent.

The complaint is not a new one. It is as old as student government, and probably as old as the democratic process. Seldom do more than 50 per cent of the eligible voters take part in an election unless the issues involved are of immediate and universal concern and accompanied by a distinct division of opinion. It is one of the deficiencies inherent in democracy that the majority of people are more interested in complaining about the quality of the leaders they elect than in electing leaders of the quality they want. Consequently leadership devolves upon the "practical" politicians who make a living at it and upon the few idealistic fools willing to sacrifice themselves upon the altar of democracy and "good government." Lack of graft eliminates most of the "practical" politics in student government since it leaves only the desire for power and prestige as its basis. The "practical" student politician soon finds that the power and prestige are not great enough to compensate for the amount of work entailed in campus offices, loses interest and lets his job go to pot. The idealist, too, soon finds his enthusiasm killed by the lack of interest and appreciation from those for whom he is working.

Thus it is plainly apparent that student government has gone to the dogs, is going to the dogs, and probably will continue going to the dogs until it reaches a stage where its existence is threatened by some outside force. Then students will rise in righteous wrath and demand that they be allowed to govern themselves.

So we'll shed a tear at the sad state of dear old student government and pass on to other subjects.

Warning to Candidates

Perhaps it is too late in the game to be bringing up this suggestion, but it seems a warning is in order for the benefit of the candidates who have so bravely tossed their toppers into the political arena.

From the antics of this year's legislators one would judge that when they ran for election last year they were suffering under the delusion that the job was a purely honorary one, that student affairs could not possibly be complex enough to demand much attention, that little or no work would be expected. One would further judge that when after being elected they were rudely awakened to the actual facts, they decided, "To heck with this noise. If anyone thinks I'm going to interrupt my afternoon bridge games and miss seeing every change of the movies all year, he's crazy. I'm not going to inconvenience myself just to do a job everybody has forgot I was elected to."

This attitude was not limited to the legislature but it was there that it has been most noticeable. In fact at its last meeting that body found it necessary to make attendance at committee meetings compulsory in order to have enough members present to do business.

While an office holder may avoid seeking extra work to do, it is impossible for him to avoid completely the minimum work expected of him. He may appoint assistants, but they, too, object to being inconvenienced, and the responsibility rests upon the man elected to the office. He is seldom praised for doing his job well, but he is always blamed for doing it poorly.

So let this stand as a warning to all candidates for office. If you do not expect to have to work, get out of the race now. There is a chance you may be elected, and once elected you're stuck.

Employee Quiz To Be Given

By George Dixon

Washington, March 31—Rep. Harold C. Hagen, of Minnesota, is setting out to endear himself to Washington's government workers. He's going to ask them if they think they're being overpaid.

Coming at a time when these same employees are wailing about being forced to starve on coolie wages, Mr. Hagen's upcoming questionnaire seems like asking a torture victim if he thinks he's having fun.

Or, like asking a W. C. T. U. lady if she'd care to join you in a spot of delirium tremens.

Mr. Hagen professes to be deadly serious, however. The Minnesota Republican declares he is convinced thousands of government employees aren't doing enough work to keep their blood circulating.

Exercising his authority as a member of the House Post Office and Civil Service committee, Mr. Hagen has demanded the names and addresses of employees from the various government agencies. He reports these lists are slow in coming; that he's encountering delays, stalling, and noncooperation all down the line.

In fact, he avers, a number of agencies have tried to tell him they don't have any such lists. He wants to know what kind of way that is to run a business.

Here, in essence, are some of the questions Mr. Hagen intends to put to Uncle Sam's hirelings:

1. Do you go out for coffee more than twice a day during working hours?
2. Do you, or your fellow workers, read pocked editions of novels or similar literature because you aren't kept busy enough by your work?
3. Do you think your department is being run efficiently?

Well, they're interesting questions. I wonder what'll come up in the way of answers?

This is the story of a great love that proved fickle. Chairman Carl iVnson, of the House Armed Services committee, has let his romance with the navy be alienated by the Air Force.

"Old Carl" loved the Navy with all his heart. He had pinups of admirals on the walls of his office, and used to stand and moon at them.

But the admirals have gone the way of Rita Hayworth's lost loves. Their pin-ups have come down, and in their places are portraits of Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg and other notaries of the wild blue yonder.

For many years the venerable Mr. Vinson was himself hailed as "admiral." But the other day, after a committee meeting, he let it be known that "admiral" was a thing of the past.

When the gentlemen of the press greeted him, as usual, with "How are you today, admiral?" he replied:

"Don't call me 'admiral' any more. I'm one of those fly boys now."

An obviously punchdrunk reader who signs himself "mother of six" writes:

"Dear Sir: The government has guaranteed practically everything that the mind of man could think of. Farm prices of all kinds, salaries for strikers, the international welfare, are some of them. But there is one glaring gap which is weakening our national welfare and happiness.

"I refer, sir, to the pyramid clubs. Why should not the government provide subsidies so that in the event somebody breaks the chain, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will step in with the necessary amount so that the men and women of vision and courage who had not faltered in the heat of battle would move on to certain reward?

"I want to see federal money trucks and not police wagons arriving at club meetings wherever held."

'Y' Is Ready To Serve All

Editor:

Having been closely associated with the YMCA here at Carolina for the past two years, I have had many questions asked me by my friends and acquaintances concerning the "Y". Most of the questions have been something like this: "Just what does the "Y" do?" In trying to answer this and other questions I have come to realize very definitely that many of the things the "Y" does are never heard of by the majority of the student body.

However, I have come to realize even more clearly that the fault of the lack of activity of the "Y" lies in the membership. About seventy per cent of the persons who belong to the "Y" are members in name only. When they ask "What the "Y" is doing?" they are in fact asking "What am I as a member doing?" The answer to the last question can only be—Nothing!

On Monday night the fourth of April the general membership of the "Y" will meet in Gerrard Hall to elect their officers for the coming year. Last year only about 35 to 40 persons turned out for the election. How can anyone hope to have an active organization when only 40 out of 1500 are present to elect the officers that run that organization?

The various candidates names have been in the Daily Tar Heel with their respective qualifications. If these candidates suit you, the members of the "Y", then elect them. If not, and you know of someone who is better qualified to do the job, then nominate and elect him. But after the election don't just sit back aand expect these four men to do all the work.

Only with the wholehearted support of the entire membership of the "Y" can these officers do the job that they will be elected to do. If you have an idea and think it is a good one, drop by the "Y" and talk to the president or one of the members of the cabinet and see what can be done to put your idea through. If you do have an idea don't expect someone else to carry it out. You must be ready to help with that yourself.

The "Y" is ready to serve you as best it can but only with 100 per cent participation of its members can it do its best.

Gordon and the Veterans

Editor:

Although I have never written to your Write Away column and never taken an active part in campus politics, a column in yesterday's Tar Heel changed my mind on both counts. It stated that Dick Gordon wants to take over the University Veteran's clubhouse as a sort of campus club if he is elected.

After a bit of inquiry yesterday, I learned that Gordon is a veteran himself and is sponsored by the University Party. The question is: Why is a veteran playing politics with the UVA Club? I can think of two reasons. As the UP which sponsors Mr. Gordon is an avowed fraternity party, the proposal to do away with the Vets club is an obvious attempt to get two blocks of votes:

1. The Dorm vote, which usually goes against the UP, and
2. The Frat block, which would like to see the competition of the Vet's club removed.

Admittedly, there are getting to be fewer and fewer veterans on campus, but that is all the more reason not to take advantage of this and drag the UVA Club into the campus political ring.

The veteran vote on campus has always been comparatively small, but this time look for a change. Gordon's proposal hits home to a lot of veterans, and they'll keep it in mind when they vote.

More Dances, More Dates

Editor:

We read John Stump's column last Wednesday that reported Dick Gordon as advocating removal of the Vet's Club from veteran control and making it into a dormitory club.

If Mr. Gordon is sincerely interested in the plight of the dormitory students why doesn't he advocate doing something to jolt the Student Entertainment committee into action? Dances could be held in Graham Memorial without too much trouble and if the freshman class can impart dates for us dateless ones, so could the committee. Now, even if the vet's club were taken over for the dorm students, we would have no one to take there.

We don't want the veterans to be kicked out anyway. We aren't veterans but we do have veteran friends who invite us to the club as their guests whenever we desire to go. What do you want with the Vets Club, Mr. Gordon? Make it into another Circus Room?

George Robinson
Wilburn J. Lowe

(Editor's note: Mr. Gordon stated in his speech at the political rally Thursday night that he does not advocate turning the Vet's Club into a dormitory club until the veterans on campus have decreased into a minority.)

Wants Vet's Club For The Veterans

Editor:

Mr. Gordon wants me that the Vets Club should be turned over to all students. I don't mean to be so selfish but isn't there enough room for Gordon to dance in the Rendezvous? If not, he surely should take dancing lessons each Tuesday. Why can't the vets'—about ½ of the students—keep a place they can call their own?

'House Was A Phi Man'

Editor:

Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel, featuring Chancellor House as principal speaker at the inauguration of the Dialectic Senate's officers, reported that the Chancellor "was a former Senate member himself."

Testing the theory that a certain history prof doesn't bother to read reports, but grades them by weighing them on a scale, a sophomore inserted this in the middle of his report: "If you read this far, I'll buy you a coke."

Adelaide Addle's Advice

Rules For Ideal Wife

Dear Miss or Mrs. Addle:

I am 21 today and am now a man; so I have decided it is now time to take a wife. I have set up certain qualifications for this wife.

She must not drink, smoke, or take dope; she must be beautiful, but not use much cosmetics; she must have a good personality, not too quiet or solemn, a sense of humor but not bawdy, and be a good dancer; she must know how to cook, sew, and keep house; she must have some money; and she must have intelligence and be educated, but not be an academic grind.

Do you think such a girl would make a good wife? Are there any qualifications for a mate that have been left out?

Lothario

Dear Lothario:

When I receive letters from you I know that spring is here and the sap is flowing again. Ah, youth, what wonderful days.

Such a girl sounds wonderful, like a Wagnerian heroine, or a goddess, and I wish you luck. However, let me caution you: love is also important, and often we think we have found such a mate and find later that she has some faults, for nobody is perfect.

Do not ask too much or you may remain a bachelor all of your life; remember the old adage, "a bird in the hand is worth two in the sky."

Recently several requests have come in for my free booklet, "A Kiss in the Dark Isn't Always a Lark," but unfortunately it is temporarily out of print. The publisher expects to have a new edition out in two weeks and we will be glad to furnish students with copies at that time. I have a recipe pamphlet out also entitled, "How Not To Falter on the Way to the Alter," which students might be interested in obtaining.

Dear Miss Addle:

Could you print your recipe for "Southern Fried Eel"? thank you,

Victory Village Housfrau

Dear Housfrau:

It is a pleasure, and I know you will enjoy its simple but tangy tantalizing taste.

Take six eels, boil for five minutes, roll in two cups of flour mixed with a tablespoon of salt and a half cup of cream. Mix two dill leaves, one black pepper, a teaspoonful of chile powder a slice of onion, grated lemon rind, a half cup of bread crumbs, half a cup of olive oil, a cup of vinegar, and one jiggar of cooking sherry (good sherry is prefered by good cooks), put this in a pan and heat until almost boiling; then add the "fish" mixture. Fry for seven minutes.

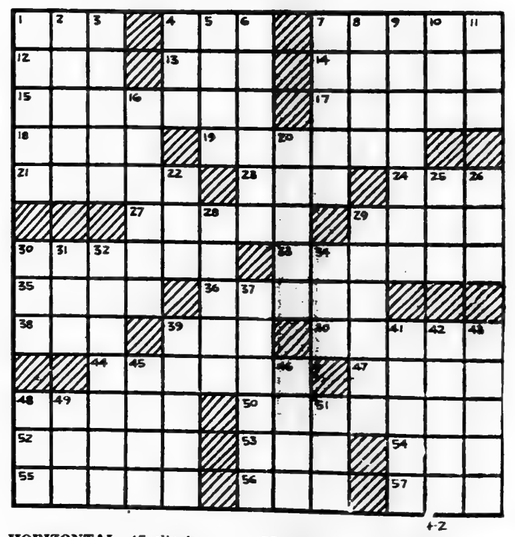
The meal will rival a night in a sultan's harem, and your husband will declare that his wife is the best cook in the whole Southland. Let me know how you like it.

53% use Pajamas

47% Sleep in the Nude

By Claire Cox

NEW YORK, March 30—(UP)—The pajama industry pulled its draw string a little tighter today.



Thanks to the U.S. Department of Agriculture and its big mouth, the whole world now knows that 47 out of every 100 red-blooded American men don't wear pajamas when they hit the hay.

The pajama industry has known it for years, but it wasn't talking.

"Yes sir, the Department of Agriculture is 100 per cent right," said Max Lovell, consultant and aspirin purveyor to the Shirt and Pajama Association. "For 20 years now, there's been about half a pajama per U. S. male sold every year. It's positively indecent."

While the department of agriculture, reporting the results of a survey on what men wear and when, blabbed that 47 per cent of the gents don't wear p.j.'s, it had no idea as to what they do sleep in.

Well, the pajama industry has been in the dark about a lot of sleeping habits, but it has the answer to that one all right. The 47 per cent are divided about 50-50 between those who are nocturnal nudists and those who sleep in their undies, the industry reveals.

Locals Take First Conference Game; Cassell Gets Win

By Joe Cherry

Right hander Dean Cassell and infielders Rip Ryan and Stan Goodman combined forces yesterday afternoon at Emerson stadium to lead Carolina, defending Southern conference champion, to a 12-4 win over the Gobblers of Virginia Tech in the Tar Heels' 1949 Conference debut.

Cassell, right-hander curve ball artist, handcuffed the visiting Gobblers, allowing only five base hits and striking out 11 men. He was in trouble only once, in the sixth inning, when he hit a streak of wildness and issued two bases on balls and allowed two hits for three runs.

The Tar Heels wasted no time in jumping on VPI hurler Jim Nolen for four hits and a comfortable 3-1 lead in the first inning, and went on to ice the game with a big six-run spree in the fifth frame. The home team got to relief pitcher Ed Burns for three more runs in their final time at bat.

Game Called

With Carolina holding an eight-run margin over the hapless Gobblers, the game was called by umpires Carr and Arrington before the second half of the eighth got under way.

The Gobblers jumped into a short-lived, one-run advantage their first time at the plate. Cassell issued a free pass to Curt Payne to start the ball game. Purdue followed through with a sharp base hit to right field, and on the play Payne was put out attempting to get to third. Purdue scored later on an error and a wild pitch.

The Tar Heels bounced back in their half of the first when Zero Allen and Goodman singled and Ryan lashed out a two-run triple into deep left field. With two away, Charlie Gurfanus bingled, scoring the Ripper.

The game then settled down into a tight mound duel between Cassell and Nolen until the fifth, when the roof fell in on the Gobbler moundsman. Ryan got things under way with his second hit of the day, and with one away Ed Lamb doubled the Tar Heel shortstop home. Gurganus then drew a walk and Sleepy Senter singled to load the sacks. Nolen succeeded in whiffing Les Couch, but Cassell aided his own cause by gaining a base on balls and forcing Lamb across the plate with run number two.

Wild Peg

With bases still loaded, Allen hit a short dribbler to thirdbaseman Payne who cleaned the bases with a tremendous heave over first base into the right field stands. Allen pulled up on third and tallied the sixth run of the inning for the Tar Heels when Goodman followed with a single.

This was the Tar Heels' sixth win in eight starts. The next game on the Carolina schedule is slated for Tuesday when Carolina plays host to Yale University.

Poisson, Manning, Levine Dent Nets; Play Again Today

By Morton Glasser

Although suffering their second straight loss in two days to the Delaware lacrossemen, Carolina's stick team showed improved offensive and defensive work yesterday in dropping the meet, 10-3.

Coach Bill Darden praised his stickmen who displayed a tight defense to halt the visitors from scoring on several occasions. Although the Tar Heels only scored three times, their attack, too, appeared more polished than in Monday's game when Carolina could not control the ball for any length of time.

The Tar Heels took an early lead in the meet when Fred Poisson sent a bounce shot into the net with the game only 21 seconds old. Delaware didn't manage to tie the count until four minutes and 34 seconds later when Thurmond Adams came through with a score. The visitors went on to notch two more goals in the first quarter, while Kirk Manning picked up one marker for Carolina.

Only one tally was scored in the second period when R. Dautel dumped one in from close-up for Delaware.

Carolina scored its final point in the third quarter with a pass from Poisson to George Levine who sent a back scoop into the goal.

Adams, who counted twice more in the final half, and Don Swann were the leading point-makers for the afternoon with three goals each. Adams now has scored six markers in the two games played between the teams.

Carolina and Delaware will meet again this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the final game of the series.

The lineups:

Delaware		Carolina

Richards		Sommers
Gutheridge		Taylor
Swann		Bolgiano

Ten Top Cinder Squads Entered In Carolina Relay Games Today

Fetzer field will be the scene this afternoon of the fourth annual running of the Carolina relays with the first of the field events scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock. The running events will start at 2:50.

Ten strong squads will be entered on the 15-event program today. In addition to host team Carolina, there will be six other Southern conference entries in Maryland, Duke, State, Virginia Tech, Davidson and Richmond. Non-conference entries are Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Princeton.

Although there will be no team scoring in today's meet, Carolina and Maryland appear to be the best bets to cop the most individual titles. Maryland last year won seven gold medals and will be favorites to repeat in most of them.

Tar Heel ace Bill Albans is expected to give the fans a show today as he is tentatively scheduled to compete in seven events. The lanky New Jersey Olympic veteran last week set three new records in pacing the field at the Florda relays.

Albans, Maryland's Bill Alexion, Duke's Brandon Davis and Virginia Tech's Sterling Wingo present a formidable list of entries in the 100-yard dash. Carolina's quartet of speedy hurdlers, Albans, Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow and Jack Moody is expected to run off with the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay title.

Martin Korik, Tennessee's soaring pole vaulter, is expected to have a wide open field in that event.

Maryland's great undefeated mile relay team of Ed McGowan, Paul Ostrye, Mario Salvanelli and Ed Matthews looms as the logical favorite in that event. Most of the other relay events will be wide open affairs.

An interesting duel should be be forthcoming in the two-mile run as Dick Hart of Penn, Johnson of Princeton, Maryland's Tyson Creamer and Tar Heel Sam Magill pace the field.

There will also be two freshman division events tomorrow. Carolina, Duke and Maryland will compete in the 440and the sprint medley relays. Carolina will enter a strong frosh sprint medley compete in the 440 and the sprint team with newcomers Tommy Hilton and Roy Solaski trotting the 220 legs, Gene Brigham on the quarter and Gordon Hamrich finishing with the half-mile leg.

Clapper Resigns as Bruin Coach

BOSTON, April 1.—(UP)—Aubrey V. (Dit) Clapper resigned tonight as manager of the Boston Bruins, ending one of the longest and most successful careers in hockey.

The announcement came as a complete surprise to players and fans and brought tears to the eyes of Vice-President Arthur H. Ross, who has been associated with Clapper since he began his National Hockey league career here 22 years ago.

Clapper is a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame as result of his 20 years playing time—longest in the National League. He started as a forward with the Bruins in 1927 and was a member of the famous "Dynamite Line."

Gavilan Scores Unanimous Win Over Williams

NEW YORK, April 1.—(UP)—Kid Gavilan's stronger finish enabled the Cuban welterweight contender to win the unanimous decision over Lightweight Champion Ike Williams tonight in their 10-round "rubber match" before a near-capacity crowd at Madison Square garden. Williams' title was not at stake.

The victory—Gavilan's second over Williams in their three fights—earned Gavilan the right to a shot at Ray (Sugar) Robinson's welterweight crown in June at Yankee Stadium.

Court Turns Down Injunction Plea By Ex-Cardinals

NEW YORK, April 1—(UP)—Federal Judge Edward A Conger today turned down the application of former St. Louis Cardinal pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin for an injunction which would have reinstated them to their old jobs in organized baseball.

The two players were suspended for five years for jumping to the Mexican league in 1946 and they charged that the suspensions were depriving them of their livelihood.

Judge Conger ruled, however, that ordering their reinstatement would be ending their suspension before it was determined whether or not organized baseball was acting outside of the anti-trust laws in banning the players for five years.

Carolina Netmen Defeat Haverford In Runaway, 8-1

By Lew Chapman

Carolina's potent tennis team continued its merry pace yesterday with an easy 8-1 triumph over Haverford college as once again the visitors from Pennsylvania proved no match for smooth-stroking disciples of coach John Kenfield.

The victory was the fourth of the still infant season for the Tar Heels, the second in as many days over the Haverford crew. Thus with four victories under their belt, the aCrolina netmen will now set their sights for the Harvard tennis squad that is scheduled to hit Chapel Hill on April 4 and 5 for a pair of matches with the local netters.

Although a stiff crosswind proved to be a hindrance to effective tennis in yesterday's match, the Carolina raqueteers came through to win five of the singles matches and the three doubles contests in straight sets. Haverford's only point was earned when Jim Foster defeated the Tar Heels number 5 man, Lashe Dameron, 6-3, 6-1.

Carolina's big two, Vic Seixas and Clark Taylor, won easily over their opponents even though there was a pre-match shift in the Carolina lineup. Taylor was

Thomas Scores Two AAU Seconds

(Special To The Daily Tar Heel)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 1—With the first two days of the three-day National Amateur Athletic union swimming and diving championships completed here, the University of North Carolina, which placed ninth in the NCAA meet in Chapel Hill last week, has scored two second places, two fifths, and a sixth in individual events.

Jim Thomas, Tar Heel sophomore who gained his first national recognition by tallying seven points in the Collegiate tourney, accounted for the pair of runner-up positions yesterday, the opening day of the meet.

Thomas was second to Joe Verdeur in the 200-yard medley, in which the LaSalle Olympic champion set a new record, and was also in the number two spot in the 150-yard back, the other which was won by record-holder Allen Stack.

The two Tar Heel fifths were scored by Carolina captain Dick Twining while the sixth was registered by diver Buddy Crone. Twining also placed in the medley yesterday and took his second fifth today in the 200-yard breaststroke, which provided Purdue's Keith Carter with his second victory within a week over defending champion Verdeur.

Verdeur's record-shattering time in the medley was 3:22.9, a full second faster than the old mark for the exclusively American event held by Adolph Kieffer of Michigan for the past five years. Thomas had bested Verdeur in the morning trials, but trailed the Philadelphia veteran, who is swimming under the colors of the Brighton Hotel Swim club of Atlantic City, N. J., in the afternoon finals.

Stack, formerly of Yale, but now with the New Haven Swim Club of Connecticut, easily retained the backstroke title he won last year. His winning time of 1:30.7 was way ahead of Thomas' second place effort of 1:35.8, which in turn was over a second slower than the Tar Heel's runnerup clocking last week when he touched inches after Ohio State's Bob DeGroot.

Crone notched his sixth place finish in the diving event which was won, to nobody's surprise, by Bruce Harlan of Ohio State.

The Buckeyes didn't fare too well in the 225-yard freestyle, however, where their ace, Bill Smith, was upset by a comparative unknown, Bob Gibe, swimming for the Detroit Athlethic club.

Cline To Head Drive For '49 Cancer Funds

Contrary to a Daily Tar Heel report, George B. Cline, manager of the Dairy Farmer's cooperative, will head the 1949 Orange County Cancer drive. James Street, local novelist who was previously appointed chairman of the campaign, resigned "because of other pressing duties."

Orange county's quota is set at $1,710, Cline said. The whole month of April will be devoted to the campaign, if necessary, but it is hoped that the goal will be reached by the end of the second week, the chairman continued.

Cline and the permanent county commander, Mrs. Arthur Roe, have laid plans with the district workers for complete coverage of Orange county. Cans for donations will be placed in the stores and other public places. Requests for contributions will be mailed, and there will be as little house-to-house canvassing as possible.

Over 6,000 letters are being sent out, telling of the services of the Cancer society, including the free detection center at Watts hospital. Pamplets will also be distributed giving valuable information on cancer symptoms and treatment.

District workers are Kenneth Putman and Jack Fowler for the Chapel Hill business area; Mrs. Charles Stanford and Mrs. W. E. Hamrick for the rural area; Mrs. James Snipes, rural colored area; Mrs. Hubert Robinson, Chapel Hill colored area; and Miss Virginia Cathey, Hillboro.

Mrs. Carson Ryan is in charge of displays, booths, and letters. Gilbert Ray is treasurer for the drive. The Girl Scouts, under the direction of Mrs. Maryon Saunders, will have a "tag day" next Saturday, the chairman said.

Rooms Available For 21 Students more student interest in the government.

The two candidates for secretary-treasurer, John Sanders (SP), and Nat Williams (CP-UP), agreed that the Budget committee should work more closely with the legislature Finance committee. Sanders expressed the view that the $8,000 surplus should be kept. Williams called for closer inspection to be made of the block fee set-up.

Religious Maturity Subject Of Dr. Allport's Talk Here

"To acquire religious maturity it is necessary to make religion a first hand fitting of one's personality instead of the second hand fitting that marks the religion of early childhood," Dr. Gordon Allport, head of the Harvard university department of psychology and former president of the American Psychology association, said in an address here last night to an audience of some 500 people in Gerrard hall.

The address of Dr. Allport, who was editor of the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology for 11 years, was sponsored by the American Council on Education and the National Council on Religion in Higher Education in cooperation with the Hazen foundation.

Dr. Arnold S. Nash, head of the department of Religion and Dr. John F. Dashiell, head of the psychology department, introduced Dr. Allport.

Dr. Allport said most young people go through a period of rebellion against the religion taught them, before the age of 16.

Actually, the early twenties are the last religious period of life, he said, "because the disciplining of parental teaching is complete and a new first-hand fitting of faith is not yet found. When young men marry wives who are, on the average, more religious than they and have the responsibility of children to train, they often return to the parental model."

"Faith is less certain than knowledge, but is not as uncertain as delusion," he said. "Faith, in one's friends or in God, is a certitude (not a certainty) which is based on probabilities supported by love."

Dr. Allport said that the "integrative urge and curiousity of the religious individual is much greater than that of the scientist, who, as a scientist, has a limited curiousity. The habits of the scientist do not serve him in his family relations, recreation, in his activities as a citizen. Nor do they overspread the problems and sectors of life with which religion deals.

elevated to the number one slot so he could gain added experience against Haverford's ace, Diehl Mateer. The added responsibility was no impediment to Clark though, as he displayed magnificent tennis to handily dispose of Mateer, the seventh ranking amateur netter in the Middle Atlantic states, by the scores of 6-1, 6-2.

Seixas, Carolina's pride and joy and the seventh seeded player in the nation, had a mite tougher time with Bob Betson, Haverford's second man, but after a shaky start the Tar Heel ace steadied and, despite his injured ankle, took the offensive and battered his foe into submission, 6-3, 6-2. Betson won the first two games of the initial set to take a brief lead but Seixas brought his cannon-ball serve and tricky net game to bear and the final outcome was never in doubt.

'The Lost Colony' Tryouts Slated For This Morning

Tryouts for the ninth summer season of "The Lost Colony" by Paul Green will be held this morning at Memorial Hall from 9:30 to 1:00 p.m. Samuel Selden, director of the production, will audition persons interested in having parts in the show this summer. He will be assisted by the author and John W. Parker, General Manager.

In line with the policy initiated last year, to extend the representation from North Carolina in "The Lost Colony," the auditions will be open again to all residents of the state and all students in the state.

Since "The Lost Colony" is produced in a large open-air amphitheater, only actors with unusually strong, mature voices—persons capable of speaking clearly (without shouting) over a distance of at least 150 feet outdoors—will find it advantageous to attend the auditions.

These auditions will be open to people who wish to try out for speaking parts. Since many of last year's actors are planning to return, the available parts will naturally be limited. The roles for women especially will be limited.

"The Lost Colony" will open Saturday, July 2 and run continuously five nights weekly through Sunday, September 4. Rehearsals will begin on June 13.

Safety Committee Clarifies Types of Parking Stickers

To clarify some confusion that has arisen subsiquent to the establishment of the new staff parking areas, the Safety committee yesterday explained again the two types of red stickers. Red stickers having an "A" before the number permit parking in staff area and any other restricted areas. Staff is defined as "teaching faculty, administrative officers, the extension force, and other non-student employees of the University."

Only full time faculty members and employees are entitled to the "A" stickers, the committee pointed out. Part-time instructors, research assistants, and teaching fellows who are students are not entitled to "A" stickers. New permanent "staff permits" will be issued to holders of "A" stickers as soon as they arrive from the manufacturer.

Red stickers having "S" before the number permit parking only in the restricted areas other than the staff parking areas. These "S" red stickers have been issued to commuting students who live outside the walking zone.

Appropriate signs at the entrances from Cameron avenue and the Raleigh highway to the several parking areas designate whether the areas are "staff" or "parking by permit only."

Blue stickers and cars without stickers are not entitled to park in any of the staff or restricted areas before 2 o'clock, Monday through Friday. Parking restrictions in the several parking areas do not apply on Saturday or Sunday, or after 2 o'clock any day.

The annual April fool edition of the DTH is an expected event of the Carolina campus.

The secretarial position went to Jean Serpell of Daytona Beach, Fla., who is on the social service committee and was elected outstanding pledge of Tri Delt. Ruth Whalen, who was named treasurer, came to the university from Wilson and Stephens college. She is a member of the social service committee, Carolina Quarterly staff, and Pi Phi sorority, and is a student adviser for next year.

Valkyrie Sing; Honor Tapping To be April 25

The date for the annual Valkyrie Sing and Fleece tapping is set for Monday night at 8 o'clock, April 25, in Memorial hall, Teeny Royall, co-chairman of this year's program said yesterday.

Each campus organization is asked to participate in the Sing by carrying out a theme in its selection of songs and staging. Loving cups will be awarded to the winner of the men's group and the women's group.

The Valkyries will have a lighting technician to help each organization with its staging, and a rehearsal time of thirty minutes can be arranged with the use of lights," Miss Royall said.

Organizations are asked to submit the theme and songs that they will use to Miss Royall as soon as possible, Sue Stokes, co-chairman with Miss Royall urged. She said this request was made in order to prevent duplication of songs, but not necessarily duplication of themes.

Entrants will be judged on a point system, the chairmen announced. Music, which constitutes 65 per cent of the points, will be judged on arrangement, balance, blend, performance, relativity to theme, and musicianship. Other items which will be considered by the judges are originality, 20 points, staging, 10 points, and costumes and props, five points.

Rules set up by the Valkyries state that a minimum of eight persons can be used by a group, and that no soloists will be allowed. Each member must sing and not be merely a part of a pantomine. Also each participant must be an active member of the organization he represents.

Pantomine is allowed, but no dances or dialogue, and accompaniment is permissible. Rules limit performances to nine minutes, and a maximum of $5 may be spent on costumes, and props. Only hand props will be allowed.

Musical Program Set For Tonight

The original Deep River singers, known as the Ebonaires, will appear tonight at 8 o'clock in Hill hall. The musical program, sponsored by Graham Memorial, will feature selections varying from spirituals and folksongs to those by Gershwin.

The program will be a revival of the same type of entertainment that attained popular support by students before the war. Mike Rolader, president of the club and head of the committee, said that "Music Under the Stars" would be alternated from week to week with a "Campus Sing."

Recorded music for tonight's presentation will be drawn from Phillip Couch's collection and from Graham Memorial which is co-sponsor of the project.

Next week the "Campus Sing" will be staged with a campus organization presenting skits. Charleen Greer is in charge of arrangements, and groups have been asked to contact her for future billings.

Rolader said yesterday that the program grew out of many requests by students to re-institute the weekend affair. He said, "We feel that "Music Under the Stars" and the "Campus Sing" can again be a favorite feature of weekend entertainment. If it gains support this week, we hope to continue it through the spring."

The chairman added that the Forest theater site was ideal since it would fit perfectly with the informal theme, and refreshment facilities are near by in the Circus room of the Monogram club.

In case of rain, he said, the program will be cancelled.

Moscow's Charges Are Thrown Out By Western Powers

WASHINGTON, April 2—(UP)—The 12 North Atlantic powers today rejected Moscow's charge that they are banding together for aggression against Russia. They approved the final draft of their defensive alliance and went ahead with plans to sign it Monday.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the foreign ministers of the 11 other western powers put their final okay on the treaty text at a two-hour conference in the State department auditorium, where the formal signing will take place.

When they emerged, they issued a joint communique dismissing as a complete "misrepresentation" the protest sent from the Kremlin on Thursday.

"The pact is not directed against any nation or group of nations, but only against armed aggression," it said.

Marshall Plan Loses Speed By Weekend

Legion Post Joins Draft Movement

The "Marshall for President of the University" movement lost momentum yesterday after gaining the endorsement of nearly 600 students and 275 members of the Chapel Hill American Legion post, though some 200 additional names added to the petitions circulating throughout the campus.

Banks Shepherd, spokesman for the three students who began the distribution of petitions—without the sanction of any campus organization—attributed the slowdown to the exodus of students leaving Chapel Hill for their weekend visits at home.

Student body President Jesse Dedmond and Representative John W. Umstead were against the move to draft Gen. Marshall. Dedmond described the movement as "hasty" and ill-timed. Umstead declared the petitioning, a "bunch of foolishness."

In answer to Umstead's charge, Shepherd replied, Irregardless of Mr. Umstead's comment, we intend to continue the movement. We plan to intensify the drive beginning Monday."

Petitions began appearing in the Y lobby Thursday morning distributed by three students—Shepherd, Jerry Pence and Tom Mayfield—who named Marshall as valuable to the University as its president "because of his prestige."

General Marshall, reached in Wilmington, where he is visiting during the Azalea Festival, stated that the petitions were a surprist to him. When asked if he would take the post recently vacated by Dr. Frank P. Graham, and whether he was honored by the movement, Marshall replied:

"Naturally, I have no comment." He would not explain further.

If Marshall were appointed, critics of the move pointed out, he undoubtedly would be obliged to retire in a few years. Presidents of the Greater University may retire at 65, but are required by state law to retire at the age of 70. Marshall is in his 60's, the critics said.

"I hadn't thought of that," Shepherd replied.

Armstrong Will Represent UNC at Chicago Conference

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, will again represent the University at the fourth annual National Conference on Higher Education. He left yesterday for Chicago, and is expected to return next Friday. Having worked with the admission group last year, Armstrong will serve as consultant to the study group which will consider "Admission Policies and Procedures."

Tomorrow the participant will form 29 work groups to devote intensive study for three days to educational problems. Approximately 150 college and university staff members will be leaders for these groups, serving as speakers, chairmen, reporters, recorders or consultants.

Final sessions will be held next Thursday to hear reports and recommendations from group chairmen.

Edward K. Graham, acting dean of faculties at Washington University in St. Louis and son of a former president of the University is a member of the conference planning committee, as is J. D. Messick, president of Eastern Carolina Techers college.

Ritchie, Geiger Have Leads

'Farm' To Open Tomorrow Night

By Betsy Baunk

Estelle Ritchie of Boston, who claims her actress sister is the real comedian in the family, will defy that claim again tomorrow night when she plays Annie Turner, the female comedy lead in "Apple Tree Farm."

This will be the third comedy part Miss Ritchie has copped since she came to Carolina in the fall as assistant to Sam Selden, director of the University's Dramatic Art department. Her other roles have been Trina in "I Remember Mama," Mrs. Candour in "School for Scandal," and one of the Irish biddies in the one-act experimental "Dearie, You're A Dream." After eight years of serious parts in amateur and professional theater performances of Shakespeare and modern dress dramas, Estelle welcomes the change-over.

Playing opposite Miss Ritchie will be James Geiger of Miami, Fla., as Andy Merrilees, a no-good, horse-betting shoe clerk who can't seem to like the right people or things and, consequently, gets into more jams than a high school freshman. Jim, who holds the record for student performances with the Playmakers, will make his 41st bow on the Carolina stage.

Other leading roles in "Apple Tree Farm," will be handled by George Grizzard (Bob Vate), Washington, D. C.; Anne G. Martin (Myra Manning), Cherokee; Sam Greene (John Darrell), Shelby; and Elizabeth Stoney (Angela Farris), Winston-Salem.

Supporting roles will be filled by Bill Collins (Jake), Des Moines, Iowa; Bill Sanders (Richard Thompson), Roanoke Rapids; Larry Peerce (Mr. Cuddy), New Rochelle, N. Y.; Ellen Smith (Lollypop Girl); Barnesville, Ga.; Margie Cameron (Mrs. Throckmorton, Farm Girl), Washington, D. C.

The show, sponsored by the Laboratory Theater of the Carolina Playmakers for the benefit of the Koch Memorial Fund, is under the direction of Marty Jacobs, a graduate assistant from Greensboro. Costumes were designed by Irene Smart; dances by Foster Fitz-Simons, and Scenery and lighting by Frances Michael Casey. Accompanists for the production are the composer, Mr. MacIlwinen, and Frank Groseclose. Stage manager is Brod Fearing.

Lanier, Madry To Run For Mayor Of Village

PICTURED ABOVE ARE the Ebonaires, the original Deep River singers, who will appear in Hill hall tomorrow at 8 o'clock. The musical program which will be sponsored by Graham Memorial, will feature a variety of vocals, ranging from Southern spirituals and folksongs to those by Gershwin. The public is invited to attend.

Whitfield Files For Re-election As Local Judge

Manning Seeks Post In Recorders Court

Chapel Hill's municipal elections have all the promise of a real campaign this year with Edwin Lanier, head of the University Central Records department opposing incumbent Bob Madry for the post of mayor and John Manning opposing Judge Henry Whitfield for the Recorder's court judgeship.

Imcumbent aldermen R. B. Fitch and R. L. Fowler are seeking re-election to the board while Mrs. Roland McClamrock and Kenneth Putman are running for positions for the first time. Mrs. McClamrock is the first woman to run for the position.

The successful candidate for mayor will serve for a period of two years, the aldermen will serve for four years, and the Judge of Recorder's court will occupy his position for two years.

Election books will open for the registration of new electors April 16 and will remain open to April 23. April 23 will be challenge day for the registration procedure. The registration will be under the direction of J. R. Green, and Mrs. J. R. Crawford and Mrs. Paul Robertson will act as judges.

Registration books will be open from 9 to 9 o'clock on Saturday during the registration period, and 9 to 5 o'clock on weekdays. All registration will take place in the fire department of Town Hall.

In announcing his candidacy for re-election, Mayor Madry stated, "I shall stand on the record of the town government for the last several years, bearing in mind that proper credit should be given the aldermen. the town manager and other appointive officers, and the other municipal employees. Chapel Hill has been fortunate, I feel, in that it has had exceptionally able aldermen and a most capable town manager.

"There is reason to believe," he continued, "that this contest will be conducted on a high plane. It appears that no particular issues are involved. The other candidates and I have have been in agreement on most of the policies formulated in the meetings of the Board of Aldermen, and we seem to see eye-to-eye on plans for the future development of the community."

GM Offers Quarette Tonight In Hill Hall

From 9 to 11 o'clock tonight in the Forest theater the University club will present "Music Under the Stars," an informal program of recorded classical and popular music.

It will include such favorites as "Workin' on de Railroad," "Shortnin' Bread," "Old Man River," and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."

The quartet is composed of Merton Smith, tenor; Albert Yarborough, tenor; Earle Robinson, baritone; and James Lapsley, bass. Elmer Thomas is the accompanist. In addition to their ensemble work, each member is a soloist.

The Ebonaires have done extensive singing throughout North Carolina, and frequently have given radio performances. Students and townspeople are invited to attend the musical concert tonight.

Officials' Wives To Visit The Hill

The Sir Walter cabinet, composed of wives of State officials, will visit the University Tuesday, Chancellor R. B. House said yesterday. The group will attend a luncheon at the Monogram club at 1:15 o'clock, and a tea at the Carolina Inn at 4:15 that afternoon.

The cabinet members will tour the University campus, giving special attention to the Arboretum. Over 35 guests are expected, House said.

This Is Your Last Chance—Don't Miss It

FOR THOSE STUDENTS WHO DID NOT HAVE TIME or just didn't give a damn about going to the last couple of meetings at which the top candidates for political office spoke, we have good news: You have another chance. Tonight at 6 o'clock at the Baptist church, the three candidates for president of the student body will make short talks. The Baptist Student union, sponsors, have invited all students to come to the BSU supper meeting and hear Dick Gordon (UP), Charlie Long (CP) and Bill Mackie (SP) put in their bids for the campus vote.

Only the presidential candidates will speak, but all candidates are urged to be present, because after the talks, there will be a question and answer period at which all candidates present will be asked to participate.

On That Question of Co-Editors—Good or Bad?

FOR THOSE PERSONS ON CAMPUS WHO HEARD that most of the people who have been in publications for any length of time around here are against any sort of co-editors or board of editors of any publication—it's true. And there are a lot of good reasons for it that any of us can tell you. Just for fun, ask Tom Wharton, who is co-editor of Tarnation now. He will give you the straight scoop. And he's a man who should know, if anybody does.

But our point: We were perusing the files of the Daily Tar Heel the other day and found this item in the issue of March 23, 1937: "The Student Council, in a Graham Memorial session late last night, defeated the plan of the Carolina Magazine to elect two editors by declaring co-editorship repugnant to the Publication union's constitution and therefore illegal."

Odds and Ends of Incidental Information

IN CASE SOME OF YOU INTERESTED PEOPLE didn't know it, election day comes on Tuesday of this week. Many of you haven't been too interested in the proceedings up to now, but for the sake of your student government and mine, please go to the poles and vote. It won't take you but a minute.

Here we go with the rumor mill again: It looks pretty certain from this corner that Al Lowenstein, Student party candidate for vice-president, is being backed in his race by such people as Tom Eller, former president of the student body (SP-CP), Bill Miller, chairman of the Orientation committee who ran for the presidency on the UP ticket a couple of years ago, Emily Baker, speaker of the Coed senate, and Ferne Hughes, president of the Pan Hellenic council.

Graham Memorial is discriminating against politicians! We don't care what Bob Watson said in yesterday's paper, that sign is still down there—the one in the office that says, "Political Mimeographing Will NOT Be Accepted."

Naval Group Plans Meet Here Tonight

Members of the Naval Reserve Air unit will meet at 7:30 tonight in the NROTC annex. Lt. R. C. Simpson, officer in charge, said today.

Spirit Continues

"You can't keep a good man down," was the word yesterday from South bunilding.

Sen. Frank P. Graham left his hotel room yesterday where he had been confined because of a severe cold to vote for the bill to extend the Marshall plan. Dr. Graham's office is keeping in closer contact with the Senate so that he can be present when a bill is put to vote.

In a call to Chapel Hill yesterday, Mrs. Graham said she and her husband would be unable to come to Chapel Hill this weekend as they had previously planned.

Doctors who examined the former president said he was "not seriously ill," a spokesman said.

Careful Study Needed

The move started by three students last week to "draft" General George C. Marshall as president of the University is, as Student Body President Jess Dedmond said yesterday, premature. As yet there is no one to whom students may refer their opinions on the choice of a new president since Governor Scott has not appointed the trustee committee which will consider the selection. When the committee is set up it will undoubtedly make arrangements for receiving any recommendations made by the student body.

It is to the students' interests that they make known their preferences in the selection of a new president. In doing this, however, the most logical approach seems to be in line with Dedmond's suggestion that students should consider the qualities they desire in a president before they attempt to make an actual choice. Already several men are being generally mentioned as possible prospects for the office. If a list of desirable qualities can be drawn up to serve as a yardstick in measuring the qualifications of these and other candidates, it would provide a sound basis for making a wise choice.

A distinguished name such as General Marshall possesses is certainly a factor to be weighed in picking a president for the University, but it is only one of a great many factors. If students can agree upon a man or upon a few men whom they think should be considered for the presidency, their perference will carry weight in the deliberations of the trustee committee, and the more carefully the choice is studied the more weight it will carry. For this reason students should be cautious of giving their backing to any man, no matter how famous, without carefully considering his qualifications for the specific job of a university president.

Good Word For Dean

If Assistant Dean Bill Friday were not taking over the duties of the office of the Dean of Students, the coming absence from the University of Dean Fred Weaver might be a cause for some dismay to next year's students. It is not too often that a student body is fortunate enough to have a dean as zealous in safeguarding student freedoms and as anxious to promote cooperation between students and university as is Dean Weaver, and when two men of such calibre are found in the same office it is reason for rejoicing among students.

Since he moved up from the Dean of Men spot last September, Weaver has constantly sought methods of building a feeling of unity between the changing student body and the permanent University staff and of preventing the outbursts of antagonism which occasionally arise from misunderstandings between the two. On all matters of concern to both administration and students Weaver has called in student leaders for consultation and suggestions. The resulting understanding of reasons behind decisions has gone a long way toward curbing hard feelings such as those which accompanied the dismantling of the scuttlebutt. Although no softies in their dealings with students who are trying to get away with something, both Weaver and Friday maintain a friendly and sympathetic attitude toward students and are always fair in their rulings.

In the eyes of a student body the office of a dean of students may be one of two things: It may be a place of terror to be avoided like poison and entered only with dread if entered at all; or it may be a friendly place where students feel free to go for guidance and help. The student body of this University is graced with many blessings found infrequently and with limitations at other colleges but among its greatest blessings is a dean's office of the friendly type. The presence of Bill Friday while Dean Weaver is studying at Yale next year is assurance that it will remain so.

It's Time to Choose

Day after tomorrow is election day at the University and students will be choosing the officers who will lead campus activities in the next twelve months. Good leaders are needed, for next year will be the transition period when the older veteran students will be yeilding place to the younger group. It needs only careful selection to insure that the best ability is utilized. That selection is a job in which each of the more than 7,000 students of the University should feel personally responsible for having a share. Be sure that you vote.

Apple Tree Farm

Original Play Starts Monday

By Vestal C. Taylor

Beginning Monday night and running through Friday night, people on campus have a rare treat in store for them in the five night run of "Apple Tree Farm," authored by Ida Lupino with music by Bill MacIlwinen.

All of those who have taken time to preview the show agree that it has reached a state of polish that would be difficult to improve.

"Apple Tree Farm" is a lively story of romance and counter romance on the part of three guys and three gals, which might be dull in itself except for the manner in which Miss Lupino has led the six main characters through the plot, combining drama and honest to gosh comedy. A brief summary of the situation is as follows: George Grizzard, as Vate is after Estelle Richie as Annie, Annie is after Jim Geiger as Andy, and Andy is interested only in the ponies. Angela, Lib Stoney, is after John, Sam Greene, who is looking for Myra, played by Ann Martin. But Myra was once supposed to have married Vate and was left at the alter when Vate got a snoot full at his bachelor's party the night before and couldn't make the wedding.

Choreographer Foster Fitzsimmons has arranged remarkable dance routines for the show. The dancers are led by Mary Jo Cain and Dick Johnson. The group of four dance couples is accompnaied by two pianos handled by Bill MacIlwinen and Frank Groseclose.

But the biggest bouquet is due Marty Jacobs for his excellent work as director of the show. Marty is already well known on campus for his directing but it seems that he has surpassed himself on this one.

For the benefit of those who don't know, the reason behind this production is the thing of real and lasting value, for the "Farm'" proceeds are to go to the Koch Memorial Fund, in honor of the late Prof. Koch. Yes, the reason behind the show is the best reason of all, It is to continue the great work of a truly great man.

Lib Stoney tells this corner that Betty Lou Ball is scheduled to return to campus with a troupe of Salem girls to present a show in the Rendezvous Room next Friday night. Regular attenders will remember Miss Ball for her stellar performance in the same spot several weeks ago. She is a great performer, at least Fred Waring thinks so—he offered her a handsome job, and she makes every minute of her appearance worth the attendance many times over.

Charles Weidman, the tall, flexible cross between a Panama fire chief and a female roller skating champion, did a complete and thorough job of entertaining a near capacity audience of students and faculty members in Memorial hall a few nights ago.

Weidman, who has risen to become one of the foremost dancing masters of America, makes a specialty of satire in the modern dance field. His troupe, composed of professionals, is made up of the finest talent from this particular division of entertainment. We feel sorry for those who missed Weidman's appearance.

We also feel sorry for those who were unfortunate enough to miss the Pan Hell show "Olio" (I think that's right). Those gals were great. The show was a little bulky, but it was honest to gosh Entertainment. Let's have more of the same from other organizations in the business.

NY Concert Plans Being Made

By "Wink" Locklair

Two events earlier this week—the beginning of spring football practice, and a call from Hill hall for campus singers interested in making an appearance with the University Glee club in Carnegie Hall next November—reminded us that plans and preparations for the Notre Dame weekend are going forward, although the festivities are still eight months away, and we discussed the singing end of it the other afternoon with Director Paul Young in his office on the second floor of Hill.

"About 45 students tried out Monday and Tuesday," Mr. Young said, "and we'll be able to accept about 15 of them." (Each candidate, when auditioning, is asked to sing a few scales and to sight-read a simple hymn tune in his or her particular part.) "But we can still use some first tenors," he announced.

As for the New York trip, many details remain to be worked out. "We didn't get our booking clearance for Carnegie Hall until last Friday, and we also have to appoint a manager," Mr. Young commented. According to present plans, the 150 men and women who make the trip, will leave Chapel Hill early Wednesday morning, November 9, aboard five special buses. They will arrive in Washington in the afternoon where, in the evening, it is anticipated that the combined glee clubs will give a concert in the Nation's Capital sponsored, if possible, by the North Carolina Alumni Association, the North Carolina Society, or the Southern Society.

They will continue on to Gotham Thursday morning, unpack that afternoon, and rehearse in Carnegie sometime before the Friday night concert. After the program, the glee clubs will be on their own until Sunday morning when they begin the long journey home. The music to be sung on the trip has not been selected as yet, but there seems to be a good chance that the Men's Glee Club will give the Philip James setting of Vachel Lindsay's "General William Booth Enters Into Heaven," which they presented with such success here in February.

Right now, Mr. Young is preparing his male singers for two concerts in Roanoke Rapids and Greenville, North Carolina, next Thursday and Friday. He is also rehearsing the Women's Glee Club for their spring concert April 21, which will feature Brahms' Alto Rhapsody and William Schuman's setting of a sketch from "Look Homeward, Angel," by Thomas Wolfe.

From all indications, North Carolina alumni in New York are looking forward to the Tar Heel invasion next fall, and it is expected that the Notre Dame-Carolina contest in Yankee stadium and the concert in Carnegie Hall will be sold out in advance.

Vet's Club Clarification

By John Stump

There are plenty of veterans on this campus, and don't ever let anyone tell you otherwise. Apparently several hundred of them also read the Daily Tar Heel.

Specifically, they read this column on Wednesday morning where future plans for the UVA clubhouse were discussed. As quite a few of them have taken the trouble to tell us, it is still a little early to be talking about these future plans.

According to Gene Newton, president of the UVA, the veterans will be using their headquarters for more than the one quarter suggested by us. We believe that when the veterans do vacate, the center should be used for the campus at large, not for some one organization, but in view of the mis-impression many veterans got from the first article, we want to explain where the veterans stand.

No one intends to take this center from them, least of all Dick Gordon (source for the first article) or this columnist. But we definitely intend to try to get the place for all of the students when the veterans do vacate. As a matter of fact, while every dormitory student on campus wants and intends to get a recreational center, probably not half a dozen of them would try to take one from the veterans. All of which should explain away the mis-impression.

An old Chapel Hill resident popped up over in Raleigh the other day. Junius Scales testified before a legislature committee hearing, but we didn't hear whether his measure passed or not . . . Congratulations are due to the fraternity pledge masters association and the IFC who have arranged an all-fraternity pledge banquet for the Pine room of Lenoir hall. It is slated to come off Monday night with Controller Carmichael present as principle speaker. . . The banquet should be a help in getting pledges of various fraternities acquainted, provided they have gotten sufficiently back to normal from hell week to be recognizable.

If there is a bulletin board on campus which isn't plastered with political posters, it isn't the fault of the candidates running. But posters don't tell much about a candidate. If you want to be able to at least know what the candidates you're voting for on Tuesday look like, we recommend that you attend the Sound and Fury show Monday night sponsored by one of the parties or one of the other rallies which will be held between now and the election Tuesday.

Wolfe Club to be Formed

By Bill Buchan

Fans of Thomas Wolfe will welcome the news that a "Tom Wolfe Club" is being organized on campus. Under the guidance of Blanton Miller, Dr. Mary Claire Engstrom and others, the club is being formed to study Wolfe's works, hear speakers who knew him and in general sponsor programs which will further his reputation on the Carolina campus.

Wolfe, a native of Asheville, was a student here during the World War I years and included many scenes of Chapel Hill life in his now famous novels. He has been called the "greatest alumni" of the University of North Carolina.

Yet, there is nothing on this campus except a portrait in Graham Memorial which even gives any indication that he went to school at Carolina. The club has scheduled its first meeting for Thursday night in Graham Memorial. Any interested students will be welcomed. Dr. Engstrom, a student of Wolfe who has made an extensive study of his life will speak at the meeting.

House Supports Long

Editor:
To Whom It May Concern:

Although I am no longer a student at the University after four years of interest and active participation in Student Government, I cannot refrain from expressing my opoinions on this forthcoming crucial election.

At such a time I do not feel that I can do the Student Body a greater service than to recommend Charlie Long for president of the student body.

Charlie and I have long been associated in Student government, often opponents, frequently colleagues, and although we have differed on many issues, nevertheless I have found Charlie to always hold in his heart the best interests of Student Government.

After three years of constant work with Student Government, Charlie not only recognizes the problems which confront us, but through experience is best prepared to achieve workable solutions to these problems.

Student government can only be as strong as your interest makes it, therefore I urge you to vote in this election—and VOTE FOR CHARLIE LONG.

Thanks For Cooperation

Editor:

I should like to take this opportunity to express publicly my appreciation for the fine cooperation shown by the the members of the University Club and by the members of the University Band in helping Student Government put over its election rally last Thursday night. While it is true that our combined efforts did not succeed in bringing to the meeting a great number of people outside of those in the usual political circles on campus, at the same time I believe we impressed the campus with the idea that an election is in the offing and at least provided some entertainment.

It should also be pointed out that it was the fine work of the same organizations which made possible the very effective send-off which we were able to give Dr. Graham last Sunday evening.

As these affairs required the sacrifice of some time by both the University Club and the Band, I feel the campus should know of the fine cooperation and work. I should like to add farther that it has been a source of pleasure to me this year to see the University Club make a conscientious effort to serve the students on a year around basis.

A New Angle For Cherry

Editor:

In these days, when all roads lead to communism, I do not deny the possibility that even the road Mr. Cherry is travelling leads in that general direction. However, at the present time Mr. Cherry is on a long and roundabout tour. In view of this fact, may I suggest that Mr. Cherry carefully read The Communist Manifesto, and submit a brief critique to The Daily Tar Heel?

Such an action on the part of Mr. Cherry, may make it possible to turn an April Fool's Day joke into the solution of his quandaries and a revelation of the errors in the philosophy of Omar Khayyam.

Tar Heel Cindermen Capture Eight Events In Relays

Bill Albans Paces Tracksters With Three Individual Titles

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Sweeping eight of the fourten individual championships, Carolina's track team set the pace in the fourth annual Carolina relay meet at Fetzer field here yesterday afternoon before an estimated crowd of 3,500.

Led by big Bill Albans, who won three individual titles and ran a first and second-place relay team, the Tar Heels grabbed five of the six field events, two track crowns and one relay title.

The University of Pennsylvania and the University of Maryland each won two titles while Tennessee and Princeton each took one. Pennsylvania, however, set records in both events as the winning distance medley team clipped better than eleven seconds off the old record and this was the first time the two-mile had been run.

Record Smashed

In all, six collegiate records were smashed in the process of the afternoon's work. In addition to Penn's winning distance medley effort, records fell in the javelin, broad jump, pole vault, sprint medley and the 440-yard relay. The record for the freshman sprint medley relay was also broken.

Carolina weight man Bob Seligman won the first event of the afternoon, the shot put, by barely edging out Duke's Jim O'Leary. O'Leary's last throw put him into the lead, but Seligman came back with his last toss to defeat his old foe with a put of 47 ft. 10¼ in.

Only 4 Jumps

Albans, only taking four jumps, leaped 22 ft. 5⅛ in. to capture the broad jump easily. Surprising Bob Kirk tossed the javelin a record 195 ft. 1¼ in. to erase Duke's Steve Lach's old mark of 187 ft. Jack Moody, Tar Heel high jumper, repeated his last year's victory in that event.

The distance medley record went by the boards as the speedy Princeton quartet paced by Ron Wittreich and Bob Snedeker clipped eleven seconds off the old standard. Penn's sprint medley team turned in a fine performance to better the old standard by three seconds.

Maryland's mile relay team continued unbeaten with a fast 3:22.4 showing. Paul Ostrye, running the second leg for the Terps, overtook a brief Princeton lead and the Tiger team never came close after that.

Shuttle Relay

Carolina's shuttle hurdle relay team did the 480-yard stint in 61.5 seconds, only one-tenth off the Pennsylvania relays record. This is the first time this event has been run in the south.

In the 440-yard relay the Maryland team ran a speedy 43.2 to knock three-tenths of a second off its own record set here last year.

Maryland's freshman sprint medley team whacked six and six-tenths seconds off the old mark with a winning performance of 3:41 flat. Both second-place Virginia Tech and third-place Carolina beat the old record.

No Teams Score

There was no team score kept at the meet yesterday in accordance with NCAA regulations which do not advocate scoring of relay meets. Each race carries with it a separate title and no team champion is decided or designated.

The first three men and the first three teams in each event received a medal yesterday. Each man received a medal if his team placed either first, secord or third.

Carolina will engage Princeton in a dual meet on Fetzer field next Saturday afternoon. Many of yesterday's stars will compete in the meet.

Tar Heel Netmen Oppose Harvard Here Tomorrow

Carolina's varsity netmen, victors in four straight matches, will meet Harvard university here tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in their fifth contest of the season.

Coach John Kenfield's racqueteers met and defeated Michigan State and Haverford twice each in the past week, but they are expected to be up against their stiffest competition thus far in tomorrow's meet.

Captain Vic Seixas, still limping from a spained ankle, will head the Tar Heels in the number one spot, while Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, Duke Wilder, and Jim Winstead or Laslie Dameron will play in the singles in that order.

The doubles teams swept every match in their first four outings, and they can be counted on to give a good performance against the visiting Crimson. The return of Seixas to the doubles events greatly strengthened the Tar Heel entries.

Tomorrow's meet will open a busy week for the locals; On Tuesday they take on Harvard on a return match, Wednesday they play host to Yale, and on Thursday and Friday Williams college will be in town for two matches with Coach Kenfield's charges.

Thomas Scores Again in AAU's As New Haven Cops Team Title

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 2—(UP)—The New Haven swimming club won the team title in the National Men's AAU swimming and diving championships here today, besting its nearest competitor, Ohio State mainly through the efforts of twenty-year-old Jim McLane.

McLane stroked his way to a new record in the 440-free style event while the favored Bill Smith of Ohio State, the 1948 title holder and previous record holder was finishing a poor fourth.

North Carolina's Jim Thomas was among those who nosed out the somewhat-overtrained Hawaiian in the quarter mile pull. Thomas finished third behind Bill Husner of Northwestern. The Tar Heel's time was 4:44.1 compared to winner McLane's record time of 4:42.1.

The event was the third in which Thomas had placed during the big three-day gathering. He won seconds in the backstroke, and individual medley events to garner a total of 11 points for the North Carolina entry.

The Tar Heels altogether tallied a total of 13 points the other two tallies being delivered by Dick Twining and Buddy Crone who placed fifth in the individual medley and one meter diving respectively. The point total enabled the Tar Heels to finish well among the top ten teams in the final scoring.

The North Carolina 300-yard medley relay team finished just out of the money in the finals of that event. The Chapel Hill team of Norman Sper, Jesse Greenbaum, and Twining, could not match the pace of the winning team of the New Haven club at the finish lost fifth place and another chance to score to the trio from Michigan State. The Tar Heel time was 2:57.6 compared to the winning clocking of 2:52.4 by the team from Connecticut.

At the conclusion of the meet, Tar Heel Thomas was hailed by many as one of the finest young prospects in swimming today. As one expert put it, "He's young, still developing, and hasn't seen the day when he's had too much water. He will swim anything you will let him enter."

Soccer Bows Out, Softball Begins In Monday's Play

Late tomorrow afternoon after darkness has settled over the scenes of the intramural athletics, two new champions will have been crowned and an entirely new activity will have been inaugerated in the spring mural program.

The five-man soccer league that has held the mural spotlight since the beginning of March will be terminated tomorrow when the finals of both the dorm and frat divisions will be staged. Either the Med School or Mangum, whichever is declared winner of a protest game and Steele will battle it out for the dormitory laurels while Sigma Nu and Phi Gam are the competitors for the fraternity soccer crown that was won last year by ATO. The defending ATO's were previously conquered in the tourney by Chi Psi which was eventually beaten in the semi-finals. All the four teams vying for the championships are still undefeated, having survived the gruelling elimination type of play.

Popping up to take over where soccer left off is softball, an ever popular sport on the Carolina campus. Forty-one fraternity teams have been entered in the frat division with Kappa Sig, Sigma Chi, Phi Gam and Phi Delt all having entered three nines in the competition. Thhe 41 entries have been broken down by the mural department into nine leagues, 5 loops of 7 teams and 2 of 8.

The dorms have been responsive to the softball call and have entered 33 nines. This group will be split into 3 leagues of 7 teams and 2 loops of 6 squads.

Softball Schedule

5:00—Field 1, Delta Sig vs Lambda Chi 1, 2, ATO 2 vs Pi Lamb 1, 3, Beta 2 vs Pi Kap Phi 2, 4, Zeta 2 xs Chi Phi 2.

Lacrosse Team Third Loss, 10-0 Delaware Hands

By Wuff Newell

For the third day in a row Carolina's rookie lacrosse team fell at the hands of a more powerful and experienced team from the University of Delaware. Today's score was 10-0.

The end of the first quarter saw the visitors leading by only one point, and in the second half they garnered but two more. The Tar Heels, however, were unable to hit the mark, and went scoreless through the entire 60 minutes of play.

The first point came when the game was 12:35 minutes old. Genthner, who finished the game as high scorer, contributed the talley that started things rolling.

Second Quarter

The second quarter was only 2:48 minutes old when Swann added his first point of the day. Here the Carolina defense tightened up for a brief period and it wasn't until 4:05 minutes before the first half ended that Adams scored the third talley to bring the score to 3-0 for the first period.

As the second half got underway Genthner again tossed the ball into the goal. This score was followed 10 minutes later by another point by Swann.

Then the local defense fell. In the final canto a point by Katz and two points each by Genthner and Richards brought the Delaware team's total to 10.

Although the Tar Heels were far outplayed, they showed a better form than they had in either of their other two games.

"The defense and the goalie played excellent ball." Coach Darden commented. "but the midfield was terrible."

In Better Form

Around the Delaware bench the concensus of opinion was that the yearling Tar Heel stickmen have definitely improved since the first game of the series.

"At least the boys are getting plenty of experience," the Carolina manager said, "and that's what they need more than anything else."

Today's game brought to a close the practice sessions with Delaware.

The Delaware team, which has been playing lacrosse for only a few years, has been spending its spring vacation in Chapel Hill in order to help the Tar Heel stickmen get started in the sport.

Justice Leads White Team In First Heavy Scrimmage

White supremacy was maintained at spring football practice yesterday morning when the Justice-endowed Whites defeated Justice-caroused Reds, three touchdowns to one, in the first heavy scrimmage of the current workouts.

As intimated, Charlie Justice was the difference between the two teams. He got off on one of his Golden Gallops early in the program and the Reds never quite got back on equal footing. The Choo Choo covered an even 50 yards in his mad dash for the Red goal line.

Other Talents

The Asheville Ambler displayed other talents somewhat later in the morning when he passed to end Bilpuch for another White touchdown to run the White lead to two touchdowns.

A few minutes later the Whites added their last tally of the day when Dick Weiss, an up-and-coming star from last year's freshman team, passed for another touchdown, again to Bilpuch.

The Reds got their only score on a long drive near the close of activities when fullback Joe Gurtis bulled seven big yards for the lone Crimson score. That concluded the scoring for the day.

Injury Mars

One injury marred the workout. Freshman tailback Bud Carson suffered a leg injury that may be a chipped bone, although no definite diagnosis has been made.

Besides those figuring in the scoring, other standouts in the drills included tailback Skeeter Hesmer, another first year man and a fellow classmate of his, Virginian Bill O'Brien. The pair promise to add much to the Tar Heel offense and defense respectively come next fall. Veteran Dick Bunting also turnd in an outstanding performance.

Wide-Open Campus Election Set Today

AL LOWENSTEIN, BANKS TALLEY AND TED LEONARD are the three candidates running in today's election for the post of vice-president of the student body and speaker of the legislature. Lowenstein, the SP candidate, has served in the Student council, two terms in the legislature, and was one of the original writers of the constitution. Talley is a member of the legislature, on the Ways and Means committee, and is chairman of the Campus party. Leonard (UP) is now chairman of the Elections committee of the Student legislature.

All Top Officers, Plus Amendments Included In Vote

Most important posts to be filled by today's voting are the positions of president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer. The student body will also be asked to ratify or defeat three constitutional amendments.

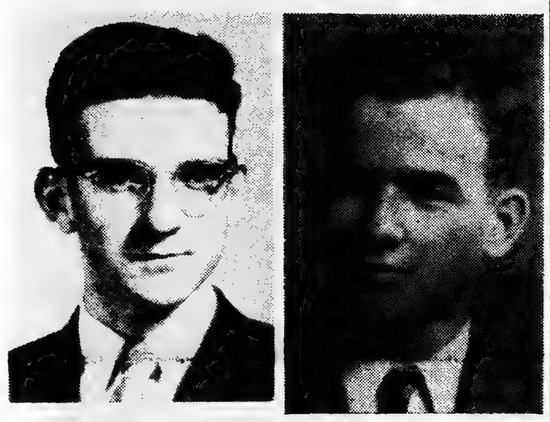
For the first time in two years, no doubly-endorsed or independent candidates are entered in the top campus race. Running in the presidential category are Dick Gordon, nominated by the University party, Charlie Long, backed by the Campus party, and Bill Mackie, the Student party candidate.

Another battle royal is expected in the race for vice-president and speaker of the legislature, with Ted Leonard (UP), Al Lowenstein (SP), and Banks Talley (CP) seeking the post.



In the race for secretary-treasurer, John Sanders (SP) will lock horns with Nat Williams, the UP-CP doubly-endorsed candidate.

on the Political Front

with Charles McCorkle

WELL, WHAT DO YOU KNOW? HERE IT IS election day, and most of us hardly realized when it was coming. The weatherman said yesterday that we would have fair weather today, maybe a little cloudy, but generally fair, so that may help to turn out a big vote.

In addition to the weather, the strenuous political door-to-door dormitory campaigning, the flocks of political posters everywhere you look, and the high-pressure Y court politicking should do something to get better than 50 per cent of the students off their dead fannies and into the polling places. At any rate, we hope so.

The top candidates, Dick Gordon, Charlie Long and Bill Mackie (notice—it's alphabetical), have been waging their presidential campaigns in a good, clean fashion for many weeks now. Likewise Ted Leonard, Al Lowenstein and Banks Talley, who are aiming for the vice-presidential seat. John Sanders and Nat Williams have fought clean and broken in the clinches for the secretary-treasurer's post. The Tarnation editorship open in today's voting will either go to Tom Kerr or to Lem Whitsett and Charlie Burns as co-editors.

So here you are, folks—it's election day. What are you going to do about it? You can sit back and let the other fellows vote, or you can do your duty and go to the polls yourself. Remember, it's your $100,000 the legislature is going to spend next year. It's you who will get kicked out of school by the Men's and Women's Honor councils. It's the president you elect who will represent you in all student government dealings outside this University and outside this state.

It's your student government. Do something about it today.

Coeds Will End Fight For Many Campus Jobs

Five coeds are in the race for speaker of the Coed senate. They are June Crockett, Eleanor de Grange, Patricia Denning, Mina Lamar, and Marie Nussbaum.

Marshall Halts President Move

University officials kept hands off the movement and said pick-

Mail Delivery By Helicopter

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By George Dixon

Los Angeles, April 4—I've just come back from flying the U. S. Mail by helicopter and I want to say that Southern California is away ahead of our effete east in getting its aerial postage delivered.

I have no tie-up with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, let it be clearly understood, but I've got to hand it to this section for the way it has conquered time and distance. Because of local redistribution by helicopter, delivery of airmail has been cut almost 22 hours.

New York is fighting against local helicopter delivery; Washington has ignored it, and other regions are lukewarm. But I have an idea they'll all come to it e'er long, and wish they'd done it sooner.

We took off from Los Angeles Municipal Airport in Sikorsky S-51 helicopter, which carries an 800-pound payload. I was listed as part of the payload, this cutting down the profit considerably.

The pilot was a casual young man named Carl Crew, who has flown 850 helicopter hours since the service was inaugurated here Oct. 1, 1947. The 24-year-old Mr. Crew, who can land from 1000 feet on a designated clump of grass—and did—insists his work is humdrum.

"There's nothing to get hopped up about," he said, morosely. "Nobody pays any attention to me any more; not even kids. The folks out here are so used to seeing me drop out of the sky, they don't bother turning around."

This, I discovered, was true. One place we landed 20 feet from a woman hanging out the laundry—and she just kept on hanging.

We took off at 11:36 a.m. and made delivery stops at Redondo Beach, Torrance, San Pedro, Wilmington, Long Beach, Santa Ana, Anaheim, and Bellflower. We were back at 12:58 p.m.; total elapsed time 1 hour, 22 minutes.

The same trip by truck would have taken better than seven hours.

But that's only a part of the time-saving. Mail from New York, for instance, used to be dumped in Los Angeles, sorted for the various sections trucked to those points then resorted for ultimate delivery.

It's now sorted for, let's say, Anaheim, in New York, shifted from the transcontinental plane directly to the helicopter, and winged almost immediately to that community, where the local delivery man is waiting to receive it. The same helicopter both picks up and delivers.

Airmail helicoptering is strictly a one-man operation. The pilot handles both the ship and the mail sacks; in addition he keeps up a running radio conversation with the dispatcher.

We were flying down a pass in Santa Ana Canyon when I heard him tell his office: "Over the running dogs."

He pointed to an isolated house and said: "See those two black dogs down there. They're the only things that pay any attention to me any more, so I use them as a fix point."

I asked young pilot Crew what he and the dispatcher talked about between the running dogs and other landmarks, and he replied laconically: "Women."

"There's a dame who lives on Garvey Boulevard in El Monte who's stuck on me," he added. "I've never seen her except from a thousand feet, but she writes me mash notes. She says she waves to me nearly every day."

I asked why he didn't drop down for closer inspection. He heaved a long sigh and said: "Can't She isn't a delivery point."

Unusual Teacher, Unusual Man

By Jonathan Marshall

I'd like to tell a human interest story today about a man who will never become famous, who will never receive credit for most of the things he does in life, but a man who has had a very great influence on many people's lives.

After several years of looking around for the right occupation, Charles Cook became a seventh grade teacher. This is not unusual, but Mr. Cook was an unusual teacher.

Every student was a human being and a future leader to Mr. Cook, and he became friends with every student. Many of his early pupils have now graduated from college, but they all remember their seventh grade teacher, and many of them still come to visit him and talk.

At the end of about ten years of teaching Charles Cook accepted a job as head worker in a settlement house in the lower east side in New York City. He felt that he could make a greater contribution there.

The settlement is located in one of the worst slum areas in this country; people live in overcrowded rooms without decent heat, with bad sanitary conditions, and with almost no social or recreational opportunities outside of the settlement house. Although it isn't nice to think about it, this is the type of neighborhood where America's worst criminals are developed and live, but Mr. Cook moved in anyway.

During the five years he has been running the settlement, Mr. Cook has become an institution in his neighborhood. He has organized clubs for the kids, discussion groups for the adults, works with city health officers, and has had young law breakers paroled in his custody.

It's often pretty hard to look beyond immediate problems, but Charles Cook has gone far beyond such things as bringing the first X-ray unit to the area, he is now fighting for a large-scale housing project for the lower east side.

It's not easy clearing out one of the nation's worst slum areas; politicians must be talked to for support, statistics gathered, plans drawn, and funds raised. Mr. Cook knows all this, but he and about ten former students also know it's worth fighting for their project.

This column should end by saying the project was approved and they all lived happily ever after, but maybe ten years from now that will be true.

Of course, the whole thing may fail, however, this does show what one person can do in the world, or what a group of citizens can do if they really want to do something constructive with themselves.

There aren't many Charles Cooks in the world, probably because most of us are too selfish to work for the other guy. One can't help wondering, though, what kind of a life we'd have if more people did try to accomplish something positive in their lives; this is just one man, a very happy man, who should serve as an example to the rest of us.

Not all of us can do something big, but we can try to use our education, for projects like these are the things that are the measure of real success, and they are the things that give real happiness when achieved.

Clever Lyrics, Poor Arrangement

By Nelson Taylor

Klassification Key
* Fine
 Fair
 Futile
* Foul

Spike Jones
 Ya Wanna Buy a Bunny
 Knock Knock

These two are of the poorer type of Jones humor. "Bunny" is by the same guy who sang "All I Want for Christmas" and in the same style. The lyrics are clever but the arrangement is not up to the usual Spike Jones caliber. "Knock," which is not an account of a game of Gin Rummy, is the old game set to music. The musical version isn't a bit more amusing than the game in prose fashion.

Jazz at the Philharmonic-Sweet Georgia Brown

This is a twelve inch release of one of the selections in the third album of the Philharmonic series. It features the great horns of such artists as Lester Young, Al Killian, Charlie Parker, Billy Hadnott, and Lee Young. Some of the solos are really tops, but there are others which won't measure up to the top quality of the best of the Philharmonic jazz series. On the first side of this release Parker sounds as if he has a split reed on his alto sax and is afraid to try to do anything inspiring. On the reverse side he redeems himself with some fine work. Al Killian closes the recording with some of the finest trumpet work ever recorded. The rhythm provided by Hadnott, Young, and Joe Jackson makes this record bid heavily for "fine" honors.

Tenor Sax

 Album Rating

This album combines some of the greatest empicerios of the tenor sax under one cover. "Ghost of a chance" and "Lester's Savoy Jump" are done up in fine fashion by Lester Young with rhythm backing which sounds like Basie and company. "Sunny Side of the Street" and "Stomping at the Savoy" are masterfully handled by Coleman Hawkins with the Cozy Cole All Stars. The album is completed by "Honeysuckle Rose" and "Blue Skies" by Ben Webster and "Don's Idea" and "What do You Want with My Heart" by the Don Byas Quartet including Slam Stewart and Charlie Shavers. At least two of these deserve a "fine rating. "Lester's Savoy Jump" is one of the finest recordings by Lester Young that this reviewer has ever heard. Lester gets a bounce in his solo that is great. "Stomping at the Savoy" by Coleman Hawkins is the other side that bids for top rating honors. The solo by Hawkins is good, but there is a trumpet ride, by who I don't know, that outshines the tenor solo, and the drumming by Cozy is nothing short of terrific. This album is a great example of fine American tenor sax interpretations.

Write Away

Doesn't Want Any DPs

Editor:

"Self preservation is the first law of man."—Darwin

Re Mr. Marshall's comments on the U. S.'s attitude toward Europe's refugees, a few dissenting remarks if you please. America is not a "TRACT OF LAND" upon which any and all the peoples of the world may settle! It is a nation with distinct cultural and political institutions, tastes, customs, and habits—notwithstanding the prevalence of a yet Un-Americanized foreign-born minority element of our population.

Undoubtedly, there are some DPs who would make good citizens. However, according to a report by a Congressional Investigating Committee the majority of them are: "bums, criminals, black marketeers, subversives, revolutionists, and crackpots of all hues and colors"—perfectly content to stay displaced as long as Uncle Sam provides them with three squares a day. This eye-witness Committee tells us that the DP problem could have been solved many months ago if they had had the desire to become independent, self-sustaining, and industrious. Even if we let the hordes in 90 per cent of them would settle in the slums of the large cities and become easy prey for the Marcantonios, Sabaths, Isacsons, and Fosters—thus creating economic and political chaos. If we're gullible enough to insist on feeding and housing them, instead of seeing to it that they go to work, then let it be done over there—we don't want them here! Do not be misled by such arguments as "maybe they can't find work." Europe isn't rebuilt yet by a long shot—and won't be for some years to come!

Already an estimated 860,000 aliens a year are gaining illegal admittance to this country—a total through 1948 of 3,500,000. The Justice Department catches only about 15,000 annually. Let the comparative few DPs who would make desirable citizens stay in Europe and direct their talents toward converting that continent from a powder keg and a continual source of turmoil and unrest into a keg of prosperity, happiness, and mutual good will. America may not have its full quota of desirables but I say without the least hesitancy that it can do without additions a helleva lot better than a scooping shovel full of other countries in the world today.

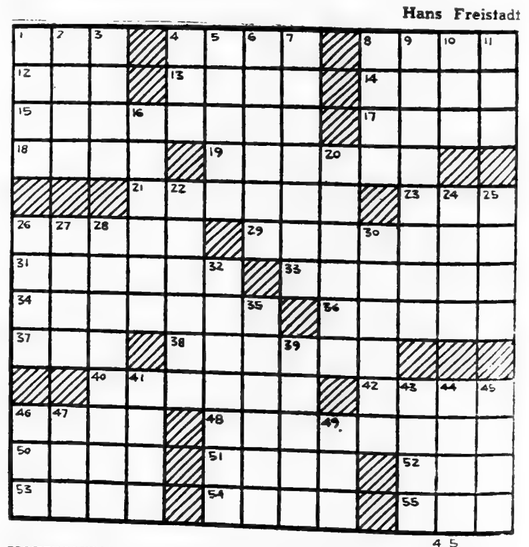
'Outlawing Reds Impossible'

Editor:



Among the strongest legal arguments against the new Mundt-Nixon bill (HR 3342) or any other proposal to outlaw the Communist Party is that such a measure constitutes a bill of attainder.

There are many who will agree that the government has no Constitutional authority to outlaw a political philosophy, and that if the Communist Party can convince a majority of the American people to support it, then there is nothing that anyone who respects democracy can do about it. Some nevertheless urge the outlawing of the Communist Party, not as a party adhering to a given political doctrine, but as a conspiracy to overthrow republican government by force and violence.

I cannot follow that line of reasoning. Under constitutional government, the Legislative can only enact laws of general applicability, that prohibit certain nefarious acts, no matter who commits them. The Legislative can legitimately pass laws prohibiting the organization of a conspiracy to overthrow the government. And, in fact, there are numerous laws to that effect already on the statute books. But no Legislature can find a person or group guilty of sedition. A bill which does so is called a Bill of Attainder and is specifically excluded by the Constitution. It is the function of the courts to determine who violates these laws, according to well established rules of evidence. No amount of "common knowledge," unpopularity, popular indignation, can take the place of such legal evidence; and if no such evidence exists, anti-Communists will have to resign themselves to the continued legal existence of the Communist Party, or will have to advocate openly (as some do) the scuttling of the Constitution.

To suggest that the Constitution be scuttled in order to protect it from Communists is a train of thought which, if followed consistently, will, in the end, leave everybody without any Constitutional guarantees at all.

McGinn to Pitch Against Bulldogs This Afternoon

By Buddy Vaden

Southpaw Bill McGinn will take over the mound chores this afternoon as the Tar Heels face Yale university on the home field at 4 o'clock in the first game of a two game series. Going into the ninth game of this young season, the Tar Heels are sporting a record of six wins, one loss, and a tie.

It will be the fifth home appearance for the local lads who are looking more and more like the championship team of last season. Pitching in the past two weeks has been steady and the Carolinians have been putting the ball for extra bases.

Among the hits for extra bases are ten triples, one four-bagger and a smattering of doubles. Will Hobbs, Rip Ryan, and John Senter have all connected for two triples each and Senter, in addition to his two three-baggers, connected last week for a three-run home.

Big Wheels

The Bulldogs, runners-up in last year's NCAA championships, will come back to the Hill on Thursday for the second game in the two-game series. Yesterday the Northern visitors paid a visit to Duke and left the Blue Devils with an 8-8 tie on their hands.

The Tar Heels, in their last appearance with Virginia Tech, collected 14 hits and 12 runs as they pounded out a seven-inning eight run victory margin over the toothless Gobblers. Stan Goodman and Rip Ryan led the attack with three hits in five trips each.

Ryan, usually dependable shortstop, has been plagued with a series of errors, but has been hitting the ball when it counts. One of the top infielders of the Big Four circuit and only a fair hitter last year, Ryan is slightly unsteady in the field, but according to the coaches, he ought to be back in form today.

Ethan Allen's Bulldogs will probably offer the Tar Heels their stiffest competition to date and the local lads will have tomaintain their power hitting and steady pitching to stay in the ball game.

Starting lineup for the Tar Heels will be the same as that which faced Tech last Friday. With McGinn on the mound and cannon-baller Andy Tranavitch in the bull pen ready for action should McGinn face any trouble, the rest of the lineup will see fielders Les Couch, Zero Allen and Ed Lamb in action. The starting infield will have Hobbs at first, Goodman at second, Ryan at short, and Sleepy Senter at third. Sid Varney or Charlie Gurganus will be behind the plate.

As usual, peanuts, pop and ice cream will be sold in the stands.

Linksmen Battle Harvard in First Big Test of Year

Carolina's high-swinging golf team begins a three-day home stand at Hope Valley country club in nearby Durham this afternoon by playing host to Harvard university beginning at 1:45 o'clock.

The visitors from the far-off lands to the North will provide the first real test of the season for the Tar Heels who won their opener last week, trouncing hapless Haverord, 25-2.

The Johnnies Harvards don't expect to be the victim of any such massacre. They held last year's Carolina team to a score just this side of a Crimson defeat and this year will be out to even the count. Harvard is the current Western intercollegiate champion.

Best Team in Years

The Tar Heels, on the other hand, seem to be shaping up with their best team in years. With Harvie Ward in top form, Coach Chuck Erickson is also finding himself with some excellent golf talent in Bob Cox and Roy McKenzie. Both these golfers shut out their Haverford opponents last week.

McKenzie, a Winston-Salem product, is playing the best golf of his college career, having shot several sub-70 rounds in practice sessions this year. He will carry the brunt of the best ball in the second foursome, playing the No. 3 position.

Reliable Brantley

Teamed with McKenzie will be old reliable Jack Brantley at the No. 4, with Ward and Cox handling the duties in the first foursome.

Breaking into the lineup at the No. 5 post will be Frank Brooks who saw service in numerous matches last year. Oliver Sapp, the newcomer and another Winstonite, will complete the starting sextet.

Last week's match with Haverford proved among other things that Harvie Ward is a hard man to beat anywhere and anytime this season. He shot a 69 for the afternoon, carding a collection of 15 pars, two birdies and a single bogey. He hit almost every green and missed birdie putts on several holes.

But his shot of the day was one on which he had to recover from a straying iron shot. The ball had rolled over the green, but Ward chipped back, scrambling for a par. The ball bounded straight for the pin, lipped in and then bounced out.

Big Joke

CHARLOTTE, April 4—(UP)—Police searched today for a not-too-ardent racing fan who dumped several kegs of large roofing tacks on the track of the Charlotte speedway yesterday.

Track officials discovered the trail of huge tacks shortly before the speedway's first 1949 program opened yesterday afternoon. The first event on the stock car racing card was delayed while the tacks were swept off the course.

Manager Needed

Anyone interested in the position of freshman tennis manager should report to the varsity courts this afternoon around 3 o'clock.

Crosby Tired Of Losing Races; Wins in Movies

Hollywood (UP)—Bing Crosby is determined to put an end to jokes about his horses. He's seeing to it that if he can't win races on the track he'll win them in the movies.

At last a Crosby horse is winning a race. It says so right there in the movie script. It's quite a novelty for the Groaner, most of whose horses are still running.

The change in Crosby's racing luck occurs in "Riding High," which Frank Capra is directing at Paramount with a stellar cast including Bing's new leading lady, Coleen Gray, and Charles Bickford.

When Bob Hope heard that the movies were giving Crosby a winning horse, he cracked:

"Those script writers certainly have a lot of imagination! Next thing they'll have the Pittsburgh Pirates beating the Cleveland Indians."

Hope owns a piece of the Indians. Crosby has an interest in Pittsburgh.

At the start of "Riding High," Crosby is a stable owner who is nuts about horses but can't bring home a winner.

"Sounds like type-casting, doesn't it?" Crosby grinned. "I've been taking it for a long time."

Just like Crosby's real horses, his movie horse, Broadway Bill, gets everything wrong with him that can go wrong with a horse. He breaks through the gate. He throws his jockey. He catches cold. But unlike Crosby horses, he wins the big race.

"Maybe," says Mr. C., "I'd better show my horses this picture. Maybe they don't know how it's done."

Carolina's "we-haven't-won-a-game-yet-but-we're-still - trying" lacrosse team opens its second week of play this afternoon against the Norfolk branch of William and Mary.

The Tar Heels, still ragged and lacking the necessary punch to do much scoring, will go into the contest as underdogs. What the stickmen lack in experience, however, they make up in determination. Today's game will be their first official game of the season. The W and M aggregation has suffered two defeats. They lost 7-2 to VMI and yesterday Duke defeated them 18-1.

Last week the Tar Heels lost three practice games to the University of Delaware team. The northern boys spent their spring vacation here in order to help the local players get started in the sport.

Although Delaware has been playing lacrosse only three years, they were far ahead in experience of the Tar Heels, who are playing lacrosse here for the first time since the war.

The Delewarites blanked the local lads in one game and far outpointed them in the other two, but around both benches it was the consensus of opinion that the Tar Heels had improved immensely by the close of the series.

After the third Delaware game Coach Bill Darden said that his charges seemed to be coming along fine.

"The goalie and the defense were greatly improved," he declared, "but the midfield was terrible."

In the three practice games the Tar Heels garnered a total of five points. Taylor, Manning and Levine hit the net once each and Poisson scored twice.

The game, said to be the fastest on two feet, is still a little slow on Navy field, but those who saw the Tar Heels in action last week seem to be of the opinion that the boys have already shown such improvement the games should become increasingly interesting as the season wears on.

Tomorrow's contest will be played at 3:30 o'clock on Navy field.

Tar Heel Netters Top Harvard, 7-1 To Gain Fifth Straight Victory; Return Match Scheduled Today

By Joe B. Cherry

Carolina's unbeaten varsity tennismen turned back Harvard university's visiting netters, 7-2, yesterday afternoon on the local courts in the first of a two-meet series with the touring Crimson, to stretch their win streak to five straight victories.

Yesterday's affray was the hardest of the still-young season for the Tar Heels, with the Crimson rackeuteers providing the local netmen with plenty of opposition and the good-sized crowd with its best net entertainment of the year.

Victor Seixas and Clark Taylor, number one and two men, respectively, for the Tar Heels, had little trouble in dispensing with their singles opponents. Seixas' terrific serve and all-around play was too much for Bud Ager, Harvard's top man, and the Carolina ace won in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Taylor becaame the first Tar Heel of the season to win in two love sets, as he whitewashed Ted Bullard, 6-0, 6-0. Charlie Rice followed with a well-earned 6-3, 6-4 victory over Charles Ames, and Stan Gruner, playing in the number four singles spot, came through to defeat Jack Frey, 6-4, 6-0.

The singles match that really kept the crowd on edge was the marathon between Duke Wilder of Carolina and Hilliard Huges, with Wilder finally winning out 5-7, 6-4, 8-6. Howard Swartzman of Harvard edged Laslie Dameron, 7-5, 6-4, in the final singles competition.

The opening doubles match provided thrills aplenty for the spectators as Harvard's Ager and Bullard staged a big comeback, after dropping the first set without winning a game, to beat Taylor and Rice, 0-6, 6-2, 6-4. The third and deciding set was a nip and tuck affair, and the last game was deadlocked several times before the visitors finally emerged as the victors.

Seixas and Wilder breezed through their match with Robb and Bacon, winning 6-2, 6-1. Winstead and Gruner added still another point to the Carolina half of the scoreboard with a 6-3, 6-0 conquest of Ames and Bramhall.

A return match is on tab for the Tar Heel courtmen and the Harvard netters this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the home courts.

The summary:

Singles: Seixas (C) defeated Ager,, 6-1, 6-1; Taylor (C) defeated Bullard, 6-0, 6-0; Rice (C) defeated Ames, 6-3, 6-4: Gruner (C) defeated Frey, 6-4, 6-0; Wilder (C) defeated Hughes, 5-7, 6-4, 8-6; Swartzman (H) defeated Dameron, 7-5, 6-4.

Doubles: Ager-Bullard (H) defeaated Taylor-Rice, 6-0, 2-6, 6-4; Winstead-Gruner (C) defeated Ames-Bramhall, (6-3) 6-0; Seixas-Wilder (C) defeated Robb-Bacon, (6-2) (6-1).

Baseball Must Show Cause For Team Pitchers Not Playing

NEW YORK, April 4—(UP)—Organized baseball was ordered today by the Circuit Court of Appeals to show cause why pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin, both Mexican league jumpers, should not be granted an immediate appeal in their efforts to return to the major leagues.

Lanier and Martin, both former St. Louis Cardinal players, filed notice of appeal from last week's Federal Court decision which denied an injunction that was designed to reinstate them immediately to organized baseball.

John T. Flynn, attorney for the two pitchers, requested the appeal, stating that unless it was granted immediately both would have to leave the United States to play baseball because they are barred from all leagues operating in the orbit of organized baseball. Martin already has signed to play in Canada this season.

Representatives of organized baseball were given until 10:30 A. M. EST tomorrow to show cause for not granting the appeal.

ing a new president was a job for the trustees. But former Gov. Cameron Morrison of Charlotte, a trustee of the school, suggested Marshall for the post.

"I naturally feel much complimented by these actions," Marshall said today, "but even though the proposition is on such an exceedingly tentative basis, it seems advisable for me to make a statement.

"In the very unlikely event that my name might be favorably considered for the appointment, I could not accept."

Marshall gave no reasons for his decision. He had not been approached by University officials.

Nathan Nominee To Men's Council As Independent

Marvin Nathan, rising senior from Norfolk, is an independent candidate in today's election for the Men's Honor council. Nathan, former vice-president of the Sophomore class, is a member of the wrestling team and the Carolina Political union.

In a statement issued yesterday, Nathan said: "My desire is to have every student conscientiously participate in the carrying out of our honor and campus codes. This can be accomplished to some degree of efficiency by penalizing violators of the codes very heavily when the evidence set forth for the violation is 100 per cent valid. On the other hand, when the evidence is not 100% valid, the violator in question should be acquitted without further stipulation; as for example, being put on probation.

"I also will strive to have the cases with their evidence and decisions printed in the DTH as soon as possible following the completion of the case. However, the defendent's name will not be included in the report.

"With these two objectives I hope to stimulate interest for the purpose of improving our present lackadasical honor system. With your cooperation, not only will the honor system be improved, but also the welfare of each student."

Fuchs Concert Set For Tuesday Night

Joseph Fuchs, one of the top-ranking violinists of today, will be presented by the Student Entertainment committee next Tuesday in Memorial hall at a concert that will be admission-free to all University students.

The Fuchs concert will be the fifth feature in the SEC program for this year. This committee is appropriated funds from student block fees as a part of student government for the purpose of bringing quality entertainment to the campus.

While all students will be admitted free upon presentation of I.D. cards, Scotty Venable, SEC chairman, has also stated that faculty members, student wives, and townspeople will be allowed to purchase tickets for 75 cents each when the doors open at 7 o'clock.

Joseph Fuchs is a renowned virtuoso. As soloist with major orchestras including several appearances with the New York Philharmonic - Symphony, in a series of New York recitals, and in summer festival engagements at the New York stadium, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, Washington's Watergate, and Chicago's Grant park, Fuchs has been in constant demand for many years.

Born in New York city, Fuchs is the oldest of five children of whom two others besides himself have distinguished themselves in the musical world — his violinist sister Lillian and his brother Harry, solo cellist of the Cleveland orchestra.

On tour Fuchs plays a famous Stradivarius, dated 1722, and an example of the famous Cremona master's art. It is known as the "Cadiz" from the city in Spain where its one-time owner lived; it is also called the "Cannon" because of its powerful tone.

Di Wants Change In Constitution

A resolution calling on the North Carolina Congressional delegation to introduce an amendment to the United States constitution making illegal the payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting will be debated by the Di Senate tonight at its regular meeting at 9 o'clock on the fourth floor of New West, Sam Manning announced yesterday.

Under the constitution congress is powerless to make the payment of a poll tax illegal, Manning said. "To attempt to pass such legislation would only result in a southern filibuster and the indefinite delay of important legislation," Manning said.

There will be an important executive session of the Di at 8:15 and all members are urged to attend, Manning said.

The meeting is open to visitors and everyone is welcome.

Varied Exhibit Is on Display In Art Gallery

Work by Davis Is Art Feature

Emma Lu Davis, guest sculptor of the University of North Carolina has the feature exhibit in Person hall here for this month, which includes sculpture, done in wood and terra cotta, pencil drawings and water colors.

Miss Davis has her own industrial design shop in Los Angeles to which she commutes, flying her own plane. She has held exhibits of her work at Peiping Institute of Fine Arts in China, and in New York at the Boyer galleries, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Architectural league, the Woodstock gallery, and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

The wood designs include heads, animals and figures. One of the figures is that of a dancing girl, which has been mass-produced by machinery from the original model. This figure appears in several shades from black to light brown. The wood was treated with lacquer to produce the effect of ebony touched with silver.

The water colors of Miss Davis include illustrations of furniture which she designed. The furniture designs include tables, chests, cabinets and a bed, all are done on simple lines and could be made from native material.

She also has a pencil drawing of a skull to illustrate technique in medical illustration.

Ewing to Speak In Gerrard Hall This Afternoon

"Morals and Politics" will be the subject of Prof. A. C. Ewing, lecturer in moral philosophy at Cambridge university, in a talk in Caldwell hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The noted lecturer conducted a seminar at Duke university yesterday where his subject was "Naturalism and non-Naturalism". He was invited to speak at the institutions by the philosophy and political science departments of the schools.

Professor Ewing holds degrees from Oxford and Cambridge universities and is well-known for his books on morals and his speaking tours throughout England, the United States and Canada.

Number Change

Swain hall has new phone numbers. Officials in the busy campus center were in a state of confusion yesterday when the new numbers went into effect, for the 40 phones on the building phone exchange were silent.

Their new numbers, the people whose phones were silent want the campus to know, are: for the Extension division and the Playmaker business office, F-471; the Symphony society and Cancer society, F-472; Film library, F-473; and the Communications center and Radio department, F-474.

New Chapel Hill phone books, listing the new numbers, will be issued in the near future.

Speech Medal To Be Given This Spring

Mangum Award Is Again Available

The Willie P. Mangum Medal of Oratory, once the most coveted award to be offered at the University, will be offered to seniors this spring, according to Earl Fitzgerald, chairman of the Debate council.

Won last year by Bob Coulter, first post-war recipient of the award, the medal will be open to seniors graduating through the winter term of 1950. Candidates for the award may choose their own subject for the oration, which must be from 12,000 to 15,000 words in length, the title of which must be submitted to Earl Fitzgerald, (Chi Phi house), before April 15.

The award was established in 1878 by the late Misses Mangum, of the class of 1815. Originally the medal was awarded to the member of the senior class who, during the 4 years prior to graduation, exhibited the best qualities of oratory, debating, and scholarship. Renewed last year after eight years, it is now offered on the basis of a single contest held before graduation.

A list of the distinguished citizens of North Carolina who have won the medal in the past is, according to Dean Fred Weaver, "probably the most impressive list of winners of any one award at any university in the country."

Included in the list are: Robert Winston, noted writer and judge, and the first student to enter the University following its reopening after the Civil war. Charles Aycock, N. C. educator and governor; Dr. E. D. Alderman, former president of the University, Tulane, and the universities of Texas and Virginia; Dr. E. K. Graham, cousin of Senator Graham and former University president; Judge John J. Parker, member of the Board of Trustees and one of the judges at the Nurenburg trials; William B. Umstead, U. S. Senator and chairman of the N. C. Democratic party; Dr. Albert Coates, professor of law and founder of the Institute of Government; and, Fred H. Weaver, University dean of Students.

Sale of Invitations Will Cease Friday

The selling of senior invitations by the Order of the Grail, which began March 28, will be completed in the Y building Friday, Bob Kirkland, chairman of the senior commencement invitations committee announced yesterday.

The invitations will be sold today and tomorrow and from 9 until four o'clock and Friday until 10 o'clock. Money should be paid when the order is taken, Kirkland said.

GUEST SPEAKERS at the MIT three-day convocation of educators and scientists, Winston Churchill (left) and Harold Stassen, University of Pennsylvania president, talk things over. In his speech, Stassen urged a "MacArthur Plan" for Asia under which the U. S. should invest a billion dollars a year to block the spread of Communism.

YMCA Selects Magill President At Meeting

Sam Magill, rising senior from Shanghai, China, last night was elected president of the YMCA for the coming year. A sparse crowd of approximately 17 members turned out for the elections held in Gerard hall.

A hurry-up election saw three of the five on the ballot filled by acclamation. Only one position was contested strongly, that of vice-president. A second ballot was necessary before Charlie Gibson won over Ed McLeod.

Other officers elected were Charles Bartlett, elected by acclamation, for secretary; A. C. Mangum, treasurer, who ran against Charlie Fox; and an Advisory board composed of Dr. Harry Wolfe, Dr. Bernard Anderson, Dr. Claiborne Jones, and Dr. I. G. Greer.

The meeting, presided over by President Peter Burks, saw a constitution ratified by the members. This constitution is a revision of and supplants the old one of 1932.

The newly elected president, Magill, expressed disappointment over the small number of members present and the apparent lack of interest on the part of the absent members.

Magill said that he was going to work for a "wider, bigger, and better christian society on this campus, making for better campus government, more student activity and more student support."

Stickers Ready For Car Owners Under New Plan

The new permanent parking permits for University faculty, staff, and physically disabled students are ready for distribution at South building. Faculty members should apply to Mrs. Harrer at the Information desk and physically disabled students should see Ray Jefferies in the office of the dean of students.

For parking in "staff" areas and other restricted areas, this new sticker will replace the "A" red stickers which are now in use. The "A" red stickers will not be valid in Staff areas after April 9.

Anyone who has an "A" red sticker who is not eligible for a permanent sticker may use the "A" sticker in the areas other than "staff" areas.

Student Recital Set in Hill Today

There will be a student recital this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall, and the public is cordially invited. The program is as follows: "Variations," in E minor, Handel, and "Sonata," in D minor, Beethoven, played by Charles Somers, pianist; "Capriccio," in B minor, "Intermezzo," in A minor, and "Capriccio," in D minor, all by Brahms, played by William Waters, pianist.

Whole House Now Studying State Budget

Measure Calling For 418 Million

RALEIGH, April 5—(UP)—The North Carolina House of Representatives today went into a committee of the whole to discuss the $418,000,000 road bond referendum bill.

Rep. John Umstead of Orange county and Rep. Rober C. Kiser of Scotland county fought in vain to keep the house from taking the appropriation bill apart line by line. Umstead said all members knew the controversial parts, and they should be brought on the floor for discussion. Kiser said the bill should be passed in toto or rejected and sent to the Senate.

The move opened up the possibility of a long fight over the budget.

On the road bond issue, the vote was 92 to 4. Speaker Kerr Craige Ramsey left the stand to vote for the bill.

The action still left the threat of a prolonged fight between the house and senate over the question of whether the people will have to vote a tax on themselves to get the bonds.

House members voted 60 to 36 last night to defy the senate's attempt to have those issues voted on together.

That vote came despite a warning by Ramsey that they might provoke a stalemate which would result in destruction of the whole program.

Bills for elections which could vote in liquor in a number of North Carolina communities now dry reached the house floor today. They provide for ABC elections in 13 cities and one county.

Debate Tryouts Slated Tonight

Tryouts and final selection of members of the debating squad which will attend the Grand National Forensic tournament at Fredricksburg, Va., April 13-16, will take place tonight at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 2, Debate council executive secretary Blanton Miller said yesterday.

Dramatic, poetry and address reading, impromptu after dinner, declamatory and extemporaneous speaking will constitute the qualities to be judged, Miller said.

SP Nominee Has Surprise Margin In Campus Vote

Lowenstein, Leonard Are Running Neck-and-Neck; Tied At 2 A.M.

With no more than 200 or 300 more votes to be counted at 2 o'clock this morning, Bill Mackie hung on to a whopping lead for the presidency of the student body, while Al Lowenstein and Ted Leonard were tied for the vice-presidency.

Mackie had 1,071 votes to keep his lead over Dick Gordon with 609 even though ballots were still pouring in from the town men's districts. Gordon's UP stronghold. Charlie Long was running third with 553.

In third place for the vice-presidency, was Banks Talley who had 693 votes. Tom Kerr and the Burns-Whitsett team were running a neck and neck race for the Tarnation editorship.

By Charles McCorkle

Dick Gordon was swamping his opponents in the men's town districts, Bill Mackie had swept the men's dormitories, and Charlie Long appeared to be the man on the outside looking in on the presidential race at 1 o'clock this morning as late returns from yesterday's general campus election rolled in.

The vote was much lighter than it seemed during voting hours yesterday. The nearest estimates that could be made set it at somewhere between 2,500 and 3,000 votes

Gordon, the University party candidate, was gradually catching up to Bill Mackie, the Student party standard-bearer, as more returns came in from town. Mackie was holding a lead of 947, while Gordon had 735. Long, running on the Campus party ticket, was back in the rear with 553 votes.

Which candidate would be ahead when the final ballot counts came in could not be definitely predicted, but Gordon and Mackie were the two heading for next Tuesday's run-off election, at any rate.

The vice-presidential race was also in pretty clear-cut shape. Ted Leonard (UP) was leading with 843 votes, and that lead was increasing steadily. Running second and heading for the run-off was Al Lowenstein (SP), close behind with 809 ballots. Banks Talley (CP) was third with 607.

In the ballot battle for the post of secretary-treasurer, Nat Williams, backed by the UP and the CP, was running true to form with a good lead over John Sanders (SP). Williams had 825 votes to Sanders' 585.

And in the race for the editorship of Tarnation, Tom Kerr, another double-endorsee, wasn't doing so well. Kerr, running on an SP-CP ticket, was trailing co-editor candidates Charlie Burns and Lem Whitsett by a close margin, but Burns and Whitsett, with 267 votes, were expected to swamp their opponent when the rest of the town vote came in. Kerr had 261 votes.

Presidential candidate Gordon, who was confined to his bed all day yesterday with a high temperature, turned up at Graham Memorial at 10 o'clock last night when the first indicative results were coming in. At 1:15 this morning, Gordon, ready for bed again, had no comment to make on the election.

CP Candidates Lead in Race For Assembly

Early incomplete returns from the first ballots counted last night for seats in the Student legislature showed the Campus party leading the balloting with nine candidates ahead, the University party is second with five and the Student party trails with four.

In the ballots counted in Men's dorm district 1, Dan Ashby (CP) with 191 votes is leading with Jack Rock (CP), 171 votes, and Charlie Trent, (CP) 186 votes for the three seats available. They are followed by Dick Penegar, (UP), 156, Roy Parker, (SP) 129, Jim Hix (SP) 127, and Bill Skinner (UP) 120. For one six months term, Hal Darden has a nice lead over his opponents with 200. He is followed by Mac White (UP) 107, and J.J. Beale (SP) with 83.

In Men's dorm district 2, Jim Montague (CP) is leading with 267. He is followed by Herb Yates (SP), 194 and Graham Jones (SP) 183 for the three seats. Ed Williams (CP) 171, Harry Buchanan (UP) 163, Toby Selby (CP) 148, John Stump (UP) 141 and Walter McCraw, (SP) 103 are trailing. For the six months term, Bill Jones (CP) has a slight lead of three votes over John Hough (SP). Jones polled 139 to Hough's 136. Jack Niles (UP) trails at 122.

Winn Keeps Lead In Senior Race

Al Winn CP-SP endorsed candidate for the presidency of the senior class maintained a steady lead last night over UP candidate Ed Tenney as final votes were counted. When the Daily Tar Heel went to press, Winn was ahead of Tenney 331 to 232.

In the vice-presidential race, Don Van Noppen (UP) was leading with 218 to Hugh Johnson's (CP) 189 and Pete Burks' (SP) 152. Amecia Eure (UP) held a lead of 24 votes over Anita Gates (SP) in the race for secretary. Eure polled 215 to Gates' 191. Morris Knudson (CP) trailed with 142.

Harvey Johnson (CP) held a good lead over his nearest opponent Jim Twine (UP) of 247 to 197. Nat Swann (SP) brought up the rear with 176. Allison Pell and Muriel Fisher (UP), co-candidates for social chairman were leading with 250. They were followed by Tom Boney (SP) with 176 and Clyde Smithson with 143.

Graham Assignment

WASHINGTON, April 5—(UP)—Sen. Frank P. Graham (D-N.C.), recovering from illness, today was assigned to the Senate judiciary committee and the post office and civil service committee.

The newly-appointed senator was named to the important judiciary committee on request of Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D-N.Y.), who asked to be relieved from duty on the group. Wagner has been ill and inactive for several years.

Cosmopolitan Club Tour

Purring TVA Power Is Humbling

The Tennessee Valley authority power plants, a scene of "sleekly shining and purring power, made one feel humble."

Such is the impression seven visitors to the TVA installation in and around Knoxville received as they stood within the walls of the Watts Bar dam nine-story high steam power plant Saturday morning.

The dam, located on the main Tennessee river between Knoxville and Chattanooga, provides the services of its flood gate, hydroelectric plant and navigation locks to the surrounding area.

"We saw the locks in action—they opened to allow a rowboat and its fisherman passenger to go through," smiled Ken Lawry, graduate student here from Devon, England.

Lawry was one of the seven cosmopolitan club members, and one resident of B dormitory who drove the group to Knoxville, to make the trip.

Members of the club who traveled to the TVA site, Elizabeth Angel, Newfoundland; Kathleen Goldie-Smith, England; Ishu Bangdiwala, India; Mogens Blegvad, Denmark; Gus Arteaga, Chile; Shanti Vora, India and Lawry, were driven there by Jim Kupperman, grad student from Wilmington, Del.

The Cosmopolitan club, composed of foreign students wishing to become further acquainted with America and Americans, undertook the TVA tour as part of their orientation in this country. Plans for further trips are still to be completed.

The visitors were impressed by the splendor of the entire project, the three Ocoee dams, the Norris dam on the Clinch river, and the Ft. Loudoun dam.

A visiting Englishman once called the Tennessee Valley authority plan "socialism at work; evidence of the value of successful government control competing with private enterprise."

As Ken Lawry put it, speaking of the hydroelectric plants, "Seeing that silent power was sort of terrifying. Sleekly shining and purring power made one feel humble."

The Weatherman—No. 1 on the Purge List

WELL, HE DID IT AGAIN. The weatherman, that is. After predicting "fair or partly cloudy and a little warmer," he proceeded to send us a drizzly, cold day, which would probably knock the bejesus out of the rural vote in a national or state election.

But on the campus yesterday, according to Elections board officials, poll-keepers, poll-watchers and various and sundry politicians, the vote was heavy. At this writing, we don't know how heavy, but we think we can safely say that it went over 3,000. And a number of people think it went close to or over 4,000.

Certain party politicians were reportedly whooping it up yesterday morning at the unexpected change in the weather and the number of voters it would keep away from the polls. But unless all reports received up to this time are completely inaccurate, the balloting was heavier than usual.

Run-Off Elections Set for Next Tuesday

A NUMBER OF CANDIDATES AND POLITICOES wiped their brows and breathed sighs of relief yesterday that it was all over. But for many, it was just the beginning. For they were the ones who still had the run-offs to sweat out.

The three candidates who could have been lying under a tree taking it easy yesterday were inside keeping out of the rain, but they were still taking it easy. For Dick Jenrette, Bill Claybrook and Norm Sper there were no worries. All they had ahead of them was the task of raising their right hands and taking the student government oath of office a week from next Tuesday. And of course, a year of hard work after that.

New Trend Noted

Early reports from elections officials last night indicated a large turnout at the polls in spite of constant rain yesterday. If final returns bear this out, it will prove that personal contact with voters is the best way to get them to the polls. This year's campaign has been marked by less of the usual campaign stunts and newspaper ballyhoo and by more personal work by candidates in dormitories. If the result shows this method successful it will probably set the tone for future election campaigns.

Please Shorten Commencement

Last spring on May 27 we wrote an editorial which said:

"Tradition is wonderful stuff, but comes a time when it gets a little outmoded.

"Every year since the first senior received his diploma from this esteemed institution new graduates have donned their caps and gowns and marched off to commencement exercises. Each year each individual senior has risen from his seat as his name was called, walked forward to the presentation platform, taken his sheepskin in his hand, walked back to his seat, sat down.

"This year between 1,200 and 1,500 students will graduate. An estimated 900 will take part in the commencement. First they will line up outside Kenan stadium, a process consuming 45 minutes. Then they will march in, taking 30 minutes. There will be no speeches, but then comes the roll call. Each individual senior will rise from his seat, walk forward to the presentation platform, take his sheepskin in his hand, walk back to his seat, sit down. Last year the exercises took two hours and a half while seniors, parents and friends squirmed on the cement seats of the stadium and wished they had been born with more padding.

"Certainly each senior is entitled to his moment of glory, but if and when my turn comes it will be glory enough to hear my name read as among those present and receive that diploma by mail."

Since that editorial was written nothing has happened to change our opinion on the matter. Last year's commencement was worse than anticipated. Rain forced the ceremonies inside and many parents missed seeing them because Memorial hall was too small to hold the crowd. There were speeches, and the exercises dragged out interminably while participants and spectators sweated and suffered in the oppressive heat of the packed auditorium.

We still think tradition is wonderful stuff, but we still think there comes a time when tradition should yield to more modern and more humane methods of procedure. We trust that the faculty committee now making plans for this year's commencement will do all in its power to shorten the exercises.

To the Barricades!

This allegedly liberal University seems to have been left behind by the advances of the University of Virginia. Recent reports from officials at Virginia reveal that the students there have been entertaining women in their rooms for quite a few years.

As the barriers are lowered in the Southern colleges, as women are acknowledged more and more as human beings, as liberalism staggers on, is Carolina going to be left far behind? Is the rut of conventionality our doom? Just who is responsible for our sad condition here?

In the final analysis the parents of the students, especially the parents of the female students, seem the guilty parties. Our cousins from Virginia seem to come from more liberal stock. It is well known that most dorm room there are equipped with a small bar, a large radio, and middle-sized young ladies. If anyone complains, the Virginia student fixes him with a piercing eye and defends his rights on the grounds of tradition.

What can we defend on these grounds? Clay walks.

So now seems the time to forge ahead, to establish new traditions for the coming generations, to be sure that there are coming generations. The time to strike is now! Let us end discrimination because of sex! To the dorms with the girls!

April Fool Is Still April Fool

By Bill Buchan

Among the other absolutely ridiculous things which appeared in the April Fool edition of the Daily Tar Heel last Friday morning was a column by yours truly which was devoted mainly to a fantastic and unoriginal reorganization of the campus.

My reorganization plan included the dismissal of all faculty members. Just to add a kick to it, I included the names of a few people who had taught me in the past, people of whom I think very highly.

Now, however, facts have come back to the Daily Tar Heel office revealing the astonishing facts that certain folks here and there believed me when I listed those people. Let it now be a matter of record that there was not a bit of truth or premeditated intention in those names than there was in the story which had Chancellor House in McIver dorm in a nightshirt and golf cap.

The people listed, Dr. Herbert Reichert, Dr. Mary C. Engstrom, Dean Katherine Carmichael, J. R. Caldwell, Gordon Cleveland, Bill Thomas, Dean C. P. Spruill, Dean Fred Weaver, Albert Braneau (misspelled, incidentally), Marie Wicker, Walter Spearman and George Bryan, are faculty members who have either taught me at some time or people that I have come in contact with. I have the highest regard for all of them. It is the farthest from my wishes that any of them should leave Carolina.

I feel confident that all the people listed realize that the column was strictly an April Fool joke and I would like very much to convince any others who took me seriously that it was an April Fool joke.

No one believed that Churchill was the new president or that the Episcopal church, "bar and all," was being moved to the fraternity court, and it is a little difficult to see why anyone would believe that I'd be serious in setting up a beer hall in Sanders.

If any of the people who were listed were embarrassed or placed in a difficult position, I sincerely apologize.

Throw The Cups Into The Cans

Editor:

The administration has done its part to keep the steps of South building clean by supplying sufficient cans of a type easy to deposit trash in. These cans and the signs were posted on suggestion from a student service organization. It was hoped that a dramatic campaign would not be necessary to point out the need to put the cups and other liter so often found around the steps in the cans.

Anyone can witness that the students who enjoy the convenience and the privilige of lolling in the sun there do not assume their responsibility to take care of their own paper cups and trash. Take it anyway you want to, but to me the situation shows a lack of decency, self-respect, self-discipline and responsibility.

It is such a little thing to drop your cup in a can instead of on the ground, but to fail to do so indicates such a big fault.

The Presidential Question

By Jess Dedmond

Now that more than a week has gone by, the campus is accepting the fact that we have a university without a president. Accepting has not been easy for many of us. Many have raised the question of the portent of Dr. Graham's appointment to the Senate. At present one can only conjecture. Some say an era has ended and a new one is soon to begin. Certainly the Graham era has ended, but this does not mean an end to the philosophy of education and student self-determination which he steadfastly espoused.

For the time being there is little students can do except watch and wait. We should watch with interest for the appointment by Governor Scott of the committee which will be charged with the responsibility of choosing the new president. These appointments may be significant because from the reputation of the individuals chosen ew may determine the kind of personality we may expect to be looked upon with favor. From that we might discern whether we can expect a conservative or dividuals chosen we may deand wait good healthy discussions of possible candidates should be had. We should, however, stay aloof from a popular movement to draft a popular personality.

The George C. Marshall movement may be cited as an example, in him we have an idol of all the people, a great organizer, and man of affairs. At the same time we have in him a man whose age would within a year require unanimous action by the Board of Trustees to retain, in the event he were chosen. The inherent danger of focusing out attention on one popular personality is that in the very act of focusing we might lose sight of the fact that a great university is built not on the popularity of one man but on the qualities of the staff, both administrative and faculty, which that man chooses to surround himself with. It is the whole that makes a great university.

For the time being—at least until Governor Scott appoints his committee—we should lend our thoughts to the type of person we would like to have filling the presidential seat. Should he be an educator or an administrator? Should he be trained in the humanities, science, commerce, engineering, textiles, or what have you? Should he be a North Carolinian? Should he be an alumnus of our university? These are some of the many questions to be asked. And when we have decided from our questions the criteria of selection our united efforts should be exerted toward influencing the selection of a man to fit the criteria.

Student Government has been assured that the voice of the organized students will be heard when the selection process is begun. This will be done by a representative group of students chosen by the present student administration or the next one. In the meantime expressed opinions as to the qualities we hope to find in the man are in order. Students should express them through the medium of the Daily Tar Heel or any other available to them.

Apple Tree Review

'A Very Appealing Show'

By Jonathan Marshall

The world premier of "Apple Tree Farm," by Ida Lupino with music by William MacIlwinen, was presented before an enthusiastic audience Monday night at the Playmaker Theatre.

Although the musical "fantasy" does not have either an unusual or a strong plot, it is a very appealing show, and it was excellently staged. Indeed, the music and humor were good enough to more than offset some slow dialogue and weak scenes.

Three love affairs go on the rocks in the first act, and when a couple of shoe store managers lose their jobs too, the outlook is black; however, their former Army commander invites everyone to his enchanted farm.

Of course the moon's magic, with the aid of a pixicated farm hand, mends the broken romance, and everyone is happy. Both the store and Apple Tree Farm provided excellent settings for some of the finest comedy that has been seen here recently.

When Annie Turner the cashier, played by Estelle Ritchie, enters the play begins to scintillate; she is in love with the assistant manager Andy Merrilees, James Geiger, who spends his time drinking and gambling. It is not too much to say that Miss Ritchie and Mr. Geiger stopped the show, for they brought laughs every time they were on stage.

Lib Stoney, as the cold Angela, is in love with the farm's owner John Darrell, played by Sam Green, but he is attracted to her secretary. Under the spell of the moon Angela gets her man, and the secretary Myra gets the store manager.

Although Mr. Green's acting was stiff, and his delivery of lines slow his fine singing of the love songs made up for it; Miss Stoney had one of the weak parts, but she made the most of it.

As Myra, Anne Martin was real in her bewildered innocence, and when she sang "Is This A Dream," one of the best songs in the show, she was superb. Miss Martin's voice and delivery were among the high points of the play, and it is only regrettable that she wasn't given a chance to sing more.

Bill Collins, who played the farmhand Jake, also had an excellent voice and was well received, as were Miss Ritchie and Mr. Geiger in the lighter songs.

George Grizzard, Bob Vate who wins Myra, added humor aand did a nice job. Larry Pierce and Bill Sanders gave good supporting performances. Eilen Smith's little girl pantomimes almost brought down the house and must be mentioned.

Unfortunately the stage was far too small for effective dancing, and the dancers were obviously cramped for space; however the lead dancers, Mary Jo Cain and Dick Johnson were more than pleasing.

Director Marty Jacobs did an exceptionally good job considering the fact that several characters were too weak, dialogue was somewhat spotty, and motivation for action sometimes lacking in the script. The direction was original, which is never easy, and very successful.

Francis M. Casey designed two very effective and pleasing sets, and the costumes by Irene Smart were appealing.

Although Mr. MacIlwinnen's music has already been praised, it deserves more mention, for it was very refreshing, and several of the songs were outstanding; in fact, the music was probably the most engaging part of "Apple Tree Farm" which was thoroughly enjoyable.

The play was produced by the Laboratory Theatre of the Carolina Playmakers for the benefit of the Koch Memorial Fund, and it will run through Friday.

Brandis For President

Editor:

I nominate Professor Henry P. Brandis, newly-appointed dean of the law school, to succeed Dr. Frank as president of the Greater University.

I am sure that no better man for the job can be found in this vicinity and I doubt that a better man can be found elsewhere. Professor Brandis possesses many outstanding qualifications and lacks none essential to the position of president of the University.

First, and of paramount importance, he is a combination of thoroughgoing scholar anad capable administrator, the acknowledgment of which was recently evidenced by his appointment as dean of the law school.

Secondly, he is a forward-looking, dynamic educator, eminently qualified to carry on in the Frank Graham tradition I have heard it said (by sources which I consider reliable that for several years Dr. Frank has been "grooming" Professor Brandis to be his successor when the inevitable time should come that he would no longer be with us. Considerable credence was lended to the idea when Dr. Frank chose Professor Brandis to assist him in his work for the United Nations in Indonesia.

Thirdly, Professor Brandis is a relatively young man—about the same age as Dr. Frank when he became president of the University. To have demonstrated his great ability so well at so early an age clearly marks him a splendidly-qualified man to take over the tasks so capably performed by our beloved Dr. Frank.

Surely we cannot hope to find a better man for president of the University than Henry Brandis. Let us hope that the Trustee, demonstrating the same high quality of judgment employed by Governor Scott in appointing Dr. Frank to the Senate, will recognize and properly reward his talents.

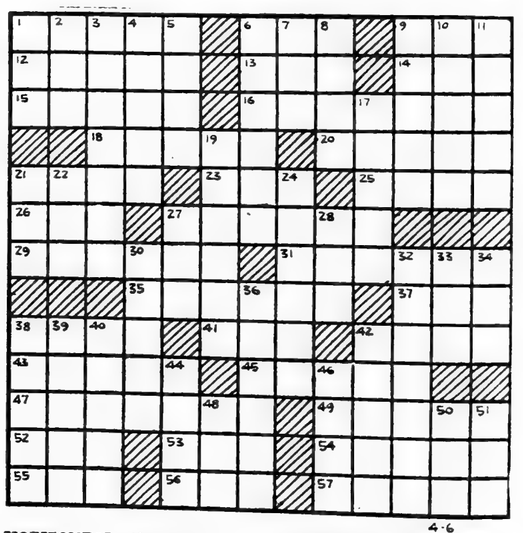
Critera For A President

Editor:

It seems to me that all this talk of drafting this man or that man for the president of the University is premature.

To get a man for the name that he has attained is not in good taste. Other Universities in the east have tried it and I personally feel that they have been the victims of misguided feelings. This is especially true with respect to the University of Pennsylvania. They have been the victims of a political move. I further feel that all the Universities which have chosen their presidents for the name have now some cause to regret the move.



We all hold the University of North Carolina very dear to us. Let's be rational about the selection of a president. We as students can play a great part in the selection if we use an intelligent approach. The intelligent approach is the one that is suggested by our President of the Student Body—that is before we select the man of our choice, let's see what qualities we will demand in our new president.

Here is what I want—1. I first of all want a man who is an educator, someone who can accomplish his given task to educate the student body. 2. Next I want a man who is an administrator, one who knows how to cope with administrative situations, and one who can run a university family of about 10,000. 3. The man in question should be a religious man, not of the clergy, but one who knows what religion is all about and above all a man who judges the man and not his creed. 4. I want a man who is abreast the times, perhaps a modern man would be the term, but at least one whose ideas are in keeping with the times. 5. I want a man who is fairly young, well known for his accomplishments, and one who can take his proper place not only in the State of North Carolina, but also in the nation.

When you have a man who has these qualifications, then you have found a suitable successor for our beloved Dr. Graham.

Let's take our time, so that when we have made our selection that selection will be the best that there is, we deserve it.

THE SPORTING PICTURE

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Presenting Mr. Thomas

MR. JIMMY THOMAS is a fellow who takes to water in a manner that would make most ducks feel selfconscious. He swims all distances, all strokes and enters any and every event his coach, Ralph Casey, will allow him to. The day will come, says Casey, "when I'll have to drain the pool to get Thomas out of it."

But one won't find Mr. Thomas' efforts going down that drain. All work, and some play to boot, have netted the budding Tar Heel aquabat quite a list of honors in the past few weeks, with most of those who know saying that this was merely a drop in the bucket compared to the bigger splashes that were to come for Thomas.

The drops in the bucket were simply Thomas' Herculean efforts in the recent NCAA and National AAU Indoor championships. In the National Collegiates, which it can be remembered, were held at the University late last month, Thomas worked his way from a 6th place in the 1500 opening night to a point-scoring second in the backstroke on the second day and an equally honored third in the 440 freestyle in the final evening of competition.

His Eyes Were Turned

ALL THIS AMOUNTED to a lot of swimming even to a poor, spectating layman, and left the Tar Heels as a team with seven big points, their greatest total ever amassed by a Carolina team in the Nationals. All eyes were turned on the scoring splash being made by a relative newcomer to the ranks of Carolina swimdom. But Mr. T wasn't bothering to rust on his laurels. His slightly-chlorinated eyes were focused elsewhere, toward the National Indoor championships at Daytona Beach.

Last weekend people found out why. Mr T. found the Indoors—staged outdoors for the benefit of the Daytona Chamber of Commerce—very much to his liking. In fact, before the event was over, Thomas had enough medals to sponsor his own meet, and all won against the best of the nation's competition.

He took second in the backstroke, then surprised even his mother by placing in a similar position swimming the individual medley event. It was the first time he had ever competed in this event in major competition. Next day, Thomas proved it wasn't beginners' luck when he edged Olympic champion Bill Smith of Ohio State for third place in the 440 freestyle while record books turned over on their shelves.

The Years to Come

THOMAS FINISHED the Nationals with one point less than diver Bruce Harlan who won the honors of most-points-scored with 12 tallies. He had swum faster than he ever had before, but luckily, he'dn't stopped along the way to think about it. As long as there was someone in front of him, Thomas felt the watery barrier ahead might be dispersed in more rapid fashion.

The experts didn't disagree. How promising could one swimmer be, they asked. Thomas was young—19 years old—meaning you'd still have to leave plenty of room in which he could develop. All thoughts turned to next year when according to the general opinion, Thomas will be a much tougher man with which to thrash it out.

The added publicity of Daytona didn't seem to affect Thomas in the least. He was still livable with, his Phi Delt fraternity brothers reported, although they might have to provide a bigger room for him if he decided to keep his trophies around the house.

To the lad from Baltimore, swimming was all in a day's work, and for him there seemed nothing better to make the semblance of a man out of you. Thomas had other thoughts besides swimming; after all, all work and no play might make Jimmy a dull, hull of a swimmer, and it seemed enjoyable to have a few feminine fans around to seek attention between events.

This week found Jimmy Thomas quite a rising young swimmer seeking new pools to conquer. His water log was crowded with Nationals and Olympics to come.

Harvie Ward's 70 Leads Linksmen To Second Victory

By Billy Carmichael, III

Neither rain nor sleet nor Harvard's links team could stop the Carolina golfers in their appointed rounds yesterday at Hope Valley as the locals whitewashed the Crimson, 27-0.

It was the second straight win of the year for the Tar Heels and marked the first shutout ever registered by a Carolina golf team.

This afternoon the Tar Heels will seek their third win of the season when they encounter Williams college of New England, beginning at 1:45 in another Hope Valley engagement.

Holin' Harvey Ward, one of the better bad weather golfers, proved that when it rains, he scores by posting the low medal round of the afternoon, a 35-35-70, even par for the course.

Ward had nine straight pars on the front side and balanced two bogeys with two birdies on the back nine.

Jack Brantley, playing at the no. 4 spot for the Tar Heels turned in the next lowest round, a 36-38-74 to sweep the points at his position.

The Carolina third foursome combination of Frank Brooks and Oliver Sapp posted 75's while Ward's partner, Bob Cox and No. 3 man, Roy McKenzie had creditable 76's for the day.

Bob Matson registered the lowest round of the afternoon for Harvard, a 75. Bill Rickenbacker, son of the famed flyer and Crimson no. 1 man, carded a 77.

It was an outstanding effort for the Tar Heels who play some of their best golf despite the poor weather conditions. Coach Chuck Erickson seemed well pleased with his entire squad. "They're the best balanced team I've had in many years."

The summaries:

Ward (C) defeated Rickenbacker, 3-0. Cox (C) defeated Denton, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

McKenzie (C) defeated Seagar, 3-0. Brantley (C) defeated Hubbell, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

Brooks (C) defeated Mee, 3-0. Sapp (C) defeated Matson, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

Rains Cancel Baseball, Tennis; Both Teams See Action Today

By Buddy Vaden

Old Jupiter Pluvius reared his ugly head around the various Carolina sporting arenas yesterday and forced the cancellation of the Carolina-Yale baseball game and the Carolina-Harvard tennis match, as well as the sale of peanuts, soft drinks and ice cream at Emerson stadium.

That makes the second time the Man from the Clouds has stepped in and interrupted the well-laid plans of Tar Heel baseball Moguls Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb. The first occasion was last week when the Carolinians were scheduled to meet Washington and Lee.

This afternoon, IF, Carolina's hard-hitting baseballers will go out for Conference win number two at the expense of William and Mary. Ray Blair is scheduled to slide around on the muddy pitching podium for the local boys.

Heavy Hitters

The rest of the starting lineup will be the same as was scheduled to start yesterday before the monsoon season set in. Hard hitters Rip Ryan (Who sold socks last year at shortstop), Stan Goodman, John Senter and a variety of other extra base boys will be in the lineup in an attempt to send the boys from Williamsburg back to the birthplace of Phi Beta Kappa.

Had it not been for Pluvius and his weatherman cohort, Southpaw Bill McGinn would have made his first appearance on the hill for the home baseball enthusiasts. And because of the same gent, several enthusiastic young salesmen were left jobless for a day, creating untold damage to their monetary standings.

As for the tennis match with Harvard, the boys from the ivy-covered towers of learning were forced to leave Chapel Hill, the village of majestic splendor and exhilirating weather, without a chance to retaliate for the 7-2 licking the ungrateful hosts handed them two days ago. Now they've gone on to Annapolis, probably with the thought that the Chapel Hill weather prophet and the Carolina athletes just didn't want to see them any more and its all because of one man.

Maybe Yes, Maybe No

With the Chapel Hill Chamber of Commerce permitting, it looks like there is a good possibility that the Old Man in the Sky has done a thorough job—maybe thorough enough to cancel one more day of athletic endeavor around the College on the Hill.

Before planning on witnessing any of the athletic contests scheduled for this afternoon, this paper recommends tha sporting enthusiasts check closely the daily weather reports before making final arrangements.

Two Tar Heel teams defied the elements (And the Chamber of Commerce) yesterday and went ahead with scheduled events. They were the golf and lacrosse teams.

Golfers Do Well

The golfers did a masterful job of wading around Hope Valley with caddies acting as coxwains in defeating Harvard. Down on Navy field (very appropriately named for this time of year) the lacrosse team gained another lesson in the manly art of hitting opposing players over the head without the officials seeing them as the Norfolk division of William and Mary handed them their fourth straight setback.

But yesterday's match wasn't like former routs. The Tar Heels, evidently influenced by the elements, managed to make a close game of it.

The tennis team will meet the Yale Bulldogs, reportedly good on a muddy track, this afternoon on the varsity courts.

The weather report: Wednesday, light rain, followed by Thursday.

Tally in Final Two Minutes Gives Indians 2-1 Victory

By Morton Glasser

Playing on a mud soaked field yesterday afternoon, Carolina's lacrosse team dropped their closest meet of the season to the Norfolk Division of William and Mary, when the Braves' Ralph Murrell drove in a score with only a minute and a half remaining in the game to give the visitors a 2-1 triumph.

Until Murrell's deciding tally was registered, the contest had been at a stalemate since the second quarter. Neither team was able to dent the nets in the opening period, but at 1 minute and 52 seconds of the second quarter the Tar Heel's Johnny Murchison sent one home for the first score of the afternoon and a Carolina lead.

The Virginians came back a few minutes later in the same period to even the count. Attack man Charley Hickey swished the ball past the Carolina goalie, and from this point of the game a scoring famine developed until the winning point was produced in the final frame.

The Tar Heels made their best showing in the second half when they held the ball in the Braves' territory for most of the period. The attack and mid-fielders made numerous shots at the William and Mary goal, but the Brave goalie was always present to stop the Tar Heel scoring attempts.

The starting lineups:

Carolina		William & Mary

Directors Return From Conference

Earl Wynn, director of the Communication center, and Russell M. Grumman, director of the Extension division, have just returned from the second national conference of UNESCO in Cleveland, Ohio. Purpose of the conference was to "broaden and make more effective movements toward international understanding and a permanent peace and to illustrate how community resources can be used toward that end."

At one of the large evening sessions 10,000 persons were in the audience to hear addresses by Jaime Torres Bodet, newly elected Director General of UNESCO and Mexican pioneer in mass education, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, U. S. delegate to the United Nations.

Wynn and Grumman were among a special group of educators, scientists, and well known representatives in the fields of radio, music, films, art and the press, who were invited to participate in the sessions.

Judge Whitfield Cracks Down On Hitchhikers in City Court

Judge Henry Whitfield issued a general warning in Recorder's court yesterday that hitchhiking on the streets would not be allowed. The warning was made after two students, John S. Taylor and Ewell B. Seltzer, pleaded guilty to charges of "bumming" rides and disobeying an officer.

Judge Whitfield issued a prayer for judgment continued after lecturing to the defendents. He sympathized with the students, saying that he used to "bum" rides, but added that traffic was not as heavy as it is today. He pointed out that the city ordinance which prohibited hitchhiking on the streets was made for their protection.

A. L. Pendergrass, who brought the charges, testified that he arrested the students on Franklin street in front of Strowd Motor Co after warning them three times that they were not allowed to hitch rides out in the street. He said they failed to show up in order to get back on the state's walk. He added that he thought the students were sorry for their action, and realized "they had done wrong."

E. O. Brogden, counsel for the defense, confirmed Pendergrass' testimony, and entered a plea of guilty for the defendents. He asked the judge to be lenient with the students, because they realized their mistake and were sorry.

Young Democrats To Hold Elections

The newly elected officers will serve the rest of this quarter and reassume their duties next fall. Membership in the organization is not required for attendance at this meeting.

Raise In University Tuition Passed In House By Eight Votes

Umstead Fights Move, Then Changes Stand

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, April 6—The North Carolina House of Representatives defeated by three votes yesterday an amendment to the state's general appropriations bill which would have killed the $69 raise in tuition at the Greater University.

At the same time, working as a committee of the whole, the House voted to approve appropriations for the University as proposed by the Joint Appropriations committee. The bill will come before the Senate for approval later.

The solons also defeated an amendment introduced by Rep. Clarence Hathaway of Gates county to knock $100,000 off the funds for the three divisions of the University.

Rep. Sam Worthington of Pitt introduced the amendment to stop the tuition raise. His move was beaten by a vote of 48-45 after long debate in which Rep. John Umstead of Orange county changed his stand on the proposal.

At first Umstead debated against the amendment, saying that the Board of Trustees raised tuition $69 because the Advisory Budget commission left it no alternative.

Increased tuition charges were voted by the University Trustees Feb. 16 at the recommendation of the Advisory Budget commission.

Worthington declared that if his amendment was passed, he would introduce another amnedment to raise the appropriations for the Greater University.

On the strength of this, Umstead threw his support in favor of the amendment, arguing that the increase placed too much of a hardship on some students. He said he had received over 700 letters from students since the tuition issue was first mentioned.

Coeds Ballot To Retain Fee At One Dollar

Run-Off Scheduled For Coed Speaker

Carolina coeds voted to continue the coed fee at the present rate of $1 by a vote of 173 over the proposal to reduce the fee to 85 cents. The second choice drew 127 votes.

Only 41 coeds voted to do away with the fee entirely.

In the race for speaker of the Coed senate, a run-off will be held between Patricia Denning with 103 votes and Marie Nussbaum with 66. June Crocket with 64 votes, Eleanor de Grange, 60, and Mina Lamar, 9, were eliminated.

On the general women's ballot, Jane Gower was elected president of the Women's Athletic association with 152 votes over Ruth Baine's 149. Reports yesterday indicated a recount had been requested for the office.

The WAA vice-presidential post will find Louise Horner with 151 votes facing Lucille Rieley with 107 votes in a run-off. Barbara Bess was eliminated with 72 votes.

Connie Conley, Dot Smith and Margaret Booth were unopposed for the offices of WAA secretary, treasurer and awards chairman respectively.

The complete unofficial Coed senate returns stack up as follows:

Alderman: Gloria Jackson (38 votes) and Carolyn van Sant (40 votes) were elected. Gene Hines (26) and Betty Shumate (37) were eliminated.

McIver: Clara Jane Burroughs (56) and Muriel Fisher (43) were elected over Jean Minchew with 28.

Spencer: Run-off between Connie Conley (22), Mac Copenhaver (19) and Sara Oliver (19) for the two vacancies. Linda Gillan (7) Nancy Root (6) and Helen Strawn (15) were eliminated.

'Tom Wolfe Club' To Hold Meeting At 7:30 Tonight

An organizational meeting of the "Tom Wolfe Club" will be held tonight at 7:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial, Bill Buchan, publicity chairman of the group said yesterday.

The purpose of the club, Buchan said, is to study Wolfe's works, hear speakers who knew him, and in general sponsor programs which will further his reputation on the Carolina campus.

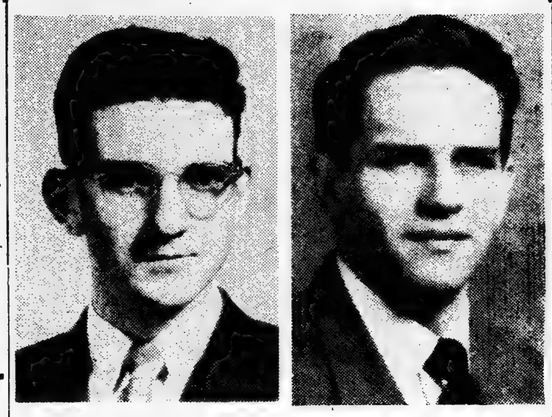
Dr. Mary Claire Engstrom, of the University English department has accepted an invitation to be the faculty advisor for the club. Dr. Engstrom has made an extensive study of Wolfe and his life. She gives a well-attended lecture each quarter on Wolfe's years in Chapel Hill.

Blanton Miller, who is co-sponsoring the club with Charles Odell, has extended an invitation to all students, faculty members and townspeople to attend the club meeting tonight. After organization plans have been made, Dr. Engstrom will discuss interesting events in Wolfe's life.

Record Time

The Elections board and its chairman, Al Winn, completed the counting of 2,848 spring general election ballots in record time Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

For the first time in years for a spring election, all the votes were counted at one sitting. Members of the Elections board and volunteers worked from 7 o'clock Tuesday evening until 6 o'clock the next morning, counting and tabulating the results.



Meeting Planned By Women Voters

Steps to organize a State League of Women Voters will be taken today and Friday when the presidents and other delegates from local provisional leagues in the state assemble at the University for the two-day session.

Sessions will get underway in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial at 10:30 tomorrow morning when the plan of organization will be discussed.

The luncheon session will be held at the Monogram Club at 1 o'clock and the dinner meeting will be held tomorrow night at 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Marjorie Campbell, national chairman of the League's study group.

There will be a general membership meeting tomorrow night at the Methodist Church at 8 o'clock when George Franklin, attorney and field representative of the N. C. League of Municipalities, will speak.

NAT WILLIAMS AND TOM KERR (left and right) are two of the many candidates who won their elections yesterday and do not have to face a run-off next Tuesday. Both were doubly-endorsed for their posts. Williams was running UP-CP for secretary-treasurer and Kerr was running CP-SP for editor of Tarnation. The new editor nosed his opponents out by a mere eight votes.

Men's town dist. 4—(Area east of Pittsboro road and Columbia) A lack of 1 and one half votes brings Larry Botto (SP) with 87, Pete Clewis (UP) with 93, Bob Holmes (UP) with 75 and Duffield Smith (SP) with 79 into a run-off for the three 12-month terms. Bill Buchan (CP) with 61, A. C. Mangrum (SP) with 57 and Billy Schwartz (UP) with 59 votes were eliminated.

Town Women's ballot—dist. 1—Rebeckah Huggins (UP) elected with 49 votes over Jody Armstrong (CP) with 39 for one 12-month term. Bootsy Lyons (UP) won with 48 votes over Frances Green (SP) with 40 for the six-month vacancy in the district.

Debate Team Enters Meet In Washington

On the basis of its 23 wins in 27 debates this year, the Varsity debate team has been selected to participate in the Georgetown Invitational tournament to be held in Washington, D. C., Friday through Sunday.

The University team is one of two Southern teams asked to participate in the tournament. The University of Florida, one of the teams which defeated the University quartet at the All-Southern meet held at Agnes Scott college in Decatur, Georgia, will accompany the Carolina contingent.

The team designated to make the trip, according to Blanton Miller, executive secretary of the Debate council, will consist of Hershel Keener and Herbert Yates, affirmative; Paul Roth and Herbert Mitchell, negative.

Dave Pittman, member of the varsity team which set up the excellent record during the past school year, is replaced by Keener. Pittman is ineligible for competition because of his status as a graduate student.

Mitchell and Pittman, while on tour at Boston university, where the University team lost to Boston in a split decision, were termed the "best affirmative team I have come in contact with in 10 years of debating experience," by the director of debating at Boston.

The 23-27 record has been accumulated since September, 1948. Three debates were lost in the All-Southern tournament.

Newman of the marriage and divorce analysis section of the National Office of Vital Statistics, Washington, will speak on "Statistical Trends in Marriage and Divorce" at the opening session at 9:30 a. m. today of the 12th annual Groves Conference on Conservation of Marriage and the Family.

The other principal speaker on the opening day's program will be Prof. Robert Straus, Yale University Laboratory of Applied Psychology, who will discuss "Development and Treatment of Excessive Drinking" at 8:30 p. m. today.

Tom Kerr Is Tarnation Ed By 8 Ballots

Wharton, Gibson, Jenrette on Board

Tom Kerr found himself editor of Tarnation yesterday by the skin of his bicuspids — eight votes.

Complete unofficial returns showed that Kerr, running on the Campus and Student party tickets, had even less of a lead than he thought he had at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when the Elections board informed him he had not lost, which was the general belief at that time, but had won by 13 votes.

The new humor magazine editor came out on top with 1,389 votes. His opponents, Lem Whitsett and Charlie Burns, running on the University party ticket as co-editors, pulled in 1,381 ballots.

Here's the way the Tarnation vote ran, by general election districts:

Dormitory men: Kerr 850, co-editors 810; town men: Kerr 336, co-editors 422; dormitory women: Kerr 162, co-editors 105; town women: Kerr 41, co-editors 44.

Kerr carried all the men's dormitory districts except for 5, by close margins. In town, he carried men's districts 1 and 4. Whitsett and Burns barely took the women's district, and the candidates split the women's dorm districts, Kerr taking 1 and the co-editors taking 2.

For editors of the other two publications, the Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack, triple-endorsees Dick Jenrette and Bill Claybrook naturally had no trouble going into office.

For the Publications board, triply-endorsed Tom Wharton and Charlie Gibson (CP) wrapped themselves up a couple of senior seats with Wharton's 2,083 votes and Gibson's 1,232. Eliminated were Bill Benjamin (UP) with 811 and Eleanor Hope "Wuff" Newell (SP) with 786.

Dick Jenrette (UP) took the one junior seat open with 1,352 votes, just 18 out of a run-off. Left out in the cold were Larry Fox (SP) with 593 and Tom Kerr (CP) with 741.

There will be a run-off next

Run-Offs Slated For Court Posts

Three men and two coeds will go into the run-off elections next Tuesday seeking three at-large seats on the Student council. Five other persons were eliminated in the general election voting.

The four in the run-off are: Dick Allsbrook (SP) 966, Roy Holsten (UP) 948, Peggy Martin (UP) 977, and Ted Young (UP) 1,098. Those eliminated were: Georgia Fox (SP) 729, Johnnie O'Neal (CP) 737, Nelson Taylor (CP) 700, Fred Thompson (SP) 899, Edgar Williams (CP) 575.

In the race for men's seats on the Student council, four men go into the run-off for three seats: Kyle Barnes (UP) 923, Dan Bell (SP) 924, Pete Peters (UP) 626, Cam West (SP) 793. Those eliminated: Bob Fentress (CP) 526, Allen Harrell (CP) 389, Bill Hipple (Ind.) 428, Bob Ormand (CP) 519, Harry Sherrill (SP) 516, Henry Turner (UP) 598.

For women's seats on the Student council, four coeds are in the run-off for three vacancies: Kitty Altizer (SP) 137, Charleen Greer (UP) 133, Barbara Lowe (SP) 136, Sally Osborne (SP) 116. Those eliminated: Gene Frances Caraher (UP) 89, Ann Faulconer

Winn Elected Senior Prexy Over Tenney

Al Winn, doubly endorsed CP-SP candidate for senior class presiden, rolled up a total of 480 votes to take the office over his UP opponent Ed Tenney with 402 ballots, complete unofficial returns indicated yesterday.

For the vice-presidential seat, Don van Noppen (UP) with 363 votes will face Hugh Johnson (CP) with 283 in next Tuesday's run-off election. Pete Burks (SP) ran third with 237.

The senior class post for secretary will also be contested in the run-off with Ameeia Eure (UP), with 373 votes leading her opponent, Anita Gates (SP), with 290. Morris Knudson (CP) was eliminated with 199 votes.

Jim Twine (UP), with 340 votes will seek the senior treasurer's post in the run-off against runner-up Nat Swann (SP), with 277. Harvey Johnson (CP) dropped with 236.

The other senior position which will not see a run-off is that of social chairman which was swept by the UP co-chairman candidates, Allison Pell and Muriel Fisher with 449 votes. Tom Boney (SP) had 245 and Clyde Smithson (CP), ran third with 166.

No sophomore class officers went in on the first ballot and runoffs will be held for all five offices.

Topping the runoff ticket will be the presidential candidates, Dalton Ruffin (UP) with 239 facing Joe Privott (CP) with 203 votes. The SP candidate, Bill Prince, was eliminated with 171 votes.

Archie Myatt (CP) with 270 votes will come up against Bob Evans (SP) with 209 votes for vice-president. Don Mendel (UP) was third with 134 votes.

The race for secretary will find Madge Crawford (UP), 218 votes, facing Bob Clampitt (CP) with 184 votes. Bill McLendon (SP) took 173 votes in the secretarial balloting.

Tom Mayfield (CP), 227 votes, will fight it out with Zane Robbins (UP), 193 votes, for the post of sophomore treasurer. Larry Botto (SP) carried 180 votes.

Just Call Him 'H.S.T.' Mackie These Days

THEY'RE CALLING SP PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE Bill Mackie 'Harry Truman' Mackie these days. Bill, counted completely out of the race by UP and CP politicoes alike, came through with a healthy lead over Dick Gordon (UP) to place himself solidly in the run-off elections next Tuesday. And so did Al Lowenstein, the SP vice-presidential candidate, although he trailed Ted Leonard (UP) by some 26 ballots.

Two questions which come to mind about the amazing spring general election are: (1) Why did Mackie, who seemed to be running third through the campaign, pull such a surprising vote? (2) Why did CP candidate Charlie Long, who seemed to be running such a strong race, come in a poor third?

The answers, in the same order: (1) Bill, like Harry Truman, pulled in the vote that the politicians just weren't counting on. As the Daily Tar Heel said last November, nobody knows public opinion but the public, and it doesn't know it knows it. Also, the minor SP candidates, such as class officers, were working their heads off for Mackie and forgetting their own campaigns. Just look at the results to see how poorly they ran.

(2) The Campus party and Charlie Long just didn't realize that the Student party is too old and established a political entity on campus to be knocked out so easily. And they also didn't realize that their own Campus party was still too new a party to be as strong as they thought it was.

On the Subject of That Tarnation Race

TOM KERR, THE CP-SP CANDIDATE for editor of Tarnation, very nearly lost his shirt on this one. One of the main reasons was that Kerr, who has been an active member of the Campus party, did not receive solid SP support in his race, even though that party had given him a double endorsement. For those of you who don't remember, Kerr only got

Students Cast 2,848 Votes On Rainy Day

Lowenstein Second By Margin of 26

By Charles McCorkle

Student party candidate Bill Mackie still held onto a strong lead for the presidency of the student body late yesterday when complete unofficial returns on Tuesday's general election came in, and Ted Leonard, University party candidate, was ahead by 26 votes for the vice-presidency.

The cold, rainy weather of election day held the vote down to 2,848, according to latest tabulations.

In office and far in the lead for the post of secretary-treasurer was Nat Williams, backed by the University and Campus parties, with 1,622 votes. Left behind was John Sanders (SP) with 1,103.

For the presidency, Mackie pulled in with a total of 1,179 votes, 181 ahead of Dick Gordon (UP) with 998. The two will meet in a run-off next Tuesday. Out in the cold was Charlie Long (CP) with 667 votes.

Ted Leonard had 1,072 votes to place first in the vice-presidential balloting, just 26 votes ahead of Al Lowenstein (SP) with 1,046. Running third was Banks Talley (CP) with 730 chalked up to his credit.

All three of the constitutional amendments facing the student body passed in Tuesday's balloting. Here's the vote for each:

1. To establish the University's membership in the Greater University Student council: Yes 2,172, no 426.

2. To provide for three holdover members to the men's Interdormitory council: Yes 1,705, no 736.

3. To provide for the dropping of the law and med school representatives to the Men's council: Yes 1,763, no 909.

Norm Sper was re-elected as head cheerleader without any trouble, being another of the election's triple-endorsees.

Dan Nyimicz (UP) was elected president of the Carolina Athletic association by a wide margin of 798 votes. He got 1,761 to opponent Coy Carson's 963 on the CP ticket. Harvie Ward (UP) was elected CAA vice-president with 1,677 over Rip Ryan (CP) with 966.

Here is the district-by-district break-down on the presidential and vice-presidential voting

Town men 1: Gordon 16, Long 39, Mackie 40; town 2: Gordon

Long Comments

Charlie Long, Campus party candidate for the presidency who was eliminated in Tuesday's balloting, yesterday expressed his gratitude to his supporters at the polls and during his campaign.

"I congratulate the other two candidates, Dick Gordon and Bill Mackie, on making the fight they did which I think accounts for the large vote in the face of adverse weather conditions," Long said.

"I urge everyone to go to the polls next Tuesday and vote." Long continued. "Governments cannot continue in the face of being ignored by the electorate."

CP vice-presidential candidate Banks Talley echoed Long's sentiments. Talley called a meeting of the CP for this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker 1 of Graham Memorial.

There's Still a Chance

Three votes was the slim margin by which the State House of Representatives yesterday turned down an effort to reject the railroaded tuition increase for the three branches of the University. Debate on the issue was peculiar in that it saw Rep. John Umstead, who had promised to lead the attack against the tuition raise as the first speaker in support of it. It was only after the introducer of the amendment to remove the increase, Rep. Sam Worthington of Pitt county, voiced his intention to introduce another amendment substituting an appropriation for the tuition hike that Umstead again about-faced and joined the argument against the increase. When he did enter the battle, however, Umstead presented some of the strongest arguments against the raise. Since the tuition subject was first broached, he reported, he had received more than 700 letters on the matter, 90 of them from students who will have to drop out of school if the raise goes into effect.

The three vote margin in the balloting showed the strength of the sentiment in favor of keeping tuition as low as possible in spite of the fact that no one except students has put up a fight against the raise. It also indicated there may still be a chance to hold the line on tuition.

Although the Senate is restrained from introducing financial measures, it does have the power to amend appropriations bills sent to it from the House. Judging from yesterday's vote, the House would almost certainly support a measure to appropriate funds for replacing the tuition revenue should the Senate pass an amendment striking the raise from the appropriations bill.

If letters have the same influence with senators they seem to have had with representatives, students still have a chance to help keep this university open to as many people as possible through the medium of writing to remind the senators how we feel about the tuition increase. And from a personal angle the gamble of a three cent stamp against a sure loss of $69 is sure worth a try.

Kerr Scott: A Broader View

Dr. Graham's appointment has been viewed largely from a short-sighted campus aspect; either as a lamentable loss to the university or a fortunate gain for the Senate. Coupled with some other recent events and regarded in the context of state politics, however, it may provide the key to a puzzle or more properly, a puzzling personality; that of Kerr Scott.

Who is this man who was elected Governor of North Carolina? On the surface, he is a stubborn, opinionated Presbyterian who had the guts and stamina to defy and triumph over the state Democratic machine. Employing the native canniness, if not the thrift, of a Scotchman, his "Go-Forward" program successfully appealed to diverse voting groups. Until and just after his inauguration, little else was generally known about him.

His approach to the legislature confirmed earlier opinions; he was a tactless, blunt executive with refreshing candor. Then two events occurred whose consequences have afforded new insight into our governor's political character. The deaths of Joe Blythe, national committee-man of the Democratic party and Senator Broughton followed close upon Scott's inauguration. The appointment of the liberal editor, Jonathan Daniels, to Blythe's place was not an overwhelming surprise, but the more recent selection of our Dr. Frank came as a distinct shock. What was Scott's angle? Was it an attempt to kick Dr. Frank "up-stairs" or was it merely a spite measure against the legislature?

Apparently it was neither. By a man's appointments shall he be known and we know Frank Graham pretty well on this campus. His selection seems to be part of a leftward or perhaps, forward shift in state political power. The "Go-Forward" program was not just a vote getting platform, it was and is a serious plan to extend public services on a vast scale in this state. Kerr Scott may be as liberal a man as his spending program and his two appointments seem to indicate. At least he is nobody's fool.

He is a shrewd fighter who has put the old guard off balance with his initial attack. Dr. Graham's appointment was a long hard left jab. Its effectiveness will depend upon the follow-up in 1950. In that year, the re-election of Dr. Frank, another liberal senatorial candidate, and a pro-Scott legislature may put the conservative force on the canvas and Scott will come through as the liberal champion.

Music Review

Because He Was Thirsty

By Charlie Gibson

It was after a recent concert with the NBC symphony that Joseph Fuchs was talking with Samuel Chotzinoff, musical director of the National Broadcasting company. The men recalled a music marathon which once took place at the home of Chotzinoff in which the violinist, then a young artist, participated.

Joseph Fuchs, who will appear in a Memorial hall concert next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee, laughed heartily as he remembered the zeal with which he had entered the contest. "I was so thrilled at the idea of playing with the great Heifetz," Fuchs reminisced.

It all started at the Bohemian club, a famous meeting place for musicians. "Chotzy," as he is affectionately nicknamed, had stopped to listen to the playing of a Paganini Etude by a group of violinists, among them Joseph Fuchs. Struck with the young man's extraordinary virtuosity, he invited Fuchs to his home to attend a birthday party in honor of Alma Gluck. In the back of his mind was a little plan he had just worked out.

All the guests at the party were famous. There were Jascha Heifetz, Efrem Zimbalist, Alma Gluck, Heywood Broun, Sascha Jacobson, Franklin P. Adams, and others. Chotzinoff's plan was to stage a contest with the violinists gathered there that night playing a perpetual motion by Paganini over and over again, the one holding out longest to win the contest.

With Heifetz as one of the competitors, there seemed to be little doubt in the minds of the guests as to who was going to win the contest. The only real question was the order in which the contestants would be eliminated.

The contest got off to a good start. Each of the four violinists played as they never had before. There was a spontaneity about the performance that is rarely achieved in the formal atmosphere of the concert hall. The guests sat back and listened, fascinated.

Ten minutes of playing and Sascha Jacobson was tired. He stopped playing, put away his violin, and joined the listeners in the large room. The second to give up was Zimbalist, the third Heifetz. The last to remain playing was Joseph Fuchs.

Amid bravos and applause from the audience, Heifetz came over to congratulate Joseph Fuchs on his feat of playing the Paganini Etude eight times without stop.

"It was nothing," burst out young Fuchs, bewildered by all the expressions of acclaim from the celebrated guests and especially by the personal congratulations of Heifetz. "I could have gone on playing for the rest of the evening," Fuchs said as he reached for a stein of beer. "I only stopped because I got thirsty."

Green Adds New Scenes

NEW YORK (UP)—Paul Green has written several new scenes for this summer's version of the "Common Glory," his pageant play about the founding of the American government, which will begin its third season in the open air amphitheater at Williamsburg, Va. on July 1.

The opening and closing scenes also have been revised, designed to quicken the pace of the show and give it greater impact. The production will be entirely restaged this year by John Baird, who has directed on Broadway. A cast of 150 will be used.

The show, which will be given nightly except Mondays throughout the summer, has been seen by almost 200,000 persons in its two previous seasons.

C.A.B. Regulates Airplanes

By George Dixon

San Francisco, April 6—Ha, Ha, Ha, cackled Dixon maliciously, I guess this will let some air out of our puffed-up bureaucracy!

I don't know how familiar you are with commercial aviation, but anyone in the flying business has three letters burned into his brain. These searing letters are "C. A. B."

They stand for Civil Aeronautics Board, the governmental despotism that lays down the rules, regulations, decrees, and ukases for everything manmade that flies. Rough, rugged and individualistic airlines executives have been known to blanch at the mere mention of the name.

The C. A. B. giveth and the C. A. B. taketh away. It can giveth an airline route and taketh it away. No new plane can fly commercially until the C. A. B. hath certificated it.

In even the most pious flying circles it is considered only second in omnipotence to heaven above—and most regard it with more fear and trembling.

The C. A. B. members, of whom there are five, are well aware of the awe they inspire. Possibly they should not be blamed too much for feeling their importance.

The other day, after dispersing a non-existent fog in Los Angeles with Fido, "Fog, intensive dispersal of", we flew up here in the C. A. B.'s DC-3, with C. A. B. member Harold A. Jones aboard.

Approaching San Francisco, Col. Robert V. Garrett, the board's chief pilot, called the control tower. "C. A. B. plane 424," he reported impressively. "Landing instructions, please."

He was told to come right in; that the runway would be kept clear for him. Member Jones nodded complacently.

"It always gets fast action," murmured co-pilot Robert Hoover.

Just as we started to descend for the final run, the control towerman came on again.

"By the way," he said, "We're curious here. What does 'C. A. B.' stand for?"

I have discovered on this trip that a lot of people confuse the Civil Aeronautics Board with the Civil Aeronautics administration, and vice versa. This distinction can be explained simply.

The C. A. B. is the policy-making body. The C. A. A. is the enforcement organization.

The C. A. B. has less than 500 employes. The C. A. A. has nearly 20,000.

As with prohibition proponents, the aerial despots have found it's easier to make a law than to enforce it.

Speaking of laws, I learn there is a movement on foot out here to create a state dancing instructors' board to regulate dancing.

The bill was introduced in the state assembly by Richard J. Dolwig, Republican, of south San Francisco. It calls for an elaborate bureau to enforce high standards on dancing instructors.

That's just what we need—governmental control over dancing. Like a hole in the head we need it!

What's coming over us that we think government should arrange every phase of our lives? If faced with encroachments we now welcome complacently, our forefathers would have started shooting.

We seem to have forgotten that you can't let somebody else run your life without becoming his slave.

A board to regulate dancing! I hope the idea doesn't filter back to Washington, or, sure as guns, some ape will try to top it with a bill to create a federal gin rummy administration.

This is hearsay with me, but the Treasury department has figured it takes one thousand $1,000 bills (a million dollars) to make a pile four inches high.

Therefore, a mathematician has calculated, if we were to pay off our $252,000,000,000 national debt in cash it would require a pile of $1,000 bills rising 15 miles into the sky.

Is that what they mean by high finance?

Violin Marathon

Cabaret Recital

By "Wink" Locklair

A combination of rain, "Apple Tree Farm," and the defeat of Charlie Long, which sent numerous music lovers, delirious with joy, into the nearest taverns, produced an audience for William Sasser's piano recital in Hill hall of such a size that it could have been easily accomodated at Cafe Seville, and since Mr. Sasser devoted half of his program to the music of Erik Satie, a Frenchman who, in 1890, played the piano in a Paris cabaret (an atmosphere he found to be highly satisfactory for composing), such a setting for Tuesday evening's program would have been, indeed, ideal.

Regardless of the sparsely-populated hall, those who did defy the various elements found Mr. Sasser's Satie selections colorful, amusing and deftly played. As a matter of fact, this composer, who died in 1925, is considered one of the most original characters in modern music. In his work, he sought for original effects from the use of ancient forms, and ventured to risk harmonic combinations and sequences which the boldest of his contempories would not dare use. Ravel, who came very much under Satie's influence during his youth, did his utmost to secure just recognition for him, but the public refused to take Satie seriously. Could you blame them when he titled some of his piano works "Pieces Froides" (cold pieces), "Morceaux en Forme de Poires" (pear-shaped pieces), and "Preludes Flasques (limp preludes)."

Mr. Sasser performed the 20-part suite "Sports et Divertissements," an extremely clever composition, which included impressions of everything from Le Water-chute to Le Golf. This was the first public performance of them in this country, so far as is known. The other Satie works were Avant-Dernieres Pensees, Descriptions Automatiques, and Les Trois Valses Du Precieux Degoute.

The opening half of the recital, which included one of Bach's French Suites, the E Major Sonata of Haydn, and two Schubert Impromptus, was not particularly inspiring, save for the Schubert. The Impromptus Mr. Sasser gave were from the composer's Opus 90, written late in life, about 1828. They are among the most poetic and wholly characteristic of Schubert's inspirations. They possess a vitality and freshness which even outrank Beethoven's "Bagatelles."

Mr. Sasser received his A. B. degree from the University in 1947. A native of Wilson, he appeared in a recital of piano duets in 1947, and is now a student in the graduate school of the music department.

Write Away

To Aid Dorm Students

Editor:

Since the question of Gordon and the Vet's Club has been raised, I, as both a veteran and a dormitory resident, have made my own investigation. In a conversation with Dick Gordon these points were made.

Two years ago the Interdormitory Council started a movement to build a dormitory hut for the recreation of dormitory men. That move failed because of the difficulty of raising funds. Gordon states that he would like to see the present clubhouse eventually under the control of the Interdormitory Council. He points out that this should follow when the veteran enrollment has decreased to the point where they (the veterans) can no longer financially maintain the establishment. Gene Newton, president of the UVA, has stated that with decreased enrollment the veterans will welcome other organizations participation. No change in the control is anticipated until the veterans feel this change is desirable. Gordon pointed out that this facility can be some compensation to the dormitory men for the loss of the scuttlebutt. As the Vet's club house is not considered temporary it stands a good chance of not being razed against the protests of the students. It appears to me that Gordon's is a long range plan aimed at providing a much needed facility for the dormitory area. The time for arranging for this is now when other organizations have not already laid prior claim.

Certainly this is a logical, reasonable approach which will meet with the approval of all who see the need for recreation for dormitory men. As such it has my support.

'Shut Up Like A Clam'

Editor:

I know of at least one local communist who rides (on a vehicle manufactured by capitalists) to a bourgeois laundry—deposits his filthy duds in a capitalist machine which washes and wrings 9 pounds of the clothing for a paltry sum of 2¾ cents per pound.

Where else in the modern world can this service be performed for so meager a price? Other than our own, what economical and political system under the sun has so much to facilitate and alleviate the laborious tasks of mankind and raise his standard of living?

If the benefits of the capitalist system is really as leperous as communists say it is, let them prove the strength of their conviction by outlawing the products of our "oppresive" civilization. Indeed, they have no compunction in outlawing American music, art, journalism, radio and scientific findings! They attempt to deprive great American inventors of rightful first places. In short, they "seek to drown our glory in a shallow cup and sell our reputation for a song."

Communists have more than amply demonstrated at every turn (except revolution) locked and distorted minds and a flamboyant display of the grassest hypocrisy. Certainly, it is not puzzling that they shut up like clams when one suggests that they depart for the Iron Curtain!

Joseph Fuchs who comes to the campus Tuesday under the auspices of the Student Entertainment committee is one of the few famous violinists today who is exclusively American trained.

******

On tour Joseph Fuchs, who owns the fabulous "Cadiz" Stradivarius, is often asked to check a violin's authenticity. An expert on old instruments, he starts "by looking at everything but the label." Labels, says Fuchs, are often wrong even in fine instruments. Besides, they are the easiest part of an instrument to fake.

Fuchs compares his analysis to that of an art expert before a Rubens canvas: it is the artist's style, the over-all effect or general build of the violin which counts. Going into detail, he examines the texture of the varnish, the cut of the scroll, the edges and the F-holes.

Tar Heels Blast Indians, 8 to 4; Meet Yale Today

By Larry Fox

With the Carolina baseball team winning its second straight Southern conference game yesterday afternoon, every member of the Tar Heel nine collected at least one safety to defeat the William and Mary Indians on Emerson field by a score of 8-4.

Today the locals resume their intersectional warfare by facing Yale university here. Game time is 4 o'clock with Lefty Bill McGinn expected to start on the mound for the Tar Heels.

Except for one inning, in which the Indians scored three of their runs, Ray Blair, who went the entire nine innings for Carolina, had little trouble with the visitors. Blair gave up eight hits altogether, three in the seventh when W&M did most of its scoring, and struck out 10 while issuing only two free passes.

The Tar Heels scored early and had a four-run lead going into the seventh, but the activity of the Indians only seemed to stimulate Carolina, for in the bottom of the frame the defending Conference champions tallied three runs on Stan Goodman's tremendous homer to rebuild their margin.

Only two of the Tar Heels' 15 safe wallops went for extra bases, but the quantity made up for the power that had marked the Carolina attack thus far this season. Hy Wardwell took the majority of the punishment for the Indians along with the losing decision. In the six innings Wardwell was around, he gave up 13 hits and half of the octet of Tar Heel tallies.

Errors, however, set the pattern for the rather loosely played contest. A total of 10 miscues were committed by the two teams with the Indians being guilty of six.

It was an error by W&M shortstop Tommy Korzcowski that enabled Will Hobbs to reach first base in the second with nobody out. Ed Lamb drew a base on balls to move Hobbs up a notch. Sid Varney attempted to bunt, but missed and Hobbs moved on to third as Ed Magadizak dropped catcher Sherman Robinson's throw. Varney was far from disgraced, however, for he then singled Hobbs home to give the Tar Heels the lead.

Wardwell disposed of lead-off man Zero Allen and Goodman on infield pop-ups in the third, but then he grooved one for Rip Ryan, who proceeded to let loose his third triple of the season into deep left field. Hobbs singled Ryan home and then moved on to third on Lamb's one baser to right. A double by Varney scored Hobbs and a walk to Sleepy Senter loaded the bases, but that was all as Joe Eldridge forced Senter.

Third baseman Bob Ward started it off in the top of the seventh with a onebaser between first and second and moved up to the pick-up post on Robinson's bingle to center. Pinch-hitter Waldrop went in for Wardwell and sent another one to the center gardens, scoring Ward and sending Robinson to third. Paul Webb fanned, but Blair's error on Ed Spencer's roller let in another run. Waldrop dashed home on Korczowski's infield out.

Goodman's homerun came in the bottom of the inning with two out and Senter on base with a walk and Blair camped on first as a result of the firstbaseman's error.

Carolina added one more in the eighth while the Indians scored their final run in the ninth.

Yale Defeated By Netmen, 8-1 Play Williams

By Joe Cherry

Coach John Kenfield's netmen continued their winning ways by defeating Yale university, 8-1, yesterday afternoon on the home courts for their sixth straight victory of the current campaign.

However, the win was not as easily earned as the score might indicate. The visiting Eli even went so far as to give top-ranking Victor Seixas a real run for his money in the opening match. Rolor Ray fought him on even terms for the first two sets, winning the second one, 6-4, before bowing to the Tar Heel ace in the end, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Taylor Gets Shutout

Clark Taylor, second only to Seixas in the Carolina lineup, duplicated his outstanding feat of winning a love match against Harvard on Monday by blanking Pick Hunt, 6-0, 6-0.

Stan Gruner, playing in the third slot, had little trouble in disposing of Charlie Lynch, 6-0, 6-3. Tar Heel Duke Wilder took a hotly-contested 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 decision over Bob Carr of the visitors.

Dick Norris came through in the fifth singles match to account for the Yalemen's only tally by stopping Lasley Dameron, 7-5, 6-0. Jim Winstead topped Ted Hands with a healthy 6-2, 6-1 score.

Same Story

The story was the same in the doubles matches, with the home team winning out over some keen competition. Seixas and Taylor triumphed over a strong Ray-Norris combination, 6-3, 6-3; Gruner-Wilder were hard-pressed, but they came from behind to defeat Hands-Lynch, 7-5, 5-7, 6-0; Dameron and Winstead handed Aymar-Sloat an 8-6 2-6, 6-3 setback in the finale.

The locals will meet Williams college here this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Summary:

Singles: Seixas (C) defeated Ray, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3; Taylor (C) defeated Hunt, 6-0, 6-0; Gruner (C) defeated Lynch 6-0, 6-3; Wilder (C) defeated Carr, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3; Norris (Y) defeated Dameron, 7-5, 6-0; Winstead (C) defeated Hands, 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles: Seixas-Taylor (C) defeated Ray-Norris, 6-3, 6-3; Gruner-Wilder (C) defeated Hands-Lynch, 7-5, 5-7, 6-0; Dameron-Winstead (C) defeated Aymar-Sloat, 8-6, 2-6, 6-3.

Gets Hole-in-One

Deke Paul Mengel joined the elite group of golfers last weekend when he scored a hole-in-one on the 11th hole of the Hillandale golf course in Durham.

Mengel, who is from New Bern, turned the trick with a No. 4 iron, the ball travelling the 175 yards to the green, rolling dead to the pin and then dropping in for an ace.

Mengel was playing in a foursome with Allison Pell, Thurman Williams, and Jim Griffin at the time. It was his first ace.

Chapel Hill High Downs M.O., 18-2

Coach Bill Grice's Chapel Hill high school baseball team opened the 1949 season with a bang yesterday in Raleigh by defeating Methodist Orphanage, 18-2. The Wildcats tallied 16 hits off four Orphanage pitchers.

In the big sixth inning the Wildcats lived up to their names and chased two pitchers to cover before they retired. Eleven runs were scored in the sixth on eight hits and two Orphanage errors.

The Wildcats chased Pittman off the mound in the fourth inning when they collected four runs, three of them coming from the bat of Russell Perry. Perry slammed a homer with two aboard to give the Chapel Hill nine a three run margin. The Wildcats scored once more in the fourth and Methodist Orphanage narrowed the margin by one run as they scored once in their half of the same inning.

Fenno McGinty smashed out a triple for Chapel Hill in the fourth and Tommy Vickers added the second three-bagger of the day in the sixth with two on.

Milton Cheek went all the way on the mound for the Wildcats, allowing two runs and only four hits. Cheek struck out 18 and walked three.

Next game for the Chapel Hill crew is Friday afternoon when they journey to Henderson to meet Henderson high school.

Now Its Weight Lifting

With lacrosse, badminton, and other formerly not-so-well-known sports springing up at Carolina, the announcement that Carolina is building for a future weightlifting team did not come as much of a surprise to local sports fans.

Nine Carolina students will represent the University in the Carolinas' AAU weightlifting championships to be held in the Charlotte YMCA Saturday afternoon and night.

The Tar Heel strongmen have been working out in one of the empty quonset huts and are expected to send a strong aggregation to Charlotte for their first meet.

McKenzie Leads Golfers to Win; Michigan Today

Ramroded by Roy McKenzie's sizzling one-under-par 69, the Carolina golf team annexed its third win in a row yesterday afternoon at Hope Valley, defeating visiting Williams college, 22 ½ to 4 ½.

This afternoon the Tar Heels face the first major threat to their unbeaten record when they tee off against Michigan, Big Nine champions, beginning at 1:45 at Hope Valley.

With football star Pete Elliott leading the way, the Wolverines will be a tough team to play around with. The visitors defeated the Tar Heels Harvie Ward last year.

And speaking of Ward, the Tar Heel star had to take a back seat to a trio of teammates yesterday who stole the show in hot shooting raid on Old Man Par. The forementioned Mr. McKenzie was the leading light of the day. The lad from Winston-Salem carded three birdies along with two bogeys and a string of 13 pars to tour the course in 35-34—69. That was medal for the day.

Right behind McKenzie came Bob Cox and Oliver Sapp, playing at No. 2 and 6 respectively. Both had even par 70's for the afternoon. Cox went out one over, but picked up a stroke coming home, while Sapp was even on both sides.

Ward had a tougher time than some of his fellow players. He lost the front side of his match, but then rallied on the back nine to overcome the deficit and take the match, 2-1.

Among the other Tar Heels, Jack Brantley had a 75, and Frank Brooks carded a 76.

The summaries:

Ward (C) defeated Cole, 2-1. Cox (C) defeated Marchese, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 2-1.

McKenzie (C) defeated White, 3-0. Brantley (C) defeated Ropie, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

Whitney (W) defeated Brooks, 2 ½ to ½. Sapp (C) defeated Quinlan, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0

Princeton Trackmen Tie Duke; Face Carolina Here Saturday

The 27 man Princeton University track squad returned to Chapel Hill last night after competing with Duke at Durham yesterday in their first dual meet of the season. The best the Princetonians could do was work a 63-63 tie with the surprising Blue Devils.

The Tigers, camped at the University since last Friday, will meet Carolina here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. It will be the first dual meet of the season for the Carolinians and will give Ccaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton a good chance to look at their talent under dual meet strain.

In last week's Carolina relays the Princetonians, without their complete squad made a favorable showing in taking the distance medley relay. The visitors from the North are strong in distance events and are rated a top hurdles power.

But the Tar Heels, with more men to call upon, will be favored in Saturday's clash. With Bill Albans in the lineup, Tar Heel fans can be assured of at least three firsts. Albans has been entered in 15 different events since he entered the University and has yet to lose one single event.

Despite the sensational abilities of Albans, the Carolina Mentors will be counting on the team as a whole. Stars such as Bob Kirk in the javelin, hurdlers Bob Morrow and Dick Taylor, weightman Bob Scligman, and distance stars Julian MacKenzie and Sam Magill will be counted on to carry the Tae Heels to their first dual meet win of the season.

Phi Group Votes Down Repeal Of Taft-Hartley Labor Bill

The Philanthropic assembly turned down a resolution calling for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley bill by a vote of 11 to 3 in Phi Hall Tuesday night.

Herman Sieber, Emily Baker, Charles Britt, Ben Erdman, Peter Gerns, and Bill Duncan favored retention of the present law with some revisions. The lone advocate for repeal was Graham Jones.

Sieber contended that management had "practically no rights" under the old Wagner act and argued that the Taft-Hartley bill merely balances the old act by giving the corporations protection.

Quoting from a survey of managers, Emily Baker presented figures to show that businessmen favor the Taft-Hartley bill.

Charles Britt, while claiming membership in a union, declared he favored the present law because its objective is "industrial peace" and is "a pro-American public bill."

While Kerr had been holding a small lead in the dormitories, the co-editors racked up a terrific vote when the town results began pouring in.

At 5 o'clock, no one was more surprised than Kerr to find that town district 4 had swung to him sharply, and that he was the new humor magazine editor by a margin of 13 votes. Later tabulations yesterday afternoon gave him a margin of only eight votes in the unofficial, complete returns.

– Umstead –

Umstead pointed out that 90 of the students said point blank that they would have to drop out of school if the tuition raise were adopted.

Rep. Frank Taylor of Wayne county argued against the amendment, saying that if a tuition raise was not put into effect, it would be necessary to increase appropriations for the Greater University by about $1,800,000 for the biennium.

Jess Desmond, president of the student body, who led a delegation of students which fought the raise in tuition, expressed his disappointment in the action of the assembly. He said, "I am gratified that we as students did not allow the raise to come by default. There is no question that little action would have resulted had not students here, at State and at the Woman's college not raised their voices in protest."

CP Votes To Back Gordon, Leonard

A MOST FRIENDLY WELCOME is given two youngsters as they call on Vice-President Alben Barkley in Washington to present him with the first Easter Seals of the annual drive. They are Helen Torreyson, 10, and Bill Creecy, 8, both of the capital city. The campaign, which continues through Easter, is for the benefit of crippled children.

ARC Drive Nets $965 On Campus

Cornelia S. Love, chairman of public information for the local chapter of the American Red Cross, yesterday announced that students at the University contributed $965.14 to the ARC during the annual fund campaign held in March.

Miss Love reported that the Chapel Hill quota for the drive had been $5,642.00 and that the total amount raised was $7,079.36. In addition to the amount raised by the students, campus offices contributed $1,376.64 and Victory Village, $210.75.

In a letter to the DTH, Miss Love expressed the appreciation of the local chapter for the fine contributions of the students and for the splendid work done by the collectors.

Mrs. Mabel R. Brittain, field secretary of the ARC at Chapel Hill, pointed out that 78 per cent of the total collected would remain in the county and be used for the benefit of residents and students alike. Mrs. Brittain said that the services of her office in 106 Alumni Hall were always available to students.

Di Members Defeat Tax In Decision

Poll-Tax Debate Ends in 20-4 Vote

A decisive condemnation of the poll-tax was the first measure debated and passed by the Dialectic senate this quarter.

In a meeting Wednesday night presided over by Don Shropshire, its recently elected speaker, the Di, campus forensic clan, voted 20 to 4 in favor of the North Carolina congressional delegation's introducing an amendment to the U. S. Constitution making the payment of the poll tax as a pre-requisite for voting illegal.

There was lengthy discussion on the Senate floor about the bill, both pro and con. Among the Senators endorsing the proposal was Dickson McLean, who said that a poll tax discriminates against poor whites as well as Negroes and that such voting pre-requisites were responsible for the fact that the turn-out at Southern polls was always even more disgracefully light than in Northern elections.

Other Di members speaking for the bill included Sam Manning, Horton, and Gus Graham. Manning, author of the bill, recalled the Civil Rights promises of both the Democratic and the Republican platforms in the recent national election. Horton considered the right to vote as "the fundamental law of democracy."

Opposition to the bill was led by Harold Darden, who insisted that it was wise to disqualify anyone who was too ignorant to vote intelligently from coming to the polls in the first place. Darden referred to the Crump administration in Tennessee as an example of an inefficient machine's staying in office by regimenting the unlearned block voters of poll taxes.

The Di also met Wednesday earlier in a brief executive session at 8:15 prior to the open meeting at 9 o'clock. In executive status, the Di membership conducted, according to President Shropshire, important business for an active forthcoming quarter of more constructive forensic debate."

Hot Meeting Ends With 15 To 9 Vote

Movies Made Of Politics Here at UNC

'Voice of America' Will Print Films

Sometime next fall Carolina students will see themselves and their student government projected on movie screens all over the country as one of the "Voice of America" series.

After careful study, the United States State department picked this campus as an outstanding example of the way that American students practice democracy in their schools. The film is to be shipped to foreign countries as part of the program to acquaint other countries with democracy.

Although no definite information has been received from Swain hall officials, it is understood that the picture will be made by students who have taken the motion picture course offered by the University Extension Division. The film will be printed in black and white and will run about 1000 feet.

Work was begun this week when pictures were made of elections, political rallies, and vote counting. Other phases of student government will also be included, in addition to pictures showing various sections of the state from which students come.

Leonard Asserts Party Will Back Some CP Members

By Bill Buchan

Dick Gordon and Ted Leonard, University party candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency of the student body in the Tuesday run-off, were endorsed by the Campus party in a fiery session in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon.

The motion to endorse the candidates, introduced by Charlie Long, unsuccessful CP presidential candidates, was passed by a 15 to 9 vote.

The endorsement met opposition from several sides, however, before it was passed. Dortch Warriner attempted to introduce a substitute motion to allow each party member to support and vote for his individual choice.

A ruling from parliamentarian Jim Southerland called the motion out of order.

Southerland later reported that he had attended an SP meeting previous to the CP, and that the SP had indicated that they would not endorse any candidates in the run-off. "They said," he continued, "that the differences between the Campus and Student parties make it impossible for them to endorse any CP candidates."

Leonard, who attended the meeting along with Al Lowenstein, SP vice-presidential candidate and Gordon, stated that "the UP will probably endorse any CP candidates who are not running against UP in the run-off."

"I personally feel," he said, "that besides the UP candidates, the CP men are the most qualified."

A call for the question on the issue of endorsing Gordon and Leonard was defeated the first time. When the discussion went back to the floor, party members again took up Warriner's fight to allow each member to support his own choice.

Long urged the members to make their own decisions, but expressed a belief that any candidates the CP endorsed should be supported by all members. Ellis Hall stated that party members were bound by the party-by-laws to support any candidates the party nominated or endorsed.

Bob Smith introduced a substitute motion, replacing Gordon and Leonard's names with Bill Mackie, SP presidential candidate, and Lowenstein. However, when Smith took the floor to discuss his motion, he urged the party members to support no candidates. The party then voted unanimously against endorsing the SP men.

Long stressed in his talk to the members that he was suporting the UP candidates for "the good of student government and the welfare of the Campus party."

A motion stating that the CP would not endorse any other candidates in the runoff, also introduced by Long, was passed by unanimous consent of the group.

After the meeting, Charlie Gibson stated that he would leave the party because of the action. He said, however, that he would not join any other party. Gibson and Page Dees were two of the supporters of Warriner's action to avoid endorsing any candidates.

Investigation Report Heard By Legislature

By Sam Whitehall

Edie Knight, chairman of the special Investigating Committee on Coed Affairs, gave her first official report to a lameduck Student legislature last night and made certain recommendations intended to clear up the coed governmental troubles.

Miss Knight told the assembly that each member of the committee has "shown real concern for the problems involved and has worked with the same goal before him, or her, that of putting the women's branch of the government on an even keel and correlating their activities with those of the rest of the campus."

The six-page speech gave a break-down as to the method used by the committee in approaching the problem of coed government. The report indicated that the committee had checked into every intricate detail of the present coed set-up and then drew conclusions as to how they could be bettered.

Major recommendations, as given in Miss Knight's report, are:

1. That a format and orientation pamphlet be drawn up for treasurers, explaining in detail the function of a budget, what an organization can spend money for, depending on its source of income.

2. That the importance of the job of treasurer be stressed.

3. That added care be taken in selecting a treasurer.

4. That the budget of the Coed senate be divided into two sections, one involving money received from the Student legislature and the other with non-governmental activities of the Senate.

Deadline to End On Car Stickers

The deadline for the new permanent parking permits for faculty members is set for tomorrow. Response so far has been very light, a spokesman for the Traffic committee said yesterday.

The permits are available for faculty and staff members at the Information desk in South building and for physically disabled students in the office of the dean of men.

For parking in "staff" areas and other restricted areas, this new sticker will replace the "A" red stickers, which are now in use. The "A" red stickers will not be valid in "staff" areas after April 9.

Freshman Y Meet Set At Camp Near Winston

The Greater University Freshmen Y conference, for freshmen from Carolina, Woman's college, and N. C. State will be held at Camp Haynes, near Winston-Salem, May 6, 7, and 8.

The main phase of the conference will be the discussion of some of the problems that college students meet now and will meet in the future. Three things up for discussion, said Barrus, are the relationship of Christian faith to students' lives; the understanding of the relationship between men and women, not only in preparation to marriage but also how college men and women can understand each other better; and how college experience can be best related to life after college.

Most of the plans for the conference were drawn up by a committee of 20 freshmen from the schools of the University.

The conference, beginning with Friday supper and ending with Sunday lunch, will cost between $8 and $9 for the whole weekend

Leaders will include the Rev. Charles Jones of the Presbyterian church here, and Charles McCoy of the Wesley foundation at N. C. State, and several others who have been invited.

Barrus said that early registration was necessary in order to complete plans for a full weekend.

on the Political Front with Charles McCorkle

TO YOUR LEFT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, you have the Daily Tar Heel box score on the spring general election—the final, complete, official figures released through the courtesy of your Board of Elections and Chairman Al Winn.

And below, you will find some more facts and figures released by the Elections board correcting the complete, unofficial results which the Daily Tar Heel printed yesterday. We will try to state them as completely and clearly as possible, so as to reassure some people we may have thrown a scare into yesterday with wrong figures. If the new rsultse printed here in any way change the complexion of the run-off or Winners, etc. we will point that out. Here we go:

IN THE FIRST PLACE, THE THIRD AMENDMENT to the constitution on the ballot did not pass. The vote (1,763 yes and 909 no) as printed yesterday was correct, but it was not the required two-thirds for ratification. That was the amendment concerning dropping the law and med school representatives from the Men's Honor council, since those schools now have courts of their own.

In Publications board races, Tom hWarton picked up 50 votes to come in with 2,133—he still wins. Larry Fox lost three to drop to 590—he still loses. Billy Carmichael gained 20 more for 1,251—another winner still in there.

In the council races, Marvin Nathan, running for Men's council as an independent, picked up a few more votes to go from 718 to 728 and stay in the run-off. Harry Sherrill jumped from 516 to 542 in his Student council race, but still couldn'tsqueeze into the run-off.

Here are a new set of figures for speaker of the Coed senate. The ones with the asterisk are in the run-off: June Crockett 67, Eleanor de Grange 69, Patricia Denning* 114, Mina Lamar 12, Marie Nussbaum* 77. Gloria Jackson got 39 instead of 38 for Coed senate representative from Alderman—still elected. Bobby Stockton, unopposed for senate from Carr, was disqualified.

Here's another set of new figures for Student council (asterisks mean run-off): Kitty Altizer* 150, Gene Frances Caraher 103, Ann Faulconer 114, Charleen Greer* 152 Louise Horner 97, Peggy Law 39, Barbara Lowe* 159, Sally Osborne* 127, Ann Sawyer 63. For WAA president, Ruth Baine got 169 and Jane Gower won with 171. For WAA vice-president, Louise Horner won with 151 since Barbara Bess was disqualified.

For WAA secretary, there will be two people on the ballot next

Keep the Fight Clean

This year's campus elections were dignified by the cleanest campaigning seen in these parts in a long time. Not one whisper of smear tactics was heard during the whole pre-election battle. The campaigns were waged on the platforms of parties and the qualifications of candidates, not on the slander of opponents. Which is as it should be.

There have, however, been other years when the initial fight was almost as clean, only to break down into name calling and rumor mongering in the week before the runoff when the race got tight. This year the runoff contest will probably be as hot a one as has ever taken place here. The two top student government offices are at stake and it will take strong action by the political parties if their candidates are to eke out a victory. But simply because the fight will be hard is no reason why it should be dirty. There is no reason why it should not be continued on the same high political level which has characterized it so far.

We believe that this year both the Student party and the University party are convinced that student government should be the winner in the election regardless of which party manages to put its candidates into office. We believe that both parties will refrain from weakening the effectiveness of the new officers by the disgrace of dirty politics. As a precaution, however, the Daily Tar Heel is announcing here that should a whispering campaign or any unethical tactics of similar nature be instituted, the party starting it will be held publicly responsible. We shall also hold responsible the candidate in whose favor such tactic is used, whether or not he has any connection with its use.

Setting Bad Precedent

The building department of the University has long waged a campaign against the defacement of walls and woodwork in the dormitories, and student organizations and politicians have finally learned that use of thumbtacks and glue is taboo in posting their bill and notices.

Now, just as cooperation is being obtained from students, a Chapel Hill business owner moves in to plaster advertisements all over the dormitories and other buildings. The musilage used on these advertisements is of an extremely tenacious variety, making it almost impossible to remove them. It is a question which is the more unsightly—the advertisements on the walls or the scratches left in the woodwork by attempts to scrape them off.

Same Song, Second Verse

The rain is raining all around;
It falls on fields and tree.
If students would stay off the grass
There'd be some grass to see.

Like guards before the old South Steps
A line of trash cans stood,
And signs are there to point them out,
But signs don't do no good.

Poor Mr. Bennett
He's strictly aginit.
He set out a trash can
But he got nothing init.

The sign clearly said stay off the grass
The wire fence showed the way.
These signs which lately marked the path
Had disappeared today.

"Stay off the grass," the Grailmen shout.
"Keep it clean," Old South resounds.
But students blithely trod the turf
And toss their litter on the grounds.

Professor Is Confused

Dear Miss Addle:

Perhaps it is not proper for a faculty member to write you; however, I need advice.

For ten years I taught at another university and enjoyed it; this year I switched to UNC, and it has become a trying experience, to say the least.

In one class a couple sit in the front row holding hands and whispering little nothings, behind them is a girl who preens in a mirror all period, then there is a boy who asks inane questions, and the whole back row sleeps. In another class a boy cracks peanuts all period, which is most distracting, and in the third class one boy continually argues about minor points, and a blond in the front row tries to flirt with me during the lecture.

I am seriously thinking of transfering to a place where students want an education, pulling "pop" quizzes every day, or becoming a day laborer where I could make better money. What do think?

Signed Prof

Dear Prof:

My, My, you sound discouraged. But we all have our ups and downs. Perhaps it is merely the spring weather that makes your students turn to lighter things, and after all college is far more than mere studying.

You must realize that many students come here to find a mate, and some of them work late at night and are tired during the day. You sound much too academic, but then, my heart is always with the students. Try to understand them, if you can't you are in the wrong profession.

Dear Auntie Adelaide:

I suspect that my boy friend has been writing you under the name of "Bashful Beau," at least it sounds like the dumb cluck.

For weeks I've been waiting for the jerk to propose, and I'm getting tired of this stalling around. He tried it in song, but his voice was too squeekey, and he failed. Then he started stuttering in poetry, but he never finished.

I don't mind a shy guy, even when he's shorter than me, but how long should I wait. Maybe I should sweep him into my arms and say, "you're mine," or perhaps, "my mate." Do you think I should propose to him?

Signed Tri Delt Deary

Dear Deary:

You astonish me! In my day girls were shy and coy, and we would not have thought of such a thing, but I suppose times have changed, and it is conceivable that the modern girl is entitled to do the proposing.

If you feel you must, then you feel you must, but I think you should give him a little longer to work up courage.

Dear Mrs. Addle:

I tried your recipe for Southern Fried Eels the other night. The whole family got ptomaine poisioning. I think you're a fake.

Signed Housefrau

Dear Housefrau:

Perhaps it was your cooking, for I have used the recipe all my life, or maybe your family has weak stomachs. Try it again, and I'm sure you'll like it next time, it's really lovely.

Word Limit Is Set On Mangum Papers

The required length of the oration to be prepared for the Willie P. Mangum oratorical contest is from 1,200 to 1,500 words, instead of from 12,000 to 15,000 words, as stated in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel.

The contest, which is being sponsored by the office of E. L. Mackie, Dean of student awards and distinctions, is open again this year to all seniors graduating through the winter term of 1950. Candidates for the award may choose their own subjects, and submit the title of their oration to Earl Fitzgerald, chairman of the Debate council, before April 15.

TMA Book Exchange Report

(Editor's note: Following is a report compiled by the Town Men's Association on the operation of the Book Exchange. Because of the interest of the general campus in the report, the Daily Tar Heel is publishing it in two sections. Tomorrow's article will discuss the conclusions that the committee reached after talking with Business Manager C. B. Teague and Mr. Ritchie, manager of the Exchange.)

-Forward-

On February 1, 1949, at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the University of North Carolina Town Men's Association, the campus-wide problem of high sales prices and low repurchasing prices of books and supplies sold and bought at the Book Exchange of the University was discussed. It was finally resolved that that problem should be investigated thoroughly and unbiasedly by a special committee, appointed by the president of the Association, Nelson Taylor. This committee was officially composed of Ben James, John Taylor, and Ralph Hebb, with leeway left for additions at the discretion of the special committee. The committee was immediately set into operations (1) authorized to establish a set of basic questions pertinent to and approaching the problem; (2) authorized to ask these questions where answers of undoubted authenticacy could be obtained; (3) authorized to draw general conclusions as to what could or could not be done about the problem. The questions were drawn up and first taken by the committee to Mr. Teague, general business manager of the University at Chapel Hill. They were answered, for the most part, in full. Then the committee was referred by Mr. Teague to Mr. Ritchie, manager of the University Book Exchange. Following are the questions in the order in which they were asked, accompanied by their answers in full.

Questions and answers

1. Does the Book Exchange make a profit in its sales (wholesale, retail or otherwise) in excess of set salaries and operating costs? If so, how much?

The Book Exchange does make a profit; however, neither Mr. Teague nor Mr. Ritchie can produce a figure. They have referred to the North Carolina State Profit and Loss Sheet which can be obtained from Raleigh for the asking.

2. What is this profit used for? Where does it go? Is it absolutely necessary? Can it be lowered?

The profit goes into the general fund of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. It is used, as is the rest of the fund, for various scholarships and varied other expenses. It is necessary to the extent of the neediness of its use as scholarship money and other, expense money. It can be lowered, but with consequent other losses in the general fund.

3. Is this profit, or was this profit ever used for student scholarships?

Not as a direct use. Only as it is used and distributed through the general fund.

4. Are there state taxes on the merchandise sold in the Book Exchange?

Yes. Just as in any other selling establishment in the State.

5. Is the Book Exchange an integral part of the University of North Carolina under the government of the Board of Trustee?

Yes, it is a functioning part of the University.

6. Who is in direct charge of the Book Exchange? Is he an employee of the University? Does he work on a commission basis?

Mr. Ritchie is in direct charge of the Book Exchange? Is he an employee of the University, and he works not on a commission basis but for a regular salary.

7. It has been said that local and other merchants can undersell the Book Exchange. Is this so? If so, why?

As far as Mr. Teague and Mr. Ritchie have knowledge, they are seldom, if ever, undersold in the Book Exchange. The Book Exchange is not in competition. It sells books at published list prices when they are new. It purchases them from students on a general fifty per cent basis when the books are being used by the University scholastic departments. If the books to be repurchased by the Book Exchange are not in use at the time, the Book Exchange will at least remit ten or fifteen cents.

8. What are facts similarly involved with sales between the Book Exchange and Graham Memorial student union?

The Book Exchange has nearly always sold foodstuffs, soft drinks, et cetera, to Graham Memorial. During the World War II years, the Book Exchange shared its rations with the Graham Memorial concessions. After the war, Graham Memorial sought to purchase its goods from other wholesale dealers. This they could do at cheaper prices. (Example: the Book Exchange was selling to Graham Memorial Coca-Cola at $1.00 per case, wherein the latter could purchase the same directly at $.80 per case). The Book Exchange then decided to sell Graham Memorial its Coca-Cola at $.80 per case, provided that Graham Memorial purchase all their other goods from the Book Exchange. This is the basis upon which the two are now, although there still exists friction between them.

9. Are the books and records of the Book Exchange open for inspection? How often are they certified by a certified public accountant?

Tuesday: Connie Conley and Caroline Guthrie. Caroline's name was left off the ballot in the first vote because of a printshop mistake. For members-at-large to the Women's council, there will be a run-off between Nancy Curtis 126, Gene Denbo 138, and Barbara Lunsford 144. Because of the change in Nancy's vote, Lucille Ridley (125) did not make the run-off, as reported yesterday.

On the class ballots, Don Van Noppen with 363 won the senior vice-presidency, since Hugh Johnson with 274 (corrected) was disqualified. Amecia Eure got 37 for secretary to stay in the run-off while Morris Knudson went to 192 and still didn't make it. Dalton Ruffin actually got 243 to stay in the run-off for the sophomore presidency, while Joe Privott gained to 205 to stay in there with him. Here's a correction for you: Bob Clampitt with 184 is not in the soph secretary run-off. Bill McLendon picked up 14 votes to jump to 187 and nose him out for second place.

Here's one for the books: Don Heath and Hugh Wells, legislature winners from town district 3, were both disqualified, thus giving their seats to the two losers, Jack Street and Vestal C. Taylor. Another disqualification was Aaron Jones in town 3, who didn't win anyway. In town 4, Bill Schwartz, one of four men in the run-off, was disqualified, thus making the three winners Larry Botto, Duffield Smith and Pete Clewis. By the way, Smith and Botto are the first two SP legislators to get in office from town without the help of a fluke for as far back as anyone can remember.

Another election oddity: First result from dorm dist. 2 put Dick Jones and John Huff in the run-off. They were to compete for the six-month term. Jack Niles, the third candidate on the ballot, was found disqualified yesterday which gives the seat to Jones, since Niles votes counting in, Jones had a majority. Thus, no run-off.

Explains India Film

Editor:

Many thanks to the manager of the Village Theatre who so kindly cooperated with me by posting the declaration concerning the film "India Speaks" shown here last Wednesday. In his declaration, the manager very graciously pointed out that the film was not truly representative of the Indian life.

Due to the wrong impressions which some foreigners had about the religious beliefs and some social customs, which this film exemplifies, some states in America have forbidden it to be shown. Some of the scenes as the "scantily clothed maiden" of aKshmir and the gay life of dancing with brief costumes are never to be found there. Although the cow is considered a sacred animal by Hindus, never is it true that the dying man's last wish is to hold the cow's tail while he is dying. Moreover, the Moslems would never try to kill a person attending their prayers if he has entered there with the permission of the proper authorities. The tortures to the men as shown in the film are never practiced. Again, the film also includes the life in Tibet which is not a part of India, and the life there is very different from the Indian life.

These and many other features in the film give an absolutely false impression of India which is recognized as a land of high moral culture and knowledge. From the film, one may readily see that the characters were fully possessed with theatrical appeal which would serve to convince the public and thereby falsifying the various conventions and aspects of Indian life. Perhaps the late Mahatma Gandhi was justified in saying, " . . . some foreigners have failed to understand the philosophy of India, . . . her religions, and her society."

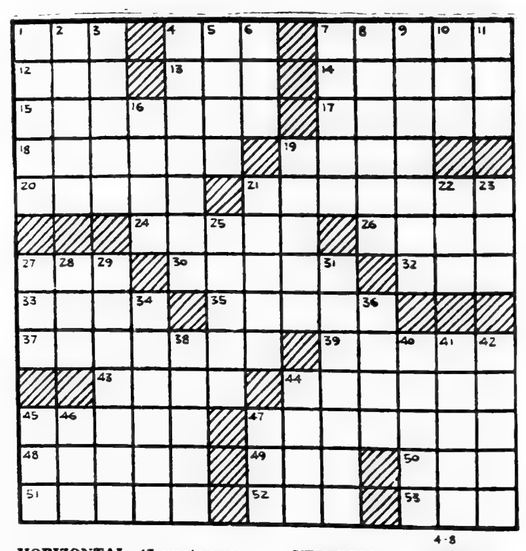
On Communists' Trial

Editor:



Even conservative sources concede that the trial of the eleven Communist leaders now going on in New York will have grave legal repercussions. It is therefore regrettable that it is covered in a remarkably inadequate fashion by the national press. We read in the newspapers that an attorney wept in court, that Judge Medina scolds the Communists' lawyers, and like trivia; but of the substance of the case we hear little or nothing.

Thus, most people with whom I have talked are under the impression that the eleven are indicted for conspiracy to overthrow the government. Yet a reading of the indictment discloses that such is not the case. In fact, Attorney General Clark conceded that he had no evidence for such an indictment. Instead, the eleven are indicted for teaching and advocating "the duty and necessity of overthrowing and destroying the government of the United States by force and violence," and propagating Marxism-Leninism, which allegedly implies such duty and necessity, in violation of the Smith Act.

This distinction is all-important. For not only is it false that the Communist Party or Marxism-Leninism favor the use of violence; but only overt acts can be tried under our Constitution. We have the authority of the Supreme Court in the Schneidermann case for that.

A childhood accident to Joseph Fuchs whom the Student Entertainment committee will bring to the campus next Tuesday evening was instrumental in helping the Fuchs family to realize the extraordinary musical talents of their young son. Upon the doctor's recommendation that the boy be given finger exercises to overcome an injury to his left hand, Fuchs' father decided to give his son violin lessons. Thus a possible catastrophe was turned into a successful concert career.

Tar Heels Pound Three Hurlers For 11-3 Victory Over Yale Nine

By Joe Cherry

Carolina's hard-hitting Tar Heels notched their eighth triumph of the season by thumping an impotent Yale university nine, 11-3, yesterday afternoon in Emerson stadium in a slow moving game played under threatening skys.

The defending NCAA Eastern champions were almost completely baffled by Lefty Bill McGinn, who allowed but seven well-spaced hits and two runs in his seven inning stint on the mound.

Andrew Finishes

Tommy Andrew toed the hill the final two frames for the locals, relinquishing one hit and one run in the remainder of the contest.

A host of Carolina batters applied the heavy timber to three Yale moundsmen, with Rip Ryan's three bingles leading the way. Zero Allen, Stan Goodman, and Jack Hobbs each had two safeties for the locals.

The home team grabbed a three-run advantage its first time at the plate, added two more in the fourth frame, and erased any doubts as to the final outcome with a four-run outburst in the sixth stanza.

Allen got things off to a good start in the first inning when he drew a base on balls from Yale pitcher Bob Decoursey. A wild pitch and a ground ball moved him to third, and Ryan's single turned him in with the first tally. Hobbs followed Ryan with another single, and with two away, Sleepy Senter hit a long drive into left field, chasing them both home.

Wild Pitches

Three wild pitches and four passed balls by the visiting battery aided the Tar Heel cause considerably, accounting for two Carolina runs and a number of extra bases.

Two walks, an error, and a single produced two more scores for the locals in the fourth, and succeeded in chasing Decoursey to the showers. The next Carolina outburst was in the sixth frame, when the home team jumped on relief hurler Jack Alexander for four runs and the ball game.

In the big sixth inning, Gurganus started the ball rolling with a walk. Senter reached first on an error, and Ward sacrificed them into scoring position. McGinn grounded out to shortstop, scoring Gurganus, and Allen accounted for run number two with a single into left-center that brought Senter home.

Ryan's Third Hit

Allen reached third on Goodman's base knock and tallied the third marker on a passed ball. Ryna added another RBI to his record by rapping his third hit of the game to send Goodman strolling home with the Tar Heel's fourth and final run of the inning.

McGinn, making his home debut for the Tar Heels, had a four-hit shutout going into the seventh, when he hit a streak of wildness and issued two walks and a single to load the bases with none out. He almost pitched himself out of trouble, fanning the first man to face him and forcing the second to pop up to third, but Dick Tittlebach, Eli outfielder, came through with a third single of the afternoon to score two runs and keep the Tors from being whitewashed.

Intramural Track To Begin Monday

Phase two of the spring intramural program will get underway next week when the annual mural track meet preliminaries will be held on Fetzer field from Monday through Thursday, making way for the finals the following week.

In next week's lineup all the qualifying attempts for the field events and dashes will be staged. All who intend to participate in these events are urged to report to the tryout field anytime between 4 and 6 on these afternoons and compete in their specialty. Those who perform to the required marks will be eligible for the finals on April 18.

In order to qualify for the semi-finals in the field events, one must equal an 8'6" vault in the pole vault, high jump at least to the 5'3" mark, leap 17'6" in the broad jump, push the shot 34 feet and toss the discus 90 feet.

The dashes will be worked in in the following manner. The preliminaries will be held from Monday through Thursday of next week and to enter, one needs just to appear at Fetzer field and sign up. He will then run in the sprint of his choice, the 60 or the 100 or both, and the 24 best times recorded in these trials in each dash will qualify for the semi-finals.

Tracksters Host For Dual Meet With Princeton

A very close track meet is expected to be run off this Saturday on Fetzer field's cinder track when the Tar Heel thin-clads are host to the Princeton university squad in the opening dual meet of the season for Carolina.

Despite Princeton's mediocre showing against Duke's unheralded team on Wednesday, the Tigers are figured to be in top form for tomorrow's post-war renewal of the Carolina-Princeton series. The Princeton squad has been at Chapel Hill since Monday, for their Southern training journey.

Coach Matty Geis' team is strong in the distance events and there are also several top-notch performers in other events.

Heptagonal Winner

Ronald Wittreich, winner of the mile at the 1948 Heptagonal games in the fast time of 4:12.5, is favored to beat Carolina's Julian MacKenzie in the four-lap test. Dick Snedeker, Princeton's 9:32 two-miler, is picked to top Tar Heel Sam Magill in the eight-lap event.

An interesting duel may be forthcoming in the 120-yard high hurdles with Princeton captain Dana Payne and Tar Heels Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow providing the competition. Carolina freshman ace Bill Albans is the top entry in the 220-yard lows with the competition coming from Taylor, Morrow, and Tiger timber-topper Bob Snable.

The Northern invaders swept the 440-yard dash at Duke Wednesday with Ken Crouse pacing the field in 50.8. The Tiger will be favored to repeat that performance here Saturday with Sam Sam Howell and Joe Swerer rounding out the trio.

Albans' Dash Choice

Albans will be the dash favorite, but will get strong competition from Princeton in Jim Gorter and Dorian Fleming. Gorter skips the 100-yard distance in 10.2 while Fleming accomplishes the 220 in 22.1. Albans has bettered both these performances.

Carolina will be favored in all the field events with the exception of the pole vault, where Carlton Jacob's 13 feet give the Princeton team the edge. Bob Seligman is the top man in the shot and discus, Bob Kirk paces the javelin-tossers, Jack Moody and Billy Joyner are the Carolina men-of-the-hour in the high jump and Albans is the record breaker in the broad jump.

Ward, Brooks, Sapp Are Stars As Carolina Defeats Michigan

By Billy Carmichael III

A booming back nine comeback coupled with three fine rounds by Harvie Ward, Frank Brooks, and Oliver Sapp enabled Carolina's high riding golf team to annex its fourth win of the season yesterday at Hope Valley, as the Tar Heels turned back a determined effort by the talented Wolverines of Michigan, 18 1-2 to 8 1-2.

It was a surprising win for the home team whose chances of victory looked about as black as the skies above when the first foursome reached the 16th hole. But a late rally all the way down the line eventually turned the tide for the Tar Heels.

Ward Stars

Harvie Ward was the man of the hour, registering a brilliant 68—two-under-par—to annex three individual points and carry the brunt of the best ball in the first foursome. The rest of the big Carolina tallies came in the third foursome where Frank Brooks and Oliver Sapp carded satisfying 71's to sweep all but a half a point of the nine in their group.

It was the best effort of the season for all three of the Tar Heels and they couldn't have picked a better day to display the best of their wares. Ward had but one bad hole all day, the 6th where he caught his only bogey of the afternoon. He had birdies on the 7th, 8th, and 15th.

Brooks went out in 36 and returned home in 35, while Sapp was scoring a 37-34 for the 18 holes.

Contributes Three

Even the faltering second foursome rallied in the final holes to contribute a much needed three points to the Tar Heel total. Roy McKenzie and Jack Brantley finished strong after being shutout on the front side. McKenzie had the misfortune to tangle with Michigan medalist Roger Kessler who piled up a 35-37-72 for the day's efforts.

McKenzie had a 37-37—74 while his partner, Brantley, carded a 40-38—78. The other Tar Heel, Bob Cox came in with 38-35—73, which proved good enough for a half in his match with Wolverine Bob Olson.

The summary:

Ward (C) defeated Schalon, 3-0. Cox (C) halved with Olson, 1½ to 1½. Best ball to Carolina, 2½ to ½.

Kessler (M) defeated McKenzie, 2½ to ½. Brantley (C) halved with MacCullum, 1½ to 1½. Best ball to Michigan, 2-1.

Brooks (C) defeated Hauser, 3-0. Sapp (C) defeated Elliott, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 2½ to ½.

Lloyd Mangrum Ahead at Augusta After 18 Holes

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—(UP)—Lean Lloyd Mangrum, the steely-eyed stylist who makes golf his private gold mine, pumped out in front of the pack in the Masters tournament today with a 69 on the first round.

Playing cautiously or taking chances as the situation demanded, the Battle of the Bulge hero from Niles, Ill., clipped three strokes off par. He stood one stroke better than Frank Stranahan, the stormy amateur who was barred from the tournament yast year for violating practice green rules.

Clayton Haefner, Charlotte, N. C., Dick Metz, Virginia Beach, Va., and aging Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., shot 71's and another veteran, Lawson Little, carded a 72. More than 30 golfers were bunched between 73 and 77. All stood a chance to move into contention with three more rugged rounds to go.

The batch included defending champion Claude Harmon, with 73, and the prohibitive pre-tournament favorite, Cary Middlecoff of Memphis. Middlecoff had a mediocre day and wound up with 76.

Seixas, Taylor Take Victories In 12 to 2 Defeat of Williams

By Buddy Vaden

The Carolina tennis team added another victim to the growing list of vanquished yesterday when they defeated Williams College, of Williamstown, Mass., 12-2, in a long and drawn out 14-match contest.

Veteran Vic Seixas and capable Clark Taylor led the win parade with easy straight set victories over Williams' Stu Robinson and Fred Scribner. It marked the seventh win in as many matches for the Carolina aces. Seixas dropped only six games in his 6-3, 6-3 triumph over Robinson. Taylor, Tar Heel number two man, went Seixas two better and downed Scribner, 6-2, 6-2.

All of the Tar Heel's top six men came out with wins. Following Seixas and Taylor were Stan Gruner, Charlie Rice, Duke Wilder, and Lasley Dameron. Gruner was forced to go three sets to beat Charlie Schaaf, 6-8, 7-5, 6-3. Rice dropped three games in the second set to down Dick Palmer, 6-0, 6-3.

Duke Wilder followed Rice with a victory over Pete Thurber in two sets. However the number six man, Dameron, went three sets before downing Joe Takamine.

In the next four matches the Carolinians dropped only one—when Tom Kent downed Gene Turner in three sets, 6-1, 7-5, 6-3. Carolina winners were Bob Kerdasha, Hugh Bowman, and Jim Winstead.

Carolina didn't lose another match until the final doubles event. The team of Seixas and Wilder paired off to defeat Scribner and Schaaf; Taylor and Rice downed Robinson and Thurber in straight sets, and Gruner and Winstead went to 26 games before winning over Palmer and

First Frosh Dance To Be Held In Gym

Freshmen and their dates will dance to the music of Stormy Weathers and his orchestra tomorrow night in Woollen gymnasium from 8 o'clock until midnight, social chairman Betsy Ross said yesterday.

"This is the only freshman function ever held at Carolina," Miss Ross said, in speaking of the Frosh-Graham Memorial co-sponsored dance, "and to make it a success, we need the cooperation of all."

According to plans made well in advance of the dance, a poll of the freshman class was made to determine the number of imports needed for dateless men. "Thirty girls from the Woman's college were requested by name," Miss Ross said. "As far as we know, they will all be here." The Freshman council is transporting the girls to and from Chapel Hill.

Due to a shortage of funds in the freshman treasury, it has been necessary to charge a $1 admission fee. This admits all to the dance, stag or drag. Tickets were on sale in the Y lobby during the past week, and it is expected that more will be available at the gate Saturday night. Profits gained from the dance will be placed in the freshman treasury to be used for future dances and class functions.

During intermission, a novelty band will be on hand to entertain, Miss Ross stated. Refreshments will be available at the rear of Bowman-Grey pool, as usual.

Dogwood decorations will feature the ornamentation of the bandstand, she said. All decorations were hung by the freshman decorations committee.

Engstrom Speaks At Chi O Supper

Mrs. Mary Claire Engstrom, professor in the University's English department, was the main speaker at the annual Chi Omega Founder's Day banquet held Tuesday night in the Carolina Inn. Mrs. Engstrom spoke on the origin of the Eleusian mystries, from which she said all sorority and fraternity rituals stem.

Following Mrs. Engstrom's talk, awards were presented by the out-going president, Jo Ann Butler, and the incoming president, Armecia Eure, to the most outstanding members of the sorority.

Awards presented for the highest scholastic average went to Sara Wakefield, pledge class, and Ida Constable, acting member. Cups for outstanding achievement went to Helen Eppes, former president of the pledge class, and Miss Butler.

The Eta chapter of Beta Theta Pi honored its pledges with a banquet at the Carolina Inn Tuesday night. Chancellor House was the speaker and he also intertained the fraternity with his harmonica playing. Following the banquet, the Beta's initiated 20 members into their fraternity.

The Alpha Tau Omega's honored their new initiates at Teenie's Meadow Saturday afternoon. During the afternoon there was a softball game in which members and their dates participated. A picnic supper was served.

Students are shown swinging their partners at the first square dance to be held in the "Tin Can" in 25 years. Approximately 500 participants turned out in their dancing shoes for the old-fashioned affair which was sponsored by the Montreat Social commission. On hand to provide the music were four authentic "hillbillies," employees of Woollen gymnasium. Total cost to the committee, including musicians: $4.

Now, here's a better ending!!!

They stopped fighting among themselves.

They got together like sensible human beings . . . management, labor, farmers, consumers.

And they said, "Look . . . we've got something wonderful and special here in America . . . something so good it saved all the rest of the world twice in 25 years.

"It isn't perfect yet . . . we still have ups and downs of prices and jobs. But our system has worked better than anything else that's ever been tried.

"And we can make it better still . . . we can build for peace as we built for war without even working harder—just working together.

"We can invent and use more and better machines, can apply more power. We can work out better methods in our factories, stores and offices. We can have better collective bargaining. We can develop more skills on the job.

"By doing these things, we can produce more every hour we work, at constantly lower costs.

"The bigger the flow of goods, the more there will be for everyone. Higher wages to buy the good things of life and more leisure to enjoy them!"

So that's the way they did it. And they lived happily ever after.

Student Dies At Infirmary On Thursday

Victim Had Been Ill Since March

Robert Edwin Hollinger, graduate student from Gastonia, died in the University infirmary Thursday night of a heart attack following a long illness. He was 24.

Dr. E. M. Hedgepeth, head of the infirmary said yesterday that Hollinger died at 9:30 Thursday night of a chronic rheumatic heart disease after being hospitalized since March. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee W. Hollinger of 505 South street, Gastonia, were present at the time of his death.

Born in Beabody, Mass. on June 13, 1923, Hollinger later moved to North Carolina where he entered Davidson college and received his B. A. degree in English in 1945. He enrolled at the University as a graduate student in October of 1945 and was awarded his master's degree in English in June of 1947. At the time of his death he was preparing to take his written examination for his Ph. D. this spring.

Hollinger was awarded his Phi Beta Kappa key at Davidson in 1945. He was a member of the college band, and a member of the Presbyterian church.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Gastonia. Besides his parents, he is survived by a sister, Jean who is enrolled in the engineering school at State college, Raleigh.

IFC Head Clarifies Hell Week Rulings

New Three-Point Program Adopted To Govern Pre-Initiation Practices

Charlie Loudermilk, president of the Interfraternity council, yesterday clarified rules concerning fraternity "hell week" in letters sent to presidents of 23 campus fraternities.

Loudermilk explained that the practice of hazing is condemned by a Student council ruling, prohibited by North Carolina state law, and blacklisted generally because of the death of a student in the past as a result of hazing.

Loudermilk said the faculty committee on fraternities and the Rules committee of the Interfraternity council met in joint session Thursday night and adopted a three-point program to govern pre-initiation fraternity practices.

The program stated that:

1. Each fraternity is held responsible through its chapter president and through him to the Interfraternity council and Inter-fraternity court, for the conformance of any pre-initiation practices with the laws of the state of North Carolina and with existing regulations of the Interfraternity council.

2. All forms of physical indignity to initiates are prohibited. Likewise prohibited are all routines or practices offensive to the ethical or moral standards of the initiates and/or the public.

3. Monday through Thursday, inclusive, pre-initiation practices must be confined between the hours of 4 o'clock in the afternoon and midnight, with the exception of one night during this period.

Loudermilk pointed out that the Campus Code would also prohibit hazing. The state law which he cited was passed in 1935 and reads:

"It shall be unlawful for any student in any college or school in this state to engage in what is known as hazing . . . For the purposes of this section hazing is defined as follows: To annoy any student by playing abusive or ridiculous tricks upon him, to frighten, scold, beat, or harass him, or to subject him to personal indignity . . . Upon conviction of any student of the offense of hazing, or aiding or abetting in the commission of the offense of hazing, he shall, in addition to any punishment imposed by the court, be expelled from the school or college he is attending. The faculty or governing board of any college or school charged with the duty of explusion of students for proper cause shall, upon such conviction, at once expel the offender."

Construction Of Med Unit Planned Soon

Work on Hospital Seen This Summer

Construction of the 400-bed teaching hospital for the University's four-year medical school is expected to get underway by mid-summer, Dean Reece Berryhill told the Chapel Hill Rotary club Wednesday night. Contracts for construction of the hospital will be let within the next six or eight weeks, Dean Berryhill said.

In order that other University departments will not suffer because of the expense of operating the medical school every effort will be made to separate the budget for the general University from that of the Medical school, Berryhill said.

Collier Webb Jr., chairman of the Trustee Building committee, was given high praise by Berryhill for "having given a great deal of his valuable time for several years to plans for the development of the school and having been most helpful."

Chapel Hill will have a tremendous housing problem when the teaching hospital is ready for occupancy, and plans ought to be made now to meet that situation, Dean Berryhill said. Another hotel is needed, he added.

Marshall Will Describe Lunar Eclipse Tuesday

Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Morehead planetarium, will give a 15-minute description of the total lunar eclipse from the front of Swain hall Tuesday night at 11:30. While the moon is totally hidden by the shadow of the earth. Dr. Marshall's talk will be broadcast over radio station WPTF, Raleigh, and will be the first time such a broadcast has originated in the South.

The eclipse Tuesday night will be fully visible in this area, barring cloudy weather, Dr. Marshall states. At 9:28 the moon will begin to pass into the shadow of the earth and by 10:28 the last remaining bright portion of the moon will vanish.

"An eclipse of the moon occurs," explains Dr. Marshall, "because the moon, in its monthly trip around the earth, passes into the earth's shadow. At the time of a full moon, the sun and the moon stand on opposite sides of the earth, and the moon rises at sunset.

"It is only occasionally that the moon passes through the shadow, however, because the moon's path around the earth is tilted a bit, and the moon usually passes above or below the earth's shadow. When the geometrical situation is just right, though, the moon does pass through the shadow and an eclipse occurs."

Coeds Pick Forty-Nine For Orientation Posts

Forty-nine junior women have been named to serve as student advisers for the coming year, Sally Osborne, chairman of the Women's Orientation committee, said yesterday.

The overall chairman of the student advisers, who will be named next week, will direct the entire student adviser program and train the advisers.

Girls who have already volunteered are asked to attend the advisers' training program which is scheduled for the early part of May. These girls will be used as reserves for the orientation program. The complete list of names is not yet available.

Student advisers from the town girls include Carolyn Guthrie, Rebecca Huggins, Bootsie Lyons, Pat Sullivan and Bootsie Taylor.

Holiday To Have University Story As June Feature

Holiday Magazine will feature the University in its June issue which is to appear on the newsstands on May 18. It will be the largest magazine layout ever photographed and written about the University.

The lead article is written by Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, and is estimated to be around 5,000 words. There are strikingly beautiful photographs of individuals, groups and campus scenes, 11 color pictures and seven black and white.

Harold S. Iseminger, promotion representative for Holiday Magazine, visited Chapel Hill this week to show University officials proofs of the eight-page display.

Photographer and editor for Mr. Daniels' article was Larry Williams of Holiday's staff, who spent several days here last fall.

Mathematician Will Give Talk In Phillips Hall

Dr. Kasimir Kuratowski, noted Polish mathematician, who will speak at both North Carolina State college in Raleigh and the University at Chapel Hill on Tuesday, is said to be "one of the world's greatest topologists." He was a leader in the developments made by the Polish School of Mathematics between 1918 and 1939.

Dr. Kuratowski will speak on "Applications of the Notion of Homotopy to the Theory of Functions of a Complex Variable" here Tuesday afternoon in Phillips hall at 4 o'clock. He will give an address on "The Modern Concept of Infinity" in Withers hall at State college in Raleigh Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

A native of Warsaw, Poland, Dr. Kuratowski was educated at the University of Glasgow and took his Ph.D at the University of Warsaw. He has been a professor of mathematics at the University of Warsaw since 1927 and at the Technical College of Lwow for several years.

He has lectured at the Universities of Gottingen, Heidelberg, Cernauti, Cluj, Brussels, Bologna, Zurich, Moscow, Geneva, and King's College, London, and at Princeton, Harvard, Columbia, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Brown, Virginia, Buffalo and Toronto in America.

Dr. Kuratowski is visiting lecturer of the American Mathematical society for the academic year 1948-49 and is also a visiting professor at the Princeton Institute for Advanced Study.

Judge Whitfield Not to Campaign Before Elections

Judge Henry Whitfield, candidate for reelection to the judgeship of the Chapel Hill Recorder's court, declared yesterday that he did not intend to do any active campaigning before town elections next month.

"I will be a candidate to succeed myself as Recorder's court judge," he said. "And I would like the support of the people in the community."

"I think my experience and the record of the court will justify me in asking people to vote for me. I believe a man should stand on his past experiences and I intend to do so in asking support for reelection.

"If the people of Chapel Hill want me to carry on the Recorder's court as it has been in the past all they have to do is to vote for me in the coming town elections."

In a letter to Pete Gerns, President of the Men's Interdormitory council, Lee Hart, social chairman at WCUNC, stated that she hoped that it would be convenient for students to come over to "help make the affair a big success."

The invitation is directed especially to dorm residents and presents the first effort of the WC social conucil and the Men's Inter-dorm council under a recently inaugurated program to bring students at the two schools together at social affairs.

Violin virtuoso Joseph Fuchs, when he appears here Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall under the sponsorship of the Student Entertainment committee, will play one of the world's greatest violins.

It is called the "Cadiz" Stradivarius; it is also known as the "Cannon" because of its powerful tone. The instrument, dated 1722, is a particularly fine example of the Cremona master's art and, according to Fuchs, is "the most masculine type of Stradivarius."

The violinist acquired his "Strad" from Rudolph Polk, a one-time concert violinist and now a Hollywood executive. Fuchs played the "Cadiz" for the first time in public at Washington's Watergate concerts in the Bruch G minor concerto on July 5, 1946. Since then it has been his inseperable companion on tour.

The "Cadiz" takes its name from the city in Spain where its one-time owner, an amateur called Darham, spent his life. Darham possessed the Stradivarius from 1820 to 1860 during which time many visiting virtuosi, including the Norwegian Ole Bull, the violinist and composer Bazzini, and Sivori, Paganini's only pupil, played and praised it. Because they all hailed its powerful tone, Darham nicknamed it the "Cannon".

From Cadiz, the violin travelled to Germany where it was purchased by a pupil of Joachim. It was bought in Germany in 1924 by Polk who took it to Hill's in London to have its history checked. The erudite, conservative Hill told Polk: "You are to be congratulated on having acquired this fine Stradivarius, the equal of which will take some finding."

The violin was not played publicly after Polk left the concert field until Fuchs re-introduced it. The "Cadiz" Strad is listed not only in Hill's catalogue but in Doring's authoritative American catalogue.

THAT WAS A HOT AND BITTER MEETING at which the Campus party voted to back Ted Leonard and Dick Gordon, the University party nominees, Thursday afternoon. As a result, at least one member of the CP resigned from the party, and at least a couple more decided that they would not back the two run-off candidates their party had voted 15-9 to support.

The CP politicoes tell us, however, that the backing of the UP candidates will help to strengthen the CP instead of hurting it, as some people seemed to think. The party got a promise from Ted Leonard, UP vice-presidential candidate, that the UP would, where its candidates were not in the running, support CP men against SP men in the run-off. And the CP is counting on again holding the balance of power in the legislature, if the UP does not win a clear-cut majority in the run-off.

WE WONDER WHETHER THE STUDENT BODY really knew what it was voting on when it defeated the third constitutional amendment on Tuesday's ballot. The amendment clearly stated that the Law and Medical schools now have their own honor courts, set up constitutionally last spring. And the constitutional change asked that the law and med representatives be dropped from the Men's Honor council for that reason.

But when the vote was counted, the amendment did not receive the required two-thirds vote. So now the Men's council will have to go on another year or so with two unnecessary members on its rolls—members who will probably not even attend the council meetings.

By the way, a ballot recount yesterday showed that Tom Kerr, elected editor of Tarnation, had won by a margin of 12 votes instead of eight. Other official corrections from the Elections board: Connie Conley withdrew from the Coed senate run-off in Spencer, meaning that the two winners are Mac Copenhaver and Sara Oliver. Tom Carter withdrew from the sophomore social chairman run-off, thus giving the post to the UP co-chairmen, John Huske and Betsy Ross.

Mexican Maneuver

'Operation Amigos' Planned For South of Border by NSA

From Berkeley, California, comes word of another maneuver in the field of education—"Operation Amigos."

"Operation Amigos" is a project of the National Student association summer program for 1949, one of many world covering projects the organization is planning, which will include a session of summer school at the University of Mexico, in Mexico City.

Extensive plans have been made for the Mexican summer schooling, among them a stay at one of Mexico City's newest and finest hotels. In addition to study in courses such as the Spanish and English languages, Spanish history, Mexican art, economics, philology, literature and sarape weaving, trips to adjacent cities will be made during school weekends.

Puebla Mexico's fourth largest city, Toluca, city of Indian basket-weaving, Taxco, the silver and jewelry center and the floating gardens of Xochimilo will be included in the tours.

Classes will start June 27 at the Mexican University, and will continue through August 13. For 10 days then, "exhausted" students will have the opportunity to relax at Acapulco, Mexico's most popular seaside resort—swimming, sunning, surfing and sleeping. August 24 will end the etudiants back in Mexico City and on their way home.

Toward Less Confusion

For about as long as we can remember, people on campus have been talking about setting up a "Campus Calendar" to coordinate the scheduling of all speeches, dances, and other programs to avoid as many conflicts as possible. There have been investigations in the legislature, many committees have been set up, and a great deal of talk has been floating around for a long time on the subject.

Finally, a memorandum from the dean of students' office informs us, such a Campus Calendar has been set up and is in operation. The central Calendar scheduling sheet is located in the Y building, and is under the direction of Mary Godbee. All department heads, leaders of student activities and heads of agencies sponsoring public occasions on the campus are scheduling their events as far in advance as possible with Calendar Coordinator Godbee.

The YMCA office still handles requests for the use of Memorial, Gerrard, and, with the approval of the music department, Hill hall. Request forms have been printed to obtain buildings and to be put on the central Calendar itself. The office of the dean of students will maintain a duplicate Calendar list at all times, the information to be supplied to it by the Y.

The directing committee for the Campus Calendar includes the dean and assistant dean of students, the dean of women and the secretary of the YMCA. They are the ones who are in charge of working to eliminate all conflict in the Calendar schedule.

It's nice to see some action after so much talk. We only hope the Calendar works as successfully as its plans of operation indicate.

A Certain New Look

(From the Saturday Letters of R. E. Manchester, Dean of Men, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio.)

Long skirts are new but they are also old. Fashions go around so clothing makers can winter in Florida.

There are, also, other new looks and one is the one that attaches itself to the small town. When skirts were long many years ago each little town had its industry and each little town was a tight little package of prosperity and success.

Then came efficiency and with it came centralization and big factories. Assembly lines and all the frills took the business away from little plants and the towns and villages started to die. Efficiency worked except for one factor and that was the human one. You can put everything into a mechanical procedure except people.

Now, there is a new look which like the skirt look is also old. Big business has found it pays to go back to the little towns and set up small plants. Those who live in villages can have homes, gardens and farms. They can work and live happily at the same time. When the factory is slack the gardens and farms need attention. There are fishing holes near and if the sun, wind and weather are right there is bait digging back of the barn.

College men, who are taking shots at the sun to determine where they are, should also take shots at the new look in business and industry. I know of one young college man who sold a national corporation on the idea that it would be smart to move the national office from Chicago to the basement of a new home he was building. Now he is the secretary, the national office saves thousands of dollars a year on rent and everyone gained. Millions in business dollars flow through this office and outside the window a rooster crows, violets bloom in the spring and visitors can listen to the music of a bubbling brook as they discuss matters of importance. A new look indeed!

It is no longer necessary to get a lame neck gazing upward at sky scrapers to see opportunity. One may find the big chance in the local post-office or in a vacant garage on the river bank. When the big boys start a new look in the direction of your town it would be a good trick if you were in the line of vision.

Hayes Has Dice Method

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

San Francisco, April 7—Being an ardent nature-lover, with strong boy scout tendencies, I stopped off at Las Vegas, Nev., on the way out here, to admire the sagebrush.

I was shocked to find gambling going on. And no attempt to hide it either, the brazen things. In fact, about the only establishments I saw that didn't have a slot machine were a mortuary and a police station.

I ran into Mr. Peter Lind Hayes, the comedian, who said he was worrying the gambling operators to death. He said he had a sure-fire system at dice.

This system, he added, is not for winning, but for stringing out his losses over a longer period.

"We will go into this thieves' den—I mean casino," he said, "and get places at the most crowded table. That makes them madder than ever."

We squirmed up to a table, elbowing aside would-be plungers, and Mr. Hayes began demonstrating his system. It proved to be somewhat involved, but the basis consists in stalling around until intuition tells him the guy with the dice is due to throw a seven.

Intuition, it developed, sometimes does not hit him for 10 minutes at a stretch, and then only for a buck. By waiting out throws I estimate he saved a couple of hundred dollars.

The croupier seemed to find this intuition-waiting irksome, but for a time he just glared in silence. Finally, however, he could contain himself no longer.

"Listen, bud," he snarled at Mr. Hayes. "If you ever get arrested for gambling it'll be a bum rap;"

Freshman Rep. John R. Walsh, of Indiana, says he is prepared to match his record for affliction with any man, including Job.

In the space of less than 12 hours, all this happened to the poor fellow:

After making a speech out in his home city of Anderson, Ind., the 35-year-old solon managed to hitchhike a ride in an Army plane back to Washington. But he was airsick all the way.

The Army had a car at the airport and offered to drive the suffering Legislator home. But on the way it was sideswiped by a street car.

The driver phoned for another car. The ailing Mr. Walsh waited an hour, but it failed to show up. A second phone call elicited the information that the relief car had been sent, but the driver hadn't been able to locate them.

They were promised a second car, but it didn't arrive eithehr. Finally Mr. Walsh and his driver went to work on the caved-in fender and managed to hammer it out sufficiently so they could chug home.

The next morning, after five hours of queasy sleep, the Congressman tried to start his own car to go to the Capitol. The battery was dead, his missus having left the ignition key turned on all night.

Mrs. Walsh, seeing her husband having trouble, rushed out of the house—and the door slammed, locking them out.

With the aid of a borrowed stepladder, Rep. Walsh broke into his home through a kitchen window. He went to the telephone to call the garage, and found his phone out of order.

He was in a hurry to attend a meeting of the House Armed Services Committee of which he is a member of the Democratic majority. So he dashed out and took a bus.

Nothing more could possibly happen to him, he reasoned, as he relaxed in the conveyance. Then he remembered he'd forgotten his briefcase, containing all the material he'd need at the committee meeting.

TMA Survey

Book Exchange Conclusions

(Editor's note: Following is the conclusion of a survey conducted by the Town Men's association on the operation of the Book Exchange. Yesterday's article presented questions and answers which were submitted to Exchange officials. Today, the special committee presents its conclusions from the survey).

Conclusion

Undoubtedly, the Book Exchange of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is operated very efficiently under the direct management of Mr. Ritchie. The operation of the establishment is definitely not our problem, however. Our problem lies in the facts that: (1) The Book Exchange does make a yearly profit of a considerable sum; (2) This profit goes into the general fund; and (3) this is rationed out for different uses at the discretion of the University Administration. Furthermore, we are faced with the question: Are the present uses of the profit in the fund more important than the lowering of Book Exchange prices below retail list prices? There are varied opinions taken on this question. We do know, however, that it would be unethical, if not impossible, for the Book Exchange to go below list prices.

Book manufacturers, through the complaints of other nearby sellers, would, by one means or another, force the Book Exchange back to list prices. This is evident. If, on the other hand, we wished to see the profit lowered by the raising of prices to students on returned used books we might find a feasible solution. Possibly this would aid only a few students, for figures at the present show that not more than fifteen per cent of the students at the University sell their used books to the Book Exchange. Instead, they make their sales elsewhere, either to other students or to used book stores. Nevertheless, we do know that by lowering the profit the repurchasing prices to the students could be raised.

Then there is proposed an argument in favor of the Book Exchange. The present policy of keeping up to date book stocks causes the establishment to face losses when professors suddenly change their books lists for their respective courses. The Book Exchange is caught with stacks of useless books on a quarter. Returns are allowed to manufacturers when possible in most cases of new books. This is not possible where used books are concerned, though; but still they can be sold to used book dealers—at a loss, of course. This entire argument is very weak, however, for under these conditions, the Book Exchange makes, as we have previously pointed out, a considerable yearly profit. Obviously the loss suffered by being caught with useless books is not great. On the other hand, we must cite the fact that the loss suffered by students caught with useless books (which they are required to buy, and then find useful for only a small fraction of the course) is great.

A maintaining factor in favor of the Book Exchange under its present policy lies in the fact that a ten per cent rebate is given all students who make their book purchases on a cash basis.

We then must turn to the problems of individual cases, where the student makes the claim that the Book Exchange has made an unfair sale, repurchase, and resale. An instance pointed out to Mr. Ritchie was the following: a student purchased a new book for $3.00; after having used it for a quarter, he resold the book to the Book Exchange for $1.50; immediately afterwards, a friend of the student purchased the same book from the Book Exchange, being required to pay the new list price of $3.00! The Book Exchange maintains that this particular incident, and others like it, was possibly a clerical error. Mr. Ritchie has openly stated that if any student catches this flaw of sales in a case of his own, he should report it to the Book Exchange, after which an adjustment will be made.

Another problem then arises—that of the prices on material published by the special University scholastic departments. We cite another specific instance: the sales of the Freshman English Syllabi. These booklets sell in the Book Exchange for $.26 ($.01 going to state taxes). About 200 are made up and sold in a quarter. This grosses $50, excluding the $2.00 taken out for state taxes. Ten stencils are used in the production of one of these booklets. The best stencils are at a maximum, $.15, making a maximum stencil expense of $1.50. Sixteen-weight paper is at a maximum $2.50 per ream (500 sheets). With ten pages to the booklet and 200 booklets, we have 2,000 pages, or four reams—$10.00. This gives a total expense cost of $12.50, excluding ink costs and labor, which, we believe, could not possibly overrun $5.00, bringing the total maximum costs to $17.50. The Book Exchange receives $.05 per copy for selling, and then turns over the remaining $.20 per copy, or $40.00, to the English Fund Chairman, Mr. George Horner. After the $17.50 expense is deducted, a profit of $22.50 is remaining. Where does this $22.50 go? Supposedly it goes into the English Fund, where it is used for various expenses in that department. Again we formulate our question: Is this $22.50 in the English Department Fund (in addition to the $10.00 profit made by the Book Exchange for selling) so necessary that the prices on the booklets cannot be cut to costs? Of special interest is the question of whether or not the $10.00 profit is absolutely necessary for an establishment which is operating purely for the benefit of the student body. This committee concludes that neither of these profits are absolutely necessary, and that the prices of these booklets should be cut to costs.

The committee, in the problem of trade betwen the Book Exchange and Graham Memorial, can see an admitted conflict between personalities. However, we should completely overlook this factor in fairness to both the Book Exchange and Graham Memorial, and then to the student body. The Book Exchange is not an enterprising business concern. It is supposed to operate only as a service to the students, and therefore it is a servant of the students in the University. In turn, Graham Memorial can be placed in an identical catagory. In this particular case Graham Memorial is acting in the capacity that it should while the Book Exchange is not. This committee finds that the Book Exchange has no right whatsoever to place the student governed Graham Memorial under any buying or selling obligations whatsoever. Graham Memorial is in its own right to purchase whatever it pleases at wholesale costs from the Book Exchange (again, a servant of the student body) or any other wholesale establishment. This committee suggests that action by both the Student Legislature and the University Administration in this particular matter be taken.

In concluding it is necessary to say that we, the committee, find that the Book Exchange, in its selling, buying, and reselling of books and supplies, is operating on high level standards under a most efficient management. We find that the Book Exchange officials are most capable and willing to help the students in every way possible wherein their business is concerned. We also find that the profits of the Book Exchange can be lowered in order to more benefit the student body, and we advise that the University Administration take corresponding action in this matter.

Charlie Crowns a Queen

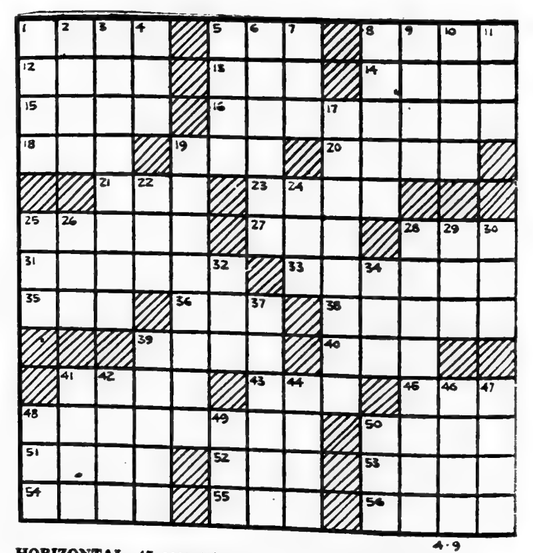
By "Wink" Locklair

Charlie Justice, the university's celebrated 24-year-old, 165-pound, All-American tailback-left halfback, was very much in the news last week-end, and there wasn't a football in sight. At the invitation of the Wilmington Junior Chamber of Commerce, Charlie went down there to attend the second annual Azalea Festival and to crown the Queen, Hollywood star-to-be Martha Hyer. (Who, according to several large ads in the Wilmington Morning Sun will soon be seen in the RKO hit, "The Judge Steps Out," and is one of over 130 Hollywood stars who have taken the famous cola taste test. . . compared the three leading colas in paper cups, and voted—you know what—as the best.)

We had a talk with Charlie about this extra-curricular activity the other afternoon in Mr. Jake Wade's office in Woollen gymnasium. "I left here Saturday afternoon about one o'clock, just after football practice, and crowned the queen about 10:30 that night in the Lumina ballroom," he said in that modest, casual, matter-of-fact way of his. Well, there was certainly more to it than that. The crowning ceremonies (Claudia Lee, one of Carolina's seniors, was in the Queen's court) took place before 2,000 people, and, according to The Star-News, "at the request of a battery of photographers, Justice planted a kiss firmly on the pretty brunette actress and came out of the clinch with lipstick showing. The crowd jammed closely around the throne, roared its approval. With more persuasion, this time from the crowd, Justice kissed Miss Hyer again. Both blushed slightly. Asked to kiss her a third time, Choo Choo shook his head, smiling, and displayed his wedding band on the third finger of his left hand."

When asked if he saw General Marshall or any of the other visiting dignitaries, Charlie said, "No, they were all gone when I got there." And he seemed sorry to have missed seeing the General. Justice returned to Chapel Hill early Monday morning, but the Wilmington papers were still playing up his visit as late as Wednesday, showing him crowning Miss Hyer, of course; talking with sports editor J. W. Long, and visiting a new Lustron (whatever that is) home Sunday afternoon.

There has been little rest for Charlie during these off-season, non-training months. After the close of the regular season, he was traveling the Quarterback Club Circuit, collecting trophies, medals and the huzzas of University alumnae and alumni. He went to Washington for an award, to Norfolk for another.



And soon he'll be going back to the Nation's Capitol, this time to participate in the annual Celebrities Golf Tournament June 4-5, an affair which usually attracts such professional novices as Bing Crosby and Bob Hope. After that he and Sarah and their little boy, Ronnie, will head for Florida where Charlie will play semi-pro baseball in Melborne.

Although Justice has been in sort of semi-retirement since the Tar Heels returned from New Orleans, local song writers and tune-smiths have not forgotten his influence and power on the gridiron. In the first act of "Apple Tree Farm," recently in residence at the Playmakers theatre, a character named Andy Merrilees, played by James Geiger, sings a song which includes these lines:

"What Hugh Herbert is without his woo woo
What a cow would be like if she lost her moo moo
And what a football team is when it has no Choo Choo
That's what you mean to me."

The successfully mended nerve in the elbow of Joseph Fuchs who appears Tuesday in a Memorial hall concert sponsored by the Student Entertainment committee is showing the way towards similar roads to recovery for wounded war veterans. Thus neuro-surgery on a highly sensitive violinist offers hope particularly to those whose civilian occupations require arm dexterity.
